

LIBRARY
OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

070.5
ED
v.59

NEWSPAPER LIBRARY

OAK ST LIBRARY

LIBRARY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

V. 59 mrg. 27-28, 30-31, 33-35, 36, 37-40, 42-46,

THIS ISSUE—BEATING THE CENSOR AT HIS OWN GAME.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1926

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, Februar y7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 1. NEW YORK, MAY 29, 1926 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

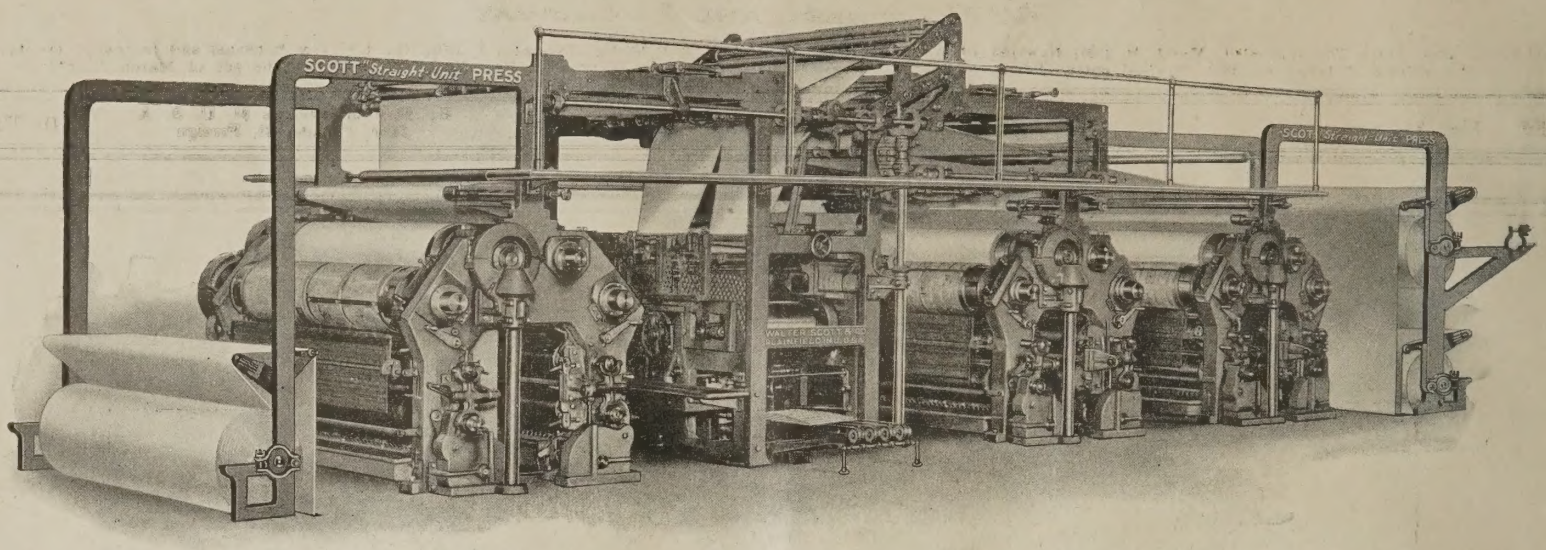
JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room



The "CASE" FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

"Canada Dry's" current schedule in the Photogravure Section of The Chicago Daily News comprises five full pages and four half pages (total, 13, 720 agate lines) to appear over a period of approximately six months.

You simply can't go wrong with advertising that reaches all members of the family together, as it does in—

The Saturday Photogravure Section of

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

Scott "Straight Unit" Floor Fed Sextuple Press Consisting of 3 units and 2 heavy duty 64 Page folders

SOLID IMPRESSION

——is assured by using printing cylinders of forged high carbon steel.

Scott Newspaper Presses are equipped with cylinders of this type, running in large diameter high grade roller bearings which assure free running action. Presses thus equipped can be run at high speed without danger of "hot boxes."
The gears which drive these cylinders are fabroil and steel—materials which mesh smoothly with the least wear on each other.

The accurate balance of the Scott cylinders eliminates vibration with its resultant uneven printing. It also does away with the uneven wearing of driving gears and journals.

Scott printing cylinders are built to the same lasting standard which identifies all parts of a Scott Press.

Scott

"Multi-Unit" and "Straight-Unit" Presses

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office & Factory - Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
New York Office - - - - 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office - - - 1441 Monadnock Block

Cable Address: WALTSCOTT NEW YORK

The "One-Way" Road to Baltimore

¶ You can drive the wrong way on a "one-way" street. But it's not good judgment to do it.

¶ You can travel an opposite way than most advertisers do in seeking a share of Baltimore's business—but why try to buck the current?

¶ The road to the Baltimore market is a "one-way street." Straight through the columns of the Sunpapers—Morning, Evening and Sunday—lies your route to the homes of Baltimore.

¶ We emphasize homes because Sunpaper circulation is home circulation. Bought for home reading, delivered to the home by an organization of well over a thousand Sun carriers, thoroughly read by the home-loving people of a great home city.

¶ Take the straight road to the Baltimore market—Sun-lit all the way, Morning, Evening and Sunday.

April Average Net Paid Circulation

Daily (M. & E.) .	253,638
Sunday	191,255

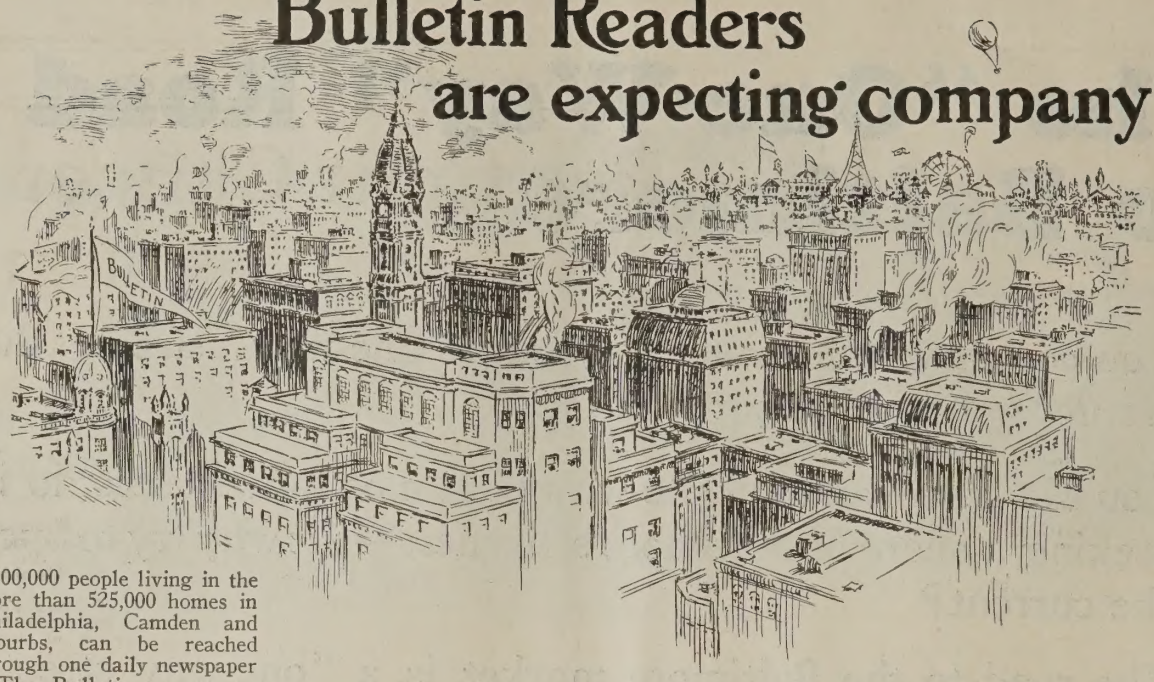
JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg.,
110 E. 42d St., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago



Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"—They Say "SUNpaper"

Bulletin Readers are expecting company

3,300,000 people living in the more than 525,000 homes in Philadelphia, Camden and suburbs, can be reached through one daily newspaper —The Bulletin.

This summer the Sesqui-Centennial exposition opens in Philadelphia. Into a city of almost 2,000,000, will pour hundreds of thousands of people to attend the fair and celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The spot-light will be turned where "nearly everybody reads The Bulletin."

The reader confidence enjoyed by The Evening Bulletin is attested by the fact that The Bulletin's circulation is the largest in Philadelphia and one of the largest in the United States.

The Bulletin goes into practically every home in and around the great city of Philadelphia and makes it possible to reach this huge market of nearly three million people — third largest in America — through one newspaper at one cost.

With a circulation of over half a million copies daily The Bulletin dominates Philadelphia.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

533,169

Net Paid Daily Average for Six Months Ending March 31st, 1926

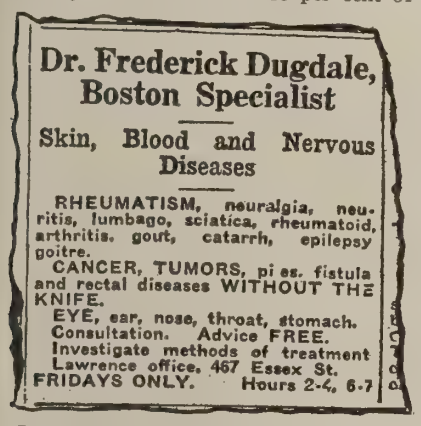
(Copyright 1926, Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St. at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 59 NEW YORK, MAY 29, 1926 No. 1

Publicity Claims 80 Per Cent Cancer Cures For Dr. Koch's Secret Nostrum



American Medical Association Journal Attacks Veracity of Claims Broadcast for Newspaper Publication by Press Agent—Say Koch "Cancer Clinics" Planned for Many Cities

By MARLEN PEW

A CONSCIENTIOUS newspaper editor in the South recently submitted to EDITOR & PUBLISHER a free publicity handout from the Koch Cancer Foundation, 342 Madison avenue, New York, which was marked "for immediate release," and made the following assertions:

"There are more than 4,000,000 in this country suffering from cancer and of these more than 100,000 will die this year."

"Dr. Koch's antitoxin which has successfully cured more than 80 per cent of Display advertisement which American Medical Association attributes to one of Dr. Koch's associates in the new cancer foundation.

hitherto hopeless cases, attacks both the infection and the cancer itself."

The conscientious editor, observing these statements, immediately turned his sympathies to the wretched cancer victims of his own community. Was it not his duty to make known to them that hope existed in the form of Dr. Koch's "antitoxim"? It was a secret formula, to be sure. Yes, it was being commercially exploited. The publicity activities of the "Koch Cancer Foundation" bore familiar earmarks, but the assertion that 80 per cent of cancer treatments by Dr. Koch's method had been successful was so positive that the editor's journalistic sense demanded that he give the "news" to his readers as a matter of duty.

As a precautionary measure, however, the editor started an investigation of the Koch Cancer Foundation. V. E. Scott, the publicity representative of the foundation, in reply to questions, made the following assertions: "The Koch Cancer Foundation is engaged in educating the public concerning the true cancer situation in this country. There are millions of cancer sufferers who are being exploited by various so-called 'cancer experts,' most of whom enjoy high standing in medical circles. There is a concerted drive to force cancer patients to be operated upon, etc.

"The Koch Cancer Foundation was established for the purpose of curing cancer sufferers by the use of the Koch antitoxin which has so far proved successful in close to 80 per cent of the cases treated. By using the antitoxin much suffering is saved the patient and its cost is infinitely less than that of an operation. Since it is generally admitted that cancer operations, although alleviating the immediate affliction, do not cure cancer, you will see that the antitoxin which is simply an injection accompanied by a 20 weeks' treatment is a great boon to suffering mankind. Realizing this the Koch Cancer Foundation has announced that 20,000 cases will be treated without cost during 1926 and many of these are now in process of cure. The Foundation itself is composed of a number of well-known doctors, at least half of whom are Fellows of the American Medical Association."

While the newspaper editor was pondering this disarming statement of alleged fact the Journal of the American Medical Association, for May 8, threw a flood of light on the subject. According to this authority the American Medical Association has for several years been investigating Dr. William F. Koch's alleged discovery of an "antitoxin" and during that time has "been unable to learn of a single instance in which a case of unquestioned malignant disease has been cured by the Koch treatment." On the contrary the American Medical Association, according to The Journal, has received information regarding "individuals who 'promptly died' after taking the treatment."

In addition to the attempt by V. E. Scott to obtain for the Koch Foundation free publicity in newspapers the Koch "cure" is being advertised. For instance, a display advertisement signed by Dr. J. D. Tucker, of Meridian, Miss., conductor of a sanatorium there, makes this bold assertion: "This sanatorium will give you 80 to 90 per cent chance of being cured, considering all stages of the disease."

Who is Dr. Koch?

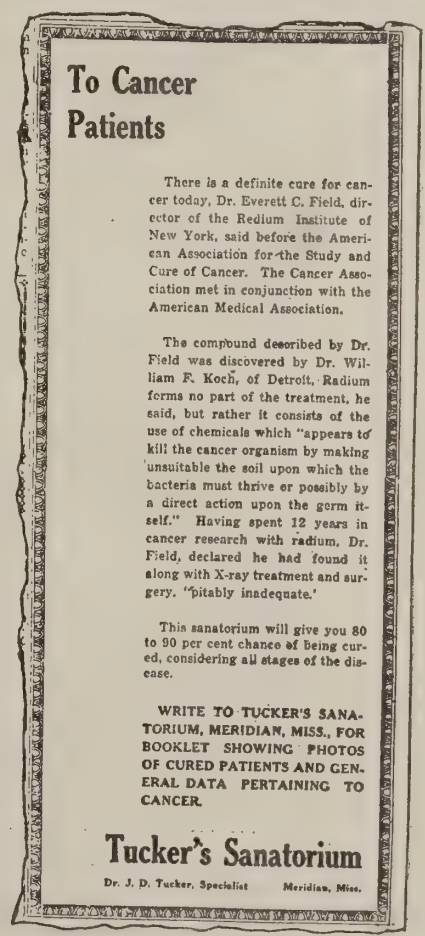
This question is answered by The Journal as follows: In 1918, graduated from the Detroit College of Medicine and Surgery. Previously had been an assistant in physiology and an instructor in histology in the University of Michigan Medical School. He had also been professor of physiology in the Detroit College of Medicine and Surgery. Less than a year after his graduation in medicine, Dr. Koch announced that he "had developed a real specific cure for cancer."

According to The Journal, Dr. Koch's thesis "seems to be that cancer is caused by a micro-organism resembling the spirochete of syphilis" and "it is claimed that he has developed a differential poison—'Koch's Synthetic Anti-toxin'—that will destroy the 'cancer germ' without injuring the host. His remedy has been described in one place as 'a synthetic chemical compound of very definite molecular arrangement' and in another place as a 'difficultly prepared synthetic structure, worked down on a recrystallization process'—two descriptions that make up in sonorousness what they lack in clarity."

Dr. Koch has for seven years kept the secret to himself, The Journal remarks, and then proceeds to detail evidence from the field concerning alleged failures of the cure. Three investigations of Dr. Koch's "cure" by the Wayne County (Detroit) Medical Society yielded unfavorable reports, the last including the statement that "in no instance have we found a case where the diagnosis of cancer was absolutely established and where no other form of treatment had been used in which a cure or any decided benefit had been obtained."

To obtain further evidence The Journal inquired by mail as to the results of known experiments with the "cure" and cites the following among other cases:

Mr. A., Michigan.—Wrote in February, 1924, that his sister was taking treatment for uterine cancer from Dr. Koch. Recorded in March, 1926, that his sister died in Detroit in April, 1924.



Dr. B., New York.—Had three patients who took the Koch treatment: (1) Woman with carcinoma of rectum; "received four injections, reactions were terrible. She did not improve but steadily became worse and died." (2) Elderly man with beginning cancer of stomach; was "given two treatments and promptly became worse and died." (3) A case of auxillary carcinoma received many treatments: "Ultimate result was the same—death."

Dr. C., Louisiana.—Wrote in November, 1924, that a friend with cancer of rectum was taking the Koch treatment at Detroit. Reported in April, 1926, that patient died in August, 1925.

Dr. D., Louisiana.—Wrote in November, 1924, that a prominent citizen of his town with malignant disease was under the care of Dr. Koch. Reported in April, 1926, that patient died. Dr. D. adds: "This has been the fate of all (personally) known cancer patients treated with Koch cancer remedy."

Dr. E., Alabama.—Wrote in January, 1925, that several patients suffering from carcinoma were taking the Koch treatment. Reports April, 1926, "All the patients who received the Koch treatment are now dead."

Dr. I., New York.—Wrote in September,

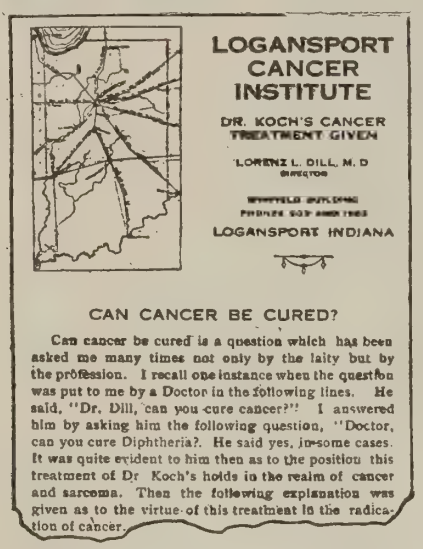
Remarkable advertisement republished in Medical Journal, promising "80 to 90 per cent chance" of cancer cure. Dr. Everett C. Field is a Koch Foundation associate.

CONCERNING KOCH PUBLICITY

V. E. Scott, "correspondent" of the Koch Cancer Foundation, gave this statement of its purposes and activities to the editor of EDITOR & PUBLISHER:

"I was glad to receive your inquiry regarding releases sent to the newspapers on behalf of the Koch Cancer Foundation. You ask for a statement of the facts concerning this material and I take pleasure in giving you the same.

"The Koch Cancer Foundation is engaged in educating the public concerning the true cancer situation in this country. There are millions of cancer sufferers who are being exploited by various so-called 'cancer experts' most of whom enjoy high standing in medical circles. There is a concerted drive to force cancer patients to be operated upon, etc., etc.



"The Koch Cancer Foundation was established for the purpose of curing cancer sufferers by the use of the Koch antitoxin which has so far proved successful in close to 80 per cent of the cases treated. By using the antitoxin much suffering is saved the patient and its cost is infinitely less than that of an operation, etc. Since it is generally admitted that cancer operations, although alleviating the immediate affliction, do not cure cancer, you will see that the antitoxin which is simply an injection accompanied by a twenty-weeks' treatment is a great boon to suffering mankind. Realizing this the Koch Cancer Foundation has announced that 20,000 cases will be treated without cost during 1926 and many of these are now in process of cure.

"The Foundation itself is composed of a number of well-known doctors, at least half of whom are Fellows of the American Medical Association.

"If there is any further information desired I shall be pleased to forward it to you."

1925, that a woman with advanced carcinoma was so desperately ill that he advised her to remain at home. She, however, obtained money with extreme difficulty and paid $300 for one injection. "Came home in a state of extreme exhaustion and died in a few days after her return." The same physician reports another case of a patient with sarcoma who had been given injections at the cost of $500. "He subsequently died after having been advertised as a cure."

Dr. J., Kansas.—Wrote in October, 1925, that a patient with cancer of the tongue had gone to the Koch Cancer Clinic at Detroit. Reported March, 1926, that patient was given one injection, paid a fee of $300, stayed in Detroit for twelve weeks, received another injection, paying $200, remained two weeks longer, then went home and died one week after reaching home. The same physician reports another case, that of a woman with a cancer of the uterus, on her way to Rochester, Minn., who was induced while in the Union Station at Kansas City to go to a Koch disciple, where she received the Koch treatment. She received three injections, paying $250, although she was "in poor circumstances." Died about a month after the third injection.

Wherein Dr. Dill, a Koch associate, compares the curative quality of the so-called cancer "anti-toxin" with that of well-established diphtheria cures, in an advertisement republished by the American Medical Association.

It appears that the Koch Cancer Foundation was only organized in February of the present year. Dr. Koch is named on the letterhead of the foundation as director, and the following as associate directors: W. A. Dewey, M. D., Los Angeles, Cal.; L. L. Dill, M. D., Logansport, Ind.; Frederick Dugdale, M. D., Boston, Mass.; C. Everett Field, M. D., New York City; Elnora C. Folkmar, M. D., Washington, D. C.; W. Wallace Fritz, M. D., Philadelphia, Pa.; and A. W. Hoyt, M. D., New York City.

The Journal reproduces display advertisements allegedly signed by Drs. Dugdale and Dill, the former seeking to treat cases of rheumatism, neuralgia, neuritis, lumbago, sciatica, gout, catarrh, epilepsy, goitre, cancer, tumors, piles, fistula and rectal diseases "without the knife." The advertisement included the familiar line, "advice, FREE." Dr. Dill, advertising the "Logansport Cancer Institute," attached his name, according to The Journal reprint, to the following statement:

> Can cancer be cured is a question which has been asked me many times not only by the laity but by the profession. I recall one instance when the question was put to me by a Doctor in the following lines. He said, "Dr. Dill, can you cure cancer?" I answered him by asking him the following question, "Doctor, can you cure Diphtheria?" He said yes, in some cases. It was quite evident to him then as to the position this treatment of Dr. Koch's holds in the realm of cancer and sarcoma."

It appears that there has also been organized "Koch Laboratories, Inc.," as sole owner and manufacturer of the Koch "antitoxin." The incorporators and officers are William F. Koch, Louis Koch, Fred C. Koch and Clarence Lehr and it is stated that a contract exists between the Koch Laboratories and the Koch Cancer Foundation whereby the "antitoxin" will be distributed through the Foundation only to its stockholders and members. Further, the price of a treatment from the Foundation is fixed at $110 to both stockholder and member. The Journal quotes Dr. J. W. Stiers of Muscatine, Iowa, as having said that the Koch Foundation specifies that patients be charged "a minimum of $300 for the first treatment and $200 for any afterward."

The by-laws of the Koch Cancer Foundation provide that only physicians "whose qualifications have met the approval of the Board of Trustees" and who have "treated ten or more cases of cancer by the use of Koch's Synthetic Antitoxin" shall be eligible to become stockholders. The stockholders pay $100, for which one share of stock is issued. Membership in the Foundation is to be limited to physicians who are "able to furnish personal and business references satisfactory to the Board of Trustees." Such individuals may become members on the payment of a membership fee of $10 and annual dues of $5. It is stated further that the "Foundation" will "attend to sending out all publicity, pamphlets, literature and the like" and that it is sufficiently financed to carry on the work vigorously for some time to come.

Handouts that the publicity man Scott offered to newspapers, for "immediate release," were plainly calculated to boost the sale of the Koch "cure." In his publicity, Scott said that more than 100 physicians are now using the Koch "antitoxin" and "report that their patients gain strength and even weight as their cancers decrease in size." The press agent took pains to mention the doctors who are associated with Dr. Koch in various cities. A "news" handout says: "Under the plans of the Koch Cancer Foundation clinics for the cure of cancer are to be opened in all important cities of the country. Patients will be accepted, after proper investigation, from all walks of life." In the same "release" Dr. Koch is quoted as saying that the average cure is obtained after twenty weeks.

EPOCHAL IF TRUE!

Remarkable Publicity "Hand-out" Sent to Newspapers by Koch Foundation Press Agent for Publication as News

Following is a publicity "story" broadcast to the press by V. E. Scott, who terms himself "correspondent" for the Koch Cancer Foundation, in which the unqualified claim of "80 per cent cures" is made for an "antitoxin" now being exploited by a newly formed commercial corporation:

From the Koch Cancer Foundation,
342 Madison Ave., NYC., Tel. Vanderbilt 1619.
Correspondent, V. E. Scott.
For immediate release.

NOTE TO EDITOR—This article is one of the series under the title of "THE TRUTH ABOUT CANCER." There are more than 4,000,000 in this country suffering from cancer and of these more than 100,000 will die this year.

CANCER AS FOOD

Serves as Nutrition During the Critical Period of Cure.

NEW YORK, April—The most important discovery in the successful treatment of cancer by the Koch Cancer Federation, in which close to 80 per cent of hopeless cases are being cured, is the fact that the cancer itself during its period of absorption feeds the body of the sufferer. This has been demonstrated in hundreds of cases but it was not until recently that Dr. Koch and his associates recognized that the cancer tissue was building up instead of tearing down the system of the patient during the curative period.

Among the other doctors who report similar results in their various districts are W. A. Dewey of Los Angeles, Cal.; L. L. Dill of Logansport, Ind.; Frederick Dugdale of Boston, Mass.; C. Everett Field and A. W. Hoyt of New York City; Elnora C. Folkmar of Washington, D. C. and W. Wallace Fritz of Philadelphia. In addition to these physicians more than 100 others now using the Koch antitoxin are observing the same results and report that their patients gain strength and even weight as their cancers decrease in size.

That the decreasing cancer becomes food for the body of the patient is noted by Dr. Field who yesterday explained the process.

"This extraordinary phenomenon," he said, "is the direct result of the reaction caused by the Koch antitoxin. Dr. Koch in his years of study before perfecting his antitoxin discovered that cancer is a cell growth produced by the body to wall in the cause of the infection. It is just as though a stone wall were built around a herd of cows to prevent them from straying all over the country. The cancer cells reproduce with extraordinary swiftness so that in the course of a short time the patient is killed. Their growth can only be stopped by killing the infection against which the body uses them as a protection.

"Dr. Koch's antitoxin which has successfully cured more than 80 per cent of hitherto hopeless cases, attacks both the infection and the cancer itself. The infection is killed and the cancer dissolves through the system of the patient. It is at this point that the cancer cells provide nutriment for its victim. This has been demonstrated in hundreds of cases and is absolutely proven to be a fact. Under the treatment evolved by Dr. Koch the patient eats nothing but fruit juices for a week previous to receiving the injection. Then for two, perhaps three weeks following only the juices of fruits and vegetables are taken. It is not until the third or fourth week, if the case be normal, that the patient is allowed to eat the fruits and vegetables themselves.

"Following the injection the cancer symptoms begin to disappear and the cancer itself to absorb. It has been found that the patient instead of being practically starved on this restricted diet begins to gain weight and strength in proportion to the speed with which the cancer disappears. In other words, the cancer itself becomes the food upon which the patient thrives for some time after receiving the antitoxin."

The average cure is obtained after twenty weeks according to Dr. William F. Koch, who was formerly a Professor of Medicine at the University of Michigan.

"It is seldom that a second injection is needed," he said, "and this is usually because the patient has been subjected to the radium and X-Ray treatments. However, it may be necessary because the patient is in a very run down condition when treatment is commenced. The antitoxin is absolutely harmless to the body and produces no injury nor soreness even when injected in a concentrated solution. Some years ago before the present antitoxin had been perfected it was found necessary to give a number of injections before the patient was cured. Now, however, one injection is all that is needed in 90 per cent of the cases. We have found that the antitoxin cures every form of cancer and does so with remarkable speed."

Under the plans of the Koch Cancer Foundation clinics for the cure of cancer are to be opened in all important cities of the country. Patients will be accepted, after proper investigation, from all walks of life.

NEW YORK TELEGRAPH TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Merged with Daily Running Horse and Hercules Press Corporation—E. R. Thomas President of New Firm—Texans Still in Charge

Merger of the New York Morning Telegraph, ten-cent daily amusement newspaper, with the New York Daily Running Horse, effective June 1, was announced this week. Besides these two papers the consolidation embraces the Daily Running Horse of Canada and the Hercules Press Corporation, which sends racing and sport news to various papers.

The new company will be known as the Hermis Press Corporation, with E. R. Thomas, president, Roi Tolleson, vice-president, S. D. Jones, treasurer; and Miss Lillian Krinsky, secretary.

The first issue of the consolidated papers will be printed from the plant of the Morning Telegraph and will be known as the Telegraph and Running Horse.

C. E. Marsh and E. S. Fentress, Texas newspaper publishers, retain their contract, which calls for supervision of publication without investment. Mr. Jones, treasurer, will also be general manager and representative for Fentress and Marsh.

The Morning Telegraph was started by the late Blakely Hall. W. E. Lewis, now dead, was managing editor for many years. Control passed to William C. Whitney, who later sold it to Mr. Thomas, the present owner.

ARCTIC PICTURES ARRIVE

P. & A. Cable Photos From London—Others Come by Ship

The New York Daily News May 24 printed photographs taken of the arctic expeditions at Kings Bay, Spitzbergen. They were transmitted from London via Western Union cables by the Bartlane process, controlled by P. & A. Photos, Inc.

Two days later the New York Times printed what it asserted were the "first pictures from Spitzbergen." They arrived on the S. S. Olympic.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

June 2-4—Alabama Press Assn., annual convention Auburn, Ala.
June 5—Southwest Kansas Republican Editorial Assn., meeting, St. John, Kan.
June 8-9-10—International Circulation Managers Assn., annual convention, Philadelphia.
June 11-13—Texas Press Assn., annual convention, San Antonio.
June 16-17—New York State Publishers Assn., State Press Assn., and Associate Dailies summer meetings, Ithaca, N. Y.
June 18-19—Oregon State Editorial Assn., annual convention, Pineville, Ore.
June 19-24—Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, 22nd annual convention, Philadelphia.
June 19-26—American Golf Assn. of Advertising Interests, spring tournament, Cooperstown, N. Y.
June 24-26—Kentucky Press Assn., mid-summer meeting, Pineville, Kentucky.
June 25-28—New Jersey Press Assn., summer outing, Lake Minnewaska.

G70.5
ED
v. 59'

BEATING THE NEWS CENSOR AT HIS OWN GAME

American Reporters Abroad Get the Story Out Somehow—Seven European Nations Now Under Strict Censorship, Says Webb Miller, United Press Executive

AMERICAN reportorial persistency is today piercing the wall of European censorship, according to Webb Miller, assistant European news manager of the United Press Association, interviewed in New York prior to his return to London last week.

WEBB MILLER

The American correspondent abroad is beating the European censor at his own game, he said. Staff men of United States newspapers and press associations censor the censors and produce the real facts on Europe. And as a result newspaper readers here often know more about conditions abroad than the natives living in countries where governments control the news.

Mr. Miller named eight nations where government officials are at present attempting to muzzle the local press and foreign correspondents. They are: Italy, Spain, Poland, Greece, Bulgaria, Russia, Rumania and Jugo-Slavia. The French censor dispatches in war areas.

"But all real important news gets out sooner or later," he declared. "Gradually, therefore, the censors are coming to realize that their efforts at news suppression are fruitless, as far as the United States is concerned. They may be able to keep their own people in the dark, but truth finds its way outside, and false reports and rumors, censors are learning, spread across the borders with damaging rapidity when censorship rules are too effective."

It was Wilbur Forrest, correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, who beat the Polish censors with a dispatch from Warsaw, via Berlin, May 21.

"I'm sending this message over German telegraph wires," he wrote, "because I found that it was utterly impossible even to approach the truth of Poland's tragic situation through the censorship which the so-called Pilsudski government erected in an effort to hide the chaos which has followed last week's slaughter in the streets of the capital and the surrender of the Wojiechowski government. "The official announcement that the censorship has ceased is wholly untrue." And, according to Mr. Miller, all big stories eventually leak out in the same way. Frequently, indeed, censorship causes the dissemination of garbled facts, more damaging to the prestige of a country than the true news would have been.

Thus on May 21, American newspaper readers were afforded a glimpse of the French government busily engaged in denying a story obtained by a London Daily Express correspondent and relayed to this country concerning a reported second bombardment of Damascus. It appears that the French censors were far too conscientious in performing their duty. Truth couldn't get out. Now the French claim a lie was spread.

That at least was true of the first "bombardment" of Damascus. Censorship then did far more harm than good. The French had bottled up the news completely, and it was from Arab sources, according to Mr. Miller, that correspondents first got the news.

"First dispatches told of 25,000 killed in Damascus," Mr. Miller recalled. "As a matter of fact, only 2,000 were killed. Had there been free access to the news, French prestige wouldn't have suffered to the extent it did.

"The same is true of Spain. Regulations gagging the press set up by Primo de Rivera hurt rather than aid Spain. Sensational stories start on the border, are embroidered with false details, and are carried around the world with damaging results as far as Spain is concerned.

"Not so long ago, for instance, an American news agency carried a story to the effect that Gen. Weyler, of Cuban fame, had started a revolution against the Spanish government. I was in Madrid at the time, and received an urgent query to investigate the report. I called on the General himself. He is now a peaceful old gentleman of 86 years, content to rest and write his memoirs. Revolution was far from his thoughts, I was able to reply. Had there been no censorship, the first report would never have got out.

"At another time, a rumor reached our office in London that the King of Spain was dead. I sent messages two ways in two different languages to our correspondent in Madrid. One message got through. I was informed the Spanish censors held up the others, refusing to permit delivery.

"Russia is a splendid example of the evil effects of censorship. Riga, the border city, reeks with rumors; and exaggerated and untrue reports get loose from there. The Soviet government is damaged by lies, which never would have been spread had the truth not been censored."

On the whole, however, Mr. Miller said, government control of news today is much less drastic than it was a few years ago. Foreign office hand-outs are disappearing, because newspaper men are getting their own news.

"Newspapers and news agencies of the United States collect their own news to a far greater extent than any other nation," Mr. Miller continued. "There are probably 300 American newspaper men in Europe. American reporters outnumber those of other nations five to one at every important international gathering. In London alone there are about 75 American newspaper men, and at one time the Anglo-American Press Association in Paris numbered 85 members."

Mr. Miller laughed at the remark credited to Senator Dandurand of Canada, president of the League assembly, that while the world had demobilized, the war correspondents had not. The Senator declared that foreign correspondents abroad were breeders of war.

"Evidently the Senator forgot that, at the time he made his statement, France and Spain were fighting the Riffs, Italy was having trouble in Tripoli, Turkey was combating the Kurds and there were at least three wars in China," Mr. Miller said. "There is still room for the war correspondent," he added.

Mr. Miller had arrived in New York from a five months' tour of South America, and he said that the Latin countries of Europe might well learn something from the Latin-American press.

"Newspapers of Latin-America," he said, "have so far surpassed those of their mother countries that there is no comparison. In Brazil, Argentina, and Chile especially, the newspaper business has now become an economic success. Dailies are absolutely independent, a situation that does not obtain generally in any other Latin country abroad, where the press is subsidized.

"Some of the Latin-American newspapers carry more foreign news than newspapers of the United States, and cable tolls are nearly three times more expensive than they are to this country.

"How the press of South America is also beginning to show more interest in news of the United States. In the old days, before the Associated Press and the United Press went in to South America, the papers were served entirely by European agencies, and the United States was absolutely neglected. Most of the news came from France."

"To us newspaper work is a business," he explained, "a business of getting the news and then getting it to the public; while to them it is a literary profession.

"I met hundreds of sub-editors, editors, and publishers in South America, all of whom spoke two or three languages besides their own; they knew other countries than their own well; many of them had been educated abroad; theirs was a world view, quite different from the provincialism of the ordinary North American.

"But those who had been to the United States were enthusiastic about our newspaper methods. Some are eager to give up European influence, and follow the leaders of the North."

Considerable interest in the forthcoming Press Congress of the World to be held in Geneva, Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 14-18, is being shown by South American editors and publishers, Mr. Miller reported. Many told him they were planning to attend.

Since Mr. Miller left London in January, he has traveled some 16,000 miles. First he went to Spain, where he interviewed Primo de Rivera. He also stopped in Portugal to interview President Bernardino Machado, before crossing to South America.

In South America he was met by James Miller, South American manager of the United Press Associations, who accompanied him on his visit to the offices of U. P. clients. He spent three weeks in Brazil, calling on more than 20 newspapers in that republic. He also toured Argentina, Chile, and Peru. The purpose of his trip was to enable him to become better acquainted with South American affairs, in order that he might improve and strengthen the European news service, cleared through London, for Latin-American clients.

Mr. Miller has been associated with the United Press for 10 years. He had had four years experience with the Chicago American, when he joined the U. P. in 1916, while reporting Mexican border troubles for the Chicago paper. After a short while as U. P. correspondent in Mexico City he was transferred to the Washington bureau. Then he was sent to London, where he remained four years, before being placed in charge of the U. P. Paris bureau. He had been in Paris four years when he was brought back to London about a year ago as assistant European news manager. During the war he was a correspondent on the French and American fronts.

STREIT OF TIMES EXILED FROM RUMANIA PROTESTS RIGID CENSORSHIP RULES

Correspondent Declines to Recant Series of Articles Which Aroused Wrath of Government Officials—Other Writers Refuse to Deny Charges He Made

CLARENCE STREIT, staff correspondent of the New York Times, was this week expelled from Rumania because of a series of articles he had written on the Rumanian political situation, which the government considered "grossly exaggerated and insulting." Streit left Budapest May 25, insisting he had written the truth in his articles, and protesting the rigid Rumanian censorship rules.

The expulsion order might have been withdrawn had he been willing to recant, Streit wrote in a dispatch sent from Budapest via Paris. He declined to recant and stated that three other foreign correspondents had been asked by the government and the royal court to write a reply or something to offset the series and had refused.

One of them said afterwards:

"I can't deny what is true."

"The correspondents asked that the attention of the New York Times be called to the censorship of their dispatches from Rumania," Streit wrote from Budapest. "One has even had a brief dispatch stopped merely announcing a reported loan from Italy and though he has written numerous letters and petitions has not yet succeeded in getting the tolls he paid returned.

"Another, recently in Moscow declared: "'The Soviet censorship is much more liberal than Rumania.'

"Americans in a position to know the situation approve the series, saying it is a case of where the truth hurts."

The letter ordering the American newspaper correspondent's expulsion follows:

Mr. Clarence Streit, Correspondent of The New York Times.

Sir:—The Rumanian Government has become aware of a series of five articles published in the New York Times on April 12 and following days. It is seldom that articles containing such gross exaggerations and insults addressed to the Rumanian Crown and country have appeared in the foreign press. The Government is disarmed in the presence of such acts of unfair aggression and is powerless to take any satisfaction.

All investigation shows that you are the author of these articles.

The Government is therefore surprised at your presence in Rumania, as traditional Rumanian hospitality cannot be confounded with toleration of insults.

You are therefore kindly invited to leave Rumania twenty-four hours after the receipt of this letter, it being quite understood that any other correspondent of the New York Times, a newspaper respected in Rumania, will be always welcome to Rumania.

By order of the Minister of the Interior.

(Signed) GENERAL NICOLEANU.
Prefect of Police.

Commenting editorially on Streit's expulsion, the New York Times said in part:

The danger of being sent away as an "undesirable foreigner" is only one of the difficulties which correspondents in some European countries have to face today. There is in several capitals a sort of tacit and invisible censorship of dispatches to be forwarded abroad. This takes the form not of suppression or mutilation, necessarily, but of hampering the correspondent's activities. He finds official sources of news mysteriously closed to him. Personal and social attentions are withdrawn. In a hundred ways it is conveyed to him that he cannot be successful in his work unless he shows more "tact" in dealing with Government officials, and more tenderness for the political views which they wish to have printed in the foreign press. All this obviously makes the lot of the foreign correspondent not a happy one. Short of outright expulsion, he feels himself continually hampered by unseen but very real restrictions. Whether such a policy is even expedient in the long run may well be doubted. Certainly the immediate consequence of expelling The Times correspondent from Rumania will be to fix attention more keenly and more critically upon affairs in that country.

WAGE INCREASE MAY BE DISASTROUS WASHINGTON PAPERS TELL ARBITER

But Justice Hitz, Sitting As Disinterested Member, Refuses To Recall Tentative Findings—Printers' Pay Raised 16 to 24 Percent

JUSTICE WILLIAM HITZ has declined to accede to the plea of the Washington Newspaper Publishers' Association that he reconsider his recent tentative findings as arbitrator granting wage increases to newspaper printers in Washington, which, the publishers informed him, may lead to "disastrous results" in the newspaper publishing industry there and elsewhere.

The publishers, in representations made to the arbitrator on behalf of the association, asked that he reconsider before making his tentative report final, the evidence submitted in the wage matter between the Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, and the publishers' association.

Specifically, the publishers asked that Justice Hitz still consider the matter of his findings so far open as to permit him to confer with other members of the board of arbitration in order that the "views and reasons for your tentative findings may be stated and considered by the full board and any misapprehensions on your part, if such exist, cleared away."

In presenting their plea to Justice Hitz, the representatives of the association declared:

"The handing down by you, as the disinterested arbitrator, of your findings without conference and exchange of ideas with the other members of the board (even though in tentative form) with the statement that you had made up your mind on all points except the matter of the duration of the proposed contract, and the further statement that you did not propose to give any reasons for your decision, we believe unprecedented.

"We assume that even though you have formed definite ideas, your mind is still open and that you will recognize that the other members of the board have a right to know the reasons for your tentative findings and that they may have an opportunity to point out any fallacies in your conclusions."

Regarding the general effect of the findings, the publishers declared:

"Nothing can be clearer than that to make this tentative report final will create for the term it continues a class of skilled workers preferentially treated to an unexampled extent. If this were carried through the newspaper publishing industry here and elsewhere, the industry could not, we believe, economically survive, aside from the most prosperous newspapers. Such enormous increases save in isolated instances, could not be met by passing on the increase to the ultimate consumer.

"If the principle of the award is just and should be applied to the Union job printing offices in Washington, these shops could not competitively exist."

In citing the apprehended effect of the wage increase findings, and what they regard as their want of justification either from the standpoint of comparative wages here and elsewhere or cost of living figures of the Department of Labor, the publishers declared:

"We feel strongly and confidently that if your honor had taken up and discussed the various points at issue with the other members of the board of arbitration, no such extreme and radical decision would have been reached."

In this connection, the publishers urged the great responsibilities of an arbitrator, as a means of effecting industrial adjustments without the costly recourse to strike, in giving full hearing consideration to the views of both sides and "maintaining the confidence of employers and employees alike."

In citing the effect of the increases, the publishers showed that for the day scale they raise the annual income for the normal 42 hour week to $2,808, an increase of $405.60, and for the maximum 46 hour week to $3,209.44, an increase of $578.24, over the present scale. For the night scale income based on the 42-hour week is increased to $3,120, an increase of $499.20, and income based on the 46-hour week is raised to $3,563.04, an increase of $692.64.

"As we see the case," the publishers declared in their representations, "the evidence submitted showed that the newspaper printers here have been liberally paid as compared with their fellow craftsmen in this and other cities and as compared with all skilled workmen in other walks of life, and with the clerical forces who comprise the majority of Washington's citizenship.

"In the cost of living statistics of the Department of Labor, the changes since the last arbitration by Judge McCoy, in 1920, showed a decrease, rather than an increase. And since 1923, when a negotiated scale was agreed upon, an increase was shown by the last figures of the department of approximately 2.7 per cent, or about 21 cents a day on the day scale."

"We feel," the publishers declared, "that in the face of these facts we are entitled to know and discuss with you your reasons for the tentative view that unprecedented increases should be made."

Justice Hitz declined to change his tentative findings, granting wage increases ranging from 16.9 to 24.1 per cent. The final award made the basic scale retroactive to November 11, 1925, eliminating the retroactive feature as to overtime.

In the arbitration proceedings printers based their contentions for an increase purely upon their rights to a living wage, consisting of a sufficient income for the maintenance of a family in the necessaries of life as well as a margin for savings or recreation," according to John N. Breen, their attorney.

"Although the final award did not have a retroactive effect insofar as overtime pay was concerned or pay for night shift workers for work before 6 p.m," said Mr. Breen, "we accept the award as finally given, despite the fact it did not embody all the advantages of the tentative award."

According to the printers, the award affects approximately 400 men employed as "full-time printers" and 100 others employed in temporary positions. The new wage scale of $9 a day for day work and $10 for night work supplants a former scale of $7.70 for day work and $8.40 for night work, with a retroactive feature allowing the new scale effective as of November 11, 1925. The new overtime rate of $1.93 per hour for day overtime, in lieu of the former $1.65 per hour, and of $2.13 per hour for night overtime in lieu of the former $1.80 per hour is not allowed in the final award as retroactive, but is effective as of May 24, 1926.

Jackson (Mich.) Tribune Launched

The first issue of the Jackson (Mich.) Morning Tribune, a six-day paper, with no Sunday issue, appeared Monday, May 24. The Tribune is published by a group associated with the defunct Jackson News which discontinued publication a year ago. John H. Allen is editor and publisher of the new daily which has a United Press and United News leased wire.

N. Y. Sun Broadcasting News

The New York Sun, by arrangement with radio station WRNY, New York, is now broadcasting daily digests of important news in sport and commerce.

"WHEN WE WERE YOUNG"

The death of Mrs. Arthur Capper, wife of the distinguished statesman and editor, moved William Allen White to write in the Emporia Gazette the following:

A THIRD of a century ago more or less, a gay young crowd was butterflying around in Topeka. Those were the good old-fashioned days when there were dances and parties and picnics and when young people paired off and "went together,"—no necking parties! They sat on front porches of cool summer evenings and sang a little and danced a little and came trooping down to Kansas avenue in surveys with fringed tops and basket phaetons behind good old family horses. The whole carefree troop of them piled into an ice cream parlor and made merry riot. The writer of these lines, as an outsider, used to see this group and sometimes was drawn a little way into the circle, but not far. Other young reporters beckoned him in—Frank Jarrell, Dick Linsey, Mary McCabe, Harry Valentine, Myra Williams, Ewing Herbert, Arthur Capper and Florence Crawford. Gradually they began to pair off more seriously, and one autumn day, back in the very early nineties, Ewing Herbert put on his black long tailed coat, a black tie and a very white shiney bosomed shirt and came down to Topeka from Hiawatha to act as best man for the wedding of Florence and Arthur. The occasion was gay and gorgeous, the only unfelicitous incident being the fact that as Ewing walked proudly with young Arthur Capper to the altar, in some mysterious and ungodly way Ewing's left trouser leg got hitched far above his shoetop, showing an inch of hairy shank and two inches of black sock. But little did that misfortune harrow Ewing, though he stood on one leg during most of the ceremony and tried with the other leg to work down that recalcitrant bit of trouser.

The wedding celebration of Florence and Arthur was most delightful. The young reporter rising in his profession surrounded by his fellow newspaper men and friends from all over the state was marrying a vivacious, charming girl, the leader of her circle, a most popular young woman, daughter of the former governor. So the day sparkled with joy and the occasion was a rainbow of promise.

Life has made the promise come true. Florence Crawford and Arthur Capper have lived happily and usefully together all these years, partners, friends, lovers, with never a rift in their joy. This week some of the same old friends looking over the peak of the hill of life into its sunset, gathered in Topeka to bid her goodbye and to give Arthur their handclasp, as they laid her away for her earthly rest.

So a generation has passed; the bright, happy girl growing into a fine, strong, intelligent woman. She had her work. With her husband she rose to a place of leadership in the state, to one of the important positions in this nation and in the world. They never became alien to their friends of that early day. The simple loyal faith of their friends of that youthful circle which glowed around them and haloed them in their youth was with them as a benediction to the end of their journey together. Nor did the simple love of their friends ever go. That they held to the last. How hard it is to realize that this girl's life has been lived and is over; that her work is done and her spirit gone to the next stage of experience. We, who were young once, 30 years ago, who lived and laughed and loved in the gayety and joy of youth, still in our heart know that the fire of youth is eternal—unquenchable. To ourselves and to each other we have not changed, and maybe not to God Himself. But to others we are the older generation passing; a bit queer and old-fashioned and gradually becoming negligible. Other youngsters go charging down the street full of the same exuberance, the same hopes, the same high visions and the same gay foibles which once were ours. And so "the mourners go about the streets and the man to his lone home."

FOREMAN'S RIGHT TO "FIRE" UPHELD

Conference Committee Stands by Chicago Herald-Examiner Executive in Discharging Compositor Who Refused to Work Overtime

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, May 26.—The question of whether the foreman of a composing room has the right to discharge an employe because of his refusal to work overtime has been answered in the affirmative.

The question was raised by the Chicago Herald-Examiner and American composing room in the case of David Fitzgerald, an extra substituting for a regular in the monotype department, who had been sent to the ad service department where ads are hand-set. His time was up at 3 o'clock and when he was notified that he would be required to work overtime he refused.

The foreman discharged him. His order was protested through the local of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The union introduced evidence attempting to prove that it was the duty of the chairman of the chapel to supply men as he saw fit, to work overtime when such work was required.

A six-man conference committee composed of representatives of both sides deadlocked and also failed to select a seventh member acceptable to both, and so the selection automatically fell to States Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who volunteered to act as the seventh member.

The motion to confirm the action of the foreman of the Herald-Examiner and American chapel in discharging the printer carried.

300 NEWSPAPER MEN VISIT SESQUI-GROUNDS

Spend a Day in Philadelphia As Guests of Exposition Officials—Welcomed by Mayor Kendrick

About 300 leading newspaper editors and writers from Washington, New York City, Chicago, Boston and other cities east of the Mississippi were the guests Sunday, May 23, of the city of Philadelphia upon an inspection tour of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition buildings.

Odell Hauser, formerly of the New York Times staff, who is director of publicity for the Exposition, was in charge of the tour. Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick, of Philadelphia, acted as personal host, and welcomed the visitors at a luncheon served them in the big Auditorium Building on the Exposition grounds.

Ulric Bell, Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal, expressed, as president of the National Press Club, the appreciation of the visiting Washington newspapermen.

The Washington party, numbering more than 100, included Carter Field, chief of the Washington Bureau of the New York Herald Tribune; A. H. Kirchhofer, Washington correspondent, Buffalo Evening News, and vice-president of the National Press Club; Ben M. McKelway, city editor, and Gould Lincoln, special writer, Washington Star; Daniel O'Connell, city editor, Washington Times; John Gleissner, editor, Washington Daily News; Aubrey Taylor, city editor, Washington Post; Harry J. Brown, Salt Lake Tribune; Samuel W. Bell, Philadelphia Public Ledger; Carl H. Butman, Wall Street Journal; Leo R. Sack, Pittsburgh Press; George W. Combs and Marvin Murphy, Baltimore Sun; Morris D. Ervin, Cincinnati Times-Star; Edwin W. Gableman, Cincinnati Enquirer; Harry B. Gauss, Chicago Daily News; James P. Higgins, Newark Star-Eagle; Carl Ruth, Cleveland News; Ernest A. Knorr, Central News; Leo A. McClatchy, of the San Francisco Bulletin.

EDITORIAL "DO'S AND DON'TS" OF BENNETT

Former New York Herald Man Unearths Rules Laid Down by Famous Publisher for Guidance of Reporters, Copy Readers and Editors

WHEN James Gordon Bennett, the younger, was in command of the New York Herald he laid down a list of "Do's and Don'ts" for the guidance of his reporters, copy readers, and editors which became famous in those days. The list has become almost a rarity at the present time.

The pamphlet containing the instructions was recently unearthed by Robert E. Livingston, who as a staff member of the Herald, labored every day for 20 years to follow Commodore Bennett's instructions. Mr. Livingston, who is now director of information and advertising for the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, gave the copy to EDITOR & PUBLISHER for publication.

"One thing that does not appear in the really valuable rules was the fine of one dollar imposed on reporters or copy readers for each misspelled name of a person," Mr. Livingston commented. "To avoid errors of this kind, the reporter writing a 'story' was required to print with his pen once at least the names of the persons figuring in the article. At the time of the pen printed name it was known that the reporter had his mind on the proper spelling of the name, although in the haste of 'turning in' his copy he might misspell the name later in his story."

The list follows:

COURTESY AND FAIR PLAY

Do not use any expression that will unnecessarily hold any one up to ridicule. The printing of anonymous interviews, statements and implied accusations is forbidden.

Don't say "Chinaman" for a Chinese.

Don't call a Jew a Hebrew.

Dont' use "Italian" in crime stories; say foreigner. Reflections on nationalities or races are taboo.

Don't say "colored man" when you mean negro.

Don't call her an "old woman," say "aged."

OBSERVE THE LAWS OF GOOD TASTE

In writing let it be taken for granted that a person shot, stabbed or mangled will bleed. Use the word "blood" only when it is essential.

Don't say "box party" for theater party.

Don't say a man is a "clubman."

Don't use "courtesy visit."

Don't use "visiting" in the sense of "Mr. and Mrs. Blank are visiting at Mr. Dash's villa."

Don't use "invited guest" or "invited audience."

Don't use term "dinner hostesses," "dinner dance" or "dinner guest."

Don't use "house guest," "house party" or "reception guest."

Don't use (hotel) "patron" or "guest."

Dont' use "guest of honor" or "maid of honor."

Dont' say a man is a "rich man" or a "magnate."

Don't use "New Yorker."

Don't say a man is a "society" man.

Don't use "week end" or "over Saturday."

Be careful in the use of the word 'sick" that the context does not place upon it the possibility of an offensive construction. "Ill" is preferable.

Don't call a theatrical performance a 'show."

Don't use "society belle"; say "society girl" or "social leader."

Don't apply "schedule" to the movement of persons, as: "Ambassador Bacon was scheduled to leave Vienna."

AVOID INACCURACIES OF STATEMENT

Don't say "mutual friend."

Don't refer to the "club section of the city." There is none.

Once a King or Queen always one, unless deposed, as Marie Antoinette.

DO'S AND DON'TS FOR WRITING FOR THE HERALD

Get the news, and all the news.

Outline your story before you begin to write.

Reporters will find it to their advantage to put down a single fact, or a group of related facts, on one sheet of paper in making notes, so that they may readily and quickly arrange their material in logical sequence.

Know the subject thoroughly and think straight.

Write as well as you talk.

Avoid long and involved sentences. Make them short and crisp. Do not try to fire your whole battery of details in the introduction.

Do not tell a story more than once.

The introduction is to give to the reader a quick, illuminating flash and to hold his attention.

Tell the story clearly and forcibly and keep away from worn and hackneyed phrases. Be original even if you take a chance. Dare to be as funny as you can. Don't be afraid to say the same word over again if clearness requires it. Macaulay wasn't.

Shun the monotonous repetition of words, however, and especially avoid the use of the same word in different senses in the same paragraph.

Avoid tiresome circumlocutions; write with interest and enthusiasm. Do not compose a story so that the reader feels that the writer was watching himself go by. The highest art is that which conceals art.

Master general principles of composition.

Observe accurately, know the facts, think straight, write forcibly for on these commandments rest all the rules of newspaper English.

Below are given the official "Don'ts" arranged under the rhetorical principles they violate and in alphabetical order:

AVOID TRITE AND OVER-WORKED EXPRESSIONS

Don't "hit," "slap" or "flay" in headlines.

Don't say records are "broken" or "smashed."

Don't use "probe" or "probing."

Purity requires the elimination of foreign words unless there is no English word which will express the meaning which the writer would convey.

"Dictograph" and "dictaphone" are patented words and should be spelled as here given. They are Greek-Latin hybrids.

Don't say "per year" or "per day"; make it "per annum" or "per diem" or "a year" or "a day." Don't mix Latin and English.

Shun obsolete words and expressions. This is the twentieth century.

Don't use "domestic" for "servant"; it is obsolete.

Tautology consists in repeating the thought or statement.

Don't use expressions akin to "silence reigned and no sound was heard."

Avoid the use of slang, obscure technical terms and commonplace expressions and unauthorized abbreviations in news stories. When you let your fancy for syncopated English play put it in quotation marks, or reserve it for avowedly humorous flights.

Don't clip words, as "plane" for "monoplane," "biplane," etc.; or "phone" for "telephone," or "auto" for "automobile."

Don't say "fire breaks out."

Don't use "gang" or "gangster."

Don't use "hurdle" as a verb in "hurdle and ride."

Don't use "newspaper story" for "article" or "account."

Don't use "near riot."

Don't use "pants," "vest" or "full dress suit."

Don't say a place was "raided;" use "raid" as a noun.

Don't use "rush" as an adjective; no "rush orders," &c.

Don't use "suicide" as a verb.

Don't say "plain clothes men."

Don't use Zoo for New York Zoological Park or the Central Park Menagerie.

Redundancy consists of the use of words which are not necessary to the sense.

Don't use "consensus of opinion" for "consensus."

Don't use "painfully cut" or similar expressions, as though persons were "agreeably cut."

Don't say "completely destroyed."

Don't use "sword duel" or "pistol duel."

Don't use "dance music" or "promenade music."

Don't use "thrilling" as an unnecessary adjective in the context of a story as describing a situation desired to be expressed by a reporter. Let the public decide if the story is thrilling or not.

Don't sprinkle "yesterdays" throughout your story.

Precision consists of the choice from cognate or similar words of the word which best expresses the idea to be conveyed. Be accurate.

Don't use "casket" for "coffin."

Don't use "car" or "machine" for "automobile." Car does not mean automobile, and where automobile is meant the word automobile should be used.

Don't use "claim" for "assert." A man claims a hat; he asserts that the hat is his.

Don't use "engineer" for "engine driver."

"Hunting dogs" must be avoided; use "hounds." In an objectionable case the dogs were English setters. Use the "g" in Pekingese.

Say "hunting" when referring to the chase of game on horseback, and "shooting" when the sportsman is afoot.

Don't say "a number;" get something more definite.

Don't use "partially" when you mean "partly."

Don't use "proposition" when you mean "proposal."

Don't say "suit was brought;" say "action was begun."

Propriety requires that words or phrases shall convey the exact and proper meaning of the writer.

Don't use "as to" for "about," "concerning" or "regarding."

Don't use "came" for "went" or "gone."

Don't use "collide;" write "in collision."

Don't say "the Court said," when you mean the Judge or Justice.

Don't say "created" when you mean "caused."

Don't use "diplomat;" use "diplomatist."

Do not use this style of the "was given" form of expression and its variations:—"Admiral Dewey was given a horse" and "Colonel Smith was presented with a sword." The horse was given to Admiral Dewey and the sword was presented to Colonel Smith.

Don't say "had his leg broken" or "had his pocket picked." The victims do not cause these things to be done.

Don't say Mr. Smith has "departed for Europe." "Departed" is used in "departed this life."

Don't say "disorderly house" when you mean "disreputable." A house cannot be disorderly. Do not print the numbers of such houses.

Don't use "during" for "in." "During" means throughout the continuance of.

Don't say "groom" when you mean "bridegroom."

Don't use "epidemic" for "epizootic" in referring to a malady widespread among animals.

Don't say "executive" session when you mean "secret" session.

Don't use "on" for "in" a street. The Metropolitan Opera House is "in" Broadway, not "on" Broadway.

(Continued on page 47)

A TABLOID REPORTER TO HIS CITY EDITOR

(Reprinted from The Conning Tower, New York World, May 21.)

Lord of assignments, where to-day
Do I turn my steps in search of prey
For the presses, slumbering now,
Below?

Do I go where guarded scabs peer down
On strikers in some Jersey town,
Or follow a murder, a suicide,
Walter Ward missing or Browning's bride,
Rum boat captured, awash with booze,
Peggy Joyce wed?—but that's not news.

Do I brave some patrician family's hauteur,
Seeking a photo of its runaway daughter,
Or do my stuff on the seamy east side—
Some girl a mother, but nobody's bride?

Love nest or baby farm,
Block ablaze, a four alarm,
Broker sued by lady's maid,
City scandal or a dog parade?
Do I cover a wedding, a Communist fight
Or stay inside on dull rewrite?

Lord of assignments, blue is the day
And white are the sails, creeping down the bay;
Where do I go, O Gene,
Oh say?

NERI

PRINTING CRIME NEWS MEANS FACING FACTS

Minimizing or Barring It Entirely Is An "Ostrich-like Policy," Henry Justin Smith Tells Women's Clubs

The printing of crime news means that a newspaper is facing the facts rather than being blind to them, Henry Justin Smith, managing editor of the Chicago Daily News declared in a recent address before the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs.

HENRY J. SMITH

Stating that perhaps many of his hearers had signed petitions to newspapers begging them to give less space to crime, he pointed out the fallacy of maintaining an "ostrich policy" in the belief that it would abate wickedness.

"Stripped of its puzzles, the question of crime news becomes like most other questions of news values, a simple issue as between facing facts and being blind to them," he said. "A majority of newspaper men believe most devoutly in the former course. And they believe that the latter course, the 'ostrich policy,' is dangerous; dangerous not only to circulation but to society. We don't think about circulation as much as some critics suppose; we do think about wise and sane policies more than we get credit for. And the most of us, having observed the effects, in some fields, of timidity, wilfull ignorance and self-delusion, are determinded not to fall into those errors, even if we commit other errors.

"Now in a time when lawlessness is making a real threat against America, when illicit liquor-selling is corrupting even high school students, when the mail order sale of revolvers—not to speak of machine guns—is putting weapons into the hands of male and female morons, when so many women can commit murder and get away with it, and when so many well-meaning people are merely uttering optimistic rhetoric, are we newspaper men to accept this rhetoric as the last word? No; we think it our business to face the facts.

"However, we can and do agree with those who urge that reports of crime be presented with as little sympathy, as little an appeal to romantic adolescence, and as little advice by Fagins to potential Oliver Twist, as possible. You can find in any large city of the United States, at least one newspaper which handles crime for what it is—a horrible and foolish business.

"The set of principles adopted by the American Association of Newspaper Editors, condemns the use of details of crime and vice in a way 'not demonstrably for the public good,' and which denounces 'deliberate pandering to vicious instincts.' That document was signed by the editors of the most powerful newspapers in the country; and they meant it.

"We seek to be decent; but we don't intend to be soft. We should like to shield tender minds from frightful and corrupting things; but we don't wish to leave it uncertain that those things exist. We want to know all the facts, cheerful or ugly, encouraging or depressing, about this civilization of ours. We want to give our readers as candid an account as we can of the advance, or even the temporary retrogression, of democracy. We are ambitious—you don't know how ambitious—to describe adequately the marvelously interesting, the often disturbing but on the whole romantic and inspiring, activities of the human creature from day to day.

"We cannot do this by being merely conservative. We can do it only by combining with caution a great deal of clearsightedness and courage. 'Fearless' is the big word for us."

CHICAGO M. E. GIVES TEN DEFINITIONS OF NEWS

HENRY JUSTIN SMITH, managing editor of the Chicago Daily News, in a recent speech before the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, gave the following ten definitions of news:

"News is a revelation of things which a few people know about made for the benefit of millions who would not otherwise know about those things.

"News is a synthetic food, delivered for the purpose of satisfying a great human hunger.

"News is the telescope and microscope of social laboratories.

"News is an unrhetorical essay on life. It is poetry without form and art without artistic intention.

"News is like the explosion of a hidden mine on a peaceful sector of the battle front.

"News is a record of the good and the bad, but hardly ever of the indifferent.

"News is a statement, not always of the new, but sometimes of the new made old; a statement not merely of the unusual, but often of the cruel.

"News, which is sometimes spoken of as history, is rather an ingredient of history, and one which does not always stand the test of science.

"News is an implement wielded by a profession which is no respecter of persons, but tries to be a respecter of human conventions, according to the standards of a given time.

"News, at its best, is the comprehensive and credible, the enterprising but judicious, the eternally circumspect but above all the fundamentally fearless, disclosure of what the human race has been doing for the last twenty-four hours."

N. Y. JUDGE DISMISSES WHISKER LIBEL SUIT

Arguments Presented on Motion to Dismiss Case Brought by Miss Patterson Against Colgate & Co., for Alleged "Flippant" Advertisement

Justice Erlanger in New York supreme court, May 27, dismissed the libel suit for $150,000 brought against Colgate & Co., by Miss Ella C. Patterson, of Milwaukee, to restrain the soap manufacturers from continuing to use in their advertisements a picture of Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside, of Civil war fame.

Alan Fox, counsel for Colgate & Co., contended that it was neither libellous to use the picture of Gen. Burnside, such as appears in the school histories, nor did it invade the private rights of any of his living relatives. Miss Patterson says she is the only surviving relative of the general.

Arnold Furst, counsel for Miss Patterson, said that the manner in which Colgate & Co. worded their advertisement for shaving cream, which accompanied the Burnside pictures, had a tendency to hold up the plaintiff-relative to ridicule and contempt. He said that if the soap manufacturers had only discontinued the use of the picture when Miss Patterson first wrote to them about it no suit would have been necessary, but that instead of treating the matter seriously the company wrote her lawyer in Milwaukee in a facetious vein about "mutton chops" and "goatees."

Mr. Fox remarked that it was quite evident that the Milwaukee lawyer was prejudiced, as his name was Van Dyke. He said that it certainly was no disgrace for men to wear whiskers like President Arthur, President Hayes and President Garfield. He even thought that for persons who prided themselves on the "ability to grow a good set of whiskers many a man would like to have raised some Lord Dundrearys."

JERITZA WINS SUIT OVER USE OF NAME

Court Grants Her Injunction Restraining Cigar Dealers from Placing Picture and Name on Their Brands —Singer's Rights Infringed

Mme. Maria Jeritza, prima donna, was granted an interlocutory injunction by Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher in New York, May 25, restraining Louis and Isidore Cohen, cigar dealers, from using her name or likeness in connection with their cigars.

Judge Thacher held that the singer's rights had been infringed upon by the sale of a cigar labeled "La Jeritza" and that a picture appearing under the name on the cigar box, although it did not in any respect resemble Mme. Jeritza, was nevertheless a likeness of her within the meaning of the law.

Counsel for the Cohens raised the point that the singer is now really a baroness, the wife of Leopold Frederick Salvatore Baron Popper de Podrhey of Austria. Counsel for the singer argued she was using her own name with the Baron's consent.

Judge Thacher declared he knew of no authority requiring a married woman to assume the name of her husband, "although she is certainly entitled to do so, and the relations of the average home ordinarily present very practical reasons why she should."

AD SWINDLER SENTENCED

Judge Praises New York World and New York Times for Exposing Noblett

Judge Mancuso in New York court this week sentenced Edward Arden Noblett, advertising swindler, to 15 years in Sing Sing.

Noblett had advertised in the New York World and New York Times under one of the 20 aliases he used in his operations, that he would sublet his Riverside Drive apartment. After accepting money in advance, he would advertise for another tenant, obtaining money a second time. He had long been barred from the two newspapers' advertising columns under his real name.

"If it were not for the World and the Times, both of which spent money unstintingly to bring the matter to the attention of the District Attorney, you might still have been going on swindling people out of their money," the court said to Noblett in passing sentence.

Editor Wins Oratorical Contest

Hammond Fowler, editor of the Rockwood (Tenn.) Times, recently won the state championship in the "Know Tennessee" oratorical contest, launched by the Nashville Banner, with the Knoxville Sentinel, Bristol Herald-Courier, Jackson Sun, and Clarksville Leaf-Chronicle cooperating. The Rockwood editor was awarded the decision and presented with $500 in gold and a handsome silver bowl.

Publisher Makes Gift to City

G. A. Buder, attorney and publisher of the St. Louis Times, has made his fourth gift of ground to the City of St. Louis for public benefit. Mr. Buder's first gift was Susan R. Buder Memorial Square, at California avenue and Hickory street, named for his mother, who was born 79 years ago and died in 1909. His next gift was a lot on Hickory street, west of the square, for tennis courts and then he donated a lot at the southwest corner of Ewing and Hickory as the site of a community house. The fourth gift consists of two lots, providing for the enlargement of the site for the community house.

INTERVIEW OWNERSHIP DEBATED IN COURT

Judge Dismisses Suit Brought by Helen Jenkins Against N. Y. Daily News, Alleging Violation of Literary Property Rights—Asked $10,000

Can a person claim a literary property right to ideas and opinions given to a reporter and used by him in the form of an interview published in a newspaper?

Who owns an interview—the person interviewed, or the newspaper?

Lawyers debated these questions before Judge Mitchell L. Erlanger in New York Supreme Court this week, and the court, after hearing arguments on both sides, dismissed the case, but granted counsel of the "person interviewed" permission to file an amended complaint within 20 days.

Helen Jenkins, New York society girl, had brought suit against the New York Daily News, asking $10,000 damages. Her claim, in substance, was that the Daily News had asked her to write for publication one or more articles dealing with the activities of New York society in general, and with debutante parties in particular. During negotiations between Miss Jenkins and a reporter for the News, the plantiff furnished an oral statement of her plans for the form and substance of the articles, including her ideas, opinions, and conclusions on the suggested topic.

Subsequently, she decided she would not write the articles herself and declined to negotiate any further. The News, thereupon, used Miss Jenkins' remarks, given in the course of negotiations, in the form of an interview, published in the Sunday edition on Dec. 27.

Edward K. Hanlon, of Beekman, Bogue, Clark & Griscom, attorneys for the plaintiff, argued before Judge Erlanger that his client had common law literary property right to the ideas, opinions and conclusions which appeared in the interview without Miss Jenkins' permission, and that she had been damaged, therefore, to the amount of $10,000.

Harry H. Van Aken, of DeWitt & Van Aken, counsel for the News, contended that the article was a mere report of an interview, such as is to be found in the news columns of every issue of every newspaper. There was no allegation that the defendant had been guilty of bad faith or that in making the publication had violated any confidence.

The sole question presented to the court, he said, was whether the publication by the defendant as a news item, of an oral statement voluntarily made by the plaintiff in the absence of any agreement on defendant's part that she would not be quoted, constitutes a violation of the plaintiff's property rights.

Mr. Van Aken quoted from the court's decision in the case of Bristol vs. the Equitable Life Assurance Society, as follows:

"Without denying that there may be property in an idea or trade secret or system, it is obvious that its originator or proprietor must himself protect it from escape or disclosure. If it cannot be sold or negotiated, or used without disclosure, it would seem proper that some contract should guard or regulate the disclosure, otherwise it must follow the law of ideas and become the acquisition of whoever receives it."

Mr. Van Aken said he had made a thorough search but was unable to discover any authority in New York state holding that the publication by a newspaper in its news columns of the unoriginal observations or opinion of a person with reference to a particular subject constitutes a violation of the literary property rights of that person.

"If such were the law," he declared, "the publication of a newspaper would be an impossibility. No publisher could undertake to defend the litigation which might deluge him if every person quoted in the news columns in each issue of a newspaper would assert his literary property rights had been violated. The fallacy of such a proposition is apparent from its statement."

"KEEP AFTER THE BEAR--DON'T CHASE RABBITS!"

This Injunction in Itself Is Liberal Journalistic Education, Says Macdonald DeWitt, New York Lawyer, Who Sums Up Newspapers Concern with Libel Law in Four Short "Don'ts."

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

The following transcript from Earl Carroll's testimony in the famous bath tub perjury trial in New York this week, is pertinent:

Q. Did anyone fall into the tub, or was anyone pushed into the tub, or did anyone get into the tub? A. No. The newspaper accounts of what happened are so garbled there is no use doing anything about it.

Q. Have you begun libel action against any of them? A. You can't do anything with the modern newspaper.

Q. You haven't begun any actions have you? A. Well, I have actions against most of them already.

MacDonald DeWitt, for more than 20 years a defender of newspapers in libel litigation in New York, this week explains why judgements are rarely returned against the defendants in libel actions—why, in the words of Mr. Carroll "you can't do anything with the modern newspaper."

The attorney also lists four "libel don'ts" in this the 11th article obtained by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, stripping the libel law of legal verbiage.

"KEEP after the bear—don't go chasing rabbits."

Quoting a veteran newspaper man, Macdonald DeWitt, counsel for the New York Daily News, this week offered the above injunction as the first, and most important of four short "libel don'ts," which, he said, summed up completely a newspaper man's concern with the law of libel.

The other three DeWitt suggestions were:

"Don't be careless; don't make retractions hastily and, don't settle, unless you are positive you are in the wrong."

In his experience as libel lawyer, Mr. DeWitt said, explaining the first injunction, he has found that a great many libel suits grow out of incidental matter apart from the main theme of the story, just thrown in by the reporter. The reporter leaves off tracking the bear to go scurrying after a little rabbit. And, in consequence, he frequently stumbles into the libel bog. This one proverb, the lawyer said, is in itself a liberal journalistic education.

"I learned long ago that it is easy for a lawyer, when a question arises concerning a story that if not true is libellous to simply say, 'don't publish it,'" Mr. DeWitt began the interview. "But I also realized the significance of what William C. Whitney once said of Elihu Root. Mr. Whitney said that most lawyers, when he called on them for advice, told him what not to do, while Mr. Root told him what to do and how to do it.

"I have noticed when articles have been submitted to me prior to publication in a newspaper, that, while it is easy to tell the publisher not to publish them, what the publisher really wants to know is how the articles, or such a part of them as are susceptible to proof, can be safely published. I think, therefore, it is an important part of a lawyer's or editor's business to advise his staff how the story produced to be printed can be printed with safety to the publisher and with fairness to the person involved and to the public."

It was in giving such advice on one occasion, Mr. DeWitt declared, that he learned the apt phrasing of the first of his three libel don'ts.

A newspaper was exposing alleged immoral conditions in New York dance halls. In one article of a series, the writer had incidentally referred to a young woman, who, so the article stated, when she was about to leave a dance hall had "made up her mind" to go to a hotel with her escort for wrongful purposes. The statement had no real relevancy to the article itself. It was one of several statements in the series, which Mr. De Witt thought should be eliminated, and he told the editor so.

"Send the writer up to see me," Mr. DeWitt suggested. "I want to give him some libel education."

The writer happened to be a newspaper man the lawyer had known for 20 years. Mr. DeWitt called attention to the fact that the statement regarding the intention of the young woman, involving as it did the operation of her mind, was impossible to prove, and, since it was defamatory, should not be published. He told him that elimination of this statement couldn't possibly affect the "punch" of the story since it had no real bearing on the point at issue.

The writer agreed and replied with the quotation which opens this article.

"This newspaper man has given good advice to all writers," Mr. DeWitt continued. "One of the most serious libel suits I ever defended grew out of a small four-line paragraph printed at the end of a six-column article. It could just as well have been left out of the story as not.

"In my experience, I have found that in most libel suits where the publisher is at fault—and there are more libel suits where the publisher is not at fault than when he is—the error is due to carelessness. Often it concerns the bringing into a story of some incidental matter about some person not really connected with the main theme, so that no particular effort is made to verify the facts.

"Another common error is the writing into a headline some statement or inference not justified by the text of the story itself. Libel flourishes through lack of care.

"My second libel don't to publishers, editors and reporters is, therefore:

"Don't be careless.

"So far, the series in EDITOR & PUBLISHER seem to stress the advisability of promptly publishing a correction or retraction, when a justified complaint is made. It is important, however, to remember that a correction or retraction should not be made hastily, or without careful investigation. An alleged correction of a true news story is not only unfair to readers, but also, if a suit is brought to trial after the publication of the alleged correction, the newspaper's defense that the original article was true would have little if any weight with a jury.

"I have found that in the great majority of cases where a mistake has been made through some inadvertence, the complaining person is well satisfied with a prompt and fair correction. Where suits are actually begun, on the other hand, what the plaintiff and his lawyers are looking for, in the majority of cases, is not the saving of a reputation, but rather hard cash.

"For this reason, my advice to publishers generally is: don't settle out of court unless you are positive you have injured the plaintiff.

"To settle complaints for libel by payment of money encourages a certain type of lawyer to bring libel suits. We have seen how personal injury damage suits against street car companies and then automobile owners have grown to mammoth proportions in the last 25 years. I believe that this growth, or a substantial proportion of it, is due to the policy that many public utilities and casualty insurance companies have adopted that it is cheaper to settle than to defend themselves in court. If the same policy was adopted by newspaper publishers, and it should be believed by lawyers and the public generally that newspapers were always ready to pay cash to save themselves trouble, I believe libel litigation would increase ten-fold.

"When I began to participate in the defense of libel suits more than 20 years ago, a great many more libel complaints were made and libel suits actually brought than there are today. This decrease in libel litigation is due, in my opinion, not only to the fact that the business of gathering news is now more efficiently and carefully done than ever before, but also because the public knows today that while the publishers of newspapers are glad to make corrections of any mistakes that may creep into the news colums, they are also zealous in defending themselves against unjustifiable assaults in court.

"The only place, of course, where the actual damage caused by a libel can be ascertained is in a court before a judge and jury.

"I have found that in the great majority of libel suits brought against newspapers, the claims of the plaintiff are grossly exaggerated. Often attempts are made to show not only injury to the plaintiff's reputation, but also that the publication seriously affected the plaintiff's health, brought on a nervous breakdown, or some permanent disease. Sometimes a plaintiff claims he or she lost the affection of their family and friends, because of some publication, which anyone knowing the plaintiff intimately could see was an obvious mistake.

"These cases, it seems to me, must be met with a vigorous defense.

"It has been called to my attention that Earl Carroll, now so much in the public prints, has stated that newspapers garble their reports, and that 'you can't do anything against the modern newspaper.'

"Mr. Carroll is in part mistaken. Where a newspaper is at fault, the injured party has ample remedy. In fact the law takes most meticulous care of the reputation of an individual. Any statement, which reflects adversely upon a person's reputation, the law presumes to be false, to have been published maliciously, and to have caused actual money damage to the plaintiff's reputation and feelings. The law puts upon the newspaper publisher the burden of proving either that the published statement was true or that it is a fair report of a judicial proceeding.

"It is true, however, that it is only in exceptional instances that a judgment for a substantial amount of money damages is recovered against a newspaper. The reason for this is not because the law protects the newspaper publisher or because the resources of a newspaper are so great that it can protect itself against just claims in or out of court. The reason is, as I have found, that the average juror looks upon a libel suit from the standpoint of common sense.

"I have just tried a libel suit illustrating what I mean. A woman sued the New York Sun, because it printed a fair and accurate account of the contents of a complaint filed against her for alleged fraud, but not acted upon by the court. She claimed that since the complaint had merely been filed in the county clerk's office and had not been subject to court or judicial action, the newspaper had no right to publish its contents. The Sun had simply printed a fair account of what the complaint said together with what the plaintiff herself had given out for publication when the matter was brought to her attention.

"While the trial judge charged the jury that the newspaper had no right under law to print the contents of a complaint merely filed in the county clerk's office, the jury, as a matter of common sense, found that the action actually had been brought against the newspaper, that the plaintiff herself had talked for publication, and that there could have been no real damage to her feelings or reputation. In other words, the jurors disregarded the plaintiff's technical claim that the article was not privileged, and used common sense in dismissing a case, which should never have been brought in the first place.

"A somewhat similar case was brought against the Sun some years ago. The plaintiff had been indicted in connection with an income tax fraud case in the Federal courts, and on trial had been discharged because of insufficient proof. Suit against the newspaper was based on the claim that the article was not a fair report of judicial proceedings in the magistrate's court, because it contained statements which the assistant district attorney had given out to newspapers for publication.

"As a matter of fact, what the United States attorney had said was substantially what was stated in the complaint in the magistrate's court. The plaintiff's lawyer claimed that the newspaper account inferred that his client was guilty. The jury, however, using common sense, and comparing the complaint in the magistrate's court with the Sun's article, found that they were substantially the same. In fact, the trial court itself came to the same conclusion, and persuaded the plaintiff to withdraw his suit.

"To sum up, I would advise newspaper publishers by offering a paraphrase of what Polonius said to his son Laertes:

"'Beware of entrance into a libel suit; but being in, defend it vigorously, so that the plaintiff will beware of you.'

"When we consider the billions of newspaper stories printed during the course of a year in newspapers throughout the country, we can marvel not that we have an occasional libel suit, but rather that there are so few mistakes made, which justify the bringing of libel suits.

"I think the chief reason why it doesn't pay to bring libel suits against a modern newspaper is because the modern newspaper publisher tries to be fair and square and to print truthful news stories.

"The great majority of suits brought are 'strike' suits and are not pressed for the sake of vindication, but rather as a business enterprise. Libel plaintiffs try to capitalize on what is claimed to be a newspaper's mistake.

"Where litigation is brought against a newspaper as a business enterprise, it seems to me that a newspaper publisher should, by the most vigorous defense possible, make the plaintiff earn every penny of his claim."

Say "Good Luck" in Newspaper Space

Forty Sioux City professional and business men contributed the space used in a full page advertisement in the Kansas City Post, May 21, extending congratulations to Kansas City for gaining the business location of Cornish Beck, Inc., jewelers. The firm, which had been in business in Sioux City 30 years, took over the Cady & Olmstead Jewelry Company of Kansas City.

N. Y. Sun Starts House Organ

The New York Sun has started publication of a monthly house organ under the title "The Sun's Rays." Richard Lockridge is editor and Albert E. Barnard news editor.

CARL MAGEE, FIGHTING EDITOR, WILL GO ON TRIAL IN JUNE

Ready To Face Manslaughter Charges In Connection With Accidental Killing—His Son Writes History of Case For Editor & Publisher

By THEODORE P. MAGEE

Theodore P. Magee is the 16 year old son of Carl Magee, editor of the Albequerque (N. M.) State Tribune.

CARL MAGEE is fighting his sixth year for clean politics in New Mexico. It has been six years of fistic encounters, libel cases, unfair trials, gun encounters, and illegal imprisoning such as has never before been written down in the history of the West.

The West is still "wild and wooly." All too plainly has this been shown in Magee's fight in New Mexico against the old Spanish dons and crooked politicians that have held a strangle hold on the citizens of the state since its admittance in 1912 to the Union.

I had been living in New Mexico since 1915 when my mother, my sister, and myself came here. My father remained in Oklahoma where he had oil interests and was also a prominent lawyer of northeastern Oklahoma. In 1920 he made his decision to come to New Mexico. It was a year later that actual combat began.

When Senator A. B. Fall, New Mexico, was named Secretary of the Interior, it was an interesting development which should be noted. My father bought the Albuquerque Morning Journal from Fall shortly before Fall leased Teapot Dome. Fall at the time confided that he was "broke." Soon after the Teapot affair, expensive improvements were made on his ranch, and prosperity was manifest. This and other testimony offered by my father ripped the "lid off the Teapot."

When the Teapot started boiling the effect was felt in New Mexico. Activities against Magee were centered around Las Vegas, in San Miguel county. Magee spent most of the summer of 1923 in Las Vegas, where he was subjected to a libel suit. The libel was alleged to be against Chief Justice Parker based on the statement of Magee in his columns, that "We suggest nothing to Justice Parker. He has become too accustomed to old methods to see anything wrong in what has happened."

The prosecution presented evidence that the item had been published by Magee, and declared that it "reflected on the character of Justice Parker." The jury, composed of Spanish speaking jurors, agreed and Magee was accordingly convicted. Magee plainly stated later that the whole thing was a frame-up. A Spanish jury tried the case when it understood no English, the judge was openly opposed to Magee, the charge of libel was admittedly filed by someone besides Parker, who proclaimed that he did not ask for it.

Press freedom is a vital thing, and newspapers all over the United States took up the case. When my father made a trip east in the spring of 1925, he spoke to great audiences.

But his troubles had only begun when the Parker libel suit came up. He was forced to sell the Journal soon after he had bought it, and he commenced publishing Magee's Independent as soon as arrangements could be made. This was later turned into the New Mexico State Tribune which Magee now edits.

The following months after his first libel trial were spent in patient waiting. Already there were several contempt cases awaiting trial in Leahy's court, but Magee kept up the attack on crooked politics. In June of 1923 my father, in an article published in the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune declared: "I am not hurt. I am not going to be hurt. But if I were, the price would not be too high if it finally released New Mexico from a situation which has ruined her."

Magee was hurt before his troubles came to a climax. In the summer of 1924 Magee was sent to jail by Judge Leahy on a "direct contempt" charge. It was the first of the Dark Hours for us at home. Leahy convicted him in court of direct contempt during another contempt trial. He was about to be sentenced for contempt (on an item published some months before in the Tribune) and the judge asked him if he had anything to say.

Magee replied that he denied he was being given a fair trial and that this was a court.

Judge Leahy declared him in direct contempt and sent him to jail for three months. Magee was pardoned again as he had been at all other times by the governor. The sheriff, upon receiving the pardon, declared it not legal, and refused to honor it.

Word spread immediately that Magee was being held in jail. A half-hundred armed cowboys from north of Las Vegas rode to town and declared they would come out in an open scrap if anything happened to Magee. Great crowds of admirers and supporters gathered around the jail. Magee's attorneys finally dispersed them.

In the meantime General Skipworth, according to the Associated Press, was pleading for troops to forcibly free Magee from his imprisonment. It took two days for the sheriff to lose nerve, and when a habeas corpus proceeding was filed in the supreme court, Magee was released.

This was in the summer of 1924. Leaving father in Albuquerque during the warm months, we had gone to California. Father was held incommunicado in the prison, and the first we knew of the trouble was a streamer story in the Los Angeles Examiner. We were of one accord. California was no place for us, and conscious that dad had encountered his greatest trouble, we packed up and quietly started home. Reporters had found us, however, and our return was not unheralded.

I remember how the reporters had wanted pictures of us, but mother grimly refused, much to my disappointment.

When we arrived in Albuquerque father was out of jail and everything looked rosy to us.

But 1925, although it opened most promisingly, proved to be the blackest year in the history of the Magee family. It was a year of terrible tragedies which have left their marks on the whole family.

Judge Leahy had run for re-election as district judge—and had been beaten. My father had been appointed a member of the State Asylum Board at Las Vegas. On Aug. 20, my father and sister had gone to Las Vegas for a meeting of the board.

We had thought by this time that any danger was passed. There had been one time when he had been held up in a lonely Canyon many miles east of Albuquerque and would have been subsequently killed if a tourist had not suddenly shown up down the road.

Then there was a time that snipers shot at employees as they worked at night. There had been two or three fistic encounters which my father, who has passed 50, would have liked to avoid. Of course he was beaten in these fights.

But luck didn't last. My sister and father on the second night in Las Vegas were planning to attend a picture show. Dad was in the lobby of the hotel talking to a woman reporter while he waited for Gertrude, my sister, to dress. Glancing up, he saw Leahy enter the lobby of the Meadows with two companions.

He later related how his first impulse was to rise. But instead he remained in his seat and continued talking to the reporter. As he did so, however, he reached into his pocket and removed the safety catch on a small 25 caliber Colt which he carried around when he went to Las Vegas. Leahy had, he remembered, threatened him on more than one occasion. Many times friends had said, "Magee, Leahy threatened to kill you this morning."

Leahy came on toward Magee and then apparently passed him by. Suddenly he struck out a little to one side and from behind. As he struck, he cursed bitterly. The blow hit Magee on the side of the cheek, and another on the other side toppled him on the floor. Leahy is a great man in size, and weighs more than 200 pounds. Those blows were powerful.

Still cursing, Leahy began systematically to kick the life out of his prone victim. Magee was in a daze. He was conscious that he was being kicked to death. Grasping the little gun, he cried "Stop or I'll shoot."

The gun was in his left hand and under him. He was so dazed he could not see, and the gun was almost harmless. Leahy laughed and continued to kick. Magee pulled the trigger.

And then the terrible thing happened. John Lassiter, a bystander made a dive to intercede for Magee. The bullet by a cruel trick of Fate lodged in his neck. He died in seventeen minutes.

A crowd, now gathering closer, thought the fight was over, but Leahy continued to assault Magee. The latter, stretched out on the floor, was growing weaker. Something said. "Shoot—shoot—or you'll die by not doing so." Queer things buzzed around him.

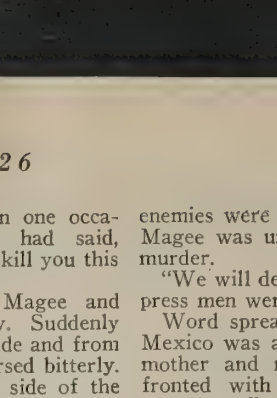
Aiming without eyesight, he mumbled, "Get away!"

Leahy kicked again and Magee shot twice. Both bullets lodged in Leahy's left arm. Leahy muttered an oath and turned away. Ten minutes later the political enemies were doing their work, and Carl Magee was under arrest for first degree murder.

"We will demand the extreme penalty!" press men were told by officials.

Word spread in an hour, and all New Mexico was afire over the tragedy. My mother and myself at home were confronted with hundreds of friends who came to offer their services. Telegrams from all over the United States began pouring in before the night was half over.

Home-coming crowds from picture shows in Albuquerque stood around the streets awaiting an extra from the Journal which was going to press. Excited groups talked a thousand different versions of the affair. And then the extra recited the grim story.



The next night when the train arrived in from Las Vegas, mother, braced for the arrival of dad, stood bravely by me as the train pulled in. A crowd of 2,000 supporters were behind us. Gertrude stepped off first. Her face was grave. The porter appeared with father leaning heavily on him. A great cheer, swelling larger and larger, shook the town as the mob saw him.

But Magee didn't smile. His jaws were swollen beyond imagination.

I assisted him off the train and he kissed mother. A doctor and an ambulance assistant pushed their way through the crowd and carried him away. The mob quietly dispersed. It had paid its tribute to Magee. Dark clouds did not matter. They were there to help through the Blackness of Trouble.

It was days before he grew better. We

(Continued on page 24)

Today in Jacksonville

At Forsyth and Main Streets, the strident sound of pneumatic hammers, driving hot rivets into steel girders, dwarfs all pessimistic doubts of Jacksonville's future. The new Lynch Building grows daily to new heights. Soon its seventeenth floor will sweep the sky and add another monumental structure to the skyline.

The Lynch Building shows explicit faith in Jacksonville's future, emphasized with an investment of $1,500,000.

When such an enthusiastic community selects the Florida Times-Union in 95% of its homes, the tribute is very impressive.

The Florida Times-Union
~JACKSONVILLE~

DAILY, 53,000 SUNDAY, 70,000

THE NEW YORK TIMES

First in Daily City and Suburban Circulation

The average net paid circulation of the daily (week day) edition of The New York Times in New York City and suburbs (50-mile radius) for the six months ended March 31, 1926, was greater than any other New York morning newspaper of standard size, as was also the total daily circulation for the same six-months' period.

THE RECORD

	City and Suburban Average Net Paid Week Day Circulation	Total Average Net Paid Week Day Circulation
The New York Times	285,949	356,471
The World	261,064	287,694
The New York Herald-Tribune	233,074	285,800
New York American	204,092	225,081

New York morning newspapers have an extensive sale in New York City and the suburbs. An advertiser who wishes the attention of all the people of the metropolitan district will act wisely to use all the morning newspapers.

While it is true that the sale of the daily edition of The New York Times exceeds that of any other New York morning newspaper of standard size, the special value of its circulation is its character—the intelligent, thinking people who read The Times. To reach this substantial group of unusual buying power, advertisements in The Times are essential.

FIVE BALTIMORE HEARST MEN FACE JAIL SENTENCES FOR CONTEMPT

News and American Executives and Photographers Tried for Taking Picture in Court in Violation of Judge's Order—To Be Sentenced Next Tuesday

"SUBSTANTIAL jail sentences," to be imposed next Tuesday, were promised Tuesday of this week by Criminal Court Judge Eugene O'Dunne in contempt of court proceedings against three editors and two photographers of the Baltimore News and Baltimore American. The papers published court room photographs of the Richard Reese Whittemore trial last week after Judge O'Dunne had given an order from the bench forbidding the taking of pictures in the court room.

When the case ended Judge O'Dunne announced he would find the newspaper men guilty unless new evidence is introduced.

"In my mind they are clearly guilty of contempt," the Judge said at the close of the hearing. "Unless circumstances arise to change my mind or they can before next Tuesday show sufficient cause, I will impose substantial jail sentences." A fifteenth century jailing of the Prince of Wales, later Henry V of England, for disobedience of an order of the Lord Chief Justice was cited by counsel as precedent for the imposition of jail sentences on the newspaper men.

Harold E. Elliston, managing editor of the News; Harry Clark, city editor of the News; Earl C. Deland, managing editor of the American, and William Klemm and William Sturm, photographers for the two papers, were cited for contempt by Judge O'Dunne, and summoned to show cause why they should not go to jail.

On the morning the trial opened Judge O'Dunne, sitting in his chambers before the session of the Court began, heard the sound of a flash-light explosion. He sent his baliffs out to find the photographer who had made the photograph.

Klemm, it is said, answered the summons and on appearing before the Judge was addressed in this manner:

"Give me that photograph."

The photographer handed over a photographic plate and the judge broke it on his desk.

Later it developed—Klemm so testifying in court—that the photographer had handed the judge a blank plate, retaining the photograph.

It was also said that a photograph of the scene in the courtroom was made by a small camera with a time exposure and this was published in the News.

When Judge O'Dunne learned of the trick that had been played on him by the photographer he sent him to jail for contempt, later releasing him on bail until the time for his trial arrived.

Harry Clark, city editor, testified that he gave the orders to make the photographs in spite of the judge's orders forbidding it, telling his photographers to get the pictures and talk about it afterwards. Photographer Sturm admitted making the pictures and said that he did so on orders from Mr. Clark.

"Do you consider your duty to your readers higher than your duty to obey the Court?" Judge O'Dunne asked Mr. Elliston, the managing editor of the News.

The editor replied that he did.

George Weems Williams and William L. Marbury, Jr., two of the most prominent members of the Baltimore bar, defended the editors and the photographers. They maintained that there was no disturbance of the court nor any interference with the course of justice in the manner in which the photographs were made and that, since that was true, the judge exceeded his authority in charging the defendants with contempt.

Judge O'Dunne called on the Bar Association of Baltimore to take part in the prosecution of the case and to appear as "friends of the Court." Jesse N. Bowen, president of the association and William C. Coleman, chairman of the judiciary committee of that body, appeared in court in that capacity. They took no part in questioning witnesses, but did make arguments after the taking of testimony had been finished. They maintained that the Court was within its rights in citing the newspaper men for contempt.

Photographs were not taken by photographers for other newspapers. Edmund Duffy, cartoonist for the Baltimore Sun, made some pencil drawings in the court which were published. There was no dispute about them.

A conference of representatives of local judges, the Bar Association and newspapers to fix the relations of newspapers to the Court has been suggested following close of the trial.

A.N.A. LEADERS TO MEET

Executive Committee Will Consider Membership Applications at Lancaster

Applications for membership will be considered by the executive committee of the Association of National Advertisers at a meeting to be held at Lancaster, Pa., June 23. S. E. Conybeare, Armstrong Cork Company, committee chairman, will preside. Edward T. Hall, vice-president of the Ralston Purina Company, and association president, will be unable to attend, since he sailed from New York, May 17, for an eight weeks' vacation in Europe.

Total membership of the A. N. A. is now 330, compared with 320 a year ago at this time, according to R. K. Leavitt, association secretary.

Members of the executive committee are: W. K. Burlen, New England Confectionery Company; C. F. Beatty, New Jersey Zinc Company; Carl Gazley, Yawman & Erbe Manufacturing Company; W. A. Hart, E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Co.; B. Lichtenberg, Alexander Hamilton Institute; Carl J. Schumann, Hilo Varnish Company; Evans E. A. Stone, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; and J. S. Wichert, Mellins' Food Company of North America.

The committee will also discuss preliminary plans for the association's fall convention.

Vanderbilt Stock Permit Withdrawn

Permits for the sale of stock by the Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., have been suspended by the California state corporation department. Question as to the financial condition of the two Vanderbilt publishing firms led to the action by the commission following the suspension of the San Francisco Herald and the appointment of a receiver for the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, it was announced.

Flettner Praises U. S. Press

Anton Flettner, German inventor of the rotor ship Baden-Baden, praised newspapers of the United States in an address this week before the Advertising Club of New York. He was "amazed" he said at their "scientific accuracy." He told his audience he had heard a great deal abroad about newspaper sensationalism in America and was agreeably surprised by what he actually found.

A. N. P. A. DIRECTORS MEET IN NEW YORK

Organization of Traffic and Mechanical Departments Discussed—Funds Will Not Be Available Until September —Free Publicity a Topic

Directors of the American Newspaper Publishers Association met at New York headquarters May 27 to discuss plans for organizing the traffic and mechanical departments of the association, authorized by the members at the April convention.

L. B. Palmer, association manager, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER, that funds to finance the two new departments added to the treasury as a result of a revision of membership dues, would not be available for use until September. Nothing definite, therefore, was determined by the directors.

Free publicity was also a topic at the directors' meeting.

Officers and directors of the A. N. P. A. are John Stewart Bryan, Richmond News-Leader, president; E. H. Butler, Buffalo Evening News, vice-president; George M. Rogers, Cleveland Plain Dealer, secretary; Howard Davis, New York Herald Tribune, treasurer; F. W. Bush, Athens (O.) Messenger; J. D. Barnum, Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard; F. G. Bell, Savannah (Ga.) Morning News; Harry Chandler, Los Angeles Times; Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun; Charles H. Taylor, Boston Globe; T. R. Williams, Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph; and S. E. Thomason, Chicago Tribune.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the American Type Founders Company

BOSTON	RICHMOND	DETROIT	MINNEAPOLIS	SAN FRANCISCO
NEW YORK	ATLANTA	CHICAGO	KANSAS CITY	PORTLAND
PHILADELPHIA	BUFFALO	CINCINNATI	DES MOINES	SPOKANE
BALTIMORE	PITTSBURGH	ST. LOUIS	DENVER	WINNIPEG
	CLEVELAND	MILWAUKEE	LOS ANGELES

The Arterial Highway of the Automotive Market

The real miracle of the American automotive industry is not so much in the manufacturing plants, where millions of standardized operations are performed under standardized conditions. It is rather in the markets where every car must be sold to some individual man or woman, where the conditions are as variable as the sands of the sea.

The six-day family newspapers are the arterial highways to this market. In Cincinnati nineteen cars are delivered on Times-Star Avenue for every ten that go from the factory to the user over the second highway. Two go via Times-Star for every one that goes via the avenue of the leading morning newspaper published on the same days. This statement is based upon the records of comparative display lineage carried by automobile makers and dealers in the Cincinnati newspapers during the year 1925.

In the local tire and accessory field, where the whole purpose of newspaper advertising is to sell the consumer rather than to extend out-of-town distribution, the figures are still more convincing. Accessory advertising in the Times-Star compares with that of the second afternoon newspaper as thirteen to eight. It is 7.75 times that of the leading week-day morning newspaper.

Tires are advertised in the Times-Star 75% more extensively than in the second afternoon newspaper, but the ratio of tire advertising in the Times-Star to that of the leading six-day morning paper is 7 to 1.

These figures tell the story of the relative values of daily newspaper circulations in Cincinnati. They emphasize the economy of the cost of display advertising in the Times-Star with its complete local coverage in contrast with the higher cost of reaching part of the market by any other medium or combination of media.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

Member Audit Bureau of Circulations

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher — C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Martin L. Marsh, Eastern Rep.
927 Brunswick Bldg., New York

Kellogg M. Patterson, Western Rep.
904 Union Trust Bldg., Chicago

THE Post is a clean, home newspaper, without emphasis on crime, sex or sensation. NOT a "picture paper." Constructively liberal. Edited for intelligent people. Tabloid in size but editorially and ethically up to the high Scripps-Howard standard.

BALTIMORE POST

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

CARTOONS GROWING IN POPULARITY CLIFFORD BERRYMAN SAYS

Washington Star Veteran Cites Government Officials and Congressmen Who Declare Powerful Cartoons Influence Political Contests—Backs Them Against Humorous Writing

By MARY M. CRENSHAW

IS the cartoon losing its popularity? With his long experience as cartoonist on the Washington Evening Star, Clifford K. Berryman ought to know if anybody does, and he says emphatically no.

C. K. Berryman

"If it is passing I am in the wrong pew to know about it, for hardly a day dawns that I am not importuned to make cartoons for various causes," he declares.

Warming to his subject he continued, "Waning cartoons, eh? Why, even the few practically pictureless papers that refuse to indulge on week-days, always have a generous supply on Sunday and they are good ones, too. If Leon Trotsky lives long enough to do what Bill Hohenzollern failed to do a few years ago, we may see the cartoon's career curtailed and crippled; or if Mussolini, in the coming years, should rule the world from Rome, that might indeed put the cartoonist on bread and water; but those contingencies are not immediately threatening.

"No! While Uncle Sam and John Bull sit at the Civilization Conference Table. the cartoonists can eat three square meals a day and enjoy a mild beverage for a nightcap. Some of them may even continue to indulge in an eiderdown quilt occasionally. Struggle to get a strangle hold on any street car strap—glance around and see if your fellow passengers are reading the cold type stories. They are not. It's the comics and the cartoons that their noses are rubbing."

Mr. Berryman's blue eyes twinkled. As he sat defending his chosen form of expression, he himself made a striking picture. Thick, wavy white hair over dark brows, periwinkle blue eyes, broad shoulders, a hearty laugh—that's Berryman. A vivid personality. Small wonder that many of the most distinguished men in Washington journey up to his little office on the seventh floor of the Star building to talk to him or lure him out for a game of golf. It is characteristic of the man that he never caricatures a face, confining his ironic treatment to the bodies of his subjects. This is in sharp contrast to some of his colleagues who distort the features to the point of grotesqueness. Not yet have we forgotten Harding's jungle eye-brows as portrayed by Herbert Johnson.

As a cartoonist at the National Capital for some 35 years Mr. Berryman is in a position to feel the pulse of the people and to know whether their interest in pen-pictures is abating.

"If it is," he says, "the men and women I have been meeting for a third of a century are all eligible to T. R.'s famous old Ananias Club. Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Speakers of the House, members of the Cabinet and of both houses of Congress have been, straight through, puffing me up with the importance of the cartoon in moulding public opinion and in pointing out facts and fallacies.

"Right now, assuming that Washington may not be the first place to realize the decline of the dear old cartoon, remember that representatives of every constituency of Uncle Sam are here and evidently they feel no weakening of this medium 'back home' for they still claim that a good picture is a supreme asset in any strenuous campaign.

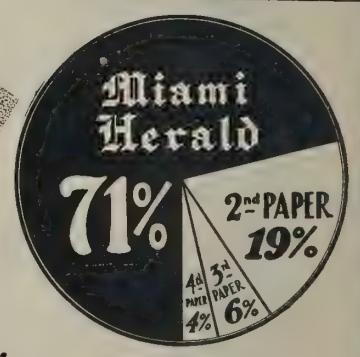
"What can a cartoonist tell the public that a writer or photographer cannot tell? Let us take the lazy man—and there are such!—or the weary business man after a hectic day. His eye travels first to the cartoon, for it is the striking current event, the outstanding feature of the news, served up to him in a condensed and arresting form. His interest is aroused by it, then he reads.

"I remember," laughed Mr. Berryman, "that as a youth down on the banks of the Kentucky River, my native heath, the only picture that ever appeared in our weekly paper, was a Syrup of Figs ad. I used to try not to look at it, but it stood out like the Washington monument on the 15 or 20 pages of cold, monotonous type.

"Just print the best stuff produced by Will Rogers, Irvin Cobb, Ring Lardner and the score of other clever paragraphers alongside a cartoon by Darling or Sykes or Johnson, and see which will get the first attention. I am putting my filthy lucre on my pictorial colleagues. I have often studied and greatly enjoyed news photographs, but none of them have ever been as full of thought, and as comprehensive, as the productions of the cartoonists. Nay, nay. We may revert to the hoop skirt, to the long street cleaning costume feminine, we may even go back to the one-horse shay—aye, we may return to the dog sled for polar pleasure trips; but we won't retrograde to the pre-cartoonist era."

Mr. Berryman then referred to the fact that 35 years ago Punch, which has been one of the great influences in developing this form of art, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. Fifty years of pictorial progress! And today, as that great English comic nears its centennial, it is stronger and better than ever. Thomas Nast, who was the pioneer cartoonist in America, conducted a terrific tirade against the Tweed thievery which is still vividly remembered. Nast has passed on, but where he practically stood alone, an army of artists now carries on his fight for pitiless publicity.

Mr. Berryman thinks that the syndicates have helped the cartoon in giving the general public a chance to become familiar with the work of the great masters of the cult. Small towns, where circulation does not warrant the services of a special artist can now obtain the work of well-known men. Through the syndicates cartoons can be produced at approximately $2.50 a day where they would cost from $25 to $50 if drawn for the paper alone, Berryman said.



"No," repeated the cartoonist, shaking his impressive head, "the cartoon is not dying as long as the work of such men as Herbert Johnson, who reaches 2,000,000 through the Saturday Evening Post each week; as John T. McCutcheon, known by everybody in the mid-west who can read; as Jay N. Darling, one of the greatest cartoonists that ever lived; as C. K. Sykes, of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and Life; Billy Ireland, Columbus Dispatch, veteran at the game; Rollin Kirby, of the New York World, up-to-the-minute cartoonist; B. R. Fitzpatrick, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; J. H. Dohaney, Cleveland Plain Dealer, clean, good, snappy; Edwin Marcus, of the New York Times; W. A. Rogers of the Washington Post, for years on Harper's Weekly, dean of American cartoonists, who has been doing this thing for 40 years, continue to retain popularity."

The speaker modestly refrained from including his own name though his life is an outstanding example of achievement along this line. He was born April 2, 1869, in Woodford County, Kentucky, one of 11 children. He lost his father at the age of ten. His advantages were few but his talent, and doubtless his personality, too, caught the attention of Senator Blackburn of that state, who brought him to Washington and placed him in the drafting division of the Patent Office, where he was thoroughly trained in mechanical drawing. His life ambition, however, was to become a cartoonist. In realizing this ambition success has come to him. In 1921 George Washington University gave him the honorary degree of Master of Arts. He is now president of the Gridiron Club, limited to 50 newspaper men, with membership for life. Mr. Berryman is the first cartoonist who has been president. To many he is best known as the originator of the "Teddy Bear."

A recent Berryman cartoon

Space Buyers

Classified Advertising

—flows into the columns of the dominant medium as naturally as water runs down hill.

Thus, the classified situation in the Miami Trade Territory is significant:

88,485 classified advertisements were published in Miami during April, last:

71% of them appeared in The Miami Herald. The remaining 29% (virtually all duplications of advertisements carried by The Herald) was divided among the three other papers.

The Miami Herald

"Florida's Most Important Newspaper"

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES:

J. P. McKinney & Son

NEW YORK CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO

Geo. M. Kohn, 704 Walton Bldg., Atlanta

The Treasured Area Between Two Dividing Lines

• •

TRENTON, N. J.

Over the boundaries of two of the greatest Metropolitan areas of the World, the Trenton Territory is a community unto itself, where people buy, read and depend upon

The Trenton Times

In this radius are approximately 250,000 folks—they live, work and spend here.

Most every important product which the world needs and uses in its everyday life is represented in Trenton's manufacture.

Through THE TIMES you get complete coverage of the Trenton Territory with one advertising appropriation.

• •

National Representatives

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Marbridge Building, New York City
Waterman Building, Boston, Mass.
Atlantic Building, Philadelphia, Pa.
Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.

NATIONAL ADVERTISING CHIEF N. Y. TOPIC

State Associated Dailies to Hear Ohio Select List Plan at Ithaca Meet—Weeklies to Discuss Blanket Representation

With the plans of the New York State Associated Dailies and the New York Press Association approaching completion indications are that the week of June 13 will witness one of the largest gatherings of newspaper publishers ever held in Ithaca. The convention of the New York State Publishers Association will be held there on June 16 and 17, and that of the New York Press Association on June 18 and 19 with the Associated Dailies overlapping both of the meetings.

CHARLES H. CONGDON

Charles H. Congdon, general manager of the Watertown Times and president of the State Dailies, has announced that the summer convention of his association will begin with a dinner in Willard Straight Hall, Cornell University, Thursday evening, June 17. Early arrivals for the convention of the New York Press Association will be welcome at the dinner.

ELMER CONRATH

Members of the daily group will hear C. H. Spencer, editor and general manager of the Newark (O.) Advocate, and secretary of the Ohio State List, speak on "The Workings of the Ohio State List." A committee of the Associated Dailies composed of E. D Corson of the Lockport Union-Sun and Journal, E. M. Waterbury, Oswego Palladium-Times and William H. Clark, Cortland Standard have been making a study of group representation in the national field. Mr. Spencer will tell of the operation of a similar plan in Ohio.

If time permits, discussion of other publishing problems will follow that of group representation, Thursday evening. A second business session will be held Friday morning. As has been customary in the past, the question box will be the method used. Work of obtaining questions and answers has already been started by Secretary E. S. Underhill, Jr. of the Corning Leader.

The first event on the program of the New York Press Association, of which Elmer Conrath of the Cuba Patriot is president and Jay W. Shaw of Elmira, secretary, will be a dinner on Thursday evening, June 17, at Willard Straight Hall. This will be followed by a meeting of the executive committee.

Consideration will be given at the first business session the following morning to the report of a committee on representation for the weekly newspapers of the state in the national field. A contract offered by the American Press Association will be presented for discussion but action will not be taken until Saturday morning.

The business session on Friday will conclude with a luncheon at 1 P. M. The remainder of the day will be given over to a tour of Cornell University with tea at the Forest Home Inn at 4 P. M. The banquet will be held in Willard Straight Hall at 6:30 P. M.

One of the special features of the Press Association convention will be a newspaper exhibit and analysis by Professor Bristow Adams, head of the publication department of the New York State College of Agriculture, at Cornell University.

TENNESSEANS' PROGRAM READY

Eastern Editors' Group to Meet at Elizabethton Aug. 12-14

The East Tennessee Press Association will hold its annual meeting at Elizabethton, Tenn., Aug. 12-14, the program for which has just been completed at a meeting of the executive committee held in Knoxville.

The program follows:

Thursday night, Aug. 12.—Reception at Lynwood hotel, Elizabethton, by Chamber of Commerce.

Friday, Aug. 13.—9 a. m., welcome address by E. R. Lingerfelt, city manager; response, J. A. Holston, Rogersville; business session, naming committees; "The Paying End of the Printing Game, Job Shop, or Paper?" Frank H. Lovette, Elizabethton; "Some Plans to Boost Patronage," R. P. Sulte, Newport; general discussion. Afternoon session—"International Press Foundation, A Haven for Worthy Editors," T. U. Crowley, Clinton; sight-seeing trip and banquet at night.

Saturday morning, Aug. 14.—Report of committees; election of officers; "Legal Advertising by the State and Government," E. M. Hardy, Morristown; "More Concerted Action for Mutual Success," T. F. Peck, Etowah; general discussion; special trip to the Gorge.

Solomon B. Griffin's Estate $288,541

Solomon B. Griffin, for many years managing editor of the Springfield Republican left an estate of $288,541, according to inventories filed for probate May 20. In addition to his newspaper interests, Mr. Griffin was president of a paper manufacturing concern.

KEYSTONE PUBLISHERS TO MEET JUNE 28-29

Summer Meeting at State College, Pa., Expected to Draw 130 Daily and Weekly Proprietors—Stewart to Preside

Plans for the summer meeting of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association at State College, Pa., were discussed at a meeting of the executive board held in Harrisburgh, Monday, May 24. President John L. Stewart, publisher of the Washington (Pa.) Observer and Reporter, was in the chair for the first time since his trip around the world.

JOHN L. STEWART

Monday and Tuesday, June 28 and 29 were decided upon as the dates for the gathering. It is expected that 130 daily and weekly publishers will be present with their wives and guests.

The morning of June 28 a meeting of the weekly division in charge of Vice-President Charles M. Meredith, of the Quakertown Free-Press and a meeting of the daily division in charge of President John L. Stewart will be held. The afternoon will be devoted to golf and other sports. Meals will be served at the State College Country Club and the visitors will be quartered in the college dormitories. Tuesday morning a general meeting of the entire association will be held and the afternoon will be given over to a tour of the college campus and buildings, and golf. A banquet will be served in the evening at the country club.

Invitations to the meeting will be sent to every newspaper publisher in the state. State headquarters are maintained in charge of manager Albert W. Fell, former manager New England Daily Newspaper Association.

if you have something to SELL—

—and it's good

—and you want other folk to know it's good.

—thrifty folk who have money and the habit of spending.

—people who live in the prosperous Cleveland market

then—

you must tell them about it through

The Cleveland News

Ohio's Greatest Newspaper

DAILY and SUNDAY

Represented by Geo. A. McDevitt Co.
250 Park Ave., New York
914 People's Gas Bldg., Chicago

HELM

The Man Who Makes Figures Talk

Distributed by

CURRENT NEWS FEATURES, INC.
EVENING STAR BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D. C.

WE'RE ALWAYS BUSY—WHY?

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS

Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get it Quickly
Get it Right

Conducted on
THE KENDALL PLAN

We would like to know more of your circulation building methods and charges Without obligation to us, you may submit details terms etc

Our last Campaign was run _____

Name of paper _____ City _____

By _____ Title _____ State _____

Should we use a Campaign we would want it to start about _____

Eighteen consecutive successful years of "Knowing How." Wire or write for details, references, etc.,

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

At present conducting third campaign within six years upon the WHEELING, W. VA., INTELLIGENCER.

Last week, 86,751 Brooklyn people walked up to a newsstand and bought the Standard Union once a day for seven days.

Is this army marching toward you, also?

R. J. R. Thurlman
President

LARGEST DAILY CIRCULATION IN BROOKLYN OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

What Price Circulation?

Advertisers and their agents continue to increase the cost of advertising without proportionate increase in value. They encourage too keen competition among newspapers and all other publications for circulation.

Circulation is the most tangible and most popular, if not always the best, measure of a publication's advertising value.

In a natural desire to win the prize—the national advertising contract—a publisher forces his circulation beyond the point of profitable returns, increasing the cost of production and of advertising.

Such circulation is worthless to the advertiser, agency and publisher alike.

Among the cardinal principles of appraising newspaper and other periodical values are the character, sincerity of purpose of the publisher and his representative, the business management and financial structure of their organizations.

Inflated circulation will cease to be sold just as soon as the advertiser ceases to buy it.

Why not stop it?

E. Katz Special Advertising Agency

Established 1888

Publishers' Representatives

DETROIT
ATLANTA
NEW YORK
CHICAGO
KANSAS CITY
SAN FRANCISCO

NEWS MAN'S STORY BEHIND SENATE'S PENNSYLVANIA SLUSH FUND PROBE

Leo R. Sack of Pittsburgh Press Told of Huge Sums Being Spent and Predicted Vare's Victory—Called "Accurate Reporter" by Harrison

By J. BART CAMPBELL

U. S. SENATOR PAT HARRISON late last week wheeled toward the Senate Press Gallery with one hand waving a copy of the Washington Daily News, the Scripps-Howard tabloid published at the National Capital.

The index finger of the Senator's other hand was thrust upward toward the rows of newspaper correspondents bent over copy paper with pencils poised to catch the vitriolic irony of the fiery Mississippian's slap-bang utterances.

"We all know Sack!" shouted Harrison. "Leo R. Sack is known to us as an accurate newspaper correspondent!"

A little, wiry, bespectacled young man, slumped over one of the long, narrow writing tables of the Press Gallery, became suddenly the cynosure of attention. He seemed to shrink before the finger of the Mississippi Senator.

"There he is," continued Harrison, "the author of this story, written by him at Pittsburgh, toward the close of the Pennsylvania campaign, in which he charged that from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 was spent collectively by Vare, Pepper and Pinchot, the rival Republican candidates for U. S. Senator, and their friends and supporters."

U. S. Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania entered the chamber.

"I do not think Sack was in a position to know just how much money was spent by either side in the Pennsylvania primaries," volunteered Reed.

"Certainly not in as good a position to know as the junior Senator from Pennsylvania, I grant you," was Harrison's rejoinder. "But whether or not Sack enjoyed the close contact with some of those who helped finance Senator Pepper's campaign that Senator Reed did, I think these charges Sack printed should be looked into."

Came the smooth, penetrating voice of Senator "Jim" Reed, of Missouri, a few feet from where Harrison stood. He was urging immediate consideration of his resolution, offered a few days previously for a Senatorial investigation of all expenditures in Senatorial campaigns this year. His cousin and namesake—the junior Senator from Pennsylvania—leaped to his feet with an objection, only to be overwhelmed soon thereafter by a vote that set into motion the machinery of another Senate "smelling committee" as provided by the Missouri Senator's resolution.

"Sack turned the trick," Harrison and "Jim" Reed agreed later. "We will have him before the investigating committee and see if he cannot tell us where all of this Pennsylvania money came from and where it went."

Leo R. Sack

Leo R. Sack is one of the younger members of the Washington corps of newspaper correspondents. By an odd coincidence, he is a native Mississippian like Pat Harrison. The soft purr of the Southerner's tongue conceals partly the dynamic energy that keeps him stepping from Senate Press Gallery to House Press Gallery and through Senate and House office buildings every working week day as the Washington correspondent for the Pittsburgh Press, Scripps-Howard newspaper, and the Ohio "string" of the Scripps-Howard organization.

Sack knocked about Texas newspaper offices before he came to Washington "befo' the wa'." The departure of the A. E. F. overseas found him in France in the aviation branch of the service. After the armistice he returned to Washington and the Scripps-Howard service.

When Sack was assigned to accompany Secretary Mellon to Pittsburgh a few days before the Pennsylvania primary election he discovered, after making the careful inquiries of a trained newspaperman, that a stream of gold was pouring over Pennsylvania. His story of the millions of dollars being used to garner millions of votes, written originally for the Pittsburgh Press, found its way under his signature into all of the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

Returning from Pittsburgh on the eve of the Pennsylvania election, Sack remarked laconically to some of his associates at the National Press Club, "I may lose playing dominoes, but believe me I have bet my all on Vare to win, and Mrs. Sack will be wearing a new hat after the Pennsylvania votes are counted!"

Sack predicted the victory of William Scott Vare over George Wharton Pepper, and the Scripps-Howard papers heralded that triumph of the Pennsylvania "beer candidate" for the U. S. Senate with the streamer "VARE WILL WIN, Sack says."

"And," said Senator Pat Harrison, "if Leo R. Sack asserted that from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 was spent by the Republican Senatorial candidates in Pennsylvania the chances are he knew what he was writing about just as he did when he prophesied that Vare would win. In all my personal relations with Leo R. Sack since he has been 'covering' the Capitol I have never known him to write a line that wouldn't bear the searchlight of truth. I believe he has done a public service in showing up the Pennsylvania 'slush funds' and I hope he has started something that will permit a poor man in the future to run in Pennsylvania for the U. S. Senate."

Houston Chronicle to Build

A ten-story annex to the Houston Chronicle building, with a tower surmounting the building is being planned, it has been announced. Two new subsidiary corporations of the Chronicle have been chartered. One is the Chronicle Realty Company and the other the Chronicle Building Company. These companies were organized to acquire real estate and buildings in connection with the newspaper's activities. Directors are Jesse H. Jones, M. E. Foster, J. F. Wolters, W. O. Huggins and Paul Kayser.

A. B. C. DIRECTORS TO CANADA

Will Hold Annual Canadian Meeting In Hamilton, Ont., June 11

The Board of Directors of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, which each year holds one meeting in Canada, will meet in Hamilton, Ont., Friday, June 11, at the Royal Connaught Hotel.

At the close of the business session in Hamilton, members of the board will proceed to Niagara Falls, where the annual Canadian dinner will be held at the Clifton Hotel at 7:15 p. m., June 11.

On Saturday morning June 12, board members will be guests of the publishers of Hamilton at the Ancaster Golf Club and in the afternoon at the Hamilton Jockey Club.

Catholic Weeklies Merged

Merger of the Cleveland Catholic Bulletin and the Catholic Universe into a single weekly newspaper to be known as the Catholic Universe-Bulletin, has been announced.

Our Customers Write Our Ads

San Francisco, Calif., Chung Sai Yat Po Says—

"We are perfectly pleased with our DUPLEX FLAT BED press. It is running smoothly like a sewing machine."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Now—

298 Subscribers—

. . . and still going up and UP on "results" alone. The Newspaper Publishers who really know our service are the ones who use it—others are offered a two months trial test as final proof that our service is the only practical solution to their checking proof problem.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St.
CHICAGO

79 Madison Avenue
NEW YORK

The DAILY OKLAHOMAN
OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES

Oklahoma City is the only Oklahoma stop on the Southwestern air-mail route. The 728,624 people of Oklahoma City's trade territory are now 9 hours, 20 minutes from Chicago, 19 hours, 35 minutes from New York.

The Oklahoma City market growing in wealth, in size, in importance and in accessibility is covered thoroughly and alone by the Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times.

Represented by E. KATZ Special Advertising Agency
New York Chicago Kansas City Detroit Atlanta San Francisco

Under the "Iowa plan," these 28 daily Newspapers pledge uniform marketing cooperation throughout the state. You may deal with them as with one publication if you wish.

Twice as many have high school education—in Iowa

25.5% of all Iowa people 18 years old have finished a four-year high school course.

That is more than double the percentage for the United States at large (12.7%). Authority—the Government's latest Statistical Survey of Education.

This, of course, is only a sidelight on Iowa's desirability as a market, but it helps show the high living standard of Iowa people.

Iowa has the lowest percentage of illiteracy of any state.

Her per capita, taxable wealth exceeds the nation's average by 51%.

By every possible measurement, this market is exceptionally worth while. More people here—on the average—are willing and able to buy your goods.

The sure, economical way to talk to these preferred prospects is through their daily newspapers. Practically every family in the state reads a daily paper every day.

These 28 leading Iowa Daily Newspapers thoroughly cover the state. (Total circulation—571,151. Families in Iowa—550,000).

We will be glad to send you rates and full information; also to explain our "Iowa plan" of marketing help.

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

TRIPLE-CHECKING ADVERTISING MAKEUP ON COMBINATION NEWSPAPERS

Greensburg (Pa.) Tribune-Review Uses Two Forms for Each Piece of Copy, One to Make-up Man, Other to Bookkeeper—Double Cards for National Advertisers

By ERROL DERBY

City Editor, Greensburg (Pa.) Tribune Review

INTRICACIES of working out display advertising schedules, both local and foreign, as well as checking and bookkeeping of many accounts for combination newspapers have been successfully solved by a system put in use by the Tribune-Review Publishing Company, of Greensburg, Pa.

The system is used by a company which publishes both a morning and an evening newspaper in a community of 35,000 persons. Continued newspaper mergers in various parts of the country have brought up the same problems and they have been worked out in a variety of ways, some advantageously and some not yet satisfactorily to their owners.

The forms and ideas as incorporated for the Tribune-Review have undergone the examination of national agencies and many individual publishers of merged papers where morning and evening editions are produced in one establishment and met with endorsement and adoption.

One of the problems to be faced in the morning and evening merged field is that of rate—in fact that is always a problem in all cases—but here scales of advertising rates must be so arranged that the advertiser knows it is better to use both papers rather than one.

The most serious problem, therefore, growing out of rates in the combination field here cited, was the effect of the merger on advertisers, who in the past, had carried their advertising accounts in only one medium. Under the combination they had to be sold on the dual idea. The result was that an attractive scale of rates was drawn up, where at a glance, these advertisers were able to realize the advantages of using the two papers instead of formerly only one. In this particular case the contracts sold 100 per cent in combination.

How was the advertising to be handled on a contract basis?

Was the advertiser to be forced to use his advertisement the same day in both papers or given the option of starting his advertisement in the evening paper and having it carried over for the morning of the following day, or starting it in the morning paper and having it carried over to the evening?

Was local advertising to be handled the same as national or would there be separate governing rules?

"It had to be figured out very carefully," recounts J. Floyd Kuhns, advertising manager. "There were more than just the questions you have asked to be considered and weighed well. We did not dare offend any of our patrons, of either the morning paper or our own (Mr. Kuhns had been advertising manager of the evening paper previously). There were accounts which the morning paper carried which we did not, and vice versa. We could not afford either, to lose a single contract.

"We decided that so far as practicable we would give the advertisers all the latitude possible without completely wrecking our own plans. We felt from the first that the advertisers should be permitted to start advertisements in either edition and be carried over to the next. That is they can start an ad in our evening paper, which is the Tribune, and have it run in the Review the next morning. The one stipulation made, of course, is that copy cannot be changed, except wherein a 'time element' might appear.

TRIBUNE-REVIEW

Date .....

Advertiser .....

No. of Insertion .....

Space .....

Starts .....(morning) (evening) .....

Jan.	Feb.	Mar.	Apr.	May	June	July	Aug.	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31	tf.

Rate .....

Clerk .....

Remarks .....

Form A

On this form the edition in which a local ad starts is left unmarked the other crossed out.

REVIEW

DATE .....

ADVERTISER	SIZE	POSITION	SOURCE

NO. OF PAGES .....PICTURE PAGE .....FEATURE PAGE .....

REMARKS: .....

Form B

Form B (condensed above) is foolscap size. Make-up men work direct from these sheets.

ADVERTISEMENT	AGENCY	ADDRESS

RATE	POSITION
	AD. NO.	AD. NO.	AD. NO.
	1	1	1
	2	2	2
	3	3	3

Form C

The numbers on this form run on down to 31. It will carry a six-months' schedule of national copy.

"For instance if the advertisement for the evening paper says 'Tomorrow,' then we will change that in the morning edition to read 'Today.'

"National advertising is handled on the same basis as local," Mr. Kuhns continued, "except that a forced combination is demanded. This is not the case in the local field but it is seldom that any advertiser uses but one edition. It's too expensive."

The advertising accounts system of the Tribune-Review, in reality forms the basis for the comment on the problems and how they were solved which Mr. Kuhns made. After all the "system" was but the evolution of the matter-of-fact problems which the organization had to meet. The "system" is "fool-proof" and forms a constant check on three departments of the business—make-up—bookkeeping—as well as the advertising department itself.

"Two sets of forms are used, one for local and the other for national display advertising," the advertising manager continued. "I will explain to you just how it operates. Let us first take the local contracts.

"When an advertisement is first brought to the office by the solicitors or copy boys, we take Form A, which shows the name of the advertiser, number of insertions, space and editions. The edition in which the ad starts being left unmarked and the other crossed out. The month and date are circled and the other blanks filled in. This form is filled out for every local display advertisement. The data on these slips is then transferred to Form B when it comes time to make up the 'dummy.'

"Form B, as you will readily see, does away with an advertising make-up 'dummy,' except wherein one must be provided showing the layout of the ads for the editorial department. Our make-up men work directly from these sheets which show the name of the advertisement, size, position and source. This latter is important. When working in combination the way we do there are three possible sources for obtaining the set ads—from the morning or evening edition, the ad alley or an ad bank. Form B goes to the make-up man and all of the Form A's are turned over to the bookkeeping department. I might mention too, that the make-up men check off the ads placed in the forms on Form B.

"The bookkeeping department checks the paper against these original sheets, or Form A, in order to make the proper charges for the day to each advertising account and also checks on correct insertions. Therefore, you can see, the two forms give an absolute double check in each issue of the paper—that is, the B form by the make-up men and the A form by the bookkeeping department. This eliminates any error or missed insertion, we have found. If there has been the latter, for instance, Form B checks against the make-up man; Form A against a clerical error in not having the proper notation on the schedule sheet (B) while both at the same time will tell whether or not the bookkeepers made a mistake in entry should a complaint be registered about a charge. Both forms A and B are filed.

REVIEW

DATE 192

ADVERTISEMENT	NO.	POSITION	SIZE

Form D

Form D is condensed here by omission of lines. It goes to the make-up man.

"Form A is used for both papers while separate Form B's must be filled out for each edition. We use yellow paper throughout for morning accounts and green for evening.

"In regard to national advertising," went on Mr. Kahns, and really the entire system is much easier to operate than it is to explain how it operates, "the system is equally as simple and just as effective. It differs, but in one respect, from our handling of local accounts in that two cards must be kept, one for each paper—Form C. Here, as in local advertising, yellow denotes a morning paper account and schedule and green an evening. Inasmuch also as we have the forced combination in the national field the cards must be duplicated, because these advertisers, too, are given the privilege of beginning their advertisements in either edition and carrying over.

"Form C will carry a six months' schedule of advertising. The card is filled out and filed under the date of first insertion after the proper notations are marked at the lead. When the days roll around the cards are lifted, number, position, name and size entered on Form D, and this latter, as in the case of Form B, goes to the make-up man. The cards are then re-filed under the next scheduled date of insertion. Every six months, of course, the national accounts must be rescheduled on our cards. Also from these cards the correct charges are made by the bookkeepers.

"Let us go to the advertising 'morgue'."

This, I might explain, is a commodious, well lighted room, containing little except bins or shelves of all sizes. These are filled with the foreign advertising material and all is arranged in alphabetical order. It is but a minute to pick out the plates and copy for the next day's insertions, from Form D.

Form D is also the dummy for the make-up men and with it and Form B, they make up and check their ads against them.

"Is that all there is to it?" I inquired.

"One thing more," said Mr. Kuhns and we went to the bookkeeping department.

"The ledger sheets for both foreign and local accounts are identical with the schedule sheets (B and D), and the advertisements are charged on the date of the first insertion."

Appraising the Units of Your Sales Area

These illustrations are typical, being an average of data obtained from a study of suburban centers, from the reference department of the City Library, from income tax statistics and from motor car registration records.

THE SUBURBAN UNIT

HERE is a typical better-class residence unit from which the New York merchant draws his suburban sales. Twenty families, or a population of about 85, live in this suburban block, with an average income of about $4,000 per family.

The average rental of these twenty homes would approximate $1,800 per year, or if owned, they would represent an average value of $12,000 each, or a total valuation for the unit of $240,000. Each family probably owns an automobile at an average cost of $1,000.

This suburban unit is within 25 miles of the city. Each housewife here "goes to town" perhaps once or twice a month, filling in most of her household needs from the nearest suburban shopping centre. The cost of delivering the merchandise which she purchases in New York is about double the cost of the big stores' city deliveries.

The combined yearly purchasing power of the entire unit, after deducting all actual necessities, uninfluenced by advertising, would be less than $50,000. There are probably from 7,000 to 8,000 such units in the New York suburban area.

THE CITY UNIT

HERE is a typical better-class New York City residence block of about the same area as the suburban unit opposite. It houses 260 families, or a population of more than 1,100, with an estimated average income of $5,000 per annum.

The average apartment rental in this block would run $1,500, and of the dwellings about $2,500 a year. The assessed valuation of the unit would approximate $3,000,000. There are about 43 motor cars owned in the block, at an average cost of $1,500.

This city unit is within twenty minutes of all the big stores. The housewife may make a daily trip "downtown." The merchant is in constant contact with each home in this unit; his deliveries are made at about half the cost of his suburban deliveries. The combined annual buying power of a block like this would be in the neighborhood of $800,000 or sixteen times that of its corresponding suburban area.

Of the 15,000 "blocks" of Greater New York, it is estimated that 30% of them, based upon income-tax returns, would house a class of which the residents of the above city unit would be typical.

Sales Are Quickest Where Home Folks Are Thickest!

THERE ARE, according to the best estimates available, somewhat less than a million English-speaking homes in Greater New York. While The World has a suburban circulation of 27,000 daily and 74,000 Sunday, its outstanding claim to the consideration of the advertiser is its superior coverage of the English-speaking homes in what is pictured above as The City Unit.

There are about 18,000 residents per square mile in the city proper. This is the New York Merchant's market! Outside of the city, there are about 350 residents per square mile. This market the New York merchant shares with the prosperous stores of some seventy populous suburban centres, the shops of which offer keen competition to the city merchant.

In the city itself, where The City Unit controls, The World leads The Times by 14,000 daily and 159,000 Sunday; it leads The Herald Tribune by more than 80,000 daily and 270,000 Sunday.

The World's complete domination, therefore, of that area of which the above City Unit is the outstanding sales factor, would seem to accord it first consideration at the hands of any advertiser seriously contemplating anything like adequate distribution in the New York market.

PULITZER BUILDING
NEW YORK

The World

TRIBUNE TOWER
CHICAGO

"YES, WE HAVE NO BANANAS" SAID HUB FIRM—ADVERTISING SOLD THEM ALL

Public Clamored for Familiar Fruit When It Was Placed in Boxes, Trademarked, and Sold Through Newspaper Advertising—Apology Made for Sell-Out

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

A BONAFIDE apology to the public had to be issued through all of the local newspapers because Meloripe Bananas in package form, a novelty in merchandising, had been sold out soon after introduced a few days ago in a tryout campaign at Boston.

Tropic Foods, Inc., a subsidiary of the United Fruit Company, couldn't ripen them fast enough to take care of the demand as the result of a barrage of advertising poured into the market through all leading newspapers at once. Almost overnight everybody started talking about Meloripe Bananas and buying them, in spite of the fact plenty of lower-price bulk bananas filled the market. Hundreds of retail outlets were opened up starting the day the first advertisement appeared.

Newspaper copy sold them—then told the public to wait for more

Twenty years ago when crackers were sold out of the open barrel in many stores, trademarked packages were introduced. They vastly increased the consumption of crackers. Gradually many fruits and vegetables have been cartoned, trademarked and advertised, but bananas, although consumed in the United States to the total of 248,000,000 bunches in the last ten years, have seemed to defy marketing wizards, when it came to trademarking and control of mellowness.

Many doctors have gone on record that really ripe bananas are high in nutrition and digestibility. When the skin is a deep yellow flecked with brown, the banana is at its best, but large numbers are sold green or partly ripe. The dealer has never been certain what profit he will make from a bunch, as there is waste in bananas cut or torn in selling, in bruises made by customers pinching the fruit, waste in too rapid ripening when the bunch is hanging in the store, waste in small left-overs, more waste when the customer insists on picking out certain bananas and spoiling the looks of the bunch, waste in time cutting fruit, waste in returned fruit, and further wastage in uncertain weather conditions on the exposed bunch.

The United Fruit Company had calls made on 400 representative dealers in Boston to see if there would be a market for a trademarked, perfectly ripe, advertised banana. Three hundred fifty gave enthusiastic approval. A subsidiary, Tropic Foods, Inc., was formed under direction of E. R. Grabow of the United Fruit Company. The new concern was given a building of its own with three floors of scientific ripening rooms where bananas could be brought to complete ripeness under thorough control. Arrangements were made for the subsidiary to buy bananas from the parent company and inspect them, then grade them by sizes.

In a bunch of bananas, there are one or two which are extra large. These were selected and placed together, six in a box known as Royal size. The name, Queen size, was given to bananas a bit smaller, weighing slightly less than half a pound apiece. Both were to be sold at a fixed price per box to wholesalers and retailers and in turn sold by them at popular prices. The company also offered two other sizes to be sold by weight.

The name, Meloripe, was adopted and featured on the yellow, red and brown carton in which the six bananas are packed in white shredded paper. Temporarily, the trademark was stamped on each banana with vegetable ink to identify it.

A broadside was sent to 5500 grocers and fruit men in and near Boston telling them the whole story and featuring the wholesaler as the channel through which to buy. However, it was stated that the company's own trucks would deliver where desired and a special discount would be given in cases where the dealer wanted to call at the headquarters of Tropic Foods, Inc. The dealers were told they need not keep the bananas on ice and that they should only order enough for two or three days at a time.

A sales force was recruited and ready but no calls made until April 26, for which date the stage had been set.

Suddenly out of a clear sky, on that Monday, the Post, Globe, Herald, Transcript, American and Advertiser, in 800-line space, boomed the news, "There's a new delicacy at your market today! Six perfect bananas in a box—why? Scientifically ripened—trademarked—boxed—to protect the fruit—and you!" At the same time, seven salesmen started combing picked high spots of the city with proofs of the advertising. S. S. Pierce Company, a large grocery store which for years has not bothered with bananas in bulk, was one of the first to place an order.

The same morning painted boards with the story flashed into view unexpectedly. A strip about them appeared at the top of 2500 specially constructed newspaper display racks belonging to the Boston American. The company's trucks appeared on the streets with Meloripe signs. The Boston Herald window on Tremont street burst into life with a big display as did also the window of the Advertiser on Summer street. Strips went up fast all around the city on dealers' windows, and boxes on their counters began to move.

All the local newspapers kept "whamming" the news practically daily in generous space, emphasizing the fruit as perfect when it reaches the consumer, its many uses, the advantages of buying the new way, etc.

Since it takes a certain length of time to ripen bananas, and they decline to be hurried, and since the supply was to a certain degree limited, the company was thankful it had not tried to merchandise the packages in advance of advertising. As it was, it found itself oversold and for a time actually had to hold back the salesmen.

"Our apologies—there weren't enough to go around!" large copy explained.

"Meloripe bananas were first served in Boston on April 26. Boston ate them all, and passed its plate for more. But there weren't enough to go around!

"That's our fault and we're sorry. We underestimated Boston's appetite.

"We are enlarging the capacity of our ripening chambers so that there may be Meloripe bananas for every one who wants this perfect fruit. Boston exceeded even our hopes in its eagerness to try the new fruit-delicacy—Meloripe bananas. You who bought them—all that there were of them—found what you have been seeking: a fruit perfectly ripened with a delightful new flavor, a high food value and easy digestibility. Every Meloripe banana has, and will have, these qualities.

"If you were disappointed in your effort to buy them, try again tomorrow. Get a box from your grocery or fruit store. See for yourself what a different flavor a perfect banana has. Eat them at any time, as many as you like. Use them in a hundred different recipes. Give them to the children without hesitation. Add them to the invalid's diet. Perfect ripening has made a new fruit of the familiar banana."

"The work is entirely at the experimental stage," R. S. Barton of the Boston office of Barton, Durstine & Osborn explained. "Modifications will be made as necessary as to method, but we believe the campaign so far has indicated two things: first, that the banana may be placed with the public while the fruit is at its perfectly ripe stage, and, second, that the waste can be cut down from the dealer's angle and he can sell bananas on a much more profitable basis.

"Our advertisement apologizing to the public was not merely an advertising gesture. After the campaign had run five days in the Boston papers, our client ran out of ripened bananas and, as of course only perfectly ripened fruit could be offered the public, the salesmen had to start taking orders for the following week's delivery. The salesmen get their instructions every day as to the amount of bananas available."

"THE MEDIUM AND THE MARKET"

Title of New Booklet to Be Issued by Bureau of Advertising, A.N.P.A.

"The Medium and the Market" is the title of a new 30-page booklet to be issued within a week by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, W. A. Thompson, director, announced this week. The booklet will contain, by special permission from EDITOR & PUBLISHER, many of the compilations which appeared originally in the 1926 INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK.

The book is devoted primarily to a discussion of the growing importance of newspaper circulations. Labor is referred to as the new army of purchasers. The general prosperity of the country is detailed, and labor's insistence on the purchase of luxuries as shown by the increase in instalment buying is pointed out.

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

We opened 1926 with the greatest newspaper campaign ever conducted, and secured over $300,000 in prepaid subscriptions for The Cleveland Plain Dealer. We can attain similar success for you!

THOUSANDS OF NEW, PREPAID, BONA-FIDE HOME-DELIVERED SUBSCRIBERS SECURED IN TEN WEEKS' TIME

HOLLISTER'S Circulation Organization

Wire or Write us at 717-718 Commercial Exchange Bldg., LOS ANGELES

in Detroit—

Free Press city circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

THE DETROIT "FREE PRESS"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

Quality Faces All You Need!

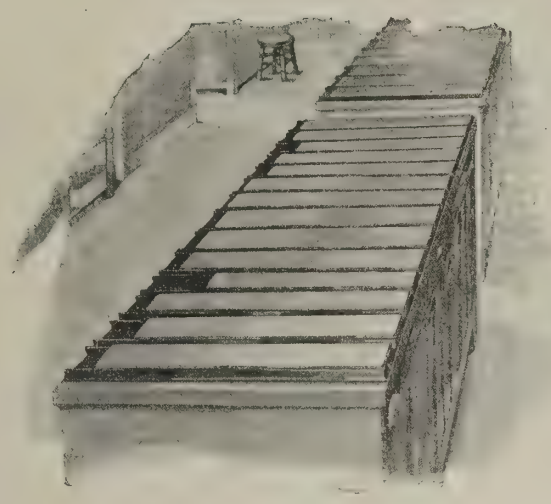
CLEAN, bright advertisements in distinctive faces, produce business for your advertisers. It is the ability of the Ludlow to cast these quality faces, in any size up to 60 point, bold and extended included, that has won this system its position of recognized supremacy in the field of display and job composition.

Regardless of what your present system of handling the composition of ads and heads may be, you will find, as hundreds of other newspapers the world over have found, that the Ludlow will not only bring you more attractive advertisements, but a saving, both in time and money as well.

The importance of these results warrants your most careful investigation. Let us send complete information.

Ludlow Typograph Company

2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago



San Francisco: 5 Third Street
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
New York: 63 Park Row
Boston: 261 Franklin Street

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

More slugs on the bank

(means more cash in the bank)

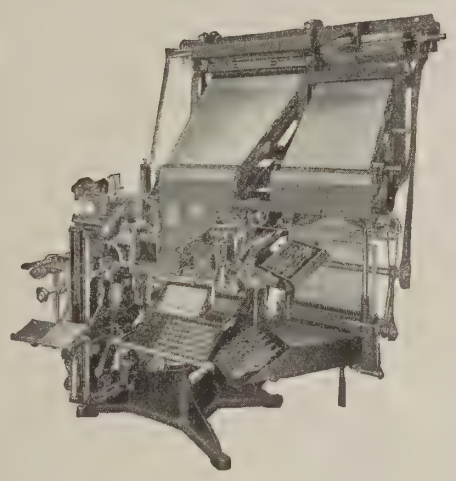
with INTERTYPES



WHEN BUYING a composing machine, don't overlook the importance of fast production. You are buying a machine to set type. You want as much type as you can get—especially during those periods when speed is so important.

The Intertype is a very fast machine. [1] It has a fast, light-touch keyboard; a steep magazine and matrix delivery belt. [2] There is little lost motion in the train of connections from keyboard to matrices.* [3] The simplicity of Intertype construction results in fewer interruptions of service—less time lost—more slugs on the bank. [4] Many little improvements, provided to help the operator, tend to increase production.

Don't overlook the importance of speed. It has much to do with the profit in slug machine composition.

In this escapement mechanism alone, the three-magazine Intertype has 910 fewer moving parts.*

The INTERTYPE "MIXER"

Do not compare the Standardized Intertype "Mixer" with any other machine. There is nothing else like it. Only one distributor box! No complications! Fast production as well as quick changes from one type face to another. Send the coupon for literature.

One of our booklets, "Profit-Making Intertype Features," explains and illustrates some of the Intertype features which make for maximum production. Send for a copy. Please wire collect if you wish to see our salesman.

Standardized
INTERTYPE
TRADE MARK

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

1440-A Broadway, New York

CHICAGO MEMPHIS SAN FRANCISCO BOSTON
LOS ANGELES LONDON

Mail This Coupon

INTERTYPE CORPORATION
☐ Send Booklet "Profit-Making Intertype Features"
☐ Send Intertype "Mixer" Booklet
☐ Send Specimen Book
☐ Parts Catalogue

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

_____

NO STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE HAS EVER BECOME OBSOLETE

COURTS' VIEWS VARY ON A PERSON'S "RIGHT TO BE LET ALONE"

Opera Star's Victory In Suit To Keep Her Name and Picture Out of Advertising Recalls Other Fights For "Right of Privacy"

By LOUIS F. JORDAN

FAME generally brings with it the attendant discomfort of notoriety, public interference with the quietude which accompanies the "simple life," and a certain amount of worry the law has never seen fit to prohibit. There is, however, a modicum of protection afforded by the statutes of most states. Some authorities term it "the right of privacy," while others, refusing to be bound by stale law terms, speak of it as "the right to be let alone."

The action of Maria Jeritza, operatic star, in filing suit in the New York courts for heavy damages because a cigar company made use of her photograph to advertise a brand of cigars, raises interesting points of law. Injunctive relief was this week granted to the singer.

The right to privacy is generally conceded to be a matter of statutory regulation and the suit by the opera singer was based on a violation of the Civil Rights Law of New York.

While the immediate cause is the first to claim the stage for sometime, the subject is by no means new. We find that as far back as 1890 an article in the Harvard Law Review first advanced the theory that one is entitled to be let alone. (4 Harvard Law Rv. 193 December, 1890). The author, in this article, based his reasoning on the analogy between the patent law which protects inventions and the copyright law which protects literary productions. It will prove novel at least to quote some of the observations published at that time which, if carried out to-day, would make a material difference in magazine and newspaper publications.

"Instantaneous photographs and newspaper enterprises," states the author, "have invaded the sacred precincts of private and domestic life; and numerous mechanical devices threaten to make good the prediction that 'what is whispered in the closet shall be proclaimed from the housetops.'"

And again the Harvard Review speaks of the press of the 90's.

"The press is overstepping in every direction the obvious bounds of propriety and of decency. Gossip is no longer the resource of the idle and of the vicious, but has become a trade, which is pursued with industry as well as effrontery."

But, despite the outcry in the Harvard Review, we find the courts with their feet still on the ground if the Professors did have their heads in the clouds. In 1895, in the case of Schuyler v. Curtis, decided in New York, it was declared that an injunction could not be granted to prohibit the erection of a statue of one's deceased relative. In this state, however, there is a statute giving a person a right of action for "the unauthorized use of the name or picture of any person for purposes of trade" and this statute has been held constitutional.

Our states vary, of course, in the view they take of this question of privacy. As pointed out, such regulations as exist are by virtue of state statutes and not the old common law.

Louisiana declared through its superior courts that the picture taken of a person accused of crime should be delayed until after his conviction, "unless necessary for purposes of identification or for detection."

In Rhode Island the court recently declared, "the right of so-called privacy has not as yet found an abiding place in our jurisprudence, and, as we view it, the doctrine can not now be incorporated without doing violence to settled principles of law by which the profession and the public have long been guided."

the right of the states to determine their

A Missouri decision, in keeping with own standard of handling matters of privacy, upheld the right of the "next friend" of a five-year old infant to recover damages from a jewelry firm for having published the youth's picture without his consent, for advertising purposes. The court's theory was that "a person has the exclusive right to his picture as a property right of value."

A Kentucky decision followed the line of reasoning adopted in Missouri, although the weight of authority in the United States may be said to favor only the protection of a photograph taken by a photographer at the instance and expense of one sitting for that purpose. Although the weight of authority disfavors the use of any photograph, certainly of a living person, for purposes of trade and advertising.

A further line of reasoning prompting a number of courts to refuse redress except in cases where there is an unauthorized use of pictures for trade or advertising purposes revolves around the following pronouncement:

"It may, at times, have been a matter of doubt whether what was called 'property' was really such, and whether the injury thereto, actual or apprehended, was not so shadowy as to be incapable of judicial cognizance, but still the criterion was always injury to property or property rights."

In the case of Robertson v. Rochester Folding Box Co., 171, N. Y., the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York divided over the following claim as to the law. It is of interest to relate what the court was called upon to decide.

"It is claimed then, that it is a right founded upon the claim that a man has the right to pass through this world if he wills without having his picture published, his business enterprise discussed, his successful experiments given up for the benefit of others or his eccentricities commented upon, either by handbills, periodicals or newspapers."

The subject is by no means exhausted, nor has it ever reached a settled state. Just how far the legislatures will go in the future in defining the rights of privacy in allowing people "to be let alone," is a matter of speculation. In this day and time certain it is that no man, no woman, has the right to go through the world without having his or her picture published, his eccentricities commented upon or business enterprises discussed.

But, in this process of making one's travel through the world more like a walk on a bed of roses, it is hardly conceived that the altruism of the Harvard professor will be indulged, when he says:

"The intensity and complexity of life, attendant upon advancing civilization, have rendered necessary some retreat from the world, and man, under the refining influence of culture, has become more sensitive to publicity, so that solitude and privacy have become more essential to the individual."

CARL MAGEE TO BE TRIED IN JUNE

(Continued from page 10)

sat around with worried faces. The spirit which had seemed indomitable was nowhere in sight. Mentally and physically he had been hurt.

And then one day we noted a change. He was up and about most of the time, and now there was that Great Spirit cropping out again. We were all joyous until Sept. 26 when the clouds once more fell low over the Magees.

Carl, Jr., was a most successful oil man in Oklahoma. He had attained a high position in the business, and promised great things some day. His time had become valuable to the extent that he took trips not by auto but by air. And then it happened. He was in a plane with Dick Phillips about sunset on the night of Sept. 26. Something went wrong, and the plane shot 2,000 feet through the air to the ground. It was all over in a second. Life had been swept away from both in no time.

Dad was in bed because of injuries to the side caused by Leahy. The following morning, after a night of torture, he and my mother went back to Tulsa for last rites over my brother's body.

Fate had hit a second blow, and it was indeed hard to stand. On Thanksgiving Day I attended a football game with my father, and I found that a closer fellowship existed between us. As he watched the game I read his evening column in the Tribune, and the most inspiring article I ever read was before me.

When we left the game, I found my eyes were moist with appreciation.

I found a letter on his desk the next day in which a visitor to the state declared that "your editorial in last night's edition stamps you akin to the Superman."

Super-man or not, Carl Magee goes to trial June 14. The charge is now manslaughter. Do I believe my father will be freed?

Yes! the evidence is too certain. The admirers of Magee are too great. Crooked politics in New Mexico are defeated!

CHICAGO TRIBUNE BUILDING

Work Started This Week on $1,000,000 Addition to Pressroom

Work on a $1,000,000 annex building being erected by the Chicago Tribune started this week. Three basements and a pressroom floor are being built now, with a temporary roof to reach the Michigan avenue driveway. The structure will be 118 by 132 feet. Foundations will go to bedrock, being planned to support an addition to the present Tribune Tower of 15 stories.

The Tribune plant was built five years ago and was considered at that time to be large enough for requirements of a decade. However, increasing growth has made necessary a larger pressroom for immediate use. The new addition will be completed within a few months. At a later date the additional stories will be added by the Tribune Company.

No dull Summer IN Los Angeles!

Keep your schedules active—in June, July, and August!

Los Angeles Examiner

FIRST in ALBANY CONSISTENTLY

Breaking all Records

During April 1926 The Times-Union printed 971,446 lines of paid Advertising, the greatest volume ever Published by any Albany Daily Newspaper in any one month

Circulation well over 40,000 and growing every day

Albany Newspaper lineage is audited by De Lisser Brothers Accountants Brooklyn N.Y.

Representation Verree & Conklin Inc., New York Chicago San Francisco Canada City

The Times-Union.

ALBANY'S LEADING NEWSPAPER

By every possible logical comparison

BEATRICE BURTON, AUTHOR, AND HER FAMILY

"The Petter"

Beatrice Burton's New Serial will be released June 7.

Wire reservation order now

T. A. Robertson, managing editor of The Cleveland News, voices the general editorial opinion regarding the Beatrice Burton fiction as follows:

The Cleveland News
Daily and Sunday
Ohio's Greatest Newspaper

OFFICE OF THE MANAGING EDITOR

May 10th, 1926

Mr. W. H. Johnson,
c/o Editor's Feature Service,
Times Bldg., 22nd and Payne Ave., City

Dear Mr. Johnson:—

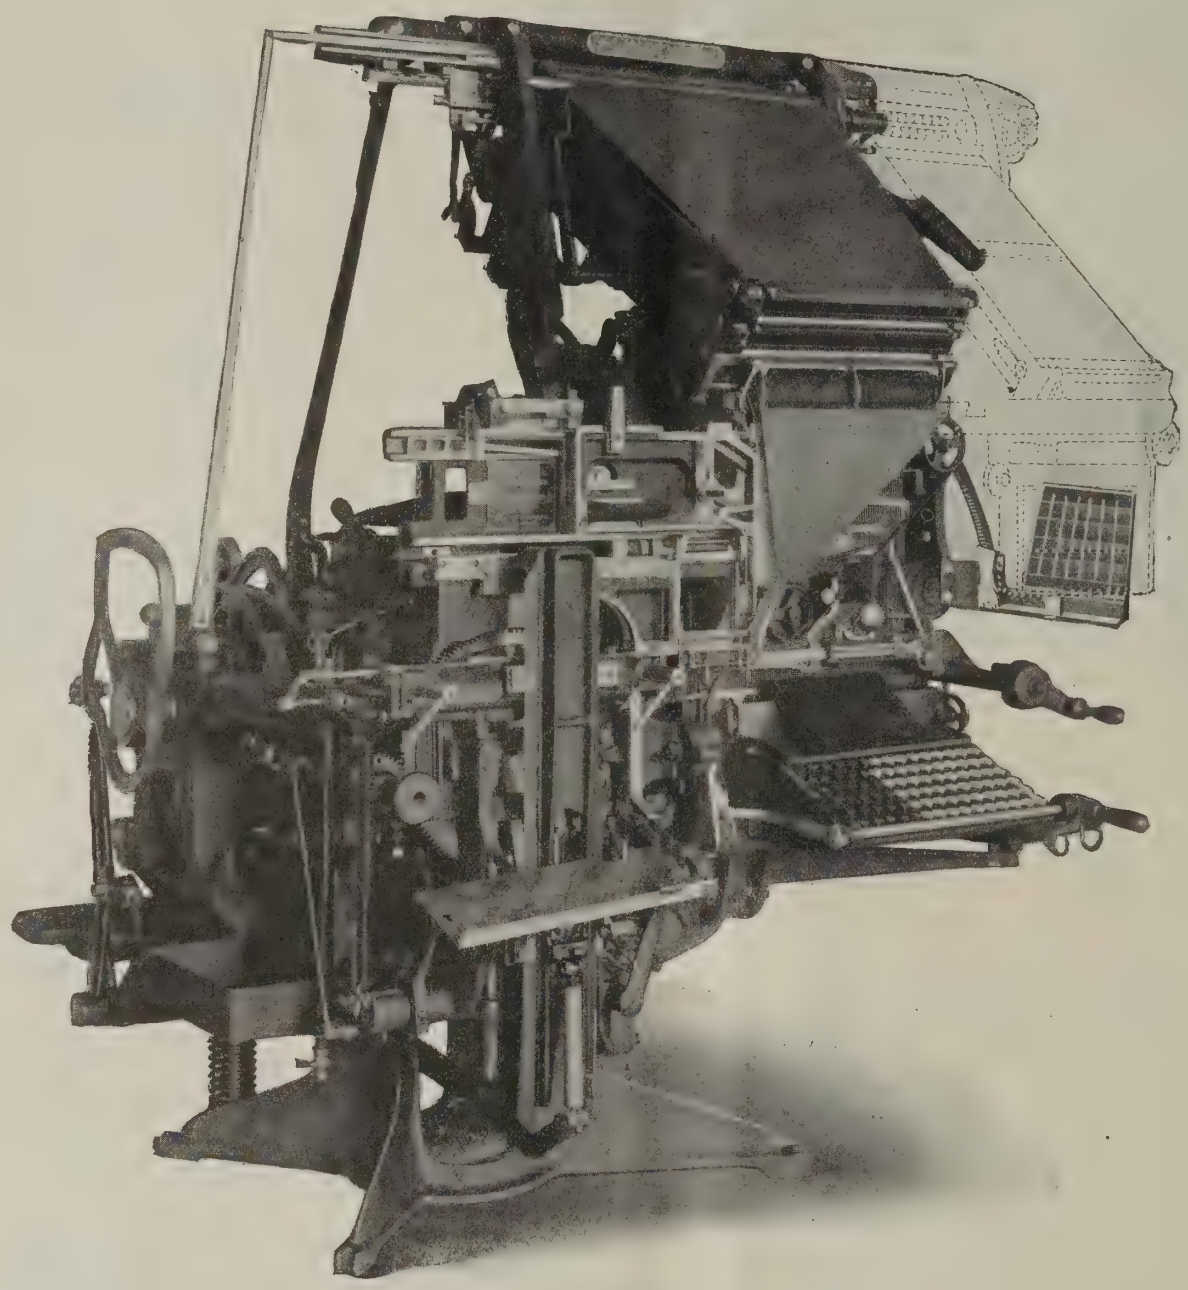
I would appreciate any information you have available at this time concerning your plans for the next serial story by Beatrice Burton. We are making our plans for the summer and fall and want to include the Burton story in our promotion layout.

It may interest you to know that Miss Burton's last story, ''Her Man,'' was a tremendous success with us and proved to be the best circulation puller we ever have had. The interest was sustained from the first word to the last, and, best of all, there was not a word in the story that could be objected to by any person. There was not the slightest suspicion of smut, and it proved conclusively to us that it is not necessary to include filth in a newspaper serial to make it a success. The story proved to be of amazing attraction to thousands of girls and women and we found in many, many families that grandmother, mother and daughter were all following the experiences of the leading characters. We found, too, that the story appealed to all classes of people, rich and poor, and we also discovered that many men were just as excited about the story as were the women.

I would have no hesitancy in recommending ''Her Man'' to any publisher as a sure-fire circulation maker, if properly promoted. It should appeal particularly to those newspapers which have refused to print the so-called ''flapper stories'' because of objectionable and offensive context matter.

Yours very truly,

T. A. Robertson



BUILD CIRCULATION WITH BURTON FICTION

New York Office
1819 Broadway

JOHNSON FEATURES, Inc.
Allied with EDITORS' FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Cleveland Office
East 22nd St. and Payne Ave

SINGLE DISTRIBUTION

One, two or three Main Magazines

Model 8
WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Model 14
WITH AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Also built as Display Linotype

Model 21
WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Model 22
WITH AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

INTERCHANGEABILITY

There are two types of Linotypes either of which can be equipped with various combinations of interchangeable magazine units to give you just the machine you need: Single or multiple distribution; one, two or three main magazines; with or without auxiliary; 30 or 42 picas maximum measure.

SET IN NARCISSE, NOW BEING CUT FOR THE LINOTYPE, AND CASLON OLD FACE

MULTIPLE DISTRIBUTION

Two Main Magazines

Model 25
WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Model 26
WITH TWO AUXILIARY MAGAZINES

ontinuous composition rom all magazines

ices from all magazines
ixed in the same line

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

All Using Standard Interchangeable Magazines, Matrices, Molds and Liners
All Operated from the Same Standard Power-driven Keyboard
All Magazines Quickly Changed from the Front

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK
SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO
Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

530.26.4-F2

SET IN NARCISSE, NOW BEING CUT FOR THE LINOTYPE, AND CASLON OLD FACE

EDITORIAL

Whoso loveth instruction loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof is brutish.—Proverbs, XII; 1.

CO-OPERATION WANTED

WALTER W. R. MAY, executive editor of the Portland (Ore.) Oregonian, made a rattling "shop-talk," recently, at a State conference of newspaper men. His remarks were addressed to editorial and business office staffs, condemning increasing inharmony among newspaper employes upstairs and down with resultant lost motion, "inferiority complexes," jealousies, suspicions, impositions and a growing tendency to departmental isolation.

Mr. May struck from the shoulder while dealing with advertising men who attempt to sell contracts by using the editorial department to puff a prospect and equally shamed editorial men who shy off from good stories just because they are tipped by the business staff. He exposed not only the nonsense but the withering losses that a newspaper sustains in this situation.

Here follows some of Mr. May's good stuff: "I believe that the modern newspaper, large or small, has become so diversified a chronicle and so ambitious a business that the editorial department men should be taken more into the confidence of the business office. I believe some effort should be made inside each individual newspaper organization to give to the editorial department something of the vision that the business office has for the paper it is sponsoring. I believe in this day when the editorial department is buying expensive features; engaging upon special enterprises that not only sell papers, but build confidence and incidentally call for an outlay of money, that the editorial department itself has a right to know a little of the business office's trouble in drawing in this money. We should try to see whether our efforts are really productive. I believe we in the editorial department should make it our business to find out occasionally why an advertising solicitor has lost in getting some big contract, whether it concerns the editorial department or not. The one and only way for the news and advertising departments to find a satisfactory basis for genuine co-operation is to have an understanding one with the other of the problems that confront each."

Is that heresy? To assume that editorial and business office men cannot co-operate without compromising their respective functions is to question the quality of their intelligence and honor.

When a newspaper publishes in a single edition three large pictures depicting different poses of a wretched girl who has confessed in court to immoral exhibitionism while hysterical from bootleg booze, just what can be said in defense of the charge that a section of the press is commercializing pruriency?

ADVERTISEMENT PRONOUNCING

DO you say adver'tisement or advertise'ment? John L. Haney, writing in American Speech, says that among fifty or more common English words in which syllables are stressed to please individual fancy, advertisement is probably the most widely used and has given rise to the most widespread controversy.

The famous lexicographer Vizetelly, we are told, endorses adver'tisement.

Advertise'ment, although advocated by the lexicographer Walker in 1791, made little headway in England, and is now recorded merely as an alternative in American dictionaries, according to Mr. Haney.

H. L. Mencken asserts that the "prevailing American pronunciation" puts the accent upon the syllable next to the last, whereas the common English accent is adver'tisement. Mr. Haney is also inclined to believe that the popular American pronunciation is advertise'ment. We think so, too.

The solemn fact, however, is that we are not particular which syllable is stressed so long as the word and all that it implies continues active in the language of the people.

The fight against commercial substitution is in part a newspaper responsibility, inasmuch as newspaper advertising is only complete when the advertised article has been lodged in possession of the reader.

SHOPPING NEWS TRAGEDY

UNLOOKED-FOR reactions from a Shopping News venture recently started in Wheeling, W. Va., recently caused the merchants of Wheeling to discontinue publication. The Shopping News, characterized by some of the local newspaper editors as a "gutter-snipe" sheet, has been distributed during the last two months throughout the various nearby towns known as the "Greater Wheeling District."

Its advent incensed the merchants in these towns and brought down a flood of adverse editorial comment from the newspapers, some of which organized the local tradesmen in a counter campaign. Copies of newspapers containing the editorials or the merchants' campaign advertising were sent to advertisers in the Shopping News. Emphasis was laid upon the consequences to the big-city advertiser when he attempted to destroy the individuality of the numerous small towns by appealing for trade that ordinarily would not go to the metropolitan centre.

While this counter-campaign was in full force, a group of Wheeling business men decided that the Wheeling region needed additional industries for realization of its full possibilities. They formed the Ohio Valley Industrial Corporation and planned to raise money by selling its stock. Wheeling was to remain the metropolis, but development was to be carried on between Moundsville on the south and Wellsburg on the north.

The stock salesmen received a cool reception from the business men of the nearby cities and investigation showed that the bitter feeling against the Wheeling enterprise arose from the Shopping News. The stock solicitors were recalled while the organizers of the Industrial Corporation considered the situation.

The next step came May 12, when the Shopping News published its last issue, one of its former sponsors admitting to a newspaper man that its distribution had placed a severe handicap on efforts to interest men outside of Wheeling in the Ohio Valley Industrial Corporation.

Railroads are complaining of hobo traffic to summer jobs in the west, but think of the year-round free migration of press agent parasites on the newspaper line.

AN ADVERTISING CENSORSHIP

A COMMITTEE representing the Irish Free State is taking evidence on a government proposal to determine whether it is "necessary or advisable in the interests of public morality to extend the existing powers of the state to prohibit or restrict the sale and circulation of printed matter."

According to the British National Vigilance Committee the inquiry will extend to the distribution of newspapers and magazines printed in other countries and containing editorial or advertising matter which is considered objectionable. The particular drive appears to be against the dissemination of birth control propaganda and certain patent medicine advertising, but it is pointed out that there is in the Irish Free State a body of people strongly opposed to the importation of newspapers, particularly from England, and that any censorship would be welcomed by them.

The British Vigilance Committee, which has been doing some excellent work, has advised English publishers to clean up their advertising columns to circumvent the proposed censorship.

Brooklyn Eagle observes, "tublicity doesn't pay."

SENTIMENT FOR A PRESS

THE staff of the El Paso (Tex) Post sang the swan song of an old Potter press in the columns of the newspaper the other day. Such sentiment for a piece of machinery, blackened by half a century of use, is not often encountered. The railroad engineer who has made his last run with a gallant old Puffing Billy may silently express an affectionate adieu and be understood in his sentiment, but in this instance a newspaper publisher in a first page story confides a love for an old press.

When the old Potter, on which the El Paso Post and four other newspapers began their life, was sold last week to a Mexican publisher to be used again to start a new daily in Ciudad Chihuahua, Ward C. Mayborn, Southwest general business manager of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, called his staff together and with sadness in his voice told the story of 50 years of valiant service by the machine. In its youth it was the "last word" in press perfection. Its first installation was in the office of the Cleveland Press, two months after E. W. Scripps had founded that newspaper. A generation later this Potter was used to start the Minneapolis (Minn.) Daily News. It also gave birth to the premier number of the Evansville (Ind.) Press. After a lapse of 15 years the press was shipped to south, where it cradled the first issue of the Birmingham (Ala.) Post. Soon outgrown, it made its next stand at El Paso, now to be expatriated and serve another people with another language.

Henry Justin Smith's tenth definition of "news," on another page of this issue, is the clearest and truest description that has come to our notice.

A PROPER ANSWER

IN the bathtub case a lawyer put to Irvin S. Cobb this question: "Mr. Cobb, you are one of the foremost writers in New York, are you not?"

It seemed a silly question, but the court solemnly awaited a reply.

Imagine the flood of thoughts that rushed through the mind of the victim of this inquisition, mingling questions of modesty, candor and propriety.

Mr. Cobb replied: "I am, in my own opinion."

What else could the poor man say?

WHITE PLAINS DEBACLE

MAJOR GENERAL GEORGE F. BABBITT fought the "second battle of White Plains" last Saturday afternoon to a dismal "plop." Babbitt desired to sell city folks lots in Westchester County, and to that end a sham battle was arranged, in lieu of legitimate advertising, to draw a crowd. A high-powered press agent was placed in command of the campaign. He announced that history would be repeated. The original battle of White Plains occurred in October, but this did not deter the press agent from calling the May sham battle an anniversary.

He deftly directed attention to the real estate operation by asserting that the "consecrated" ground on which the battle of White Plains was fought would "soon lose its identity as a battle-ground and become the homesites for thousands of patriotic Americans." It was nothing at all in this bright young man's life that the "consecrated" ground was in reality located more than three miles distant from the allotment.

The "second battle of White Plains" could not be fought exclusively with typewriters and pencils, so the press agent bamboozled Colonel Bradley, of the Eighteenth Infantry, U. S. A., to march into Scarsdale with tanks and whippets and face a few kids made up as the enemy. Colonel Bradley made a patriotic speech, while Major General Babbitt's army of real estate slickers fell upon the left flank of the innocent spectators and proceeded to get names on dotted lines for choice corners.

It was as pretty a little piece of press agentry as you ever saw, until New York newspapers exposed the hoax. Then the joke fell heavily on the Babbitt forces. The ire of the patriots of Westchester County flamed up, indignation meetings were held, Babbitt was denounced and fled the scene.

PERSONAL

SA W. BUTLER, editor and publisher of the Sedalia (Mo.) Daily Capital s named United States marshal for the stern district of Missouri by President olidge last week.

Charles F. Chase, senior member of the lantic (Ia.) News-Telegraph publishn firm and one of the oldest newspapern in Iowa, and his wife celebrated ir golden wedding anniversary May 17, their home. Mr. Chase established the t newspaper in Anita, Ia., the Anita nes, and later launched the Atlantic s County Democrat.

Edwin P. Gardner, of the Canandaigua . Y.) Ontario County Journal has been ppointed postmaster for his second m.

Hal M. Wise, publisher of the Webb y (Mo.) Sentinel, who with Mrs. se and their three children are on tour the world, are expected home some e in July.

Forrest Richmond, publisher of the ronto (O.) Tribune, and trustee of the io Good Roads Federation has anmced he will be a candidate for repretative to the General Assembly from ferson County.

Floyd Chalfant, publisher of the wynesboro (Pa.) Record Herald, pre-ed at the Waynesboro Rotary Club's ewspaper Day" recently.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

M. SPRECHER has been appointed advertising manager of the Eureka l.) Humboldt Standard.

Edward V. Brower, formerly a mem- of the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen riot display staff, has returned to that ition after several months in the elecal appliance sales field.

Lester Laidig, for two years in the adtising department of the Mason City .) Globe Gazette has resigned to take rge of newspaper advertising of Hess thers department store, Rockford, Ill.

Orson Angell has joined Nation's Busis, Washington, D. C., and will be in rge of promotion and research. At time he was with the Kansas City r.

Gordon Whitbeck, J. M. Clyne and C. Fulton have been transferred from Chicago Tribune's classified departt to the local display staff.

George Berry, H. H. Byler and Arthur zlaben have been chosen by the Chio Tribune to travel the states of nois, Michigan, and Wisconsin in the rests of the resort advertising departt.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

WALTER J. FENTON, assistant city editor, New York Herald Tribune, acting city editor in the place of ight S. Perrin, who is on vacation.

W. G. Cayce has been named news edi- of the Knoxville Sentinel, succeeding C. Baskervil who resigned to go to eigh, N. C., as bureau manager for eral afternoon newspapers of North olina. Cayce comes from Atlanta, re he was with the Georgian.

Leonard Withington, former manager lor of the Fort Worth Record, now as Republican organization director, ne of the incorporators of the Southt Publishing Company headed by R. B. ager of Bronxville. The company publish a party organ at Dallas.

Dorothy Ducas, who won a Pulitzer relling scholarship at Columbia Uniity, has joined the staff of the New k Herald Tribune until her departure Europe early in June. During the school year Miss Ducas was the ald Tribune's Columbia correspont.

Tunnally Johnson of the New York ald Tribune staff is spending a week's ation at his home in Georgia.

Harry Brandenburg has been made oil editor of the Kingman (Kan.) Leader Courier.

Nelson Budd, dramatic editor of the Columbus Ohio State Journal, is planning a trip to Europe.

Ray Coon has been named city editor of the Dayton (O.) Journal succeeding Larry Collins, who resigned recently to become secretary of the local Builders' Exchange. Coon comes to The Journal from the telegraph desk of the Cincinnati Enquirer. He was formerly a reporter on the Journal.

John O. Kikyri has joined the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen Patriot as night state editor.

Erwin F. McEwan, a member of the Japan Advertiser staff, Tokio, Japan, and a graduate of the school of journalism, University of Missouri, is sailing for the U. S. by way of Europe.

John C. Metcalfe of Chicago has joined the reportorial staff of the San Antonio Light.

Ishbel Ross of the New York Herald Tribune staff has gone to Baltimore to cover the Presbyterian General Assembly. Emma Bugbee, staff writer, is in Atlantic City, covering the General Federation of Women's Clubs convention.

Miss Miriam Rosenthal, woman's editor of the Dayton News, has resigned to go into publicity work for the Dayton Community Chest Association.

Henry Powell, artist, has joined the copy service staff of the Des Moines Register, advertising department.

Walter Harper, special writer and advertising representative of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Journal, has been named manager of East Tennessee, Associated, composed of chambers of commerce and civic clubs.

Herman Nelson, editor, Augustana (Ill.) Observer, has been appointed telegraph editor of the Rockford (Ill.) Daily Republican.

J. D. Keator, managing editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, is recovering from pneumonia. John F. Ruddy, another member of the Times staff, who also suffered an attack of pneumonia, is also making good progress.

Fred W. Schwarz, news correspondent, has been named city editor of the Atlantic City Times.

Harvey White, former managing editor of the Buffalo Evening Post, who has been on a southern motor trip, has reentered the newspaper business as city editor of the Buffalo Times.

Francis Starzl of the syndicate department of the Des Moines Register has been named assistant to W. W. Waymack, managing editor of the Register and Tribune.

Davis S. Taylor, who resigned recently as managing editor of the Buffalo Courier, after 25 years of newspaper service, is one of five men chosen by Governor Smith of New York to compose a special commission which will investigate crime and its causes and endeavor to prescribe remedies.

Clifton B. Carberry of the Boston (Mass.) Post sailed from Boston recently on the Samaria for a two months' vacation in London and Paris.

Pincus William Tell has been appointed dramatic editor and Elias E. Sugarman assistant dramatic editor of the Bronx Home News, New York.

Ted L. Ramsey is the new managing editor of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Press, succeeding George H. Masters, resigned.

Howard Haycraft of Fairmont, Minn., has been made managing editor of the Minnesota Daily, published by the students of the University of Minnesota.

Dick Freeman has joined the Toledo Blade copy desk. He formerly was with the Tampa Evening Globe.

G. "Rusty" Boyd has resigned as night editor of the Montreal (Que.) Star to take up publicity work. He is succeeded by A. Windross, formerly parliamentary press gallery representative of the Ottawa (Ont.) Journal.

Chauncey H. Derby, managing editor of the Staten Island (N. Y.) Advance has been named vice chairman of the gen-

(Continued on next page)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

R. C. SNYDER, publisher of the Norwalk (O.) Reflector-Herald, who not long ago completed a new building for his newspaper, has been owner and publisher of that paper for three years. He went to Norwalk in January, 1913, when he purchased the Norwalk Herald. Before January was ended, Mr. Snyder bought the old Reflector and consolidated the papers.

R. C. Snyder

Mr. Snyder had his first newspaper experience as a reporter on Findley, O., newspapers. By 1902 he had progressed to the position of general manager of the Coshocton (O.) Daily Age, a newspaper he subsequently purchased and operated until 1913.

In 1923, Mr. Snyder was elected president of the Associated Ohio Dailies, a position held for 25 years by his late father-in-law, John T. Mack of the Sandusky (O.) Register.

DURING the third week in May the following newspapers signed yearly contracts for the complete general illustrated service of the Central Press Association:

Danville, Ill., Commercial News
Holyoke, Mass., Telegram
Columbus, Miss., Commercial Dispatch
Macon, Ga., Telegraph
Charleston, W. Va., Gazette
Easton, Pa., Free Press
Ventura, Calif., Post
Chicago Daily Worker
Janesville, Wis., Gazette
McKeesport, Pa., News
Duluth Herald

This list does not include several new clients secured on a tf basis

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNitt, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNitt, Editor and Manager

P. S.—We produce the World's Best Picture Page and the only syndicated Weekly Full Page Sports Pictorial.

144 Different Beck Papers

GAS BUGGIES

or

HEM AND AMY

(Daily)

DOWN THE ROAD

(Sundays)

Why?

"Nothing Succeeds Like Success."

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 29)

eral committee arranging for a sesquicentennial celebration of the first peace conference in which the United States participated, held on Staten Island, September 11, 1776.

Henry Suydam, Washington correspondent for the Brooklyn Eagle, and Mrs Suydam are parents of a boy, Henry Suydam 2nd, born May 24.

Carl Kessler has left the copy desk of the Chicago Daily News to tour Europe with Mrs. Kessler.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

SIDNEY CAVANAUGH, from reporter, Middletown (N. Y.) Times-Press, to telegraph editor, Middletown Daily Herald.

George J. Beaty, from art department, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, to art staff, Atlantic City Evening Union.

James Booth, from Philadelphia Public Ledger, to Atlantic City Daily Press staff.

C. D. Mansfield is covering real estate and building for the Atlantic City Sunday Press.

Anard W. Littman, from staff, Newark Morning Ledger, to Newark Star-Eagle.

Gene Gillespie, from advertising manager, Guthrie (Okla.) Leader, to display advertising staff, Springfield (Mo.) Republican. John Q. Adams, advertising manager, Masonic Tribune, Memphis, has also joined the display staff of the Republican.

H. B. Hailey, from editorial staff, New Orleans Item, to Des Moines Evening Tribune as reporter.

Gerald Hogan from reportorial staff, Montreal (Que.) Star to assistant managing editor, Regina (Sask.) Leader.

Herbert G. Owens, from Cleveland Times copy desk, to staff, Staten Island (N. Y.) Advance.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

A. K. MILLS has succeeded Carl Huber, resigned as manager of the United News Boston bureau. Mills has formerly worked on the Kansas City Star and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

J. C. Stark, formerly manager of the United News bureau in Tampa, Fla., has been transferred to the Atlanta bureau, succeeding Roscoe Snipes, who returns to the United Press service in Atlanta.

E. T. Cutter, superintendent of the central division of the Associated Press, visited New York A. P. headquarters on business last week.

E. W. Lewis, formerly of the New Haven Union staff has joined the New York staff of the United Press.

Lyle Wilson, cable editor of the United Press, is spending his vacation at Oklahoma City.

Associated Press operators of Missouri formed the Associated Press Goodfellowship Club at a meeting in St. Louis recently. Ward Yount, St. Joseph Gazette, was chosen president and Harry E. Hill, St. Louis bureau, secretary.

Beginning on June 7, the Scranton (Pa.) Times will add the International News Service wire to its telegraph report. This will give the Times three services, Associated Press, United Press, and I. N. S.

MARRIED

PAUL T. MOTRY, reporter on the Sandusky (O.) Star-Journal, to Miss Marian Thomas.

Ray M. Quick of the Memphis Commercial Appeal to Miss Nell Quick of Austin, Tex., recently in San Antonio.

J. C. Arnold, Los Angeles, advertising agency man, a grandson of Benjamin J. Arnold, who established the Des Moines (Ia.) Daily Capital, to Miss Vera Scobey of Redlands, Cal., formerly of Fayette, Ia., May 14.

Pines Cranford of the Stanley (N. C.) News Herald, to Miss Mary N. Clayton at Chesterfield, S. C., May 21.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

A. C. CHAPMAN AND HERBERT LIMING of Joplin, Mo., have leased the Carl Junction (Mo.) Standard from G. W. McDowell.

Miss Leona Bancroft who established the Plattsburg (N. Y.) Advertiser in 1921 has sold that paper to L. G. Swarthout. Miss Bancroft will engage in the life insurance business. The Advertiser will be enlarged and a linotype machine installed.

Mrs. Edythe Vananda Dungan, who has operated the Oroville (Cal.) Mercury since the death of her husband four years ago, has sold the paper to Farwell Brown and associates. Brown was for 11 years with the Marysville Democrat.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

EIGHT linotypes have been ordered by the Huntington (W. Va.) Herald-Dispatch; five by the Baltimore Sun; eight by the Salem (Mass.) Evening News; seven by the Newark Ledger; 10 by the Zanesville (O.) Times-Recorder and Signal; 10 have been installed by the San Francisco Bulletin; four by the Buffalo Express; and three by the Riverside (Cal.) Daily Press.

Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Eagle-News is now being printed on its recently purchased Duplex Tubular press.

Walter Scott & Co., Plainfield, N. J., has just completed a Multi-Unit Decuple press for the Atlantic City Press-Union. Two Wood Pony Autoplate machines will be installed in the papers' stereotype department.

WITH THE SPECIALS

ALCORN & SEYMOUR COMPANY, special representatives, New York, have been appointed to represent the Honolulu Nippu Jiji, Hawaiian-Japanese daily.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

AVOCA (N. Y.) PRESS recently started publication as a weekly.

J. E. Bell, formerly of Oneida, Tenn., has established the Lenoir City (Tenn.) Progress.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

KEWANEE (Ill.) STAR-COURIER, Building edition, May 17.

Three Rivers (Que.) St. Maurice Valley Chronicle, Development number, May 6.

Pittsburg (Kan.) Headlight, 134-page 50th anniversary of the founding of the city edition, May 19.

Denver Post, 80-page special Vacation Number, May 18.

Vancouver Evening Sun, 72-page Business Development Number, May 13.

Minneapolis (Minn) Tribune, annual outing edition, May 23.

There is a lot of trouble in this world because some men think they have learned finance before they have learned simple arithmetic.—Atcheson Globe.

America's Complete Newspaper

New York Herald Tribune

FLASHES

A father and a prospective son-in-law are equally interested in the other's financial status.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

The Houston Post-Dispatch inquires, "What is a Republican?" Is there no postmaster in Houston?—Little Rock Arkansas Gazette.

The Popular Science Monthly gives minute directions on how to lift a heavy weight, such as a barrel of ashes, easily and without injury to oneself, but there are some things we'd rather not know.—Columbus (O.) State Journal.

Another polar mystery is why the civilized world should go hunting new continents when it is having so much trouble with the old ones.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

Another stirring spectacle, peculiar to this Great Republic, is the appearance of some one no one ever heard of before, who tells a Senate committee that he speaks for 22,000,000 people.—Detroit News.

"A man's place is by his wife's side." "Yes," said Mr. Meekton. "But few husbands these days can travel that fast."—Washington Star.

"What civilization needs," says a scientist, "is a substitute for whisky." What does he call the stuff people drink now?—Birmingham News.

Alas! an artistic temperament is seldom recognized until it's too late to spank.—Baltimore Sun.

England's troubles are felt all over the world. Even our regular front-page space-grabbers are hard hit.—Brooklyn Eagle.

After waiting about twenty years for Congressional relief, the wise farmer gets a job in town.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

Goldfish are helpful. If it wasn't for them some brides would have no responsibilities at all.—New York Telegram.

A husband who is being cross-examined by his wife never subscribes to that old stuff about women being easily diverted.—J. R. Wolf in Milwaukee Journal.

Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be u… to read… re… st… the… appre… every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that h… the day when artificial a… though not … of the typ… last few… ter t… and… ab… t…

© TRADE LINOTYPE MARK ®

…ing. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point … to … rees … or … nd … tive … so… ders gives good legibility even wh… solid. Cast on seven point bod… Point Ionic gives the effect … leaded—and with a de… word-count over the … The first paper … ace … as the Evening … N. J. … a trial of s… ne man… t of th… re enthusi… an … , and readers … ds of commen… e of the most appre… oseph H. Salov, a lead… st, and past president of … Optometric Association, addressing the editor of …ning News: "It would be … or any one else who …unt of good that will … recent change in the … use in the makeup of … s was not recognized, … so acknowledged by …ted in the conservation … is the accumulated un… … on the eyes, due to the …l and poor type used in …bers, that hastens the day … al aid must be sought. Al… versed in the nomenclature … you have been using for the …days, it is of a style and charac… t immediately makes itself felt, … is far more readable and comfort… e than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, ng. The eve…

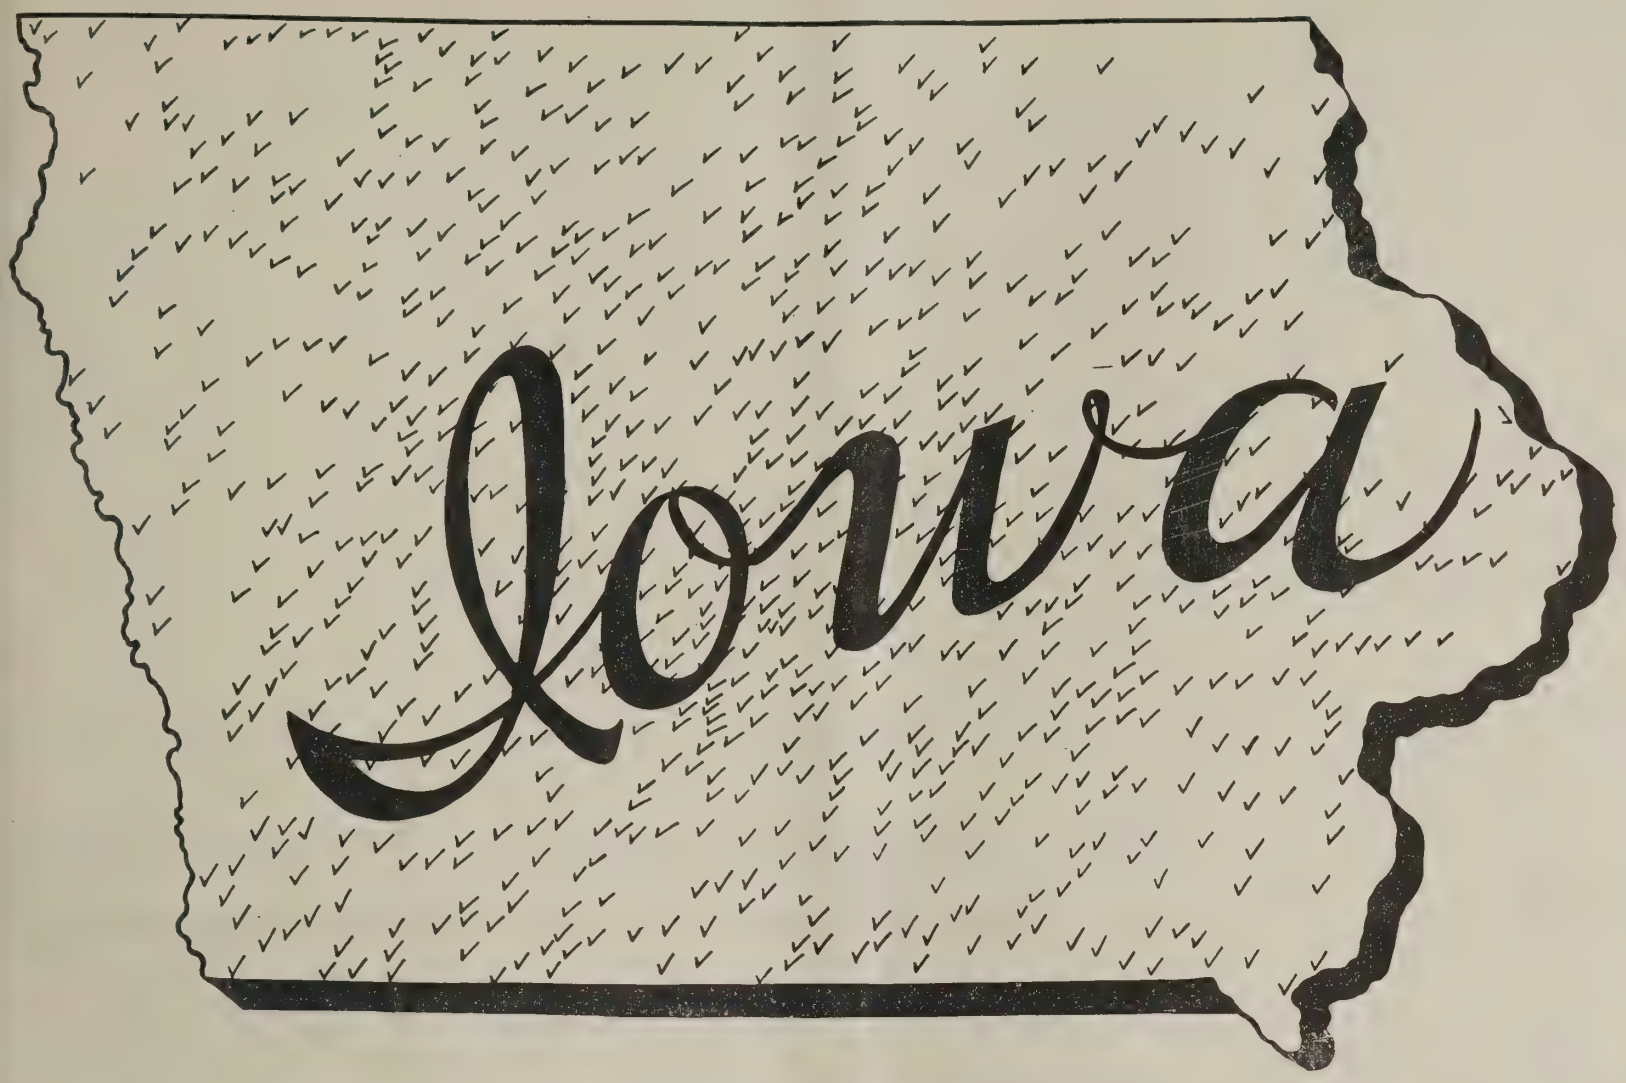
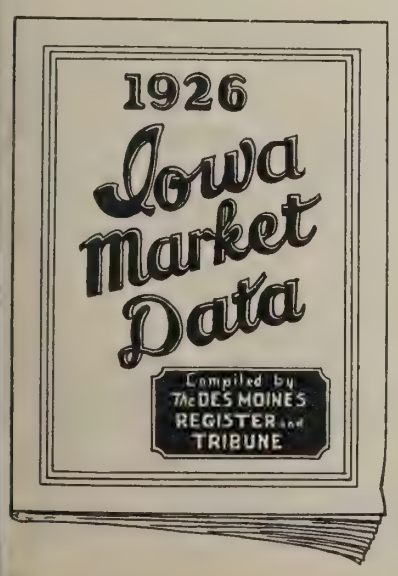
particularly ad…
of newspaper s…
advantage of t…
ation of visio…
out is restf…
notor…



Study the design of this NEW face
Linotype 6½ Point Ionic No. 5

See how perfectly it meets the difficult requirements of modern newspaper printing conditions. Notice the full, round contours of the letters, no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping.

Ask the nearest Linotype Agency for copies of newspaper set in this face and compare it with the body type you are now using both for legibility and word count. You will find it easier to read than 7 point faces and that it gives the same word count as a 6 point.



The 6½ Point Ionic is made with italic and small caps and also in combination with Bold Face No. 2.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK
SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO
Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

20% TO 90% COVERAGE IN EVERY TOWN CHECKED—

In the 801 Iowa cities and towns checked on this map The Sunday edition of The Des Moines Register and Tribune reaches from one-fifth to nine-tenths of The families. In these 801 cities and towns, therefore, as well as in Des Moines, merchants sell products advertised in The Register and Tribune.

THE DES MOINES REGISTER AND TRIBUNE

April Circulation, 177,677 Daily; 153,803, Sunday

Net Paid

Write for "1926 Iowa Market Data"—a carefully compiled picture of the Iowa market. Shows population—number of families, and males and females over 16 years—wholesale and retail distribution for every town of over 1,000 population.

Map showing electric service lines—number of electric appliances in use—list of all gas plants and gas appliances in use by cities.

Auto registrations and sales by counties—Iowa crop and livestock statistics for 1925—data on Iowa manufacturing.

Names and addresses of all Iowa jobbers of groceries, drugs, auto accessories, confectionery, hardware, radio and electrical appliances.

Map of Des Moines retail trade territory and data on city of Des Moines. Sent to any address on request.

HEARST HELPS YOUTH JAILED IN NEW YORK

Furnishes Bail for Hodges, Kansas University Student, Who Attempted Hold-Up — Reporters Also Assisted in Boy's Defense

William Randolph Hearst aided considerably in the defense of Alexander Hodges, Jr., former University of Kansas student, who pleaded guilty recently to a charge of larceny following his attempted hold-up of an all-night restaurant in New York, using a cigarette case for a revolver.

Hodges is now free on $5,000 bail, furnished by Mr. Hearst, and is working for a Wall street bank, pending further action of the court, scheduled for June 18.

New York newspapers carried the story of Hodges' arrest on April 20. Hodges had beaten his way to New York from the Southwest. He was penniless, and in a moment of recklessness, had attempted the hold-up. Getting away with some money, he was chased, was caught, and confessed his guilt. It was his first offense.

Mr. Hearst, then in New York, read the newspaper story and immediately telephoned the editor of his New York American. He didn't know the boy, but sympathized with him.

"I think that the Hodges boy ought to be given a suspended sentence," he said. "See what you can do about it."

Wesley Hamer, special writer on the American staff, and Carl Helm, lawyer and member of the Hearst legal department, were assigned to the case. Judge Leonard Snitkin volunteered his services as counsel.

Mr. Hamer and Mr. Helm went to the jail, where they bailed out Hodges. His clothes were ragged and dirty. He hadn't shaved for many days. Harold Spielburg, of a bonding concern, turned over the $100 bail premium to the boy to enable him to purchase a new outfit. Thus transformed, the boy went out and got his present banking job.

Then the two Hearst men used all the political influence it was possible to bring to bear in the boy's behalf. After they had investigated the boy's past record, and found it spotless, they received sympathetic attention from authorities.

As a result of their work and the co-operation of the reporters who handle news of the criminal courts a plea of not guilty was suddenly changed to guilty. The boy's case was speeded up and rushed ahead of many others.

Reporters in the criminal courts building investigated the case and questioned Hodges; then they, too, got behind the boy. These reporters included Robert Wilkes, New York World, William Cox, New York City News Association, William Olsen, New York Sun, and Joseph Durkin, New York Evening Journal.

There are 548 Sunday newspapers in the United States, with an aggregate total circulation per issue of 23,354,622.

THE MARGACH FEEDER
for Linotype, Intertype, Monotype, Ludlow, and Elrod machines
$75.00 each
Further inquiries may be directed to the N. Y. Times — Phila. Bulletin
Chicago Tribune — Boston Herald or several hundred other publishers upon request.
Margach Mfg. Co., Inc.
211-215 Centre St., New York

ASSOCIATIONS

MISS ESTHER BOTTING was elected president of the Montreal branch of the CANADIAN WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB, for the ensuing year, at the club's annual meeting, held recently.

Spring meeting of the SOUTHEAST MISSOURI PRESS ASSOCIATION will be held in Jackson, Mo., June 11 and 12, President Doc Brydon, has announced.

BUFFALO LEAGUE OF ADVERTISING WOMEN has elected these new officers: President, Ursula Hanrahan; vice-president, Henrietta Kawantal; corresponding secretary, Venorma Sommer; recording secretary, Margaret Benstock; treasurer, Clara Petzing.

PITTSBURGH ADVERTISING CLUB will hold its annual outing June 5, at the Pines on the Perry Highway, West of Pittsburgh. R. C. Groves, is chairman of the affair.

S. Luther Franzen, Davenport, Iowa, sales manager for the Jahn Ollier Engraving Company has been elected president of the DAVENPORT (IA.) ADVERTISING CLUB. Don McCandless was elected vice-president; P. C. Fisher, treasurer and Paul Johnson, secretary.

Captain Randolph Ridgely Jr., U. S. N., has been made an honorary member of the ATLANTIC CITY PRESS CLUB.

THIRD DISTRICT MINNESOTA EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION at a special meeting held at Montgomery, Minn., May 17, elected W. K. Wilcox, editor of the Elysian Enterprise, president to succeed Carl Eastwood, the new president of the Minnesota Editorial Association. Committees were appointed on by-laws and to arrange for the summer outing.

Arthur Brayton was elected president of the DES MOINES, (IA.) ADVERTISING CLUB at the annual election and dinner, defeating Mel Hunnicutt by four votes. Other officers elected: Mac Harlan, vice-president; Walter Melong, secretary.

ADVERTISING CLUB OF JOHNSTOWN, PA., elected the following officers for the ensuing year: president, John Sheridan; first vice-president, Tom Nokes; second vice-president, Harry D. Corbin; treasurer Robert J. Glock; secretary Kenneth W. Ripple.

WASHINGTON STATE PRESS ASSOCIATION will hold its annual summer meeting and election of officers at Spokane, August 20 and 21.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP CLUB of the Associated Press telegraphers of New England, held its annual spring dinner and meeting last week at the Boston Yacht club. The speakers were Hugh F. E. Farrell, telegraph editor of the Salem (Mass.) News, E. P. Wolford, chief of operating personnel, New York; R. K. Smith, traffic district representative at Boston, and C. G. Rogers of the Boston bureau. John J. Keating was re-elected president, Major L. Deane of Fitchburg was chosen vice-president, and Charles F. Whitney of the Boston bureau, secretary-treasurer.

Worcester will be host to approximately 500 delegates when the convention of the NEW ENGLAND ADVERTISING CLUBS is held there Nov. 8 and 9. Harry P. Hovey, past president of the Worcester Club is general chairman in charge of the arrangements.

Five monthly tournaments and a competition to decide who is the best golfer in the American Legion posts of Chicago have been planned by members of the ADVERTISING POST of the Legion.

J. H. Ruess of the Royal Printing Company, was unanimously elected president of the LONG BEACH (Cal.) Advertising Club for the ensuing year, at a recent meeting. Supporting Mr. Ruess, the Club elected Ben Marti, first vice-president; Jack Horner, of the Horner Advertising Agency, second vice-president; C. C. Lewis, treasurer.

ADDRESSES WANTED

Clarence E. Staats

A. H. Kirchhofer

The Significance to Publishers of Certified Cold Stereotyping

Our Policy:

One Size
all mats 20" by 24"

One Quality
only the best we can make —used by
The New York Times
Cleveland Plain Dealer
Christian Science Monitor
Detroit Times
and several hundred others

One Price
15 cents on standing order

WE make only the best mats we know how—we make them good enough for the largest papers so that they are unquestionably suitable for the smaller ones.

In making Certifieds we keep constantly in mind that they are but a means to an end—the means by which you can discard your steamtables and still maintain satisfactory printing standards.

In other words we have aimed to reproduce the "wet mat" without any of the wet mat disadvantages.

That we have succeeded is best borne out by the fact that Certified Dry Mat cold stereotyping has displaced wet mats and steamtables in several hundred plants, and is day in and day out helping to produce well printed papers.

All that we ask you is to give Certifieds a trial, and draw your own conclusions.

If you are not now equipped to use dry mats why not let us tell you how Certifieds can save you time and money and improve working conditions in your plant.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue — New York, N. Y.

for wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility—use Certifieds

MADE IN THE U. S. A.

FACTS IN A NUTSHELL

What—The Press Congress of the World will meet in its third session for the discussion of Journalistic problems of moment.

Where—At Geneva and Lausanne, Switzerland.

When—September 14-18, 1926, when the Alpine Region is at its height of seasonal natural beauty.

Who—Persons engaged in any Journalistic endeavor, in any country, are eligible for membership in the Press Congress of the World.

Members attending the Third Congress will have an unusual opportunity to hear leading Journalists discuss the technique of newspaper making.

Delegates will be accorded front seats in the Press Gallery at the sessions of the League of Nations which is destined to be the center of world news interest at that time.

How—Journalists throughout the world are eligible to membership upon the approval of the Executive Committee, and upon the payment of annual dues as follows:

Individual members, $5 annually.

Corporate Memberships, to be held by newspapers and other publications, schools of journalism, press associations, etc., $50 per year.

Sustaining Memberships, voluntary gifts in any amount and from any legitimate source acceptable to the Executive Committee of the Press Congress.

Program—The five days' business sessions will include discussions of such subjects as:

"News Communications by Cable, Radio, Telephone, Telegraph, Air Mail, etc."

"Journalistic Ethics and Standards of Practice."

"Interchange of Journalists."

"Journalistic Organizations."

"Freedom of the Press" and "Journalistic Welfare."

This THIRD CONGRESS OF THE PRESS OF THE WORLD under the Presidency of Dr. Walter Williams will undoubtedly be the greatest gathering of newspaper men ever held.

Transportation—Following four days of sight-seeing and entertainment in New York City, August 31 to September 3, the delegates will sail on the palatial Cunarder S.S. Carmania, Friday midnight, September 3.

Cost of the Trip—With rooms at $170 each way, the cost, including first-class hotels, rail and water transportation abroad, all necessary tips and meals according to the custom of the country visited, will be $960. Berths at $150 each way will reduce the price to $920.

Optional or Extension Tours—Five extension tours have been arranged for those who can spend more time in Europe than is called for by the official tour, which covers a period of six weeks.

$100 Advance Deposit will reserve for you accommodations you desire on the Carmania. Make reservations now while choice rooms are available.

Address—Tour Department, PRESS CONGRESS OF THE WORLD, Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd Street and Broadway, New York City, N. Y.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

NEA Service Sponsoring Lillian Cannon's Channel Swim—Eugene MacLean Announces Opening of Producing Plant—Thompson Offers New Love Problem Serial

UNDER the auspices of NEA Service, Inc., New York and Cleveland, and the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, Miss Lillian Cannon, of Baltimore, has sailed for France to make an attempt to swim the English channel. With Miss Cannon is Nelson Robins, of the Baltimore Post staff, who will report the stunt for NEA.

Lillian Cannon

On her arrival in France, the swimmer will establish training quarters at Cape Gris Nez and will spend eight weeks preparing for the test. Her work there will be under the direction of Bill Burgess, one of the few men who have conquered the channel. Two dogs, pets of Miss Cannon's, will also attempt to swim the channel with her.

Although no woman has ever swum the channel, Miss Cannon believes she can do it. Last year she swam 22 miles across Chesapeake Bay, fighting a high wind and adverse tides and meeting conditions nearly as bad as those she must contend with in the channel. For the past few seasons. Miss Cannon has been a life guard at a beach near Baltimore. Although the channel swim has been her goal ever since she learned to swim, she was unable to get a chance until NEA agreed to back the attempt.

Now detective stories are being offered in strip form. McNaught Syndicate, Inc., New York, announced this week that Craig Kennedy had entered the newspaper strip world. Arthur B. Reeve writes the scenario and Harry J. Flemming does the art work. The new strip runs six days a week, and will be launched early in June.

Eugene MacLean announces the opening of a syndicate feature producing plant at 827 Folsom street, San Francisco, Cal. Harold Matson, formerly Pacific Coast manager of NEA Service, has been appointed manager of the enterprise. Previous to his connection with NEA, Matson was advertising and production manager for Thomas Seltzer, Inc., New York publishers. "Second Love" by Malcolm Duart is the first of a program of newspaper serial fiction to be produced by Mr. MacLean, as head of an independent syndicate. A second serial will be announced in June. Mr. MacLean was formerly president of NEA Service.

"Mary," by Ruth Dewey Groves, is a new love problem serial in 36 installments now being offered by the Thompson Feature Service, New York. The story has a New York setting, but has been written so that it may be localized by newspapers. Miss Groves in private life is Mrs. A. A. Preciado. Mr. Preciado, former editor of Scripps-Howard newspapers in the Pacific Northwest, is at present with the Thompson Feature Service.

Mr. and Mrs. Millar of the Associated Editors' Syndicate, Chicago, are parents of a daughter, Patricia Ann.

Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, has obtained the second serial rights to "The Man That Nobody Knows," by Bruce Barton, president of Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., New York advertising agency.

Herbert S. Hollander, formerly financial editor of the Washington Herald, has joined the staff of the Ullman Feature Service, Washington, D. C. He will have charge of a new feature dealing with the trend of business as seen from the national capitol. The new feature will be one of four offered in combination during the summer months. The others will be "The Sunday Motorist," an automotive feature; "The Dial's Diary," a radio feature; and a sheet of shorts for boxes and feature heads.

Frank Simonds, writer on international affairs for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, has returned from abroad and is now at his summer estate, "Blighty" in New Hampshire.

George Britt, formerly manager of the Washington bureau of NEA Service, Inc., has been appointed manager of the New York office, succeeding Elmer Rossener, resigned. W. C. Etheridge has been made manager of NEA's San Francisco office, formerly held by Vid Larsen, resigned to write local politics in San Francisco.

Jay N. Darling, cartoonist for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, returned to Des Moines, Ia., his home, this week after a ten-days' visit in New York and Washington, and also at his son's school in Massachusetts. It was Mr. Darling's first trip east since he resumed work after his long illness.

George M. Whitehead has joined the sales staff of the United Features Syndicate, New York.

"Romances of America" is the title of a new strip being offered by NEA Service, Inc. It tells in picture form the love stories of famous people in American history. The story is being written by Hal Cochran and the drawings are by Lawrence Redner, who drew the strip "Ivanhoe."

Clare A. Briggs, cartoonist for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, is in Quebec at Lac Archambault for two weeks of trout fishing.

"The Patter" is the title of the new newspaper serial by Beatrice Burton, now being offered by Johnson Features, Inc., New York.

Leslie Fulenwider, president of Famous Features, Inc., returned to New York this week from a trip through the eastern states.

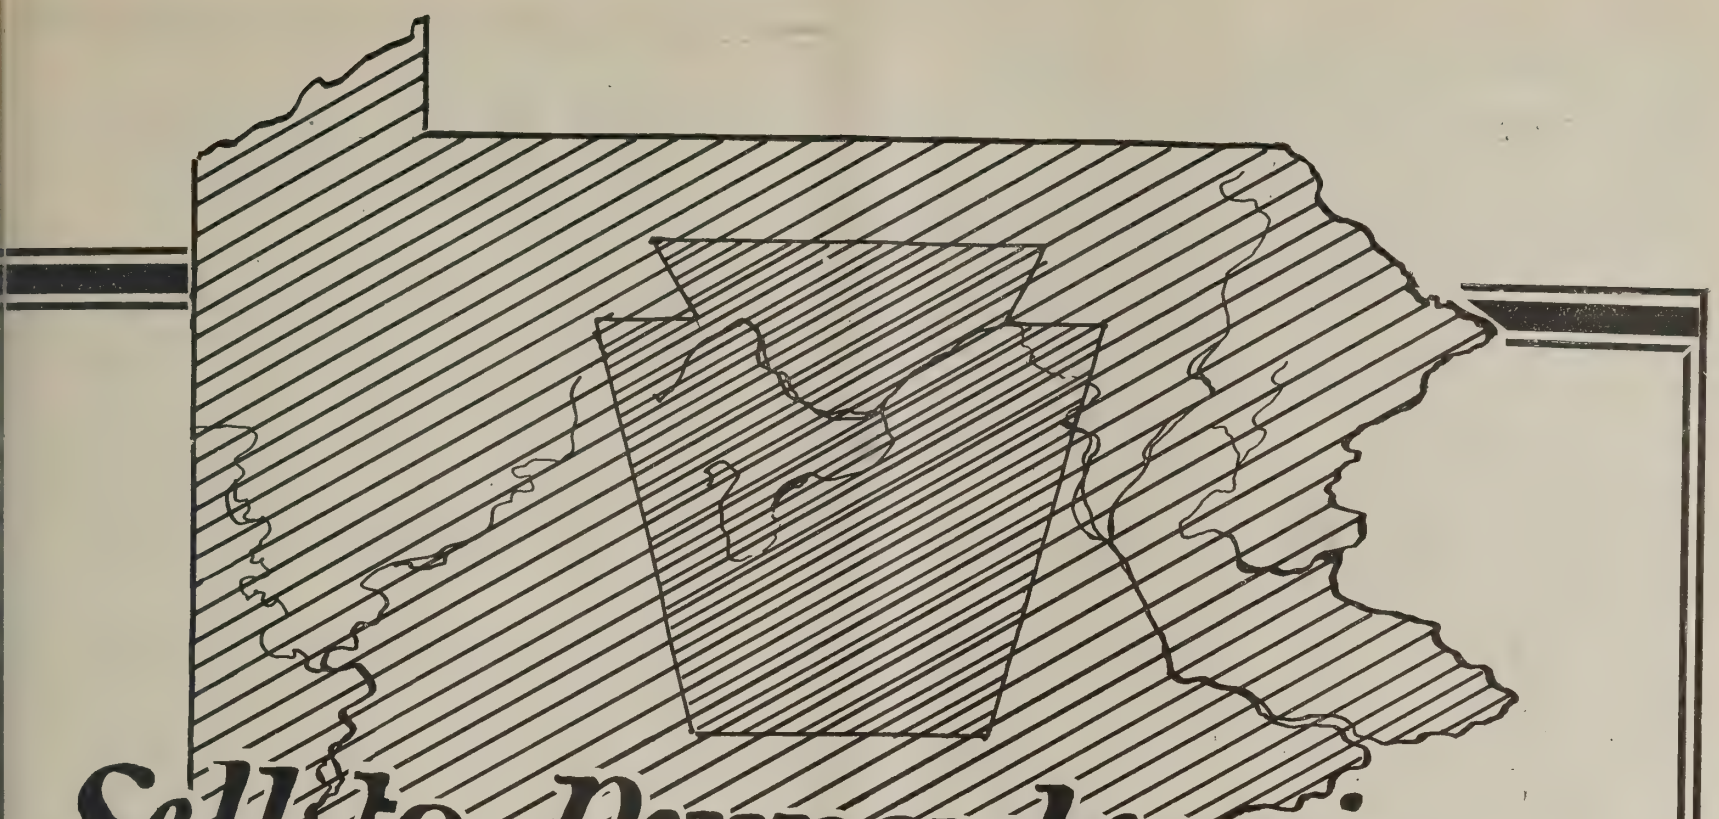
Fred L. Ferguson, president of NEA Service, Inc., has returned to New York from a business trip to the Pacific Coast.

Dr. Alvin Bell, a Toledo, O., clergyman, is author of a new weekly feature called "The Gist of the Bible," which has been added to the list of Johnson Features, Inc. W. H. Johnson, president of Johnson Features, Inc., left New York this week for New Orleans on a business trip.

SPECIALIZE
Your Appeal to Floridians

The people of Florida are cosmopolitan. They have come from all parts of the United States and are thoroughly representative. But—

The climate of Florida is so different from that of the rest of the country that this state is quite distinctive in its seasons and demands. When the Northern merchant is selling overcoats, snowshoes, anti-freeze mixtures and chilblain cures, the Florida merchant is selling straw hats, tennis shoes, bathing suits, electric fans and sunburn ointment. The general campaign aimed at the country as a whole, therefore, is not always appropriate for Florida.



Here during the winter months are approximately three million people with cosmopolitan tastes and more than average buying power. Here is a great and fast growing market.

To get the greatest possible results from this market, specialize your advertising appeal and use the special media that cover Florida most completely and economically—the Associated Dailies.

ASSOCIATED DAILIES of Florida

510 Clark Bldg. Jacksonville, Florida

Bradenton News	Miami Tribune
Clearwater Sun	New Smyrna News
Daytona Beach Journal	Ocala Central Florida Times
Daytona Beach News	Orlando Morning Sentinel
Deland Daily News	Orlando Reporter-Star
Eustis Lake Region	Palatka News
Ft. Lauderdale News	Palm Beach Daily News
Ft. Myers Press	Palm Beach Post
Ft. Myers Tropical News	Palm Beach Times
Ft. Pierce News-Tribune	Pensacola Journal
Ft. Pierce Record	Pensacola News
Gainesville News	Plant City Courier
Gainesville Sun	St. Augustine Record
Jacksonville Florida Times-Union	St. Petersburg Independent
Jacksonville Journal	St. Petersburg News
Key West Citizen	St. Petersburg Times
Kissimmee Gazette	Sanford Herald
Lakeland Ledger	Sarasota Herald
Lakeland Star-Telegram	Sarasota Times
Lake Worth Leader	Stuart Daily News
Melbourne Journal	Tampa Times
Miami Daily News	Tampa Tribune
Miami Herald	Winter Haven Chief
Miami Illustrated Daily Tab

Sell to Pennsylvania

Unsurpassed in Industry, Commerce, Mining and Agriculture

Pennsylvania has broken all previous records for building construction and production of industrial products during 1925. This year shows that it will surpass 1925.

Conditions are good in mining and agriculture as well. Consumer demand will be greater in 1926 than it was last year.

Get the benefit of this increasing market. Advertise in the daily papers of the home cities of Pennsylvania.

The dailies are ready to give you excellent service and aid you in planning the distribution and sale of your products.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call ....(M)	31,400	.10	.10
Allentown Call ....(S)	22,349	.10	.10
††Beaver Falls Tribune....(E)	6,553	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times....(E)	13,272	.06	.06
††Bloomsburg Press ....(M)	7,673	.04	.04
Chester Times ....(E)	18,295	.06	.06
††Coatesville Record ....(E)	6,783	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier ....(E)	5,928	.02	.02
††Easton Express ....(E)	25,652	.08	.08
Erie Times ....(E)	28,596	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review...(EM)	14,883	.05	.05
††Hazleton Plain Speaker....(E) / ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel..(M)	19,852	.07	.06
Mount Carmel Item ....(E)	4,307	.0285	.0285
Oil City Derrick ....(M)	8,588	.04	.04
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper ....(EM)	15,857	.08	.07
Scranton Times ....(E)	43,230	.13	.12
Sharon Herald ....(E)	7,236	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Daily Item ....(E)	5,224	.03	.03
*Washington Observer and Reporter ....(M&E)	18,136	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News ....(E)	11,860	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	26,204	.06	.06
††Williamsport Sun ....(E) / †Gazette & Bulletin....(M)	28,000	.09	.09
††York Dispatch ....(E)	19,632	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, Sept. 30, 1925.
A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

U. S. Shipping Board Placing Newspaper Advertising—Summer Campaign for Chicago & Northwestern Railroad—Lee Named Dodge Sales Manager

STARTING July 1, the United States Shipping Board Fleet Corporation will place an advertising campaign in newspapers, magazines and trade papers. The account is handled jointly by Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., Inc., and Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., New York advertising agencies. About two-thirds of the space will be in newspapers. Copy is being prepared to promote two passenger and 31 freight lines.

A $100,000 summer advertising campaign in newspapers was started this week by the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, placed through the Chicago office of the H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, Inc. The campaign presents the attractions of the Wisconsin Lakes, Northern Minnesota, Colorado, and other middle western vacation lands. Prince & Ripley, Westchester real estate operators, have placed their advertising with this same agency's New York office. New accounts for the Chicago office include the Own-Your-Home Exposition, Martin & Martin, manufacturers of household specialties, and the Cornell Wood Products Company, all of Chicago. The first two clients are newspaper accounts.

John R. Lee has been appointed general sales manager of Dodge Brothers, Inc. Mr. Lee has been assistant general sales manager since last December, prior to that having served several years as assistant to the president. Three new assistant general sales managers were appointed to serve with Mr. Lee. They are: H. J. New, formerly director of distribution; W. M. Purves, former division sales manager; and R. R. Valpey, former director of the commercial car and truck division.

The Studebaker Corporation of America, Inc., has appointed the Roche Advertising Company of Chicago to direct its advertising account, effective July 1. The agency was recently incorporated by John Pierre Roche, formerly vice-president of the McJunkin Advertising Company, Chicago. Associated with him are Stewart Westen, vice-president; D. C. Plank, treasurer; and Miner F. Williamson, secretary.

The Publicity Bureau of Vancouver, B. C., is placing advertising in United States newspaper to attract tourists. "A Land of Enchantment is Calling You" is the slogan being used.

Canadian daily newspapers are being used by the Canadian Screen & Wire Cloth Association, formed by a group of screen and wire manufacturers. The campaign is being directed by the Hamilton Advertisers' Agency Limited, Hamilton, Ont.

A new company is soon to be formed to take over the Fulmer-Century Division of the Eastman Kodak Company. The new concern will be known as the Fulmer-Graflex Corporation. Under provisions of a long term agreement the new company will have available the sales organization of the Eastman Kodak Company.

Plans for a four-year co-operative advertising and merchandising program will be presented to members of the National Council of Lighting Fixture Manufacturers at the annual general convention to be held in Montreal, June 23-26. The program, which was approved April 21 by the executive committee, is based on a trade survey of the industry made by Granville P. Rogers, now acting as managing director of the association. Meetings will be held in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal.

Derek White, Pacific Coast advertising man, has been appointed advertising and promotion manager of the C. J. Breir company's chain of department stores. There are 55 stores in the northwest.

A few hours after announcement of its defeat in patent litigation that lasted more than two years, the National Cash Register Company this week bought from the Remington Cash Register Company, its successful opponent, a general license under the patent which was in litigation and under eight other issued patents and patent applications. The purchase price was $2,000,000.

A newspaper schedule is being arranged to carry the copy of Blynn Shoes, Inc., New York chain store operator, by the Arthur Hirshon Company, New York agency.

TWO NEWS MEN DROWN SEEKING GOLD FIELDS

Indian Courier Finds English Writers' Overturned Canoe In Lac Seul—Were To Write of Canadian Gold Rush

HUDSON, Ont., May 25.—An Indian courrier du bois brought the news of the tragic drowning in the cold waters of Lac Seul of two young English journalists.

The two young men, Stanley Quinn, 20, and Sydney Stebbings, 23, were on their way from Hudson to the Red Lake gold field to cover the rush for several newspapers and magazines in England.

The pair were ill-equipped and utterly inexperienced having with them four dogs and no dog feed. They arrived three weeks ago anxious to be on their way to the field. Provincial Constable Patrick Jago forbade their starting because of the almost impossible going—even for sourdoughs—over the rough route, still covered with winter's ice and snow.

They complied with his order and on his advice made camp, waiting for the open water. Meanwhile they outfitted with an 18 foot canoe and employed themselves with making a sail for it, which Jago promptly seized and burned as a measure of safety.

Thursday, May 13, with the constable's permission they took to the water bidding him a friendly farewell at the dock.

"Their canoe was well loaded," said Jago. "The last thing I told them was to stick to the shore all the way and if it started to blow, to make for the nearest point."

Their plan was to follow the winter route portaging from lake to lake between here and Lac Seul and then to skirt the northern shore of the big lake till they reached Pine Ridge.

On Sunday afternoon the courrier du bois, William Briskett, brought word to the factor of the Lac Seul post that he had seen a waterlogged canoe near where Canoe River enters Lac Seul, five miles east of the post.

Stanley Westly, another Indian, who had seen Quinn and Stebbings on one of the lakes to the north of here, went with Briskett and located the canoe, full of water and beached on the shore.

A water soaked dunnage bag, two hats and a floating paddle gave mute evidence of the tragedy.

Little is known of the pair as to what papers they wrote for, their relatives or their friends in Canada, most of their papers being lost with them.

Raising Fund for "Old Ironsides"

The Chicago Daily Journal is sponsoring an "Old Ironsides" patriotic subscription by which school children can contribute to the fund to restore America's oldest battleship, now lying in the water in the Boston navy yard badly in need of repairs.

6,000 More Circulation in Thirteen Weeks

That's what I got for The Clarksburg, W. Va., Telegram.

I did not employ a contest—make anyone mad—impose on readers' good nature, or use any tricks. I merely sold The Telegram to more than 6,000 new subscribers in Clarksburg and contiguous territory and the publisher, Col. Guy T. Viskniskki is holding the circulation with a rattling good paper.

All the contests and schemes in the world can't get and hold as much circulation as a good paper and a clean, systematic canvass. It's an unbeatable combination. I can help you improve your paper if it needs that and get you all the business you want.

I survey the holding power of papers I work for and recommend such changes in their editorial contents as may be necessary to retain new business.

If you want more circulation I will get it quietly, efficiently, and at low cost.

Write or wire for full particulars of the work I have done for other papers and what I can do for you.

F. J. Marks Circulation Service
2524 East 73rd Street
Cleveland, O.

Good Reporters make Good Newspapers

THE backbone of the newspaper is its news gathering staff. Lacking intelligently-collected and well-written news, no paper can be successful. Every successful newspaper has based its accomplishments primarily on the efforts of its reporters.

THE COPY DESK MAKES GOOD REPORTERS

THE COPY DESK, the keystone of the City Room, is the preceptor of the editorial staff. The Copy Desk cannot create good stories, but by its work of editing and by its surveillance of the work of the staff, can instil into the reporters its best conceptions of news gathering and writing. Thus the Copy Desk is likewise an all-important factor in the making of a paper.

NEW YORK COPY DESK TRAINING

NEWSPAPER MEN everywhere who wish to avail themselves of Copy Desk Training by the methods in use on the best New York newspapers will be interested in the new Home Study Course of the Newspaper Institute. This training in practical newspaper writing and editing in the New York manner was written by a newspaper man of 20 years' experience in the metropolitan field. A dozen New York staff writers contribute lectures on various phases of newspaper work.

It is the most complete and most practical training in newspaper work available by any method of instruction outside a New York editorial office, and contains many inside stories of how big news stories of recent years were handled. The Course is sold on reasonable terms. For catalog and special arrangements for members of the press, address,

Editorial Department
Newspaper Institute of America
25 West 45th Street New York

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Staadeker, Former Editor, Opens Agency in Cincinnati—Arnold Resigns from Frank Seaman, Inc.—Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen Appoint Lemmon

M. L. STAADEKER, formerly managing editor of the Frankfort (Ky.) State Journal, has opened a new advertising agency under his own name Cincinnati. Mr. Staadeker recently handled the publicity and advertising campaign of "Take-A-Picture Week" in Cincinnati and surrounding territory. He has been in agency work for several years.

Before engaging in advertising he served in an editorial capacity on the Indianapolis News, the Louisville Courier-Journal, the Cincinnati Times-Star and the Cincinnati Post.

F. A. Arnold, who has completed nine years of continuous service as an officer and director of Frank Seaman, Inc., New York advertising agency, has resigned, effective June 1. After a short vacation, Mr. Arnold plans to reenter the advertising field and will announce his new connection at a later date.

John H. Lemmon has joined the staff of Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Youngreen, Inc., advertising agency of Milwaukee. Mr. Lemmon was formerly with Henri, Hurst & McDonald of Chicago and Power, Alexander & Jenkins of Detroit.

Roy R. Boomer, former Spokane theater man, has established a general advertising agency with offices in the Exchange National Bank, Spokane, Wash.

R. T. Kuhn, formerly of the Botsford-Constantine Company and the Honig-Cooper Company, has opened an advertising agency in Portland. He was formerly an instructor in the school of journalism at the University of Oregon.

Hereafter Gayner, Inc., advertising and marketing counsel of Los Angeles, will be known as Gayner-Harris, Inc., following the acquisition of a partnership in the organization by Milton F. Harris, formerly advertising manager for Armour & Co., Chicago. Walter Gayner, president and founder of Gayner, Inc., continues as president, while Mr. Harris becomes vice-president.

Frank Presbrey, president of the Frank Presbrey Company, has written an article called "The History of Advertising," which will appear in the July issue of World's Work. The article will state that the first thing approaching a newspaper advertisement was printed in a German newsbook in 1591, and announced a treatise upon a strange plant that had suddenly appeared in Germany. Mr. Presbrey calls Benjamin Franklin the first American advertiser.

John L. De Brueys, former advertising manager of the National Bond and Mortgage Corporation, Houston, Tex., has joined the staff of the Rein Company, Houston advertising agency.

C. E. Brinkerhoff, Chicago advertising agency, announced the opening of a Cleveland office June 1. It will be in charge of M. M. Wanderman. This agency has taken over the accounts of the Scher-Hirst Company, Continental Jewelry Company, John MacGregor, Alexander Hill, and the Meredith Corporation, all of Cleveland.

H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, the J. Walter Thompson Company, Barrows & Richardson, Kelly-Smith Company, Conde Nast Publishing Company and the Lay Company have leased space in the new Eastern Offices Building, 43rd street and Lexington avenue, New York. The building will be ready for occupancy in the spring of 1927.

The Roche Advertising Company, 310 South Michigan avenue, Chicago, with a capital of $50,000, has been granted a charter by the Illinois secretary of state. The incorporators are John P. Roche, E. H. Roche, and Miner F. Williamson.

"The Land of the Golden Fleece" is the title of an attractive brochure descriptive of Australia, its resources, allurements, and products, just issued by the Catts-Patterson Company, Ltd., of Sydney and Melbourne. Statistics, text and pictures are combined attractively. The book is printed in sepia and gold on india tint plate paper and includes an announcement that George Patterson of the firm will shortly visit the United States.

AD TIPS

orrance, Sullivan & Co., Inc., 130 West l street, New York. Making contracts for ted States Shipping Board Fleet Corpora- advertising in magazines, newspapers and le papers for the U. S. Government budget starting July 1st, 1926.

vans, Kip & Hackett, Inc., 247 Park ave- New York. Placing account of B. Pres- Company, New York, drugs, and the mes Radio Engineering Company, Staten nd, N. Y.

harles W. Hoyt Company, Inc., 115 West street, New York. Now handling account Dentinol & Pyorrhocide Company, New c, manufacturers "Pyorrhocide" tooth powzard Company, Times Building, Seattle, shington. Will handle account of the thwestern Fruit Exchange, Wenatchee, hington, to advertise "Skookum" brand pples.

rter, Eastman, Byrne Company, 22 West roe street, Chicago. Has secured account e Madison Basketcraft Company, Burling- Iowa, manufacturers "Fireside" baskets.

ed M. Randall Company, Book Building, oit, Michigan. Sending out orders and racts to newspapers for the Edgar A. ray Company, Detroit, Michigan. Also, rs and contracts to motor papers and week- for the Morse Chain Company, Ithaca, York.

L. Staadeker, 65 Pickering Building, Cin- ati. Placing account of the Robert Hagen ring Company, Cincinnati, and the Laxa- Laboratories, Cincinnati, neral Electric Company. Planning a news- r campaign, all copy to be placed direct.

enther-Law, Inc., 131 Cedar street, New . Placing account of Goddard & Company, nff-Metzger, Inc., 95 Madison avenue, York. Placing account of the Consoli- l Cigar Company.

Hotel Roosevelt, New York. Placing copy for a newspaper campaign direct.

H. K. McCann Company, 295 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for the Berkshire Hills Conference.

McLain-Simpers Organization, 9 East 45th street, New York. Handling account of the Bedford Springs Hotel.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 244 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account of the United States Rubber Company.

Wood, Putnam & Wood Co., 105 West 40th street, New York. Planning a newspaper campaign for the Young & Griffin Coffee Company, advertising their Franco American coffee.

N. Y. Theta Sigma Phi Alumnae Meet

The New York alumnæ of Theta Sigma Phi, honorary journalistic sorority, held a meeting and program May 27 for the benefit of the Women's National Journalistic Register, an employment bureau sponsored by them. The meeting was addressed by Miss Ida A. R. Wylie, English author, and by Miss Dorothy Ducas, Pulitzer prize winner.

Four Win Medill Scholarships

Two women and two men have been awarded the scholarships given annually by the Joseph Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University, Chicago. The winners are Miss Ruby Gerhardt, who will return to the university next fall for her master's degree; Philip Jordan, editor of the Daily Northwestern, next year; John D. Allen, a graduate of the University of Chicago, and Miss Louise Comstock.

The "SPEEDMAT" HAS GONE OVER BIG

First announced by circular letter April 21st already more than 200 newspapers have tried out "SPEEDMATS" and have unhesitatingly pronounced them to be the best dry mats ever used in their plants.

The newspaper plants of the smaller cities (those operating from one to four presses) may now secure at low cost a dry mat which, except for a large number of plates, is in every way equal to the now famous "METROPOLITAN" dry mat, which has never once failed in a metropolitan plant.

In that it requires little or no packing except on very open pages, does not have to be oiled or chalked, and has a beautiful printing surface, the Wood "SPEEDMAT" is the speediest and most reliable dry mat ever made.

Whether now using German, American, English, or transplanted German dry mats, a trial of the "SPEEDMAT" will convince you of its superiority.

Order a case or two and rid your plant of dry mat trouble.

Price 15 cents at Mill

WOOD FLONG CORPORATION

501 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

AMERICAN COURTS INSISTING ON HIGH STANDARD OF ADVERTISING METHODS

Vogue Magazine Granted Injunction Against Vogue Hat Company—Judge Raps "International Trade-Mark Fraud" —Decision Being Cited by Other Courts

INSISTENCE by the courts on a high standard of advertising was demonstrated recently in a decision handed down by Chief Judge Denison of the Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, granting an injunction to Vogue magazine against the Vogue Hat Company of New York, and the Thompson-Hudson Company, Toledo department store, restraining them from selling millinery under the name "Vogue Hats," and from representing that the hats are made by the publisher of the magazine.

The defendant, Vogue Hat Company, was selling women's hats marked with a label infringing the V-Girl trade-mark of the Vogue Company, and was labeling its product "Vogue Hats." The Court of Appeals held that in thus labeling its hats the Vogue Hat Company was guilty of intentional fraud.

The court held further that this fraud permeated the whole plan under which the Vogue Hat Company built up its business and that because of its long continued attempt to mislead the public into the belief that these so-called Vogue Hats were made by or connected with the publisher of the magazine, Vogue, the court should grant the following relief:

That, if the Vogue Hat Company marks its hats as "Vogue Hats," it must in addition, mark them with the name of a manufacturer whose name does not contain the word "Vogue," and if it wishes to preserve its corporate name, "Vogue Hat Company," it must not, under any circumstances, mark its hats "Vogue Hats."

Similarly, the relief granted by the court forbids the sale of hats marked "Vogue Hats," by the retailer defendant, unless, in addition, they are marked with the name of a maker which does not contain the word "Vogue," and if the maker is given as "Vogue Hat Company," such hats may not be marked "Vogue Hats."

The Circuit Court of Appeals handed down two decisions in this case, the first one several months ago, the final decision having just been rendered.

Already the case has attracted considerable attention among lawyers, and the decisions have been repeatedly cited by other courts, because of the fact that it lays down the principle that unfair competition is not limited merely to imitation by one competitor of the trade-marks of another, but may be applied to any situation that brings about a confusion of the public as to the identity of the maker of goods. The court held that the hat manufacturer was deliberately capitalizing on the popularity and reputation of Vogue magazine, and by a confusing use of the word "Vogue" was using that reputation to sell his goods.

Attorneys for Vogue Magazine, Harry D. Nims and Macdonald DeWitt, of New York, point out that the case is of further interest because it is an illustration of the high standards of advertising upon which the courts are now insisting.

On the subject of unfair competition, Chief Judge Denison, writing the opinion of the court, said:

"We come, then, to what is called 'unfair competition'. This is nothing but a convenient name for the doctrine that no one should be allowed to sell his goods as those of another. This rule is usually invoked when there is an actual market competition, between the analagous products of the plaintiff and the defendants and so it has been natural enough to speak of it as the doctrine of unfair competition; but there is no fetish in the word 'competition'. The invocation of equity rests more vitally upon unfairness. If B. represents that his goods are made by A, and if the damage therefrom to A, is to be seen, we are aware of no consideration which makes it controlling whether this damage to A will come from market competition with some article which A is then manufacturing or will come in some other way. The injury to A is present, and the fraud upon the consumer is present; nothing else is needed."

A. P. LUNCH ON NOYES' YACHT

Executive Committee and Officials Entertained Aboard Asthore

Members of the Associated Press executive committee and officers were luncheon guests of Frank B. Noyes, A. P. president and publisher of the Washington Star, on board Mr. Noyes' yacht, the Asthore, in New York harbor this week. The executive committee met in New York May 25 and 26, and adjourned for the luncheon on Wednesday.

Those invited were E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; Clark Howell, Atlanta Constitution; Benjamin H. Anthony, New Bedford Standard; Elbert H. Baker, Cleveland Plain-Dealer; Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin; Kent Cooper, general manager; Jackson S. Elliott, assistant general manager, and Milton Garges, traffic superintendent.

Executive Changes in Olympia

Fred B. Judges, editor of the Olympia (Wash.) Evening Recorder and Morning Olympian, and F. E. Mayol, managing editor for both publications have been succeeded by Earl McCallum, as general manager, and J. L. Burton Lewis, as editor.

CLEVENGER NAMED PRESIDENT

Perth Amboy News Publisher Head New Jersey A. P. Members

J. Logan Clevenger, publisher of th Perth Amboy News, was this wee elected president of the New Jerse members of the Associated Press, whic held its annual meeting in Newark.

F. E. Croasdale, Atlantic City Pres Union, was named secretary and Willia B. Bryant, Paterson Press-Guardian w re-elected to represent the New Jerse members of the eastern division's advisor board.

The association adopted a resolutic congratulating the management of th A. P. on the recent broadening of th news report and commended the work Kent Cooper, general manager; Edwa S. McKernon, eastern division superi tendent, and David Fernsler, Newa correspondent.

Farewell Dinner for DeVries

Herman DeVries, music critic of t Chicago Evening American, and M DeVries, were honor guests at a dinn attended by music critics of all Chica daily newspapers, on the eve of th sailing for Europe May 30. Glenn D lard Gunn, critic of the Chicago Her and Examiner, acted as toastmast Other guests included Edward Moo Chicago Tribune; Maurice Rosenfe Daily News; Eugene Stinson, Da Journal, and Karlton Hackett, Even Post.

Ingersoll Approves Capper-Kelly Bi

Approval of the Capper-Kelly bill, n before Congress, which allows manuf turers a voice in fixing retail prices, w expressed by William H. Ingersoll of t Ingersoll Watch Company, addressing luncheon of the League of Advertisi Women in New York this week. Oppo ents of the bill, he said, claim they co-erced by the manufacturers' advert ing to handle goods against their w

"What has happened to THE FOURTH ESTATE?"

I am asked this question daily since the appearance on its editorial page of the following peculiarly worded notice:

"Midway in the preparation of this issue the publishing of THE FOURTH ESTATE passed into new hands.

"The severing of relations between Mr. Ernest F. Birmingham and this publication prompts a grateful acknowledgment of the many years during which his great ability served this field so well, and the wish that his future activities may be happily prosperous."

The notice is signed by H. M. Newman, who does not tell us who he is or by what authority he assumes to speak; and the names of the corporation, The Fourth Estate Publishing Company, with its president, secretary and treasurer, have been eliminated, contrary to the laws of the State of New York, which require a statement in each issue of the ownership of every newspaper.

The situation is a most complicated one and calls for a distinct warning to all who have continued to subscribe to THE FOURTH ESTATE and to use it as an advertising medium, under the belief that they were dealing with me or my representatives.

The fact is that the paper has been "running wild" since December, 1923. The full story of the scheme to wrest the control from me, of the methods employed thereunder, and of the changes in character and conduct of the paper itself is very interesting, and is being prepared for general dissemination.

As newspaper and advertising men generally know, I founded THE FOURTH ESTATE in 1894, and any announcement of a new control of it, insofar as it would indicate a sale by me, is inaccurate and misleading.

A so-called "operating committee," to the formation of which more than a year ago I consented through a misunderstanding, and the legality of which is in dispute, consummated a so-called sale of the newspaper, contrary to my wishes, but the necessary legal steps have been taken to have declared illegal the agreement under which the committee essayed to act, and to have it set aside.

Simultaneously, actions have been begun against the members of the committee for breach of contract and for heavy damages thereunder, and various legal actions are being instituted.

Meantime a group of my good friends are co-operating in the establishment of a new publication, THE NEWSPAPER NEWS, of which I am to be the publisher, and which will "carry on" under the same high policies which gave THE FOURTH ESTATE its reputation as "a newspaper for newspaper men" previous to the two-year period herein referred to.

Advertisements for the first issue of THE NEWSPAPER NEWS, which is scheduled for issue June 11 (my sixty-sixth birthday), will be much appreciated and given careful personal attention by me, and those who are kind enough to give this evidence of their belief in and support of the kind of newspaper I produced during those thirty years of hard work are assured of as complete a coverage of the newspaper and advertising fields as is humanly possible.

THE NEWSPAPER NEWS will be published exclusively in the interest of the members of the profession which Edmund Burke characterized as a "fourth estate" of the realm. It will not assume to represent the advertising interests, but the advertiser will naturally subscribe for and read intensively the publication which stands avowedly for newspaper advertising, to learn at first hand all he can about the newspapers that are seeking to persuade him that they are the leading advertising medium.

Phone: Columbus 5857
or Susquehanna 8440.

ERNEST F. BIRMINGHAM
1819 Broadway
(Manufacturers Trust Bldg.)
Columbus Circle NEW YORK CITY

TRADE COMMISSION HITS DECEITFUL COPY BY NEW STIPULATION RULES

If Respondents Execute Agreement to Refrain from Forbidden Advertising and Trade Practices, Prosecution Will Be Suspended

By BART CAMPBELL

WASHINGTON, May 26—A new move to prevent fake or deceptive advertising was made this week by a majority vote of the Federal Trade Commission in establishing fixed rules or stipulations involving the use of misleading brands or labels, corporate or trade names or advertising matter, all of which are condemned as unfair methods of competition.

The stipulations designated, where they involve such unfair methods, are to be accepted by the Commission and whatever proceeding may be pending against a respondent dismissed by the Commission after the respondent has executed an agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods with the further understanding should the unfair methods ever be resumed the stipulation may be used as evidence against such respondent in a further proceeding by the Commission.

Commissioners Nugent and Thompson dissented from the orders accepting the stipulations on the grounds that complaints should be issued against the respondents and the cases tried that the public might be informed of the unfair practices adopted by the respondents and their law-abiding competitors be benefited by increased trade."

These are the stipulations:

Stipulation No. 14.

"Respondent, a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery, sweaters, knitted wear and knitted merchandise and in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships and corporations also engaged in the sale of similar products, entered into the following stipulation of facts and agreement to cease and desist forever from the alleged unfair methods of competition used by it in the sale of its product.

"Respondent, engaged in the sale and distribution of knitted wear and other merchandise in commerce between and among various states of the United States, adopted the words 'Knitting' and 'Mills' as part of its corporate or trade name, which said corporate or trade name, containing the words 'Knitting' and 'Mills' it used on its letterheads, circulars and other advertising matter circulated in interstate commerce in soliciting the sale of the selling of its product, and has advertised and represented its said product as sold direct from mill to consumer; when in truth and in fact the said respondent has not owned, controlled or operated and does not own, control or operate a mill or factory manufacturing the knitted clothing sold by it.

"Respondent also advertised for sale, and sold, in commerce knitted garments called sweater shirts and described the same as "wool fleeced," when in truth and in fact the said garment contained no wool whatsoever; and the said respondent advertised for sale, and sold, in commerce certain knitted garments under the name of 'Kamel Koat'; when in truth and in fact the said garment contained no camel's hair whatsoever; respondent further represented and advertised similar sweaters under the trade name 'Fibre Silk'; when in truth and in fact said garments contained no silk whatsoever.

"Respondent agreed to cease and desist forever from the use of the words 'Knitting' and 'Mills' together or separately, as part of, or in connection with its corporate name in the sale of its product in interstate commerce, and also agreed to cease and desist from representing that its product was sold direct from mill to consumer. Said respondent further agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words 'wool fleeced' in advertising or describing garments not made of wool; and from the use of the words 'Kamel Koat' or other similar designations in the sale of garments not made from camel's hair; and from the use of the words 'Fibre Silk' or other designation containing the word 'Silk' upon any goods or garments not made of genuine silk, the product of the silk worm. Respondent further agreed that if it should ever resume or indulge in any of the practices named herein, or in any manner violate the terms of this stipulation, then in any proceeding before the Commission the facts herein stated shall be deemed to have been proved and their truth admitted by the introduction of this stipulation in evidence."

Stipulation No. 15.

"Respondent, an individual engaged in the sale and distribution of knitted clothing in interstate commerce and in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships and corporations also engaged in the sale of similar products, entered into the following stipulation of facts and agreement to cease and desist forever from the alleged unfair methods of competition used in the sale of his product.

"Respondent engaged in the sale and distribution of clothing in interstate commerce adopted as part of his trade name the words 'Knitting' and 'Mills,' which said trade name containing the words 'Knitting' and 'Mills' he used on order blanks, price lists, letterheads and other advertising matter circulated in interstate commerce in soliciting the sale of and selling his product; when in truth and in fact the aforesaid respondent does not own, control or operate a mill or factory for the manufacture of the knitted products sold by him.

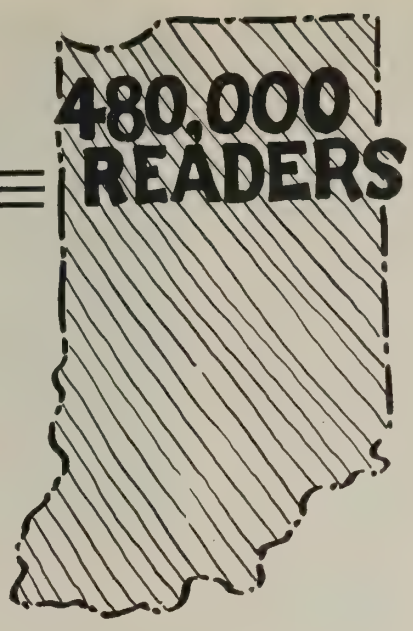
"Respondent agreed to cease and desist forever from the use of the words 'Knitting' or 'Mills' either independently or in conjunction each with the other as part of or in connection or conjunction with his trade name, and the use of the aforesaid words on his order blanks, price lists, letterheads and other advertising matter circulated in interstate commerce in soliciting the sale of and selling his product, or the use of the words 'Knitting' or 'Mills' in any other way that may have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the aforesaid respondent owned, operated or controlled a mill or factory manufacturing the knitted clothing sold by him. Respondent also agreed that if he should ever resume or indulge in any of the practices, as set forth above, the foregoing statement of facts may be used in evidence against him."

THE TELEGRAM

now has the largest paid circulation in

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.

13,000 daily
14,000 Sunday



guaranteed.

Member Audit Bureau of Circulations

Represented Nationally by

The Devine-MacQuoid Co., Inc.

New York Philadelphia Pittsburg Chicago

YOU CAN REACH A HALF-MILLION HOMES

The daily papers listed below puts you in touch with a half million prosperous homes in Indiana.

For the National Advertiser it offers an unusual opportunity. Here is a territory very easily reached, where good railroad facilities and good roads make distribution of products economically possible.

Good farms, prosperous industrials and mineral wealth add to the advantages of exploiting your product in a territory where business is good every month in the year.

Create a demand for your products in this area; the daily papers will help you in reaching the homes in the most direct method.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican	(E)	4,912	.03
††Connersville News-Examiner	(E)	4,681	.025
††Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,215	.025
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	35,247	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	28,468	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	43,365	.10
Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	15,514	.06
Huntington Press	(M&S)	4,079	.025
††Indianapolis News	(E)	128,341	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,878 (E) 13,583	21,461	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,726	.04
Marion Chronicle	(E)	9,364	.04
†Shelbyville Democrat	(E)	4,012	.025
South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,751 (E) 16,603	26,354	.07
South Bend News-Times	(S)	24,500	.07
South Bend Tribune	(S) 21,431. (E)	22,254	.06
††Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	23,442	.06

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

M. MURDOCK TO TOUR EUROPE BY AIR

Wichita Eagle Publisher, Flying Enthusiast, Reaches N. Y. by Plane —Will Cover Continental Countries in 3 Weeks

Marcellus M. Murdock, publisher of the Wichita Eagle, will tour Europe by air.

Mr. Murdock, left Wichita at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning for Chicago, the first lap in the trip to New York, where he was to sail at midnight, Friday, on the Olympic for Europe. He will be joined in New York by his son, Marsh Murdock, a student at Columbia University. The two will spend three weeks visiting and studying conditions in several of the more important European capitals.

On the first lap of the journey from Wichita to Chicago, Mr. Murdock, was piloted by E. T. Lott, operations manager for the National Air Transport. The trip to Chicago was made in one of the company's ships.

After arriving in Europe Mr. Murdock, plans to cover many points of interest in what will undoubtedly be record time, landing at Cherbourg, he will go to Paris by rail, where he will immediately take passage to London over the trans-channel airway.

From London he will fly to The Hague.

From The Hague he will have one of his longest rides to Berlin. From Berlin he expects to go to Vienna, and if plane service is available to Budapest. From Vienna he will fly to Switzerland. From Switzerland he will fly to Nice. The next point is on the northern Spanish border, it is probable that this stretch will be covered by train as air service is not thought to be available. From the border he will go to Madrid by air. This leg of the journey will offer the longest flight of the whole tour. There is no aviation service to the south or west coast of Spain from Madrid, and railway service will be used to connect with the ship for the trip home.

Victor Murdock gives brother Marcellus "the air"

The capitals and the countries named in the itinerary will be covered in less than three weeks with considerable rest and sight-seeing between flights.

Mr. Murdock, in making the European trip, at this time for the purpose of studying Europe from a newspaper standpoint. He is using the airplane route in order to save time. He is an enthusiastic flyer, and interested in air service in the Southwest. He has made a number of business trips by air and pronounces them profitable in the time saved.

He has been an enthusiastic supporter of the air programs both of Wichita and the nation at large. He was one of the first Wichita business men to use planes in the furtherance of his business. One of the first trips he made was from Wichita to Minneapolis, at that time recognized as an outstanding one for the distance covered. He has served on the Air Committee of the Wichita Chamber of Commerce and was one of 16 men who put up $1,000 each to buy the land to establish an airport in Wichita.

EASTON FREE PRESS CHANGES

Edgar H. Weller Succeeds W. T. Bassett as Managing Editor

The Easton (Pa.) Free Press announced a re-organization May 24, which put local men in charge of editing and publishing the newspaper.

Edgar H. Weller succeeded W. T. Bassett as managing editor; L. N. Wagner became director of the advertising department and John W. Mann, secretary-treasurer, became business manager.

FAST TIME BY GLOBE-TROTTE

Goldstrom, N. A. N. A. Reporter, Beat All Records on Round-World Race

John Goldstrom, former reporter the New York Evening World, is be ing all previous records so far on race-around-the-world, an enterprise f tered by the North American Newspa Alliance.

Goldstrom left New York May 19 a by May 26 had arrived in Berlin, a left there the next day for Moscow airplane. Fog delayed him at Koeni berg.

John Henry Mears, who holds t speed record as a globe-trotter, wh he was a reporter for the New Yo Sun 13 years ago, required seven da six hours, and 29 minutes to reach Ber from New York. Goldstrom's time w six days, five hours and 40 minutes.

Spanish Journalist Coming Here

Marquess de Valde Iglesias, director Madrid Epoca, is enroute to the Unit States from Spain. During a seven-d visit in this country, he expects to inte view President Coolidge, Senator Bora and J. P. Morgan.

James E. Hardenbergh Resigns

James E. Hardenbergh has resign as general manager of the New Yo City News Association, a position he h held since 1895. In accepting his resi nation, the association voted Mr. Ha denbergh a pension. W. G. Henderso succeeds him.

Pulitzer Prize to Aid Poets

The $1,000 Pulitzer prize awarded the estate of the late Amy Lowell for h book of verse "What's o'Clock" will turned over to a scholarship fund f poets who wish to travel, according an announcement made this week Columbia University.

Just the Facts about the 1257 American cities and towns where daily newspapers are published upon which all effective sales and advertising operations must be based.

Facts which cover every essential element of every known trading condition, in every market reached by the daily newspaper.

From 150 to 500 facts and sets of figures for each of the 1257 cities—thoroughly authentic data, gathered by more than 5,000 trained experts, brought strictly up to date, and getting more detailed and more complete every year.

Nothing like it anywhere — nothing so accurate, nothing so comprehensive, nothing so unbiased.

Just a Foot and a Half High

Pressed down tight, is the pile of letters asking for the 1925

EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S

Space Buyers' Guide

received after the last copy had been disposed of. These requests came from firm members, space buyers, account executives and research directors in leading Advertising Agencies handling National Newspaper advertising, and from national advertising executives in charge of sales promotion and advertising, many of whom found that the copies received with their subscriptions did not suffice, or had become worn out.

THIS SHOWS THREE THINGS:

1. How solidly Editor & Publisher's Space Buyers' Guide has taken hold of advertisers as their one indispensable tool.
2. That more copies must be printed this year than last, assuring a wider distribution.
3. That if you want to be sure of your copy (or copies), the earlier you place the required subscription or renewal orders, the better.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Suite 1700, Times Building, New York, N. Y.

Just the Medium for the daily newspaper publisher to use in reaching the men who will liberally use space in those papers which convince them that they can be used to best advantage in covering their share of this tremendously responsive, nation-wide, accurately charted market.

A book so crowded with data so essential will be so constantly thumbed by its owners as to become a permanent, all-year-through reference guide, of lasting value, no less to the seller than to the buyer of space.

Interested?

Let us tell you more about it

No obligations!

BRITISH GAZETTE IN "SWAN SONG" TELLS HOW IT MET STRIKE CRISIS

All Type Set By Daily Express Official After First Day—Other Papers' Foremen Directed Morning Post Editorial Men at Presses

DETAILS have just been received of the organization and conduct of the British Gazette, the daily instituted by the Government to take the place of the regular newspapers suspended by the recent general strike. The paper told its story as a feature of its last issue on May 13, describing the enterprise as "one of the most signal exploits and adventures in the annals of English journalism which defeated the attempt to keep the country in the dark during a formidable crisis in its affairs and vindicated the press against a new conspiracy to muzzle its freedom." The story goes on:

It was impossible to acquiesce in the prospect of a nation, exposed to the interruption of the whole of its social and industrial economy, and at the same time deprived of its news, and of the one medium through which public opinion might find and express itself.

But what was to be done?

The Government were alert to the emergency, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer called to the Treasury on Monday the representatives of the Newspaper Proprietors' Association (representing the London Press) and of the Newspaper Society (representing the Provincial Press). But he obtained from the conference little comfort or encouragement. Its members were unable to agree to the suggestion that they should co-operate in the production of a common emergency news-sheet, and the conference broke up indecisively.

At this juncture, the editor of the Morning Post wrote to J. C. C. Davidson, M. P., the Deputy Civil Commissioner for London, saying that, with the co-operation of the Government, he would undertake to produce a four-page bulletin paper, to the number of 100,000 daily, and suggesting that if there were any difficulty, the Government should commandeer some big newspaper office (that of the Morning Post or another) and order so many papers to be produced.

Meanwhile, the work of producing what promised to be the last issue of the Morning Post for an indefinite time proceeded. An emergency edition was sent out at 9 o'clock, and, as the mechanical staff did not strike until they had completed the regular shift, it was possible to produce at midnight a 20-page edition of the Morning Post, though its distribution was limited by the cessation of the train services.

At a hastily-snatched dinner on the Monday evening, the editor, the general manager and the managing editor agreed that the Morning Post must somehow play its part in the crisis that was approaching, and they drafted a formal memorandum for presentation to the Government, outlining a definite scheme of co-operation with the Government. It offered, if adequate protection were given, to print at first 100,000 copies of a newssheet a night, and to raise the output to 400,000 copies by the end of the week. It placed the staff of the Morning Post at the service of the Government, to work under its direction and authority.

Late that night important visitors to the editor were announced; and into the editorial room marched the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Samuel Hoare, J. C. C. Davidson, and a train of departmental officials. They had come to act on the suggestion of the editor's letter; to commandeer on behalf of His Majesty's Government the Morning Post; and to convert it off hand into a Government news sheet—the British Gazette. Sir Malcolm Fraser was put in charge as the direct representative of the Government.

The step about to be taken was a momentous one for the Morning Post and hardly less so for the Government who never before had taken responsibility for the production of a daily newspaper. In more than 150 years the Morning Post had but once intermitted its daily issue, and now not only were all its resources to be handed over to others, but its very name was to disappear.

Only the extreme gravity of the occasion could have justified the innovation on the one side, and the self-effacement on the other.

The act of taking over having been confirmed by a Cabinet Minute, signed by Winston Churchill, the conference in the editor's room, with the technical hands of the paper present to advise, was continued until three o'clock in the morning.

What was the utmost that could be done with the plant and resources available? For the answer to that question everything depended on the attitude of the men employed on the mechanical side, especially the compositors.

At four o'clock in the morning on the fateful Tuesday, the general manager called a meeting of the machine-room overseers, and put the case to them. All but the foundry overseer agreed to carry on.

Now came the crucial test—what would the staff of the composing room do? The Printer—A. Turner, who was a tower of strength, a man of infinite resource and untiring energy all through the unexampled ordeal—was confident they would stand by the paper. Summoned by telegram and brought in by motor-car at an hour earlier than usual, they were assembled in the composing room and addressed by the editor and the general manager. They responded heartily to the appeal to stand by the paper which many of them had served so long; but they felt it to be their duty to report to their union, the London Society of Compositors.

Pending instructions, they started the setting of the first number of the British Gazette, and had got up five columns of matter when, at five o'clock, their representative came back to say that they were forbidden to touch the work.

There was nothing more to be said, and it seemed doubtful whether there was anything more to be done; for the production of a newspaper without anyone to set the type is impossible.

When the last men had gone, the iron doors of the composing room were shut with a clang, and—the work went on.

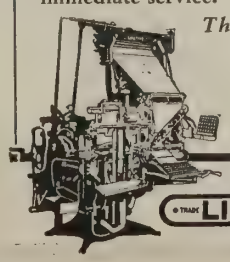
For measures had already been taken to meet the emergency which had arisen.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer had rung up Lord Beaverbrook to ask what help he could give; and Lord Beaverbrook responded by lending for the service of the British Gazette the one man without whom it is not too much to say the situation could not have been saved. This was Sydney W. H. Long, the night superintendent of the Daily Express—a man of great experience and rare skill on the technical side of the printing. After working for years as a linotype operator, he had become master-printer and then night superintendent of Lord Beaverbrook's paper. He was also a stout trade unionist and had played a leading part in getting for the Compositors' Union their present charter. It was in his hands alone that the setting of the British Gazette depended. But five columns of the 14 in the first number were set. The rest Mr. Long did with his own hands, except for the little brought in from the outside by the Stationery Office.

Of the readers, three remained staunch—R. Harris, the head-reader, P. J. Greene and F. Moody.

With Mr. Long, came Mr. Evans, head machine-room overseer, and Mr. Trotter, chief mechanical engineer of the Daily Express. By the courtesy of the directors, Alfred Hawkins, chief stereotyper of the Daily Mail, was provided for the foundry a little later.

In the machine room, where the great presses operate, there was left of the Morning Post staff only Mr. Holmes, works manager, and Mr. Boyd, machine-room overseer of the Morning Post, but they were reinforced by Mr. Thompson, chief engineer of the Morning Post, Mr. Norris, chief electrician, and Mr. Palmer, linotype mechanic.



But three or four men, however expert, cannot run two rotary presses. Crews for each machine are required, to handle the paper reels, to oil and tend the machinery, to clothe the cylinders with the stereo-plates, and to take away

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.
PHILADELPHIA
Producers of
SPARTAN TYPE METAL
Since 1866
LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE COMBINATION
Stocks in Principal Cities

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?
The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.
If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.
NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

There's no trick to classified success—but there is a science!
THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

"Second Love"
by MALCOLM DUART
The year's serial sensation—a story of married life and the modern free-thinking girl—written and edited for newspaper use, with superb photographic illustrations.
Write or telegraph to
EUGENE MacLEAN
Office and Production Plant
827 Folsom Street
San Francisco, California

From the Linotype Mailbag
Small ones as well as big ones
"Surely thank you for taking care of my very small orders of late, particularly the liner ordered by telegram. Telegram was issued from this office at 1:30 P.M. and we received the liner the following morning at eight bells, saving the trimming of slugs for three lengthy reports.
"Realize these minor orders are more of a detriment to you than benefit, and surely appreciated the immediate service."
The Colon Express
Colon, Mich.

have you been following the remarkable growth of the Detroit Times

Use the COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.
Member A. B. C.
URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

printed papers as they pour from the flies.

There was some volunteer labor available, all of it inexpert, but it was thought better on this critical occasion to depend on members of the Morning Post household; and so the editorial staff, most of which was out of commission in dealing with so small a paper, clothed itself in dungarees, and marched down to the machine-room, to be initiated into its job.

Such a sight was never seen before. Leader-writers, art and music critics, reporters, sub-editors, financial experts —every able-bodied man, of whatever rank or station, was recruited for the occasion, and all responded to the call with "a frolic welcome."

The machines were late in starting. There was an accident in the foundry. A mold was broken; it took nearly two hours to clear away the splashed metal so that the autoplate would work again.

It was nearly midnight when the last plate had been locked on the cylinder, and the signal to start was given. It was a night of "toil and ineffable weariness" for all engaged—a night full of anxieties and some disappointments, as might be expected with what was after all but a brilliant improvisation.

But the end was achieved. By six o'clock in the morning 230,000 copies of the first number of the British Gazette had been produced, and largely distributed.

The first supplies were sent to the aeroplane stations to be conveyed to the provinces, and the remainder of the edition was despatched by motor-van or car.

On Wednesday morning the British Gazette was a newspaper in being.

On the first night it had been necessary to leave the two inside pages of the four-page sheet a blank. On the next night, Wednesday, all four were filled with news, and the amount of the issue was more than doubled. Indeed the total print increased rapidly in geometrical progression, until, at the end of a week, no fewer than two million copies of the British Gazette were being printed and distributed all over the country.

To produce this result a complete reorganization of the office had to be undertaken.

The Government had placed editorial direction in the hands of Sir Malcolm Fraser; the control, on behalf of H. M. Stationery Office, in those of W. R. Codling; and the work of distribution was undertaken by Mr. Kimpton, of Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son. Admiral Sir Reginald Hall was called in to take charge of personnel. Paper supplies were committed to E. Bowater, and ink supplies to G. W. Dane.

A new telephone system was installed as in the twinkling of an eye, and arrangements were made for feeding the multitudinous staff which rapidly grew up for transporting many workers to and from their homes, and for sleeping others on the premises.

The protection of the building also became a primary necessity. Its approaches were guarded by Metropolitan police and special constables, and admission to the building could only be obtained on official pass. The building was like a beleaguered fortress.

The work on the production of the paper began at 10 o'clock in the morning —only an hour or two after the printing of it had been suspended.

Owing to the fact that there was only one man operating the linotype, a very early start was essential. Those of the editorial staff who were not employed on editing or sub-editing took turns as copy-holders in the reading-room, where the chief reader and two of his colleagues had stood by, or in the composing room, pulling proofs, or driving cars, or even acting as messengers.

To understand the strain under which the British Gazette was produced in its early days, it is only necessary to realize that many of the key-men worked, sleeping in snatches, for 72 hours on end; and that a number of these never left the building at all. Without such devotion to their task the British Gazette would never have been possible.

Now that the end of the strike has come, and the need for a Government news-sheet is over—now that the organization so hurriedly improvised, is working at its highest efficiency—the elaborate machine, so painfully and laboriously constructed and adjusted, has to be scrapped.

That is the irony of the situation.

But the heroic task attempted has been achieved. The situation, desperate though it seemed, has been saved. The most formidable and insidious attempt that has yet been made to cripple the freedom of the press and to withhold essential news from the public has been frustrated.

The British Gazette may have had a short life; but it has fulfilled the purpose of living.

It becomes a memory; but it remains a monument.

The circulation of the British Gazette by days follows:

May 5	232,000
May 6	507,000
May 7	655,000
May 8	836,000
May 10	1,127,600
May 11	1,801,400
May 12	2,209,000

A. P. CORRESPONDENTS MAY GET BY-LINES

Co-operative News Gathering Body Changing Policy of Anonymity to Meet Demand of Newspaper Publishers

Associated Press correspondents may soon be allowed to attach their by-lines to important dispatches.

The trend in this direction was evidenced this week, when many A. P. member newspapers published an introductory note over a story on the Ex-Kaiser dated from Doorn, Holland, stating it was written by Elmer Roberts. Roberts, now chief of the Paris A. P. bureau, was head of the Berlin bureau from 1902 to 1911 and came into intimate contact with the Kaiser during that period.

Jackson S. Elliott, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, explained the new policy to EDITOR & PUBLISHER as a waiving of anonymity on special occasions. He said the innovation, which would eventually result in use of by-lines over important dispatches, had been brought about because of a real demand on the part of newspaper publishers. The publishers, he pointed out, always welcomed opportunities for telling in their newspapers about the personal exploits of newsgatherers.

At present notes to editors are frequently sent out with important dispatches, telling who wrote them. Editors are permitted to publish these notes if they please.

GIFT TO HARDING MEMORIAL

Associated Press Presents Last Stickful of Type to Marion, O.

The last stickful of type set by President Harding in the office of the Fairbanks (Alaska) News Miner has been presented by the Associated Press to the Harding Memorial Association, Marion, O.

The type was given to the Associated Press by the late W. F. Thompson, publisher of the News-Miner. Mr. Thompson died Jan. 4, this year. Major O. M. Baldinger accepted the A. P.'s gift, and notified the association it had been placed in the Harding museum in Marion.

Iola Register in New Home

The Iola (Kans.) Register has just moved into a new newspaper home, fireproof building, 50 by 100 feet, of brick and stone finish. Charles F. Scott bought the paper in 1882 when Iola was a village and so has published the paper for 44 years.

The FALL RIVER (MASS.) HERALD

ANNOUNCES
the appointment as national advertising representatives in Chicago—New York Boston—Effective May 1st, 1926
of the

CHAS. H. EDDY COMPANY

Park Lexington Bldg. New York — Wrigley Bldg. Chicago — Old South Bldg. Boston

Fall River has an industrial pay-roll of over $30,000,000 per year. It is the greatest textile center in the world. It is a city of home owners and home lovers. You can thoroughly cover this great market at one cost by using the dominant evening paper—

The FALL RIVER HERALD

17,500 Daily Average

ROSS F. WALKER, Publisher

A SINGLE ADVERTISING APPROPRIATION

Will cover the two publications that reach those who control the national advertising of the United States and Great Britain.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
New York
and
ADVERTISING WORLD
London, Eng.

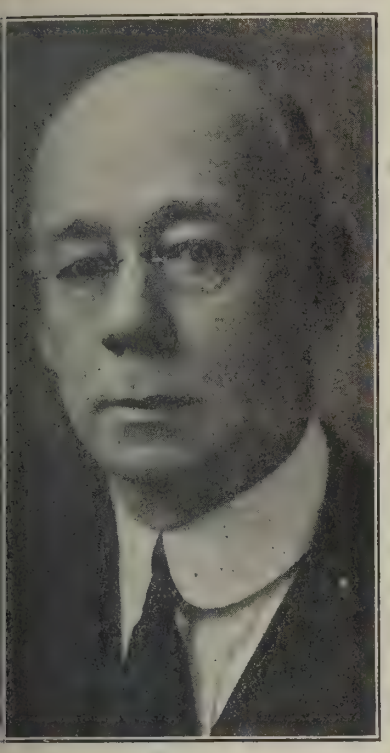
have entered into an agreement in respect to editorial and advertising representation in their respective fields and thereby afford a single source of information and service for those interested in international marketing and advertising.

Combination Advertising Rates for 12 Insertion Contract

Full Page	$280.00 per insertion
Half Page	145.00 per insertion
Quarter Page	82.50 per insertion

You are cordially invited to communicate with EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Suite 1700 Times Building, New York, for further details of circulation, editorial policy and mechanical requirements of ADVERTISING WORLD. This office can be of great assistance to manufacturers who desire information in regard to marketing conditions of Great Britain. Publishers of leading American newspapers will also avail themselves of this opportunity to deliver their messages to the largest advertisers of Great Britain, many of whom are keenly interested in the markets of America.

Editor & Publisher
1700 Times Building
Broadway at 42d St.
New York, N. Y.
Telephones:
Bryan 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056
Cable Address: EDPUB, NEW YORK



Advertising World
14 King Street
Covent Garden, W. C. 2
London, England
Telephone: Gerrard 7615
Cable Address:
ECOPUBLISH, RAND, LONDON

OME G. BROWN DIES IN MINNEAPOLIS

ed Attorney Was Publisher of Minneapolis Tribune from 1919 to 1921—Won Praise of Taft For Work Against Judicial Recall ome G. Brown, 63, publisher of the neapolis Tribune from 1919 to 1921 prominent attorney, died in Minnelis, May 22.

Ir. Brown became head of the Tribune December, 1919, succeeding C. George ogness, who had directed the paper general manager for a year following the death of W. J. Murphy, for a arter-century owner of the paper. Mr. own had been Mr. Murphy's attorney ring all that period.

Rome G. Brown

Mr. Brown was author of a series articles "Some Points on the Law of Press," printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER in 1922.

He was born in Montpelier, Vt., June 1862. He was graduated from Harrd in 1884, magna cum laude, and three rs later was admitted to the Vermont r. He immediately went to Minneolis, and later became counsel for rious industrial corporations of Minnota. In 1911 he was chairman of the nnesota State Board of Commissioners Uniform State Laws and in 1913-14 s vice-president of the National Conence of Commissioners on Uniform ate Laws.

From 1906 to 1909, Mr. Brown was member of the executive committee the American Bar Association, and m 1912 to 1919 chairman of the asiation's committee opposed to judicial all. For his work against judicial all he was praised by Chief Justice ft.

Mr. Brown was president of the Minnesota State Bar Association in 1906 and 1907, and president of the Associated Harvard Clubs of the United States in the same years. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and of several clubs, including the Harvard Clubs of New York and Boston.

Charles Nichols Webb Dies

Charles Nichols Webb, 37, for two years market editor of the Duluth (Minn.) News Tribune died at a Duluth hospital May 23, following an operation. He was the author of several books of poetry, and at the time of his death was working on a novel. His poetry and articles were published in various nationally known magazines. He was a veteran of the World War and unmarried. He began his newspaper career on the Lancaster (Wis.) Grant County Herald, following graduation from the University of Wisconsin in 1912, and worked on many Wisconsin and Minnesota papers.

St. Louis Writer Dies

Antoine R. Rivet, 74, a newspaper man for 52 years, died in St. Louis, on May 23, and was buried there May 26. A native of St. Louis, Mr. Rivet began on the old St. Louis Times in 1874, then went to the Missouri Republican, later the St. Louis Republic. For the last 34 years he had been with the Globe-Democrat, part of the time as financial and commercial editor.

Girl Reporter Killed

Miss Kathleen Fairbank, 22, city court reporter and feature writer for the Buffalo Times, was killed in an automobile accident near Lockport, N. Y., May 21. With two other persons Miss Fairbank was pinned beneath the wreckage when the car left the road and was burned to death before her release could be effected. Miss Fairbank had been in newspaper work five years.

Obituary

HENRY WILLIAM STOY, 73, editor of the Guthrie Center (Ia.) Times for 40 years died May 17 at his home. He was a native of Washington county, Pennsylvania and had been in the newspaper business 60 years.

ERNEST WHITWORTH, 50, a printer for the Seattle Times for 27 years, died May 4, at his home.

JOHN L. MORRISON, 64, publisher of the Duluth Rip-Saw, died in Superior, Wis., May 18.

MRS. W. L. ROBERTSON, wife of the editor of the Fergus Falls (Minn.) Daily Journal, died May 20.

DR. FRANK EUGENE BALDWIN, 50, son of the late Eugene F. Baldwin, founder of the Peoria (Ill.) Star died May 16 in his home in Peoria. His mother Mrs. Fannie G. Baldwin is now president of the Star Company.

JACOB A. BLUMER, 85, died at his home in Allentown, Pa., May 19. Mr. Blumer for 27 years was connected with the Allentown Chronicle News. He was a veteran of the Civil War.

ROBERT BECKER, 43, superintendent of the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post press room, died suddenly last week at the Post Graduate Hospital in New York where he had been undergoing treatment for heart disease. He had been with the Evening Post for 25 years.

JAMES L. MOXLEY, 45, proprietor of the Franklin Printing Company, San Antonio, and member of the Typographical Union, died in a San Antonio hospital recently. He was a native of Nashville, Tenn.

PARKER SHERWIN, 43, died May 19, at Edgecliff sanatarium near Spokane, Wash. He had been a member of the staffs of the Spokane Chronicle and the Spokesman-Review. He was also at varions times connected with the Associated Press and the Denver Post.

New England Agency Men Meet

New England council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies met in Boston, May 25. Roys S. Durstine, of Barton, Durstine and Osborne, association president, and James O'Shaughnessy, secretary, attended. John F. O'Connell, of O'Connell-Ingalls Advertising Agency, Boston, is council chairman.

N. Y. Weekly Adopts Tabloid Form

United America, a weekly paper for the Italian-Americans of New York City was changed to newspaper tabloid form last Saturday. It is printed in English. H. Stuart Morrison, formerly with the Hearst organization is managing editor.

Nebraskans' Outing July 29-31

Ole Buck, field manager for the Nebraska Press Association, has announced July 29-31 as dates for the annual outing of the association at Omaha. Four hundred members are expected to attend.

Facts editors have to know . . .

EUROPA

An Illustrated Year Book of Europe for 1926

The aim of this uniquely valuable Year Book is to provide an accurate barometer of the European situation from year to year and to serve as a convenient book of reference on all phases of European politics, life and art.

CONTRIBUTORS

Among the contributors are such internationally famous names as H. G. Wells, Edouard Herriot, Ramsay Muir, J. St. Loe Strachey, J. B. S. Haldane, Hugh Spender, Fridtjof Nansen and a hundred other distinguished writers, politicians, sociologists and economists.

CONTENTS

EUROPEAN SURVEY:
A complete review of the main activities and problems of Europe during the past year.

EUROPEAN WHO'S WHO:
The first complete directory of the main personalities in the Europe of today. With over 10,000 names.

EUROPEAN HISTORY IN THE MAKING:
A diary of the chief events of 1925 in each of the European countries.

STATISTICAL ABSTRACT:
A review of economic and social conditions, and a survey of the national defence, trade, public finance, labor conditions and education of the various European states.

A EUROPEAN BIBLIOGRAPHY:
A list of the principal books of the year concerned with the more important European problems.

Over 700 pages

Numerous Maps, Illustrations and Portraits

Index. Price $5.00

Harper & Brothers
49 East 33rd Street
New York City

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.

The net paid average for the American was 57,503.

You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.

Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS
and
Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT
To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American
are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
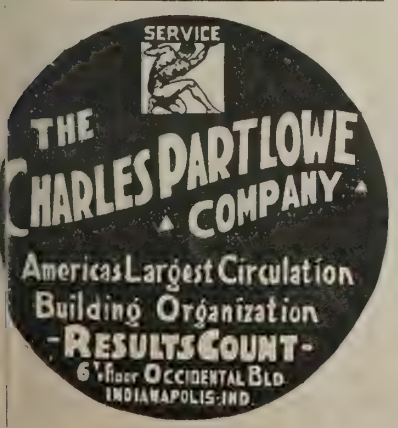
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400



Chicago Office:
F. E. CRAWFORD
Western Manager
913 Hearst Bldg.

Detroit Office:
FRANKLIN PAYNE
Representative
1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Represented Nationally by
The S. C. BECKWITH Special Agency

FUTURE PULPWOOD MAY COME FROM ASIA

Asiatic Poplar Fully Equal to Spruce for Newsprint Purposes Says Boston Expert—Has Faster Growth

By Norman J. Radder

"Don't try to solve the paper problem by planting spruce trees. There is a tree that is equal to the spruce in the quality of pulp and far superior to it in rapidity of growth. This is a poplar tree from Northeastern Asia."

This is the advice offered by Ernest H. Wilson, assistant director of the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Boston, Mass. The Arboretum, with 6,000 growing trees and shrubs which have been collected from all over the world, is a great museum of living trees. It was founded in 1868 through the generosity of James Arnold, a merchant of New Bedford, Mass. Mr. Arnold thought it would be a good thing to send plant explorers to all parts of the world to get trees and shrubs and then to plant them to see which would survive in New England and be artistically and commercially valuable.

The Asiatic poplar—a suggested pulpwood source

Mr. Wilson is known by his associates as "Chinese Wilson" because of his many expeditions into the interior of China. Other explorers for the Arboretum have sought rare and beautiful trees and shrubs in Japan, Korea, Australia, New Zealand, Chile, Argentina, and many other countries. Such shrubs as the Japanese barberry, the tree lilac, the climbing hydrangea, the evergreen bittersweet, are among the "plant immigrants" introduced to this country by the Arnold Arboretum.

Just as the chemist has improved on nature by making synthetic products far superior in intensity of coloring and economy of production to those of nature, so the Arboretum is prepared to advise New England farmers and commercial foresters how the selection of nature can be improved upon. In other words, the trees now growing in New England are not necessarily those that are best suited for the commercial needs of industry, Mr. Wilson believes.

"When the time comes that America must plant trees to take care of its wood pulp needs, the Asiatic poplar would be a better tree than the spruce because it grows faster," Mr. Wilson points out. "Not only will it grow faster, but it is remarkably free from disease and it attains great height. Specimens of this tree have been growing in the Arboretum for years. The Asiatic poplar is fully equal to the spruce in the quality of its pulp."

This is Mr. Wilson's advice if America wishes to grow her pulp supply on this continent. He has, however, an alternative suggestion, namely that the pulp supply of the world can be grown more cheaply in the tropics than in temperate latitudes.

"Every day is a growing day in the tropics," Mr. Wilson explains. "The world will undoubtedly come to rely more and more on the tropics for wood. There are shrubs in the tropics that are so quick-growing that they might best solve the pulp problem."

NEW HIGH NEWSPRINT RECORD SET THIS YEAR

1,142,068 Tons Produced by U. S. and Canadian Mills in First Four Months of 1926—Canada Ahead of U. S.

Newsprint production in the United States during April, 1926, amounted to 145,327 tons and shipments to 144,600 tons, the News Print Service Bureau, New York, has announced. Production in Canada amounted to 151,739 tons and shipments to 154,015 tons, making a total United States and Canadian production of 297,066 tons and shipments of 298,615 tons. There were also 14,347 tons of newsprint made in Newfoundland with 1,005 tons made in Mexico, so that the total North American production in April, 1926, was 312,418 tons.

The United States mills made 11 per cent more in the first four months of 1926 than in the same period of 1925 and the Canadian mills made 18 per cent more than in the first four months of 1925.

The combined production of the United States and Canadian mills in the first four months of 1926 was 14 per cent more than in the same period of 1925.

Stocks of newsprint paper at United States mills totaled 19,478 tons at the end of April and at Canadian mills 12,415 tons, making a combined total of 31,893 tons, which was equivalent to 2.7 days' average production.

United States Mills

	Production, Actual Tons Per Month	Shipments, Tons Per Month	Mill Stocks
1926—January	140,026	139,012	16,338
February	129,622	128,635	14,791
March	145,910	142,666	18,352
April	145,327	144,600	19,478
Four months.	560,885	554,913	19,478
1925—Four months.	504,643	498,693	29,446
1924—Four months.	500,464	491,708	31,868
1923—Four months.	488,076	488,386	18,876
1922—Four months.	432,962	432,022	24,874
1921—Four months.	449,810	439,467	35,106
1920—Four months.	500,014	493,710	21,673
Canadian Mills
1926—January	139,688	136,498	14,602
February	135,663	135,505	13,500
March	154,093	153,157	14,800
April	151,739	154,015	12,415
Four months.	581,183	579,175	12,415
1925—Four months.	492,945	489,365	25,163
1924—Four months.	452,322	445,738	20,978
1923—Four months.	400,993	395,632	12,357
1922—Four months.	328,434	333,545	8,726
1921—Four months.	268,212	257,627	21,632
1920—Four months.	289,439	285,563	11,484
United States and Canadian Mills
1926—January	279,714	275,510	30,940
February	265,285	264,140	28,291
March	300,003	295,823	33,152
April	297,066	298,615	31,893
Four months.	1,142,068	1,134,088	31,893
1925—Four months.	997,588	988,058	54,609
1924—Four months.	952,786	937,446	52,846
1923—Four months.	889,069	884,018	31,233
1922—Four months.	761,396	765,567	33,600
1921—Four months.	718,022	697,094	56,738
1920—Four months.	789,453	779,273	33,157

NEWSPRINT SALESMEN INSPECT MILLS

Sales Staff of International Paper Company Makes Tour of Firm's Plants—Eighth Machine at Three Rivers to Start Soon

Headed by Joseph L. Fearing, vice-president and sales manager, 11 members of the International Paper Company's sales organization spent last week inspecting the company's plants at Glens Falls, Hudson River, Fort Edward, Ticonderoga, and Three Rivers, Que. Leaving New York headquarters May 17, they returned May 23.

Joseph L. Fearing

When the party was at Three Rivers, seven of the eight newsprint machines were in operation. This mill has doubled its capacity during the last year, according to Mr. Fearing. The eighth machine will be ready for operation May 31, and then, Mr. Fearing said, the plant will represent the biggest newsprint unit in the world, having a capacity of 750 tons a day under one roof.

The sales executives were particularly interested in the bureau of tests installed at the Glens Falls plant. Into this laboratory come each day samples of the paper and pulp produced at every International mill to be tested for cleanness and proper grinding, cooking of the sulphite, and the texture and general appearance of the paper.

Mr. Fearing said that International was building a new mill on the Gatineau river near Ottawa, which would be a 500-ton unit at first, but which could easily support a considerably larger capacity. Work is being rushed and the first machine is expected to start early in January.

In addition to Mr. Fearing, those who made the trip were: R. C. Tilden, assistant sales manager; R. B. Harbison, western sales agent; R. W. Remont, Pittsburgh sales agent; J. E. A. Hussey, Boston sales agent; W. E. Mansfield, Atlanta sales agent; L. M. Davis, manager of the news division; J. Earll, New York office manager; D. H. Newell, New York; C. E. Rice, Boston; J. Allen, Pittsburgh; and F. C. Rowell, Philadelphia.

Talbott Joins Fourth Estate

Greenville Talbott, of the promotion department, New York Sun, has resigned to become associate editor of the Fourth Estate.

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday newspapers combined.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

Regional Advertising
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor

An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL and PACIFIC Editions
Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request

ADVERTISING OFFICES
Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, London, Paris, Florence, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland

"Buy What You Can Use"

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market

For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

DOMINANT!
in Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News
ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall
America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest Growing Newspaper
To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS
The only paper in St. Petersburg, Florida, whose application has been accepted by Audit Bureau of Circulations.
Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

creating Impression!

nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, 360 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago

CLINE SYSTEM
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by
FRESNO REPUBLICAN
Fresno, Calif.

Ask them about it.
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

"ADVERTISING DOESN'T SELL PAPERS"

"LET'S get one thing straight, first. Advertising sells very few papers. I have seen lines of persons standing in front of newspaper offices, eagerly waiting for the want ads. I know women who read the ads first, but the greater majority of the readers buy papers for anything but advertising. It's an intrusion on the reader and nothing else. Don't believe the bunk advertising men hand you about advertising being news—it isn't, and never will be. We are not selling advertising papers, we are selling newspapers and when advertising is permitted to crowd out news, whenever publicity gets in disguised as news, whenever news stories are suppressed to please advertisers, whenever advertising dominates a paper, raise hell about it. Let us always bear in mind that we are selling reading matter—news and features—and let us insist that the contracts we make with readers take precedence over the contracts the advertising managers make with advertisers."—J. Omansky, circulation manager, Cleveland Times, before Ohio Circulation Managers Assn.

* * *

SELLING POWER OF ADVERTISING

"ONE has but to glance over the newspapers of today to be convinced by the quantity and quality of advertising matter of its vital influence in salesmanship. Advertising is both a science and an art, and, I might say, aesthetic withal. Those qualities are the outgrowth of a demand, particularly on the part of womenkind—just as she has demanded the beautiful and colorful in dress, automobiles and furniture. The development of the color idea, or complex' as our highbrow friends are wont to call it, has been one of the most marked mental metamorphoses of recent years."—S. E. Boney, Raleigh, N. C., before North Carolina merchants convention.

* * *

NEWSPAPERS AS "UPLIFTERS"

"WHEN your car gets stuck in the mud the rear wheels spin around and your friends advise you to call for help, get a bunch of newspapers, slip them under the rear wheels, turn on the juice and see the wheels come out of the mire. Newspapers are great uplifters. When your business gets into a rut, the newspaper will help you out if you use the advertising columns."—College Corner News.

* * *

FREE PUBLICITY HURTS ADVERTISERS

"MANY crimes have been committed in the name of merchandising service cooperation but underlying all of this work is, I believe, a serious attempt to arrive at more definite conclusions. I do not mean by this that we should tolerate for a moment any exploitation of our news columns which are, and should be, an entirely separate entity. On the contrary, I should be quite as rigorous in demanding that the advertisers recognize, quite apart from any moral obligations we have toward the public on this score, that it is not good business for them."—Walter A. Strong, publisher, Chicago Daily News.

8 FURNITURE STORES POOL ADVERTISING

Chicago Groups Co-operate to Take Full-Page Newspaper Space Weekly —Buying Activities Also Merged

An interesting experiment in newspaper advertising and one that is proving successful is being carried on by eight Chicago furniture stores. Through the persistent effort of Edward Greenstone of Greenstone Furniture Company a group of eight local dealers met in March and a non-profit corporation was organized under the name of "Associated Furniture Inc." The chief purpose was to pool their advertising allowances, which would be spent in local papers, and also to band together to purchase furniture at lower prices.

The stores are widely separated and there is practically no overlapping in territory. Officers were elected, and then advertising counsel through Woolf and Gurvit Advertising Agency was sought. Later Thomas Henderson of the Chicago Evening American, was invited to attend the conferences. An advertising plan whereby they would use a page a week in the American was developed. This space has been used once each week since the first of April. Lately this space has been broadened, and this advertising proved so satisfactory that an enlarged appropriation has been made, and space is being used in the Chicago Daily News.

Two-men committees were appointed to handle the buying of each type of furniture. One committee, for instance, is in charge of buying the living room furniture, another the kitchen furniture, etc. The committees meet weekly and discuss the sales of various kinds of furniture at each store, and determine the amount of each class of furniture needed to be purchased for the different stores.

The officers include: Richard Fitzgerald of the Fitzgerald Furniture Company, president; Edward Greenstone, vice-president; David Rose of the Rose Furniture Company, secretary; Henry Marcus of the Marcus Furniture Company, treasurer.

New Press in Hartford

The Hartford (Conn.) Times recently put into operation a 12-unit heavy-design unit-type Hoe Press, with three super-speed double folders. It was announced to Times' readers and advertisers in a supplement recently issued, showing an eight-column picture of the machine, a semi-technical description and a brief history of the newspaper.

J. P. Sinnott Gets Political Job

James P. Sinnott, for three years Albany correspondent of the New York Morning Telegraph, has been appointed secretary of the New York police department by Police Commissioner McLaughlin. The salary is $7,500 a year.

Editor & Publisher

WILL KEEP "OPEN HOUSE"

During the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World Convention June 20 to 24

IN ROOM 105
BELLEVUE STRATFORD HOTEL
Philadelphia

Here we want all our friends, old and new, to come as often as they can—make it their Headquarters—help themselves freely to all the comforts and conveniences which we shall provide and meet their friends there.

Members of the staff will always be on hand to make you feel at home and to serve you in any way you may need.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Suite 1700 Times Building
Broadway at 42nd St.
New York

CLASSIFIED MEN TO HOLD "SPEECHLESS" CONVENTION IN PHILADELPHIA

E. L. Greene of B. B. B. To Be Sole Speaker at Philadelphia Meet—Round Table Discussions By Entire Membership Dominate Program

THE business of selling classified advertising will be attacked from virtually every angle at the seventh annual convention of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers to be held in Philadelphia June 22-23, during the international convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

C. W. Nax

The complete program, just issued by president Charles W. Nax, classified manager of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, provides a minimum of formal addresses, and a maximum of round table discussions under leadership of a chairman. Discussions will revolve about specific topics outlined in the printed program.

The only formal address of the convention will be given by E. L. Greene, manager of the National Better Business Bureau.

Fundamentals of salesmanship, developing voluntary business, promotion, service, credits and collections, are the four general divisions of the program, which follows:

TUESDAY, June 22—Registration; President's Address; Secretary's Report; Treasurer's Report; Appointment of Committees.

(Note: As much of the program as possible will be completed Tuesday; the remainder will be taken up Wednesday.)

FUNDAMENTALS OF SALESMANSHIP APPLIED TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING: Chairman—Walter W. Murdock, manager, classified advertising, Detroit Free Press.

I. Selecting Employees.
   A. Qualifications to look for such as personality, education, enthusiasm and aggressiveness.
   B. Value of employing men with or without: (1) experience in newspaper advertising, (2) general sales experience, (3) inexperienced.

II. Preliminary Training.
   A. Knowing the newspaper he is to represent. (1) Its history, traditions, policies, accomplishments, place in the community, etc.
   B. Knowing the advertising he is to sell: (1) General knowledge: duties of different departments of newspaper.
   (2) Specific knowledge of classified advertising: (a) rules and regulations governing such things as arrangement of classifications, make-up, type sizes and faces used, breaking of column rules, rates, cuts and censorship; (b) value of advertising to advertisers based upon such things as circulation, coverage, rates, results, etc.

III. Getting Most Out of Street Salesmen.
   (a) Methods of developing new business.
   (b) Methods of keeping salesmen enthusiastic.
   (c) Leads, checking and follow-ups.
   (d) Publicity helps, and tie-ups.
   (e) Value and use of a sales manual.
   (f) Things to avoid.

IV. Accomplishing Most Through Telephone Sales Work.
   (a) Should telephone salespeople handle: (1) only transient business or (2) both transient and contract business.
   (b) Type of girls employed, help turn-over, etc.
   (c) Successful methods of training telephone salespeople.
   (d) Methods of checking work done.
   (e) Sources of business—leads and how they are handled.
   (f) Arrangement of work by (1) districts; (2) classifications.
   (g) Keeping salespeople enthusiastic.

DEVELOPING VOLUNTARY BUSINESS: Chairman—Harry Gwaltney, manager of classified, Milwaukee Journal.

I. Fundamentals and Pre-requisites.
   (a) Circulation and coverage.
   (b) Should reader interest and volume of classified be built together? (1) Examples of success in building advertising and reader interest at the same time.

II. Promotion in Your Paper.
   (a) To tell readers what is offered in classified columns.
   (b) To familiarize them with arrangement of classifications, indexing of ads, etc.
   (c) To explain purposes for which readers may advertise.
   (d) To explain the convenience and ease with which ads may be ordered by 'phone, through agents, etc.

III. Special Inducements. (a) To advertisers.

IV. Relation of Results to Voluntary Business.
   (a) Are results the acid test of progress in building voluntary business?
   (b) Know definitely whether your advertisers are getting results. How to find out.

V. Service. (a) Doing the things opposition paper does not consider necessary.

PROMOTION: Chairman—C. L. Perkins, manager of classified, Chicago Herald-Examiner.

I. Under what conditions should promotion be directed to: (a) Readers entirely; (b) Advertisers entirely: (c) Both advertisers and readers.

II. Effect on Advertisers of Promotion Directed to Readers: (a) In your own paper; (b) Direct mail; (c) Billboards; (d) Use of Testimonials.

III. Is Promotion in Your Own Paper Sufficient or Should You Use Along With It: (a) Direct mail; (b) Billboards; (c) Should any set portion of revenue be devoted to promotion? (d) In country or small town newspapers in your territory.

IV. Definite Policies in Promotion: (a) Campaigns consisting of series of ads on a single subject.

V. Examples of outstanding accomplishments resulting from promotion.

VI. Possibilities of preparing promotion ads without.

VII. The problem of getting space in your own paper for promotion copy.

VIII. Should the following be used, and if so, when—
   (a) Novelties such as match box holders and key rings; (b) Comic strips; (c) Prizes to readers.

Address by E. L. Greene, manager, National Better Business Bureau, on "Nationalized Machinery to Prevent Misrepresentation and Fraud."

SERVICE AS APPLIED TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING: Chairman—R. E. Seiler, manager of classified, Los Angeles Examiner.

I. What is service in Classified Advertising?
   (a) Intelligent and enthusiastic application by salesman of expert knowledge of his business—classified advertising — combined with a sympathetic understanding of and interest in the advertiser's business.

II. Businesslike conduct and its importance.

III. Importance of expertly trained and competent classified people.

IV. Necessity of understanding advertiser's business.

V. Necessity of keeping salesman enthusiastic.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS: Chairman—F. L. Tate, manager of classified, Toronto Star.

I. Routine and detail of billing accounts.
   (a) What is best time for sending out invoices?
   (b) Advantages or disadvantages of sending clippings of all ads with invoices.

II. What is best method of making collections?

III. Discounts.

IV. Verification of charges or accounts.

V. Adjustments.
   (a) Should adjustments be handled by—credit department—classified department—a separated adjustment department?

VI. How can sales and credit department cooperate?

VII. Training for credit people.

OTHER SUBJECTS TO BE DISCUSSED:

1. Censorship of copy and control of agencies to prevent them from offering copy repeatedly that has been rejected.
2. Ways and means of securing out-of-town advertising.
3. Developing and handling church advertising.
4. What should be the percentage cost of the classified department?
5. Is there any particular way to guild rental classifications?
6. Should the same rates apply to all classifications?
7. How to handle birth and death notices.
8. What, if any, merit have special pages?
9. Are combination rates logical, and do they constitute price cutting?
10. Has anybody ever built voluntary business on the 4th newspaper of a metropolitan city.
11. Can we get all member newspapers to accept and use the association rules on censorship?
12. Why can't the association conduct an employment bureau or agency for the benefit of classified workers and as a help to keep good men in the classified field?
13. Are legal notices handled as classified advertising in most papers?
14. Should classified rates be higher than display rates?
15. How can we get the co-operation of our composing room?
16. Wants discussion of typography and display classified.
17. Advisability in view of reader interest, of putting such classifications as death notices in slop-over pages or near back of papers on Sundays.

Election of Officers; Reports of Committees.

Pastor-Editor Says He's Through

Every man to his trade is the advice of Rev. D. W. Ferry, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Yakima, Wash., after a week of occupancy of the editorial chair of the Yakima Republic. After he had frequently criticized the newspaper's editorial policy, he was offered the chance to be editor for a week. He accepted. In retiring Mr. Ferry said he would not seek "rest" as a newspaper editor, that few laymen know the strain under which the newspaperman works and that he was through with newspaper work.

New Knoxville Daily

Knoxville's fourth daily newspaper, the Knoxville Free Press, has made its appearance. J. P. Roddy is president and treasurer; S. H. Hodge, vice-president; and A. R. Ganoe, secretary and managing editor.

ATTENTION PUBLISHERS

PRESS FOR SALE

1 STRAIGHTLINE QUADRUPLE WEB PATENT NEWSPAPER PERFECTING PRESS; serial No. 332; with extra color cylinder and 2 extra color fountains, 9 type and 8 impression cylinders, 32-page capacity, 36 inch web, half page folder, Simplex drive self contained electric paper hoist; 4 to 32 pages, 8 cols., 12 ems, 22¼ inch column length. 1 Allis Chalmers D. C. motor, serial No. 2K3797-2, 30 H.P., 220 V., 115 Amps., 575 to 880 R.P.M.; with Sprague electric controller; push button stations; paper hoist motor, serial No. 205063E; manufactured by Goss Printing Press Co., Chicago, Illinois.

Installation of larger press necessitates selling this press. Address Harvey Habeck, Sentinel Company, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

SHAPE IDEALS THROUGH YOUR CHURCH PAGE

Learn how at the Philadelphia Convention

To sell churches on the use of advertising, you, as a representative of their business interests, should be able to tell them what to advertise and how to do it most effectively.

Advertising employed solely to fill pews and collection plates will not do either permanently.

"Church Advertising," says the Classified Manager of the Oakland Tribune, "should suggest thought, form ideals, and guide conduct for hundreds who may never enter the church of its origin, but who become associate members of that church through the bond of the press."

You are invited to participate in the church advertising sessions at Philadelphia. They will be held on June 22nd and 23rd, as a part of the international convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs.

Church Advertising Department

ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUBS,

383 Madison Avenue

New York, N. Y.

NEW ASHTABULA STAR-BEACON PLANT IS MODERN FACTORY TYPE STRUCTURE

DAYLIGHT working conditions, obtained through scientific placement of factory type windows and skylights, combined with simplicity and practicability of design, are the outstanding features of the new plant of the Ashtabula (O.) Star-Beacon which has been constructed during the past year and from which the first paper was run off the press on April 24.

C. A. Rowley

The new plant, a two-story fireproof structure with finished basement floor in which the press and stock rooms are located, is situated at 64 Park street, but one block from the center of the uptown business section. Resting on 32 brick and concrete footings, the structure has a 47-foot frontage on Park street and extends back for 140 feet.

Interior design of the building is of the "factory" type allowing for a flow of materials to the press room and from there to the mailing room. The design was adopted by C. A. Rowley, publisher, following inspection trips with the architect, C. V. Martin of Ashtabula, to a large number of the newest newspaper plants in the country. Yellow face brick is used for the interior of all mechanical departments.

The plant is equipped with a 24-page Tubular Duplex press. The transmission of press vibration and the noise of operation to other parts of the building has been eliminated through the construction of a separate press foundation and base. In addition to the new press, the press room is equipped with the latest type of new machinery, as is also the composing room. Papers are carried from the press to the mailing room on the ground floor by an automatic Cutler-Hammer conveyor attached to the press.

J. W. Quigley is business manager of the Star-Beacon, G. H. Leggett, managing editor, and C. G. Abbey, advertising manager.

The Star-Beacon, evening paper, is published by the Ashtabula Printing Company under the general management of C. A. Rowley. The son of F. A. Rowley, founder of the Lorain (O.) Times, in 1879 and the Lorain Evening Herald in 1892, Mr. Rowley became publisher of the Lorain Times-Herald, a consolidated paper which he sold in 1919 and in 1920 purchased control of the Ashtabula Printing Company. In addition to the Star-Beacon, Mr. Rowley now publishes the Geneva (O.) Free-Press and the Painesville Telegraph.

Newsprint Imports Above $11,000,000

Imports of newsprint paper into the United States during April amounted to 168,000 tons valued at $11,219,379, the Department of Commerce announced May 24. The chief imports came from the following countries: Canada, $10,575,733; Finland, $293,317; Sweden, $200,119, and Germany, $150,148.

EDITORIAL "DO'S AND DON'TS" OF BENNETT

(Continued from page 7)

Don't use "it" in reference to a baby or an animal.

Don't use "inaugurate" for "begin."

Don't say "liable" when you mean "likely."

Don't refer to the "Mayor's Cabinet." Only the President of the United States has a Cabinet.

Don't use "minister" except for diplomatists.

Don't use "Officer O'Flaherty;" say "Policeman O'Flaherty."

Don't use "over" in the sense of "more than."

Don't use "pair" for "couple."

Don't use "past" in the sense of "last;" for instance, an event that is past occurred last week or within the last few days, not in the past week or past few days.

Don't use "people" for "persons." Refer to "the people of the United States," but say "persons who saw the accident."

Don't use the word "party" for "person" except in reports of legal affairs.

Don't say "railway coaches;" say "cars." A coach is another kind of vehicle.

Don't call "rails" tracks.

Don't say "remains," say "body."

Don't use "secure" for "get," "obtain" or "procure."

Don't use "shortly" when you mean "soon" or "lengthy" for "long."

Do not use "plan" except in connection with drawn architectural or engineering plans. Do not use it as a verb. "Planned" and "planning" are taboo.

Don't say "scenes are enacted;" scenes are witnessed.

Don't say "suspect" or "suspicious person" for "suspected person."

Don't say "a wedding occurred." Explosions occur; weddings take place.

IN SHIP NEWS DO NOT USE

Prow when you mean Bow; wheel when you mean screw; on for on board or aboard; boat for proper name of vessel—e.g., steamship, steamboat, sloop, yawl, steam yacht, etc. (except in describing a small craft propelled by oars).

Dock for wharf or pier, (except for dry dock and large basins).

Tied up to wharf or pier for secured to wharf or pier or made fast to wharf or pier.

Knots (in describing distances) for nautical miles. (A knot is not a distance, but a rate. Ten knots, for example, means that a vessel is making ten nautical miles an hour.)

Let down the anchor for anchored or let go the anchor.

Took up the anchor for weighed anchor.

Pilot came over the side for pilot boarded or received pilot.

Pilot left the vessel for discharged pilot.

Took out cargo for discharged cargo.

Took in cargo for stowed cargo.

Jackies for (1) Bluejackets, (2) enlisted men, (3) sailors or (4) seamen and marines.

Sail—In referring to the going away of a steamship.

Don't use "it" or "its" in reference to ships; a ship is of the feminine gender.

Don't use the word "liner." In designating a particular vessel the Herald says:—"The Mauretania, of the Cunard line."

Don't say "the yacht Corsair" or "Corsair." "The Corsair" or "yacht Corsair" is the usage. This applies to all manner of water craft.

Don't use "private yacht."

Don't say "Brooklyn" Navy Yard. It is the New York Navy Yard.

Don't use "boarded" when you mean went aboard.

Don't use "North River" for Hudson River.

Don't use "member" of the crew.

Don't say "waves;" use "seas," Waves are surface undulations; seas do damage.

If Quality

of circulation is your first consideration

The Evening Star

With Sunday Morning Edition

Washington, D. C.

will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

New York Office — 110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll

Chicago Office — Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.

It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42d St., New York City

Last Year

THE ST. LOUIS STAR

was the only St. Louis newspaper that gained in everything---

circulation and every classification of advertising.

—a good point to remember when making up lists

THIS YEAR

National Adv. Representative
THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY

EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 5,015 Daily Average Circulation

Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending March 31, 1925, 177,298 Daily. Six Months Ending March 31, 1926, 182,313 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 5,015.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
John H. Lederer, 910 Hearst Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.

NEW YORK
EVENING GRAPHIC

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN
H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

There Are No Other Newspapers Covering South Jersey Completely

From the Standpoint of the National Advertiser

CAMDEN COURIER
The MORNING POST

60,000 Circulation
Combination Rate

National Representatives:
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

The
DES MOINES CAPITAL

Completely covers Des Moines' entire trade territory for you at a rate of 14c per line.

It is the best Advertising buy in the mid-west

O'Mara & Ormsbee
Special Representatives

The DES MOINES CAPITAL
Lafayette Young
Publisher

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

THIS department aims to present to readers each week a little survey of what is appearing in print about journalism. A sincere attempt is made to be impartial in mode of presentation whether the books, pamphlets, or magazine articles be brickbats or bouquets. This fact explains the amount of space given this week to "Bunking Trustful Readers," an article which appears in The Independent for May 22 from the pen of "A Washington Correspondent."

In the opening paragraph of the article the assertion is made that there are not half a dozen newspapers in the United States publishing honest and unbiased news out of Washington. This assertion is then developed more in detail as follows:

> Some journals feed their readers pap, some poison—but none gives the whole truth, least of all those newspapers that label themselves "independent" in the journalistic directories. This is a confession which I, as a newspaper man once proud of what could be a glorious profession, make with reluctance and sorrow; but it is a fact which the American public, for its own forewarning and forearming, ought to know. Sometimes, as I hammer my typewriter keys and think how I am bunking my trustful readers, I smile with amusement and irony—but more often I am near to tears. Personal prejudices, partisan bias, class considerations, a selfish and one-sided economic viewpoint, hatred of change, the sense of self-preservation, and the fear of antagonizing readers and advertisers—these make up the editorial barrier that keeps the truth from reaching the luckless public.

The thought naturally arises that if this article prints the truth why do not literary weeklies reap the rich harvest by printing the things that the daily papers suppress or color? How is the reader of the article to know that the author has not taken the slant that would make his manuscript available for magazine needs? Both newspapers and magazines sail the same sea though in different crafts.

The writer of this article in the Independent believes that newspaper readers in Europe come nearer to getting the truth about government matters because they can read both the government and opposition newspapers and so have at least a fifty-fifty chance of getting at the real facts. There is a hint that it would be a good thing to have in America a pure-news act which required American newspapers to publish the formulæ by which news is doctored, diluted, or colored by editorial prescription.

Washington correspondents, according to the article in the Independent, certainly have a cynosure. No wonder newspaper workers are so anxious to get away from the daily grind and have the comfortable Washington berth—if what the Independent says is true. On this point the author of the article says:

> Why should the Washington correspondents "dig" for news when it won't be published unless it meets the partisan requirements of the editors or accords with the narrow policy of the business office? It is much easier, and lots safer, to sit in the office and engage a twelve-year-old boy to make the rounds of the executive departments collecting hand-outs and official releases. These are usually dull, routine statements prepared by the publicity agents that the various branches and bureaus of the Government employ. If a big story is breaking on the floor of the Senate or the House, the correspondent learns of it over the telephone, orders stenographic reports of the doings, and awaits their arrival following adjournment. He may wander up on "the hill" and sit around the press galleries an hour or two, reënforced against actual work by the assurance that he will receive the transcripts in plenty of time to get to an early dinner party. With some knowledge of the background and the situation, he can then write a comprehensive, authoritative piece. He is doing it, day after day. The one thing necessary is to write the story with a "slant" that will suit the home office two hundred or two thousand miles away.

The following good word is said about official hand-outs in Washington:

> The hand-out and the department release, as well as the official spokesman's oracular sayings, when used to supplement the correspondent's own information, are indispensable aids. They contain material which no newspaper man could discover for himself.

But in justice to the article in The Independent it must be said that the warning is uttered that these hand-outs should not be accepted as gospel and that cabinet officers should not be immune from cross-questioning. The admission is made, however, that these hand-outs do act as a check on a correspondent's curiosity.

The specific case given in the article is the disagreement of correspondents in reporting the statements of Ambassador Houghton about the European situation. After listing the discrepancies found in various reports sent out by Washington correspondents the article concludes with the following paragraph:

> If great newspapers will permit such misrepresentation on international questions, it may well be imagined what they will stand for in matters affecting even more intimately their owners and their policies, including such things as the tariff, tax reduction, appropriations, candidates for office, national and State politics, and sundry other problems. American public opinion will continue to be muddled on grave questions of the day until the vast majority of the readers reach the healthy conclusion that it isn't so just because it's in the newspapers.

* * *

FOR its book, "The Harvard Advertising Awards," the Gardner Advertising Company of St. Louis deserves a special Bok prize. This book is a remarkable piece of advertising that advertises advertising—to be specific, the advertising of the Pet Milk Company.

The book opens with a brief historical sketch of the advertising awards made by the Harvard Graduate School of Business Adminstration "to those who had been responsible for work of outstanding excellence in advertising during the year, within the terms of the several awards." The prizes were provided by Edward W. Bok in an endowment made to Harvard University in October, 1923.

This specific direction given to the jury which makes the awards cannot be too often emphasized because of the stress which it puts upon truth in advertising:

> To the end that truth shall be recognized as a factor of greatest practical value in advertising the jury is instructed to lay particular stress on accuracy and fair statement in all manuscripts and advertisements considered.

The reason why the Gardner Advertising Company has put out this book is doubtless found in the fact that in each of the two years for which the Harvard Awards have been made, an advertisement from one of its clients, the Pet Milk Company, has won an award. In each instance the award has gone to Erma Perham Proetz for a distinguished, individual advertisement deemed most effective in its combination of text and illustration as a means of delivering its message.

In addition to the advertisements which won the awards the book contains numerous other advertisements of the Pet Milk Company—in all probability from the pen of the same copy writer. Some of the best advertising booklets that I have seen have been slipped into the special pockets provided on the inside of the back cover of the book. Both the series of advertisements and the collection of booklets are good examples of educational advertising. The refined feminine atmosphere found in the copy shown in this book is in striking contrast to some of the questionable copy designed to appeal to women and printed in American periodicals.

* * *

EMIL DOVIFAT, an interview with whom appears in EDITOR & PUBLISHER for May 15 on the subject, "Germans Protect Editorial Convictions," is the author of "Die Zeitungen" (The Newspaper), a rather remarkable work on the press. It will be reviewed in this department in an early issue.

* * *

NORMAN STUDER, news editor of The New Student and acting managing editor of the City College Student, a rebel periodical which grew out of the suppression of the authorized publication of the College of the City of New York, contributes to The Nation for May 26 an article on "The New College Journalism." The article is a resumé of the difficulties experienced by undergraduate publications throughout the country during the academic year now nearing an end. So far as the views of Mr. Studer indicate The Daily Crimson at Harvard University heads the list of college newspapers for its fearlessness and its independence.

Undergraduate newspapers are divided into two groups: the bulletin boards and the journals of opinion. Mr. Studer dismisses the former with the assertion that they are "harmless sheets packed full of college gossip" and then devotes the rest of his article to the second group.

* * *

FROM the Christian Science Monitor of Boston, comes the booklet, "Education and the Newspaper." It shows that the bond which makes the daily newspaper and education inseparable is found in right thinking.

That the newspaper provides post-graduate instruction for most people is

MICHIGAN
and the
BOOTH NEWSPAPERS
THE LEADING NEWSPAPER IN GRAND RAPIDS—THE ONLY DAILY IN SEVEN OTHER CITIES
The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News
National Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN, 50 East 42nd St., New York City
J. E. LUTZ, Tower Building, Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS of Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR of New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America
Buffalo—A Profitable Market for Advertisers
Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertised goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg., New York, N. Y.
Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg., Philadelphia
Waterman Bldg., Boston

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION
An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.
S. P. WESTON
Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation
120 West 42nd Street New York

Detroit
Fourth Largest City
Complete coverage with one paper.
The Detroit News
Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

For the First Three Months of 1926
THE TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE
printed 7,355,276 lines of Advertising, and thus moved up from twelfth to SIXTH place among the newspapers of the United States.
The only newspapers printing a greater volume of advertising during that period than The Tribune were the Miami Herald, the St. Petersburg Times, the Detroit News, the Chicago Tribune and the New York Times.
The Tribune covers the rich South Florida territory of 24 counties and 190 cities and towns, with a population of 713,943.
That's Why Its Advertising Volume Grows
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency, National Representatives.

first! in OHIO
7,474,514 Lines
Dispatch advertising record for the first four months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,092,957 lines. In 1925 the Dispatch published 21,544,376 lines exceeding second largest Ohio newspaper by 2,648,383 lines.
NET PAID CIRCULATION
CITY 55,812
SUBURBAN 26,973
COUNTRY 23,666
Total Daily Circulation 106,451
Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

inctly shown in the following quota-
:

hitters of public interest are found in er variety and in a more available form he daily newspaper than in any other
. The demand for an education that con-itself more closely with the life of the riunity has been recognized, so that the rial of education is composed more and of the "matters of public interest."
efore the newspaper is truly an educator.
public, faithfully and voluntarily, attends newspaper school six or seven days every in the year.

his same thought, as the booklet rs, may be found in the address of ome on behalf of the State of Wis-in at a recent convention of high ol editors and publishers. From this ess the booklet quotes the following:

ere are four great institutions which must the responsibility for the educational s of the modern nation: the school, the orm, the pulpit, and the press. Not the of these influence, in my opinion, is the
. . . . The educational value of the newsr varies with the extent to which it ex-es honest opinion based on careful re-h; and arouses its readers to inquiry and ght. This, coupled with high idealism, a desire for a clean Press, will go far to ate the mass of the people.

opies of the booklet may be obtained in the Christian Science Monitor, ton, Mass.

* * *

) me the pamphlet, "New York's First Newspaper," published by the on de Hirsch Trade School, 222 East h street, New York City, has a special rest. Briefly it is the story of Wil- Bradford and the paper which he ted on November 8, 1725—the New k Gazette.

* * *

WO articles in the Bankers' Monthly for May are of special interest to spaper publishers who wish to in- se their advertising linage from ks. The first is entitled "The Go-to- urch Series of a Kansas Bank" and second "How Extremes in Advertis- Prove Destructive." The latter is interesting story of the advertising cy of two banks. One spent its money unwise advertising. The other did advertise at all. Both banks stopped wing.

* * *

RANK B. APPLEBY prints in Ore- gon Exchanges for May a splendid vey of the advertising situation in a ll-daily town. Mr. Appleby is pub- er of LaGrande Evening Observer he draws upon his own policies for lstrations. Especially valuable are his gestions on how to meet objections ed by prospective advertisers.

* * *

HOSE who are interested to see how public opinion is molded in foreign s will find an excellent treatise on t subject in "Die Presse als Werk- g der auswärtigen Politik" (The ss as a Tool of Foreign Politics) by l Eltzbacher (Eugen Diederichs, a). This authoritative work takes its theme for development a saying t is attributed to Wilson, "The opin- of the world is the mistress of the ld" (page 5).

he book is divided into six sections. e first considers the relation between eign politics and the press. The mat- of molding public opinion is first seen an international point of view and n from a national. The section con- les with an observation from a joint w point.

ection II takes up "Die Pressarbeit Frankreich und England" (The Work the Press in France and England). In discussing propaganda in England special mention is made of the activities of the Committee on Alleged German Outrages (pages 36 and 37). Sections III, IV, and V embrace the work of the press in Germany. They tell of the organization, the mechanical production, the technique, and the classification. Of these three sections possibly the third is the most important.

For American readers Section VI has the most interest because it deals with the psychology of the press and has several references to American influence. Evidently propaganda has become something of an art in Germany. In this section the German press is blamed for giving so much space under large headlines to the attitude of America toward Germany. The reason for the censure is that this emphasis placed upon the American attitude was sent back to the press of the United States and created the impression that the intervention of America was the most important thing in the German mind (page 137).

Mr. Eltzbacher believes that Germany made a big mistake in restraining the press from discussing the submarine policy (page 145). Had the German press been able to express public opinion with the utmost freedom the German embassy at Washington would have been in a position to say that while Germany desired friendly relations the attitude of the great mass of the German people could not be entirely disregarded. In this way the press could back up the influence of German officials on foreign soils.

A feature that makes "Die Presse als Werkzeug der auswärtigen Politik" especially valuable is the appendix in which are listed the various books and pamphlets which treat of the molding of public opinion by the press.

PAPERS AID EMPLOYEES TO BUILD 64 HOMES

A. H. Belo & Co., in Dallas, Advanced Employees Building and Loan Assn. $50,000 at Start—$200,000 in Loans Handled Since 1920

Sixty-four homes have been built or purchased in Dallas, Tex., by employees of A. H. Belo & Co., publishers of the Dallas News, Evening Journal and Semi-Weekly Farm News, through an Employees Building and Loan Association established in 1920.

The organization was formed at the instigation and with the encouragement and support of the management of the papers for the purpose of aiding members to build or acquire homes, although privileged to invest their savings in the stock of the Association, John F. Lubben, secretary-treasurer of A. H. Belo & Co., told EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

"As a nucleus, the management advanced the Association $50,000 which is being gradually repaid," he said.

"The administration of the Association is vested solely in its membership, restricted to employees of A. H. Belo & Co., through a Board of Directors, elected annually in February, and consisting of nine members. The present officers are: Charles H. Seay, of the composing room, president; W. H. Benners, of the business department, vice-president, and James E. Taggart, of the accounting department, secretary and treasurer. All departments of the papers are represented on the Board of Directors. The only expenses incurred are a nominal salary paid the secretary-treasurer, a small state franchise tax, and incidentals for stationery, printed matter, etc.

"Since its founding, the Association has loaned nearly $200,000 to employees of the News and Journal; financed the building or purchase of 64 homes, of which 22 have been fully paid out, and furnished a depository for the investment by employees of approximately $30,000 in stock of the Association. Loans are made on approved real estate only, at 7 per cent interest. Borrowers automatically become members of the Association, and are required to pay $1.00 a share per month for every $100.00 borrowed.

"Each share of stock is of the par value of $200, and shares mature approximately in 11 years and four months, the difference between the amounts paid in and the face value of the stock representing the dividends on monthly payments.

"Members who desire to acquire stock as a means of saving or investment, are privileged to purchase stock outright or to pay for same in monthly installments.

"Loans are made to the extent of 60 per cent of the value of the property on which a first lien is given, but only after a thorough investigation and recommendation of a committee of appraisal, consisting of nine members, thoroughly familiar with Dallas real estate values.

"The Association has been the means of many employees acquiring homes, and as in the case of the New York Times Building and Loan Association, the majority are connected with the mechanical departments of our papers."

New York Advertising Managers Meet

Members of the Daily Newspaper Advertising Managers' Association of New York City held their regular monthly meeting this week at the City Club. Harry Brown, advertising manager of the New York Evening Post, is association president. The following are members: Irving R. Parsons, Telegram; H. A. Ahearn, Graphic; Porter Caruthers, Herald Tribune; E. M. Alexander, American; Fred Trimm, Journal; J. Mora Boyle, Mirror; W. V. Titus, Brooklyn Eagle; Walter Merrill, World; Ray T. Wilkin, News; H. B. Fairchild, Sun; B. T. Butterworth, Times; and Lewis C. Paine, Evening Post.

Daily Gives Athletic Prizes

New York's annual interscholastic track and field competition, for which the New York Herald Tribune offered 48 prizes was won for the third time by the New Utrecht high school of Brooklyn, May 22.

COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS

International News Service

"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"

63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Complete Feature Service

Wire us for samples and prices of the Largest, Most Original Most Artistic and Finest blanket feature service on the market, which includes IVANHOE, VIVIAN VANITY, and the FAMOUS SHORT STORY SERIES, in addition to SPORTS, WOMAN'S PAGE FEATURES, COMICS, FICTION, VERSE, CARTOONS and everything for the newspaper.

Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, President
373 4th Ave., New York City

Consistent Builders of Circulation

We do not use just one outstanding success to show you as proof of our ability. Year in and year out, for twenty-two years, we have continued to make each and every campaign a success.

We have proven our methods.

MYERS'
Circulation Organization
415 E. Third St., Waterloo, Iowa

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

Among The Newspapers Publishing
Constance Talmadge's Flapper Series

Chicago Journal	Philadelphia Sun
Detroit News	Buffalo Times
Toledo Blade	Louisville Courier J'l
Omaha Bee	Oakland Post Enquirer
Peoria Star Journal	Memphis News Scimitar
Newark Jersey Transcript

Why Not Join This List of Papers
Wire for Terms and Territory

COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY

Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief
Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President and General Manager

RADIO
PROGRAMS NEWS NOTES FEATURES

Used and Praised by More than 200 Newspapers
Send for samples and prices
AUDIO SERVICE
326 West Madison St. Chicago

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED
SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK
Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

Newsstand Columnist in New York

J. Moses, proprietor of a New York newsstand, is claiming to be the "first newsstand colyumist." He issues a daily bulletin of wisecracks under the heading "My Own Parade."

His "column" is distributed free to his patrons.

Duluth Paint Men Advertise

Members of the Duluth (Minn.) Paint Jobbers Association, retail hardware men, and all paint dealers in the city conducted a week's educational and advertising campaign May 24 to 29. The campaign was based on the slogan "Paint Now and Save The Surface."

Daily's Market Survey Out

The Indianapolis News recently issued its annual merchandising booklet "The Indianapolis Radius" in 28 pages replete with statistics, charts and illustrations. It was compiled under the direction of Frank T. Carroll, advertising manager of the News.

Supplies and Equipment

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

Printers Manufacturing Co.
1109-17 Transportation Bldg.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

FOR BETTER PRINTING use
Herrick Inks
Cost more. Worth it.

No substitutes. Made from the best materials.
Specializing to requirements of each pressroom.

Ask the Publishers who use them.

WM. C. HERRICK INK CO., INC.
401 West 33rd Street
New York City
Factory: Rutherford, N. J.

Carried in Stock

Some outstanding and exclusive features of The Goss Combination Wet and Dry Matrix Roller: Patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Heavy cast-iron cylinders with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns crosswise. Rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

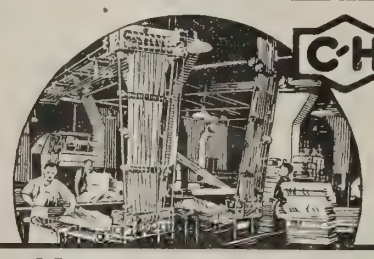
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Fight hot-weather fatigue

Fresh, cool, invigorating air—supplied by Sturtevant Ventilating Fans—would keep your men working at top-notch efficiency during the hot summer months.

B. F. STURTEVANT CO.
Hyde Park, Boston, Mass.
Branch Offices in Principal Cities

Sturtevant
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
Ventilating Fans



Rebuilt GOSS & HOE PRESS BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO—NEW YORK—LONDON

Modern Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—A real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

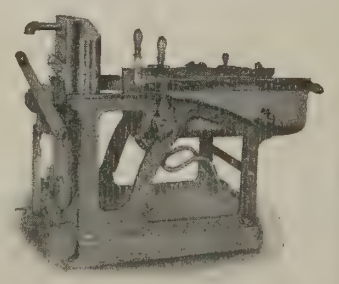
Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

Newspaper Conveyors

take the papers in a steady stream, as fast as the presses can deliver them, up, overhead, around corners, through a ceiling or a wall to wherever they're wanted for mailing or delivery. Eliminating waste and delay by their speedy, dependable operation they are profitable equipment for papers large or small. Newspaper plants from London to Tokio have been using them for years.

Let us tell you how you can speed deliveries from your presses.



The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Mfrs. of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN
CUTLER-HAMMER

Editor & Publisher
reaches the man who Buys
Have it carry your message.

Hoe Patented Duo-Cooled Equipoise Curved Casting Mould

"It is essential to Success to be the first out with the news—and Minutes count."

This Hoe Curved Casting Mould is a time-saver, designed especially for Speed and Efficiency. Cold Water circulating through the stationary Lid and the concave Side, gives quick cooling for rapid Casting.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST

R. HOE & CO., INC.
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
504-520 Grand St., New York City
also at DUNELLEN, N. J.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
2 Times — .35 per line
3 Times — .30 per line

ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line insertion as earned by frequency of insert Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 inserti The Editor & Publisher reserves the righ classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE.

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want m business, communicate with the Internatic Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 1 1841 Broadway, New York City.

Classified—I will organize your Classified partment, train each one in the departm and take percentage of increase for my p Under my direction, Norristown, Pa. Regi increased 97½% April 1926 over April 19 Don K. Wilson, Norristown Register, Nor town, Pa.

Special Edition Editor

Special Edition Editor prepares copy for Spe Editions, subject to Publisher's approval. contract or salary basis. B-963, Editor Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIE

Brokers

Real Opportunity for Right Party—Wee paper and job plant; New Jersey, city o 12,000, exclusive field, fine plant, earning ha some dividends. $40,000 with Real Estat $25,000 without. J. B. Shale, New York.

Several Attractive Newspaper Properties Florida, showing 15% to 25% net on investme ranging in price from $25,000 to $250,0 These properties are increasing in value rapid Shall have personal representation in Florida June and July to meet prospective buyers. H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill.

Newspapers Financed

Newspaper Financed—I am a newspaper pu lisher and owner. Have successfully financ several newspaper properties. Tell me yo newspaper financial troubles. All corresp dence held in strictest confidence. Addr A-500, Editor & Publisher.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulati coverage becomes necessary, remember that o twenty years in this one line of endeavor your proof against experimenting. Write wire Pacific Coast Circulation Service, B Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation campaigns successfully operate "Insured Results." Address A. B. Rudolp Erie Daily Times, Erie, Pa., where a can saign is now in operation.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Ce tre Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Sale manship Club Campaigns.

Circulation Managers will do well to wat our efforts in four metropolitan cities in Ne York State. Maximum results from canva sers—lowest known cost. Write or wire to-da The Albright China Co., Carrollton, Ohio.

EDITORIAL

Syndicate Features

Editor's Copy—Twelve weekly features; sam ples free. State territorial protection desire in reply. Hugo S. Sims, Orangeburg, S. C

Scranton Sunday Telegram and Indiana Stat Tribune are the new customers this week Write for samples of a live, alert, up-to-dat service, to the Graphic Syndicate, 25 City Ha Place, New York.

Interesting Features carry the Newspaper into the homes.

Employment—Equipment—Services

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Foreman in Composing Room wanted by morning newspaper in a Texas city. Must be a first class make up man and able to work men. References required. Address A-527, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor, keen man with high record of newspaper performance wanted for important and responsible editorial position in the syndicate field. Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc., 373 Fourth Avenue, N. Y. C.

Newspaper Advertising Man who knows how to get business himself and can direct work of other salespeople. For such a man who can furnish satisfactory reference and who can make good, a position as manager of Western Branch Office of Syndicate will soon be open. Tell all about yourself first letter. All replies confidential. Salary to start $3,000 and bonus. A-524, Editor & Publisher.

Progressive Advertising Man wanted. To a young man of several years' experience and plenty of ambition, one of good character and ability to write saleable copy, merchandise, promote special stunts and campaigns there is a splendid permanent connection open on the leading paper of Northern Oklahoma of 12,000 circulation. A progressive, solid organization in which he can grow. Reply in own hand writing giving age, experience, ability, references, salary wanted and specimen of copy and layout. Blackwell Tribune and News. Adv. Dept., Blackwell, Okla.

Salesman calling on editors to side line; high grade first run, newspaper serial fiction; a rare opportunity. A-306, Editor & Publisher.

Telegraph Editor wanted by leading afternoon paper in one of the largest cities in New England. Must have had experience on universal desk. Salary $40 a week to start. Good opportunity for permanent connection in congenial surroundings. Address giving full details. B-983, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager, effective copy-writer; attractive layouts; capable salesman; broad experience with newspapers, agencies and specials, seeks connection with organization in need of advertising ability and additional knowledge. Exceptional references. A-930, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager of 12 years' experience wishes to connect with wide-awake newspaper as advertising or business manager. Have worked on Philadelphia and Washington papers. Am a real business getter. Not afraid of hard work or long hours. Married. Age 32. Could be available some time in June. If you are interested in securing the services of a man with real ability. Address B-999, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman and Copy Writer wanted by leading semi-weekly newspaper, forty minutes from Pennsylvania station. Excellent opportunity. A-526, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman desires connection where result-producing effort will win advancement. General newspaper experience. A-529, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man who is now publishing community magazine desires to get back in the newspaper field. 12 years' experience in advertising work, understands editorial, business, art, direct mail phases of advertising. Desires to secure position with newspaper in large city. Available now. Will take up work at any part. Age 28, married. Creator of community events which have been used by hundreds of newspapers. Full particulars by return mail. Address A-511. Editor & Publisher.

Afternoon Copy Desk job wanted southwest of St Louis. Four years on big New England papers. On desk now. 34 years old; Yale man. Start at $40. A-510, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Thoroughly experienced in work. Knows merchandise, store and sales methods. A worker who can produce for employer and advertiser, put big sales over, address a gathering, talk intelligently with business men. Just rounding out 21 years' experience in advertising, merchandising and selling. 39 years old, married, employed, not broke and can go anywhere. A-525, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor desires to connect with special agency or publishers' representative. Over 15 years' practical experience. Acquainted with agencies. Have covered New England, South and West territories. Now holding executive position on New York City daily. Possess initiative and ability. Best reference. Married. Available immediately. B-989, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Good layout man and copy writer—Experienced in selling printing and soliciting ads—desires connection with good live daily in some hustling Southern city. At present employed—References. A-504, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager who understands boys; A.B.C. Records; Office organization; Premium Campaigns; Boy and Popularity Contests; Modern Distribution Methods; Salesmanship, etc., desires connection with live Daily and Sunday. No proposition too hard. References. H. M. Wheeler, 24 West Garden St., Pensacola, Florida.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager whose present employer is his best reference, wishes to make an immediate change. He is a capable executive, organizer and promotion man who can get and hold circulation and the money for it. Prefer Southern or Western city of 200,000 or more. B-982, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Attention Mr. Publisher! Successful Circulation Manager desires connection in city over 400,000 population. Fifteen years' experience in management and promotion. A worker as well as a capable executive. Thoroughly understands the necessity of keeping expense down and at the same time increasing circulation. Familiar with all the latest promotion campaigns in use and able to originate new ideas that produce results. A man that has never made a failure of a job that he has tackled and does not intend to begin now. References as to both character and ability. Married and thirty-five. Salary $500. Reply A-514, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—15 years' circulation experience, 10 years as Circulation Manager on largest papers in South. Know Circulation, Auditing, Promotion, Office Owned and Independent Systems. Have also had experience on combination Morning and Evening Circulation. Will be glad to make trip at my expense for personal interview with Publisher desiring services of Circulation Manager. Can furnish satisfactory references from my employer. Inquiries treated confidentially. B-516, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager, now employed, 8 years' experience, desires change. Best of references. Prefer South or Southwest. Address A-518, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Let this ad catch your eye, Mr. Publisher, if you are looking for a managing, city or telegraph editor who puts 100% effort in his work. If you are interested in energy, ability and efficiency in a department head, I would like to hear from you. Address A-515, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial, Desk Work or Copy Reading, wanted by experienced newspaper man who knows all angles of newspaper making. New York or vicinity. Prefer magazine or book work. A-522, Editor & Publisher.

Executive Editor, now employed, paper 100,000 circulation seeks charge of morning daily of any size in need of editorial reorganization. Age 31, with 13 years' nawspaper training, four in present connection. Offers youth, energy and proof of accomplishment. A-501, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor, with tried and successful record, voluntarily seeks change for best of reasons. Strong executive, good organizer, knows news and can handle men. Experience touches metropolitan and smaller field. No failures in record of 15 years constant employment. College man, 39, with no bad habits. Aggressive, yet safe, and strong editorial-writer. Minimum salary $65. Details gladly supplied. A-519, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor or News Editor—Must make change because of wife's health. 35 years old with record of uncommon achievements in daily field. Desires city under 100,000 where there is opportunity to build downtrodden paper. 15 years' experience. Address A-528, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Somewhere there is a publisher of a paper suffering from editorial anaemia who needs an experienced news executive to revitalize it by a strong editorial policy, opening of new news sources, attractive make-up, right handling of staff and close checking on expenses. He will find the right man for the job by writing to A-502, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent or foreman desires position. Capable executive and organizer. Familiar with all mechanical requirements. Well recommended. Afternoon paper preferred. Interview at your convenience. East preferred. Address A-509. Editor & Publisher.

Motion Picture Critic and Sport Writer at liberty. Five years' experience. Prefer large cities anywhere. A-503, Editor & Publisher.

President's Representative—Educated, experienced man desires to join publisher's staff as confidential field investigator, research man, or in a promotional connection. Experienced in advertising, publishing, writing, public speaking, news print sales. Holds responsible public position, but wishes to engage exclusively and permanently in publishing enterprises. Experienced traveler, versatile, and has original advertising and promotional ideas. Has published magazine of his own. A-517, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Production Manager—Having reached limit on present position, I desire connection with a metropolitan daily, where economical results are wanted; 22 years of broad experience. I have practical knowledge of photo-engraving, composition, stereotyping, press work (both black and color work), mechanical and constructional engineering. High school and business college education. Can furnish high class references. B-900, Editor & Publisher.

Publisher's Assistant or Business Manager—Capable man who has served in practically every department wants connection with Northern newspaper. Now head National Advertising department of paper near top of list in 1925 linage reports. No hurry to leave, but must get located before school opens in fall. Address A-520, Editor & Publisher.

Publisher, having sold paper, seeks connection. Qualified as publisher or assistant, business or advertising manager, editorial writer. Successful record. Knows printing and newspaper work in all branches. Prefer mid-west. Address "Syndicate," 801 Lemcke Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Reporter with five years' experience wants work on larger paper. Now working in town of 10,000. Can get and write news. Good on features. A-523, Editor & Publisher.

Special Edition—Publisher contemplating special edition or industrial or special pages may obtain organization on fair commission basis. Clean solicitation guaranteed. References Address B-908, Editor & Publisher.

Superintendent of Mechanical Department desires position. Best of references. Employed at present but wife's health demands change of climate. A-512. Editor & Publisher.

Writer—My semi-humorous current news comments secures greater news interest. Will supply daily or weekly feature or will accept position. A-521, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment For Sale

Campbell Press—Printers! Attention!! Here is an opportunity for you to procure a Campbell Two-Revolution Press that takes a 25 x 38 sheet, for storage, handling and rebuilding charges amounting to $783.55. I am advised, that under ordinary conditions this press should sell for at least $1,500. Address Dolan, 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Century Press—Can you be interested in purchasing a Century Two-Revolution Press that will take a 22 x 34 sheet and is in first class condition. at a fifth of its replacement value? Has all modern refinements, i. e., trip, back-up, plate distribution and front delivery. Must be disposed of before removal. We will accept $675 on terms or allow a liberal discount for cash. Write Excel Ptg. Co., care of Conner Fendler, 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Duplex Stereotype Press—Prints 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 16, 20 pages, 8 columns, 12½ ems, sheet cut 22¾", column length 21", excellent condition, doing fine work. Selling to make room for 48 page Duplex same metropolitan one deck type. Delivery any time; real bargain; terms suit purchaser. Daily Home News, New Brunswick, N. J.

Goss, Twenty-four Page, Straightline, three deck, two page wide press for sale. Capacity 25,000 four, six, eight, ten, or twelve page papers per hour, 12,500 sixteen, twenty, or twenty-four page papers per hour. Press is now operating in our plant in first class condition, and will be available October 1st. Will also sell Cutler-Hammer drive equipment including, 25-5 H. P. 220 Volt D. C. motors, and complete control panel including Kohler push button system. If desired will sell complete stereotype equipment, including 10,000 pound metal pot, curved casting box, tail outter, curved shaver, finishing block, wet mat moulding machine, two platen steam table with gas generator. All in good condition. Press now set for eight columns 12½ Ems, 22 inch columns, sheet size 23¼". Address The Fargo Forum, Fargo, N. D.

Pony Century Flyer—"One Man's Misfortune is Another's Opportunity." We are offering for a customer's account a Pony Century Flyer—the speediest and most versatile small two-revolution press built. Takes a 22 x 30 sheet and has air chambers, solid iron base, front delivery, plate distribution and trip. Will be furnished complete with roller stocks, chases, wrenches, counter and jogger for the amount still due; namely, $815. Refer to A. B. C. Ptg. Co. Press, Conner Fendler, 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Special Bargain in 25 x 33 Stonemetz two-revolution press. Cost new $2,500. Will accept $960, less 10% for cash, or upon liberal terms. Guaranteed to be in first class condition and fully equipped with cast rollers, extra roller stocks, three chases, wrenches, power fixtures, etc. Illustration and further information upon request. Conner Fendler Branch, American Type Founders Company, 96 Beekman St., New York.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Our Service is:—
EXPERT, REPUTABLE, AUTHORITATIVE

The Leaders in the Newspaper Field Have Used It for the Past Thirty Years.

SALES — APPRAISALS — MERGERS — CONSOLIDATIONS OF NEWSPAPER PROPERTIES

OUR SPECIALTY!

PALMER, DeWITT & PALMER
Newspaper Properties
350 Madison Ave., New York

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

EDITORIAL AND FEATURE WRITER, with over three years' experience on large city daily, is seeking new connection. Ready to go anywhere for right position. "Unusually bright; well educated; great student; will make extraordinary writer." Age 26; college graduate. Mention our No. 5340-B.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

You Can Pick a Winner!

Publishers are often seriously handicapped by the loss of good men. How to reach the right man for the job is a problem that is materially simplified when the Classified department of EDITOR & PUBLISHER is consulted.

You may know a man who "will do," but through our classified department you can get in touch with a number of available men, many of them employed but who desire to make a change.

From a list you can make a choice and have a chance to pick a Winner.

Editor & Publisher

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

GET all the independent filling stations in your city to combine in a series of ads designed to make more people buy gas at the hometown filling stations. Sign the ads with the names and addresses of the cooperating filling stations and charge each of the cooperating stations its pro rata share of the cost of the advertising.—F. H. Williams.

The Lions' Roar

LIONS CLUB PLANS BIG EVENT

The Lions' page, described in paragraph below

Most every live town now has several service clubs, at least one of which should be willing to take up the advertising idea. The Lions club of Mason City, Ia., are running a full page on the last Saturday of each month, space having been contracted for for one year. The page carries 4 columns of advertising and 4 of news. Each member who desires his advertising on the pages pays his proportionate share of the cost which in this case amounted to $18 per advertiser per year. The news columns are devoted exclusively to Lions club news and features.—Anton Jeppesen.

The Fargo Forum is running a series of ads that will continue throughout several months for a local bank. The body or outer part of the ad consists of an outline of a map of North Dakota, and the name of the bank is run in at the bottom. At the top of the ad words to this effect are run: "North Dakota is O. K." The inner part or copy of the ad is changed each insertion. Each time the ad tells a story of the growth of diversified farming in North Dakota and that the bank is backing up this type of good business. T. W. Johnson, Fargo.

Get your luggage ads early. Not only the hand bag, trunk and leather people should be covered for the beginning of the vacation period, but the auto kit, camping goods, and tent dealers as well. —C. M. L.

This newspaper sold three pages of advertising on a "Scooter Race." All merchants handling juvenile vehicles, such as coaster wagons, velocipedes, scooters, kiddy kars and cycles, were solicited. A level street one block long was selected by this newspaper for the race and one prize of $5.00 in merchandise was given to the winner of each vehicle race.—M. N., Clarksburg (W. Va.) Telegram.

A hint may be taken from the coal strike in England, to assist in keeping the miners of this country employed throughout the dull season. The foresighted policy of having the householders in your community fill their bins in the summer is an excellent one. Get the coal retailers to advertise, and if possible, reduce their coal prices during the off months, as has been done in the state of Washington recently. Assist in performing this public service to the householder, who saves; the miner, who is employed throughout the dull season; the owner who continues to operate the mines; and the coal retailer whom you ask to advertise in your paper during the summer.—C. M. L., Seattle, Wash.

"Where do you get all those clever ideas for layouts which you submit to advertisers?" I asked a solicitor who has the reputation of showing a big increase in lineage every year. "That's easy," he replied. "The ideas are not original. I get some of them from mat services, others from New York and Chicago papers which I read two or three times a week, but most of them come from trade journals such as Shoe Repair Service, Bakers' Weekly, Soft Drink Journal, Brick and Clay Record, National Cleaner and Dyer, Men's Wear, Dry Goods Economist, International Confectioner, and dozens of others which I find on the desks of merchants. I make it a point to look at these trade journals every month. Merchants are glad to let me see them. When I note an idea that the merchant could use, I call his attention to it or go back to my office and prepare a layout. Many advertisers are careless about reading their own trade journals. Any solicitor can cash in on the ideas in them."—Norman J. Radder, School of Journalism, Indiana University.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

"A SAFETY Thought for Today" is the title of a one-column box used by the Cleveland (O.) Plain-Dealer to head the expressions of prominent local business people regarding this all-absorbing topic. Only one such expression is used each day, the name of the author, of course, being quoted.—G. L. S.

Thousands of persons—society leaders, athletic coaches, surgeons, manufacturers and others—are making their own movies with amateur outfits, both for pleasure and utilitarian purposes. A recent A. P. dispatch told how people have taken up the amateur movie fad. The Wichita (Kan.) Daily Eagle published a Sunday page feature on what a prominent local family was doing with its amateur outfit. What kind of films are the amateurs making? Perhaps there's a local amateur motion picture dramatic club.—Frederick T. Hollowell, N. Y. C.

One paper uses building permits on the front page under a stock caption "Building the City Each Day," giving the details of each building construction permit, with 24 pt. bold figures to show the total for the day. This is a boost stunt which has won favorable comment and stimulated reader interest here.— H. W. Schaefer, Jacksonville Journal.

The recent report that cottonseed beefsteaks—produced at a cost of about one-fourth of a real T-bone or porterhouse—would be available should make a good topic for a story with your local marketmen as the contributors. They may have some experience or reminiscences or earlier attempts to supplant t cow. This same chemist has produc synthetic hash and asserts that it indistinguishable in taste from the boar ing house piece de resistance.—R. Campbell.

Is the market for new automobil being weakened seriously by the used c dealers? The Worcester (Mass.) Tel gram had a reporter investigate and di covered that 40 carloads or about 5 tons of new automobiles arrive in t city weekly.—R. B. S.

If you are located in a railroad cent the "round-house" or "engine-house" h a good story waiting for you. Assign live man to visit the engine house a get details on number of locomotives i spected and repaired in one day, t meticulous nature of the inspections a the repairs necessary in most cases. human interest story on the pride a affectionate regard with which each e gineer views his own "iron horse" another possibility.—A. N. Gage.

Mary Marshall
FASHION WRITER
is sending a
COMPLETE DAILY AND SUNDAY FASHION FEATURE
and a
DAILY FASHION NEWS SERVICE FROM PARIS
Authoritative
Entertaining
Full of Ideas
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York

NOOZIE
The best little daily comic on the market
May be had in ½ or 1 col. size
The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Mutual Tower
MEMPHIS, TENN.
CREATORS OF LOCAL DISPLAY FROM A NEW SOURCE
Our Business Review and many other feature pages now running in more than 80 leading American and Canadian newspapers. Write or wire for our representative.

An Amazing Discovery!
In
"THE MAN NOBODY KNOWS"
BRUCE BARTON
Shows Jesus as a HUMAN BEING ORGANIZER
EXECUTIVE
A Vital, Compelling Story for Daily Newspaper Release To Run 7 Weeks
THE BELL SYNDICATE
Inc.
JOHN N. WHEELER, Pres.
154 Nassau St. New York, N. Y.

How To Play
GOLF
By JOHNNY FARRELL
Famous Teacher of That Game
24 LESSONS
Illustrated
For release daily
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
New York City

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
4 page ready-print color comics.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD STREET,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

The Surest way to reach NEW ENGLAND is through the daily newspapers

Industrious, prosperous New England, a territory rich in industrial activity, with a variety of manufacture that results in steady business the year round. This is the section well worth cultivating.

New Englanders are staid, substantial citizens who are influenced in their buying habits as well as their thoughts and ideas by the substantial daily papers which are read in the homes.

New England's daily papers bring you in closest contact with consumers. No better medium for National Advertising exists and no carefully planned advertising campaign can ignore the effectiveness of the daily papers.

More than two million New Englanders read the daily papers listed below. You can reach them economically and efficiently through these papers.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	5,845	.03	.03
Boston Globe .....(M&S)	287,590	.50	.50
Boston Globe .....(S)	332,282	.55	.55
*Boston Transcript ....(E)	38,807	.20	.20
Boston Post .....(M)	377,443	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	349,596	.55	.55
††Fall River Herald ....(S)	17,052	.06	.06
Fitchburg Sentinel ...(E)	11,828	.06	.045
*Haverhill Gazette ....(E)	15,729	.065	.05
††Lynn Item .....(E)	16,699	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ..(M&E)	21,918	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury (M&E)	33,321	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	28,806	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript (E)	9,918	.0425	.035
††Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	17,011	.05	.05
Salem News .....(E)	21,398	.09	.07
††Taunton Gazette ....(E)	9,279	.05	.04
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	92,314	.26	.23
Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	51,096	.19	.16
(E)	4,046	.0214	.015

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Concord Monitor-Patriot (E)	5,041	.0375	.025
††Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,887	.036	.023
†Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	29,422	.13	.10

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

††Newport Daily News..(E)	6,271	.0336	.0293
††Pawtucket Times .....(E)	27,451	.07	.07
Providence Bulletin ..(E)	68,315	.18	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(M)	36,416	.11	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(S)	70,518	.18	.18
Providence News ....(E)	29,123	.08	.08
Providence Tribune....(E)	21,961	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun .....(E&S)	4,476	.025	.025
Woonsocket Call ....(E)	14,508	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times .....(E)	7,112	.03	.025
††Bennington Banner ....(E)	3,144	.0125	.0125
Brattleboro Reformer ..(E)	3,370	.03	.0175
Burlington Free Press (M)	13,071	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald .....(M)	11,038	.04	.04
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record (E)	4,055	.03	.0175

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	43,008	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post .....(S)	20,827	.10	.10
Hartford Courant ....(M)	33,003	.08	.08
Hartford Courant .....(S)	56,274	.11	.11
Hartford Times .....(E)	53,121	.13	.13
*Middletown Press ....(E)	8,214	.0325	.03
††New Haven Register (E&S)	46,218	.14	.13
New London Day.....(E)	12,054	.07	.045
††Norwich Bulletin ....(M)	12,724	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour .....(E)	6,069	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel (E)	5,043	.04	.025
Stamford Advocate ..(E)	10,329	.05	.04

*A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, September 30, 1925.
†Government Statement, September 30, 1925.
A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

A Large, Responsive and Growing Circulation in the World's Greatest Market

THE circulation of the New York Sun is concentrated among people of moderate and more than moderate means—people who have money enough to buy not only the necessities of life but also the comforts and pleasures of life—people to whom quality and service and style are more important considerations than price—people who constitute the most profitable market for advertised products of good quality.

The Sun is a home newspaper. It enables advertisers to reach all members of the family six days a week. It is an equally effective medium for selling underwear to women and cigars to men. Eighty-two per cent of The Sun's circulation is distributed after 3 P. M. when New Yorkers begin to go home with their newspapers.

Among the better-class people of New York The Sun has a larger home circulation than any other New York newspaper.

Manufacturers and merchants have found it unusually profitable to advertise their merchandise to the readers of The Sun. That is why The Sun has published for eleven consecutive months more advertising than any other New York evening newspaper.

What is most significant to advertisers is the fact that The Sun's large, responsive circulation is a growing circulation. During the six months ended March 31, 1926, The Sun had a daily net paid circulation of 257,067. This represents an increase of 11,593 copies a day over the corresponding period of 1925—a sound, healthy increase—an increase won without the use of prizes, contests or other similar methods of forcing circulation—an increase won purely on the merits of The Sun as a newspaper.

The Sun

280 Broadway New York

BOSTON Old South Building
WASHINGTON, D. C. Munsey Building
CHICAGO 208 So. La Salle St.
SAN FRANCISCO First National Bank Building
LOS ANGELES Van Nuys Building
PARIS 49 Avenue de l'Opera
LONDON 40-43 Fleet St.

THIS ISSUE:—THIRD ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE FEATURES

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1926

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING. NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, Februar y7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 2 | NEW YORK, JUNE 5, 1926 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Chicago Tribune
FEATURES

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Comic Strips

The Gumps by Sidney Smith
Gasoline Alley by Frank King
Harold Teen by Carl Ed
Winnie Winkle by Branner
Moon Mullins by Frank Willard
Smitty by Walter Berndt
Little Orphan Annie by Harold Gray
Texas Slim by Ferd Johnson
The above strips in black and white or 8-page color comic section either tabloid or full size.

W. E. HILL
page of comics

DAILY AND SUNDAY
CARTOONS
John T. McCutcheon —Carey Orr — Gaar Williams

BLUE RIBBON FICTION
Daily serial story—Weekly short story and serial.

TRUE LIFE STORIES
WEEKLY
Woman's Special Page
Embroidery Page
Sport Page—Science Page

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Doris Blake Articles
Antoinette Donnelly Beauty Articles
Men's Fashions
Women's Fashions

SUNDAY
Paris Fashions

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Dr. W. A. Evans Health Articles

WEEKLY
Burns Mantle Theatrical Letter (New York)
Mencken Literary Review
Movie Letter
N. Y. Society Letter
"About Broadway" by Mark Hellinger

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Woods and Waters by Bob Becker
Walter Eckersall's Football Articles
In Motordom by J. L. Jenkins
Line o' Type by R. H. L.

DAILY
Wake of the News by Harvey T. Woodruff

SUNDAY
The Nickeldicks—Children's Story
The Sporting Goods by Westbrook Pegler

DAILY AND SUNDAY
What's Wrong Here?
Cookery Articles by Jane Eddington
Farm and Garden by Frank Ridgeway

SUNDAY
Practical and Fancy Needlework
Home Harmonious
Club Ethics by Maude Evans

DAILY
The Goops by Gelett Burgess
Sentence Sermons by Rev. Roy L. Smith

WEEKLY
Book Reviews by Fanny Butcher
Confessions of Authors
Justice Series

PACIFIC AND ATLANTIC PHOTOS
Organized by The Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News 25 Park Place, New York

CHICAGO TRIBUNE PRESS SERVICE
Foreign—National—Local

Blue Ribbon Fiction Will Build Circulation For You During the Summer Months

Such names as Booth Tarkington, Octavus Roy Cohen, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Henry C. Rowland, conjure up thoughts of many fascinating hours of reading. Lovers of good fiction will never pass up the latest work of such authors if these stories can be purchased for the price of a newspaper.

For years The Chicago Tribune has felt the enormous influence of good fiction upon its circulation. Space in The Tribune's Fiction Section is now being bought by national advertisers who realize the advantages of appearing in the same section with Blue Ribbon Fiction.

A glance at the list of Blue Ribbon short stories (never before published) scheduled for the summer and fall should indicate to editors the wonderful chance not only to hold circulation during the weak months but to increase it!

Wire or write for proofs and rates.

BLUE RIBBON first-run FICTION scheduled for the Summer and Fall.

THE BITTER SAMARITAN.....By Ida M. Evans
A MAN MUST HOLD HIS WIFE..By E. P. Oppenheim
FLYING SEED.....By Marjorie Bowen
APRIL DAY.....By Frank R. Adams
A GRAIN OF MUSTARD SEED.By Kath. Newlin Burt
THE WITCH'S HAT.....By Douglas Newton
THEIR FAMOUS FATHER.....By Ida M. Evans
THE STORY OF JESS TIVERTON.....By Win Brooks
GRAY SMOKE.....By Octavus Roy Cohen
THE SPANISH ELEVATOR.....By Dorothy Haight
THE DOCTOR'S LOVE STORY.By H. De Vere Stacpoole
CYNTHIA DELMORTON'S MISTAKE.....By Sapper
THE PECULIAR TEMPTATION OF PETER JACKSON CIGAR MERCHANT..By Gilbert Frankau
THE HUSBAND HUNTER.....By Leigh Hutty
THE FAIR UNFAIR.....By Booth Tarkington
THE VAN DER DONCK MANSION..By Grace Torrey
MASQUERADE.....By Struthers Burt
THE DISTANT SCENE.....By Allen Raymond
FIRST RATERS.....By Frank Hurburt O'Hara
THE DEFAULTERS.....By Carl Clausen
THE LITTLE RED HAIRED GIRL.By Elizabeth Jordan
MRS. GALAHAD.....By Ida M. Evans
THE BAMBOO RAFT.....By Frederick O'Brien
THE HANDSOME HOOFER.....By Gene Markey
MANHATTAN NIGHT.....By William Almon Wolff
FREEDOM.....Struthers Burt
YELLOW PERIL.....By Margaret Culkin Banning
TALION.....By William Gilmore Bayner
DAILY AND SUNDAY SERIALS.By Henry C. Rowland, Edgar Wallace, Louis Tracy and Rosita Forbes

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE
Newspapers SYNDICATE
Tribune Square . . . CHICAGO

BUFFALO THE WONDER CITY OF AMERICA

Here Is the Story of Automobile Display Advertising in Buffalo

For the first four months of 1926 the automobile display lineage in Buffalo newspapers was as follows:

In the Daily Newspapers

NEWS	Times	Courier	Express
229,953	79,934	54,501	85,385

In the Sunday Newspapers

No Sunday Issue	179,631	186,055	133,366

Note that the NEWS is far in the lead in the daily field and that even when the Sunday issues are added to the daily figures there is very little difference between the 6-day NEWS and the 7-day papers.

These figures are for passenger car display advertising only and do not include used car classified ads. The NEWS, as everyone in Buffalo knows, carries exclusively practically all of the used car classified ads.

The trend of automobile advertising toward the Buffalo NEWS is a reflection of the changing policies in automobile retailing. The day of easy business has passed for the automobile dealer. He can no longer wait for buyers to come to him—he must go after buyers—using the most effective selling and advertising methods. With this change in the merchandising of automobiles, more care is being used in selecting advertising mediums. So-called free publicity must give way to effective circulation. The newspaper with the big buying audience must be used in preference to papers with smaller distribution. Automobile buying is passing and automobile selling is here. Successful selling requires the presentation of your sales story to the greatest audience as frequently as possible. That is why automobile dealers are choosing the NEWS.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

A. B. C. Mar. 31, 1926
134,469

EDWARD H. BUTLER, Editor and Publisher

Present Average Over 140,000

National Representatives

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Marbridge Building
New York City

Waterman Building
Boston, Mass.

Atlantic Building
Philadelphia, Pa.

Tribune Tower
Chicago, Ill.

Men who strike OIL

do not merely drift around and drill at random: they concentrate in areas where expert geologists know that oil exists.

Advertisers who get best RESULTS—do not broadcast aimlessly to all the world: they concentrate on reaching people who are known to be prosperous.

The New York Herald Tribune appeals particularly to prosperous progressive readers: it is a complete modern newspaper, interesting and dependable.

In addition to its comprehensive circulation of highest grade within the city limits of Greater New York, the Herald Tribune has the largest circulation on week-days of any standard size New York morning newspaper throughout the residential suburbs.

And 32 percent of the men listed in the Directory of Directors—New York's most influential executives—have their homes in the suburbs.

That is why advertisers who study conditions use the Herald Tribune—they know it reaches families who are really able to buy.

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune

In the Heart of Philadelphia and in the Hearts of Philadelphians

Broad Street Station
Present Philadelphia Terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad, where most of the delegates to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World Convention will arrive.

University of Pennsylvania
The entrance to the University of Pennsylvania Dormitories, 32nd Street and Woodland Avenue. The University was founded by Benjamin Franklin. It is here that many sessions of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World convention will be held.

Directly across the City Hall Plaza from the Pennsylvania Terminal stands the imposing home of The Evening Bulletin. It is there that Headquarters of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World are located.

The Bulletin is Philadelphia's Newspaper. It is read in practically every home in and around Philadelphia. The Bulletin's net paid daily circulation of 533,169 is the largest in Philadelphia and one of the largest in the United States. No newspaper enjoys greater reader confidence. No newspaper produces more for its advertisers.

The growth of Philadelphia's retail business and the popularity of advertised goods in this market are reflected by the continued and steadily increasing use of space in The Bulletin. Because The Bulletin dominates Philadelphia, it offers maximum impression at minimum cost.

The Bulletin Building
The home of Philadelphia's Newspaper. Here the headquarters of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World convention are located.

The Poor Richard Club
Located at 1319 Locust Street and named for Benjamin Franklin, the famous prototype of modern business philosophy.

The Evening Bulletin
PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads the Bulletin"

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St. at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 59 NEW YORK, JUNE 5, 1926 No. 2

Third Annual Directory of Press Features Shows Record Syndicate Development

More Than 2,000 Features by 750 Writers and Artists Made Available to Newspapers by Hundred-Odd Firms, Covering Every Editorial Field Except General Spot News

MORE than 750 authors and artists produce more than 2,000 features which are made available daily and at less frequent intervals to newspapers by more than 100 syndicates and services. They can give the circulation-hungry editor a 16-page magazine in colors, or they may give him a 2-line filler for the foot of a column, and they can give him anything and everything else that the fortune demands.

What they give is detailed at length in the directory of features on the following pages. This is the third annual listing of its kind by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and irrespective of the new service elements that it includes it indicates that the feature business has exceeded record dimensions in range and quality of products.

In addition to the directory of features this issue presents for the first time a directory of authors and artists and the syndicates through which their work is offered. The usual list of syndicates, their chief executives, and their home addresses appears at the end of the directory.

A casual inspection of the directory warrants the judgment that publication of a dull or uninteresting newspaper for any considerable in the face of this wealth of material approaches the criminal estate. Fortunately no feature enjoys a monopoly of its type, though some may win and hold a practical empire over their field by sheer excellence. Even these are imitated. The editor who believes that his competitor's circulation dominance is due to a certain feature should have little difficulty in giving his readers something just as good in the same line.

Take comics, for instance. The list includes a dozen or so recognized headliners and literally hundreds of panels, strips and cartoons which, if not in the strictest class, might appear creditably in any newspaper's columns and bring gratification in their wake. Comics that teach, comics that educate the youngster, comics that satirize the work and play of Mr. and Mrs. Business Man, comics that tickle and their laughs in the bladder and kick of the circus—you can have them all or all of them by paying a little money—and taking your choice.

Do you want to make a special drive for the favor of the local ladies? Their children, their homes, their gardens, the fancy morning breakfast or the snack after the bridge club, their husbands, their children, their sweethearts and their children's sweethearts—these are but a trace of the immense volume of material at your disposal. Serial stories galore, some with daily climax that leaves 'em gripping the chair-arms, some of slower and more ancient vintage, and some just written because editors like serials, form a section under the letter "S" in the directory of general features. Under the same letter come short stories in even greater numbers than the 60,000-80,000-word masterpieces. Up-to-the-minute "short stories" will fill a half-page daily with open delight of the ladies and to be conned in a corner by the men.

Political cartoons are available for the newspaper which favors the League of Nations and for that which shuns it, for the dry and the wet, Republican and Democrat, and a host of cartoons for the paper which rides the fence on all such issues. Editorials of every shade of opinion and none at all can be had by the publisher whose purse won't permit the employment of a gifted writer.

Are the town's babies engaging your thoughts? You can give the mothers columns per day on how to feed, bathe, clothe, and quiet the infants without advising father to wear paths in the bedroom carpet after midnight.

Does the idea of a bedtime story stir your thoughts? Take your pick of a dozen or more by famous writers of that material.

Do you think the town needs the stimulating influence of puzzles? You can buy battalions of enigmas, charades, rebuses, cryptograms and regiments of cross-word puzzles.

Does the sport section need bolstering? Almost 100 features pay exclusive attention to the various indoor and outdoor games, telling the neophyte how, describing the professional's methods in word and picture, question boxes, columns of trenchant and pungent comment, opinions on the relative speed of the horses, "by-line" pieces by famous champions, reminiscent tales, etc., ad lib.

Do you want a page of pictures or mat pictures of the day's news? Almost a score of firms stand ready to supply your needs.

For the editor who wants a wide selection of features laid on his desk daily for the assembling of an appropriate daily menu for his clientele, half a dozen "blanket services" are listed.

And what of the Great White Way? Is there a call for odd bits of information on the doings of theatrical stars, society leaders? Fifteen or twenty New York letters, general, movie, dramatic, society, etc., are spread on the counter for the discriminating buyer.

Or is it financial news and comment that is desired? Two dozen different writers approach the marts of trade with spectacles of varying hues. The "big board" in New York, the curb, bond, commodity and foreign exchange markets are all covered by experts for the syndicates, many of which also supply a weekly round-up of market developments to supplement the daily service.

Wealth, plus health—a magic formula for success which the editor can supply. With a score of learned experts attending to information on wealth come almost as many medical men with advice as to daily corporal conduct. As a rule, they won't diagnose ailments nor prescribe remedies, but they do answer simply and ably health queries of general interest in addition to half a column or so of daily comment and constructive advice.

Wealth, health plus beauty—an unbeatable combination for the fair ones which is also within the editor's grasp. Opera stars, movie queens vie with the regular feminine beauties of the newspaper shops in telling their sisters how to keep the girlish complexion and the girth of youth.

Half a score more of respected advisors will counsel the maid and the

(Continued on page 61)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
THIRD ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF FEATURES

General, Art and Sport Features—Directory of Authors and Artists—List of Syndicate Officers and Addresses

(Copyright 1926 by Editor & Publisher Co.)

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

Interviews, Columns, Editorials, Women's Page, Radio, Serials, Etc.

A

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Abe Martin (d)	Kin Hubbard	National Newspaper Service
About Broadway (w)	Mark Hellinger	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
About Photoplays (w) (⅓)		Editor's Copy
About Women (w)	Rupert Hughes	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Ad-route (House Organ) (m)	W. S. Ball	International Syndicate
Advertising Service (m) (ill) (22p)		Star Adcraft Service
Adventures Around the World, My	Galli-Curci	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Adventures of Dr. Doolittle (d) (½)	Hugh Lofting	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Advice to Girls (d) (⅛)	Annie Laurie	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Advice to the Lovelorn (3w) (ill) (1)	Beatrice Fairfax	International Feature Service, Inc.
Along the Highway (d) (1)	W. G. Sibley	Chicago Journal of Commerce
American Art Today (w)	Molly C. Ohl	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Andrew & Imogene (d) (½)	Roe Fulkerson	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Anecdotes (d) (⅛)	Selected	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Annabelle Cut-Outs (w) (tab)		World Color Printing Co.
Answers to Questions (d-w) (⅜)	F. J. Haskin	Frederic J. Haskin
Arabian Nights Color Pictures (d) (2)	Harlowe R. Hoyt	Publishers Syndicate
Are You Discouraged? (d) (¼)	Frank Wright	C. C. Powell Newspaper Features
Art, American Today (w) (m)	Molly C. Ohl	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Articles (d)	Glenn Frank	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Ask Priscilla Wayne (d) (⅛)	Priscilla Wayne	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Autobiography	George M. Cohan	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Autobiography (w)	Galli-Curci	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Auction Bridge Players, Table Manners for (d) (1)	Marie Van Riper Watts	Imperial News Service
Aunt Het (d) (⅛)	Robert Quillen	Publishers Syndicate

B

Babble from Babylon (d) (⅛)	Duncan	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Babson, Roger W. (w) (1)	Roger W. Babson	Publishers' Financial Bureau
Baby Brown Speaks Out (w)	Elizabeth Lowndes	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Baby Mine (d)	Paul Pim	George Matthew Adams Service
Background of Events (3-w)	Paul V. Collins	Paul V. Collins Editorial Syndicate
Background of Foreign Affairs (w) (1½)	Henry Kittredge Norton	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Baseball Index (d) (¼)	J. S. Whitney	Current News Features, Inc.
Hazel Batchelor Serials (d) (½)	Hazel Devo Batchelor	Ledger Syndicate
Beatrice Fairfax Articles (3w) (ill)	Beatrice Fairfax	International Feature Service, Inc.
Beauty—and You (d) (ill)	Vogue	Conde Naste Newspaper Service
Beautiful Home (w) (fp)	Various	Editors' Syndicate
Beauty Articles	Antionette Donnelly	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Beauty Chats (d)	Edna Kent Forbes	George Matthew Adams Service
Beauty Chats (3tw) (¼)	Lucrezia Bori	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Beauty Hints (d) (¼)	Peggy Hopkins Joyce	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Beauty Secrets (ill) (d) (½)	Mme. Qui Vive	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Beautiful Woman, The (d) (⅛)	Jane Grant	D. P. Syndicate
Bedtime Story (d)	Howard R. Garis	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Behind the Foreign News (w) (1)	Rogers	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Bettina's Recipes (d) (¼)	Louise B. Weaver	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Big Sister Talks (3tw) (½)	Lucy Lowell	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Bingville Puzzle Page (w) (tab)		World Color Printing Co.
Biography, Buffalo Bill	Julia Cody Goodman	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Biography, Christy Mathewson	Bozeman Bulger, Mrs. Mathewson	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Biography, Woodrow Wilson (ill)	Wm. Allen White	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Biography, Woodrow Wilson (ill)	Mary Allen Hulbert (Mrs. Peck)	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Blanket Service (d)	Staff	Associated Newspapers
Blanket Service (d)	Staff	Central Press Association

(Continued on page 40)

MASON LEAVES N. Y. HERALD TRIBUNE TO JOIN EVENING POST AS EDITOR

Former Paper Names Draper Assistant Editor, Holcombe Managing Editor, and Renaud Placed in Charge of Sunday Edition

JULIAN S. MASON, managing editor of the New York Herald Tribune, has resigned to become editor-in-chief of the New York Evening Post, owned by Cyrus H. K. Curtis. His resignation from the Herald Tribune is effective immediately, but he will not assume his new duties until July 1.

JULIAN S. MASON

David E. Smiley, editor-in-chief of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and the Philadelphia Sun, two other Curtis newspapers, who has been dividing his time between New York and Philadelphia, will devote all his time to Philadelphia after the end of this month.

In a statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Mason said:

"I feel that the Evening Post offers the best opportunities in the evening field in New York. It is a paper devoted to the finest traditions. Its editorial chair has been filled by a succession of great figures in American journalism. It is now being published by one of the leading publishing organizations in the country—the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, Inc. I feel the property has an assured future, and I am very much pleased to be associated with it."

A series of important executive changes on the New York Herald Tribune followed the resignation this week of Mr. Mason as the managing editor.

As given to EDITOR & PUBLISHER by Ogden Reid, editor and owner of the Herald Tribune, these changes are:

Appointment of Arthur S. Draper as assistant editor.

Creation of an editorship co-ordinate with the managing editorship, with Ralph E. Renaud in charge of the Sunday Herald Tribune. Appointment of Armistead R. Holcombe as managing editor, succeeding Mr. Mason. Mr. Holcombe was formerly night editor, and is succeeded by Henley Hill, his former assistant.

Edward Logan is now the assistant night editor, and Alan T. Holcomb has been named head of the copy desk.

Mr. Mason declined to discuss the reasons for his resignation when questioned by EDITOR & PUBLISHER. He said he intended to take a month's vacation at his home situated in Glen Cove, Long Island.

Other than stating he was sorry to see Mr. Mason leave, Mr. Reid likewise refused to tell the inside story of the shake-up. He said the paper had grown so steadily since the merger with the new York Herald that five men were now needed to handle the news and editorial departments directed by two executives up to six months ago.

Mr. Draper, as assistant editor, will be in complete charge of the paper in the absence of Mr. Reid, and will maintain general supervision of all the editorial and news departments. The news council, however, is directed by Mr. Holcombe, the new managing editor.

Mr. Mason had been managing editor of the Tribune, later the Herald Tribune, since 1922, coming to New York from Chicago, where he was managing editor of the Chicago Evening Post. He has also been associated with the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Daily News.

All the men promoted as a result of Mr. Mason's resignation are veterans in the service of Mr. Reid and the Herald Tribune. On the 10th of this month, Mr. Draper will have been 21 years with that newspaper. Mr. Renaud first worked for the New York Tribune in Washington in 1889, and thus, although he worked on other newspapers afterwards, he is listed as one of the daily's oldest employes.

Mr. Draper became a reporter for the New York Tribune immediately after being graduated from New York University. He was later shifted to the rewrite staff, and promoted to night city editor and then in 1913 to Sunday editor. In 1915, Mr. Draper was sent abroad as general European manager of the Tribune with headquarters in London. He returned to this country about a year ago to become foreign editor, the position he held prior to his present promotion.

After his short experience as Washington correspondent for the Tribune, Mr. Renaud went west where he attended Leland Stanford, Jr., University. After college he started newspaper work regularly on the San Francisco Examiner. He remained on San Francisco dailies for nine years, becoming dramatic critic of the San Francisco Bulletin, and later holding the same position on the San Francisco Chronicle. He came to New York in 1912, joining the staff of the New York Globe, and in 1914 transferred to the Tribune where he has remained since, with the exception of about a year spent as night managing editor of the New York Herald before the merger. He was made assistant managing editor of the Herald Tribune under Mr. Mason.

Mr. Holcombe, the new managing editor, spent several years teaching school, following his graduation with an A. B. degree from Centenary College in Louisiana and an M. A. from Vanderbilt University in 1898. For three years he was an instructor in geology and history at Vanderbilt. Then he taught for a year at a private school in Staunton, Tenn., before actively entering newspaper work.

His first newspaper experience came in 1901 on the staff of the old New Orleans Picayune, under Herman Seiferth, still with that publication, now the Times-Picayune. He spent eight years with the Picayune as reporter and then went to the St. Louis Republic, where he became assistant city editor. He left St. Louis for Cleveland and there was assistant city editor of the Cleveland Leader, returning after a short while to the St. Louis Times. He later became managing editor of this paper.

During the war, Mr. Holcombe came to New York and joined the copy desk of the old New York Morning Sun. In the fall of 1918, he transferred to the copy desk of the Tribune. Four years ago he was made night editor.

HERALD TRIBUNE'S NEW TITLE

Merger of Two New York Dailies Now Completed in Name

Merger of the New York Herald and the New York Tribune, accomplished in fact in March, 1924, was completed in name June 1. Then the newspaper appeared with a new title line, merging the old mastheads of the two papers into one as the New York Herald Tribune.

The new masthead was designed by T. M. Cleland, New York artist, under the direct supervision of Ogden M. Reid, owner and editor of the daily.

The "Herald Tribune" is in hand-drawn simplified Old English, with the words separated by the old Tribune's seal enlarged and improved. Centered above the nameplate, "New York" appears in hand-drawn Roman bold.

New Herald Tribune executives (left to right): A. R. Holcombe, managing editor; A. S. Draper, assistant editor; Ralph Renaud, in charge of Sunday edition.

The seal or "dingbat" as members of the staff call it, has been part of the Tribune's masthead since the paper was established on April 10, 1841. It shows two figures at either side of a clock surmounted by an American Eagle. On the right of the clock sits Father Time gazing into an hour glass. In the distance are shown camels and Grecian pillars, symbolic of old means of transportation and ancient civilization. In the foreground a farmer plows a field with an ox-drawn plough.

On the other side of the clock, representative of the present, the figure of Youth stands, striding boldly forward bearing an American flag. In the background smoke belching factory chimneys tell the story of the present civilization. Modern transportation is depicted by the picture of a train of the period of 1841 crossing a bridge, and telegraph wires tell of improved communications. In the foreground lie a plough, sheaves of wheat and a rake, symbolic of modern agriculture. Labor is likewise represented in the symbolism by a pick-ax and a factory gear wheel which lie at the foot of the clock.

TRANSCRIPT IN NEW DRESS

Boston Daily Using Larger Type to Increase Legibility

The Boston Evening Transcript on May 24 appeared in a complete new type dress, consisting of 7-point on 7½ point slug. The former type was 6-point. The linotype matrix carries No. 2 Old Style combined with boldface No. 2 for subheads.

In a front page box announcing the type change the Transcript stated "it did not mean to say things louder, but to say them more clearly."

Joyce Leaves Newspaper Work

After more than 20 years in the journalistic field in Philadelphia, J. St. George Joyce, of the Evening Bulletin staff, has left newspaper work to join the Russell H. Conwell Foundation, formed to perpetuate the work of the late president of Temple University by raising a fund for $20,000,000 for the expansion of the institution.

FIRST UNIT ENQUIRI PLANT COMPLETED

Five Story Section of New 14-St Home to Be Formally Opened Sunday—Historical Edition Planned

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CINCINNATI, O., June 2.—Celebra of the temporary completion of the unit of the fourteen-story home of Cincinnati Enquirer will be observed Sunday when the executive offices, counting room, the circulation dep ment and the city editor's staff telegraph department will move the first five stories of the first unit the structure. Forthwith will comme the demolition of the four-story fron the old Enquirer Building which has st for more than 60 years. The conc building in the rear, containing the fi cial department, the art department, advertising staff and sporting departm will not be demolished until the sec and third units of the building are c pleted to a height of about five sto which will be in about four or five mon

The Enquirer through the work Librarian Harry Pence has prepare supplement to its Sunday edition for J 6 which gives a complete history of personnel of the newspaper from foundation in 1841 by Washington Lean and James L. Faran, former gressman and mayor of Cincinnati, the present day. Among the perso of former reporters, editors and dep ment heads are men who have atta fame in journalism and belle lettres, as Lafcadio Hearn, author and essa Allen O. Myers, political writer and thor; G. M. D. Bloss, editorial wri John R. McLean, editor and business ecutive; George Randolph Chester, ator of "Get Rich Quick Wallingfo which famous character was reputed be a former copy reader on the Enq who capitalized his name at $500,000 working for $25 a week; Windsor Mc artist and cartoonist; James W. Fa ner, dean of Ohio political writers; J Hastings, "Luke McLuke" colum John A. Cockerill, editor and later torial director of New York World Washington Post; James M. Cox, t times Governor of Ohio and Democ presidential candidate; Robert F. Sc kers, boy story writer and creato "Seketary Hawkins" now syndicated.

Other prominent men who were or Enquirer staff were: Lewis T. H Charles L. Doran, Charles W. Hoc Sam F. Cary, O. P. Austin, Charle Christie, G. F. Hayman, Theodore H man, John T. McCarthy, Alex C. Sa Charles Scanlon, Ren. Mulford, Jr., Ja Murray Allison, Elliott Marfield, H M. Weldon, Walter F. Draper.

VON WIEGAND IN AUTO ACCID

European Director of Universal Ser Narrowly Escapes Death

Karl H. Von Wiegand, European ager of Universal Service, narr escaped death on May 20, while ret ing to his Paris headquarters by a mobile from Warsaw, where he covered the Polish revolution.

While traveling 50 miles an hour a a straight smooth road 15 miles Kutnow, the motor suddenly flared into the exhaust and a moment later forward part of the car was in fla The automobile was a big six-cyli French Farman, with a closed body.

Mr. Von Weigand was sitting in with the driver. The car has but doors, both in front. The Amer correspondent opened one and jum for his life. No one was injured.

"All's well that ends well," Wiegand wrote to Chester Hope, e of Universal Service, in a letter rece in New York this week, "But it w close call."

Mr. Von Wiegand is now spendi month's vacation with Mrs. Von Wie on the Riviera.

CIRCULATION PROBLEMS UNDER MICROSCOPE

'uture of Tabloids, Postal Rates, Motor Delivery, and Ethics Code, Big Topics to Be Considered at I. C. M. A. Philadelphia Meet—Round Table Discussions to Cover Entire Field

NEWSPAPER circulation managers of the country will apply a microscope their business, seeking new discoveries the science of selling their products, at ie 28th annual convention of the Inter-ational Circulation Managers' Associaon to be held in Philadelphia Tuesday, ednesday and Thursday of next week. The future of tabloid newspapers, pos-l rates, motorization of delivery, and a de of ethics are four outstanding topics a program which comprehensively vers the old problems and new inno-tions in the circulation field.

Pres. E. R. Hatton

The sessions of the convention will be ld at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, esident E. R. Hatton, circulation man-er of the Detroit Free Press will pre-le, while group discussions will be led designated members.

The future of the tabloid newspaper ll be the first topic up for considera-n following the addresses of welcome, ports of officers, and the president's dress.

Two representatives of the Postoffice partment will discuss mail rates. Rural otor delivery will be presented for con-deration Tuesday morning. D. B. G. se of Louisville, Ky., will present a de of ethics for circulation managers.

Virtually every phase of circulation will taken up in round table discussions.

Invited guests who will address the culators include L. B. Palmer, mana-, American Newspaper Publishers' sociation; Stanley Clague, managing ector, Audit Bureau of Circulations; W. Chandler, chief auditor, and Wil-m F. Hoffman, New York manager, B. C.; James Wright Brown, publish-EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and Fred J. nde, general manager, Fourth Estate. n elaborate entertainment program been arranged including visits to the qui-Centennial Exposition and historic ts in and about Philadelphia.

STANLEY CLAGUE

D. B. G. ROSE

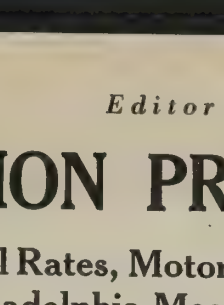
The complete program follows:

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 7

Meeting of the Board of Directors.
Report of the Entertainment Committee.
Report of the Auditing Committee.
Report of the Convention Committee.

GENERAL BUSINESS

TUESDAY MORNING, 9 O'CLOCK, JUNE 8



Convention called to order.
Roll call.
Address of welcome.
Reading of minutes of previous convention.
Report of the board of directors.
Report of program committee.
Auditor's report.
Secretary's report.
Report of special committees.
Report of standing committees.
President's address.
Motions.
Resolutions.
Report of committee on by-laws and constitution.
Special business.

"Tabloids"—Is the newspaper of the future to be tabloid? If so, when will that time come?

Paper by James Sullivan, New York Daily News, and Joseph C. Rowett, Washington (D. C.) News.

Discussion led by O. O. Scattergood, New York Graphic; Ben Bloom, New York Mirror; Robert Weir, Buffalo (N. Y.) Star; Nathan Sherry, Baltimore (Md.) Post; J. M. Annnenberg, Philadelphia (Pa.) Sun; Rob't Corrigan, Los Angeles (Cal.) Examiner.

"Sales Organization and Promotion"—

L. B. PALMER

J. M. SCHMID

M. E. Douglas, circulation manager, Curtis Publishing Company.

"The Relation of Single Mail Rates to Second Class Mailing Privileges"—Regar, Third Assistant Postmaster-General; Wm. Wood, Classification Division, Postoffice Department, Washington, D. C.

TUESDAY P. M.

Rural Auto Delivery—What is its future? Is it more favorable for morning or afternoon papers?

Paper by Galt Burns, Washington (D. C.) Star.

Discussion led by Robert W. Taylor, Flint (Mich.) Daily Journal; John Schmid, Indianapolis (Ind.) News.

"Bus, Railraod Baggage and Postal Rates"—Discussion led by Clarence Hixon, Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard; Robert McLean, Philadelphia (Pa.) Bulletin; H. C. Kloecker, Cincinnati, (O.) Enquirer.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, 9 O'CLOCK, JUNE 9

Introducing L. B. Palmer, general manager, American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

"Insurance"—Advantages and disadvantages of insurance policies as circulation builders.

Papers by L. J. Hoffman, St. Louis (Mo.) Star, and Thos. Welch, Philadelphia (Pa.) Record.

Discussion led by Karl Hall, Toledo (O.) Blade; Chas. Wilson, Columbus (O.) Dispatch; Ray South, Birmingham (Ala.) News.

"Promoting Serials and Special Features for Morning, Evening or Sunday Papers"—Paper by Walter Rauck, Cincinnati Post.

Discussion led by J. W. Kenny, Detroit (Mich.) Times; W. J. Parker, Chicago American; J. N. Eisenlord, Chicago News; Clem D. O'Rourke, St. Louis Times.

"A Code of Ethics for Circulation Managers"—D. B. G. Rose, Louisville, Ky.

WEDNESDAY P. M.

Introducing Stanley Clague, managing director, Audit Bureau of Circulations.

CLARENCE EYSTER

C. E. BLEWER

What Bookkeeping Methods Shall the Circulation Managers Adopt to Facilitate the Work of the A. B. C.?—E. W. Chandler, chief auditor of the A. B. C.; William F. Hoffman, manager New York Office, Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Introducing James Wright Brown, publisher, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Introducing Fred J. Runde, vice-president and general manager Fourth Estate.

"Building and Holding Single Mail Circulation on Rural Routes"—Paper by W. A. Cordingly, Des Moines Register-Tribune.

Discussion led by Ted Booth, Grand Rapids (Mich) Press; John T. Toler, Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution; Geo. Erbe, Jr., Buffalo (N. Y.) News; John J. Kirk, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Promoting Street Sales in the Average Small State Cities"—Paper by V. A. Bridges, Omaha Bee.

Discussion led by Chas. T. Buck, Scranton (Pa.) Republican; Frank Roberts, Rochester (N. Y.) Times-Union; C. W. Crum, Lexington (Ky.) Leader; W. B. Mills, New Haven (Ct.) Register; C. E. Blewer, Binghamton (N. Y.) Press.

"How Can a Small Town Sunday Paper Be Sold Against Competing Metropolitan Editions Which Carry Twice the Number of Features?"—Paper by Bernard Knight Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald.

Discussion led by F. M. Hatch, South Bend (Ind.) Tribune; A. W. Cockerill, Utica (N. Y.) Press; V. P. Willett, Akron (O.) Times-Press.

"Most Effective Promotion Methods on a Morning Newspaper in Towns Where the Sentiment Is Toward the Evening Newspapers?"—Paper by J. L. Thornton, Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald.

Discussion by R. H. Beach, Springfield (Mass.) Republican; R. D. M. Decker, Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and Chronicle; G. C. Gardner, Binghamton (N. Y.) Sun.

Round Table Talks—Time and place to be announced by Chairman.

Round Table Chairmen

Evening—J. N. Eisenlord, Chicago Daily News.

Morning—John J. Kirk, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sunday—Chairman to be chosen by those present from members operating morning and Sunday, also evening and Sunday papers.

The Sunday meeting will be held after the morning and evening round table talks, if agreeable to a majority present.

Farm Papers—E. A. Shearer, Michigan Farmer, Detroit, Mich.

THURSDAY A. M.

General Discussion

1—Value of Carrier papers and house organs.

2—Co-operation between Circulation Manager and editorial departments, on News stories—feature promotion and serials.

3—Shortcuts and economies in operation of circulation department, mailing room, trucks, left on hands on press runs.

4—To what extent should "pressrun" exceed "Net Paid"?

5—What effect have flapper stories on circulation? Is the appeal of this type of story diminishing?

6—Value of a Woman's page to a morning newspaper. How many morning newspapers present run one? How many have discontinued them?

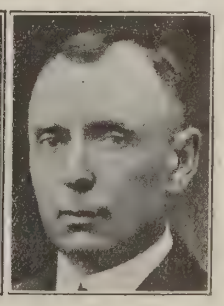
7—What are the main problems of operating under a budget system? What do you do to meet emergencies on a budget system? How many operate on budget?

8—What effect has the roto sections on evening papers on Saturday toward overcoming the usual Saturday slump? Does the extra circulation secured this way justify the extra expense?

9—Does the color supplement on evening papers where there is no extra charge, affect the Sunday Bull Dog edition sale?

10—Does Radio Broadcasting by newspapers increase circulation?

11—What papers have used aeroplanes for delivery? What is the average number of pounds a plane can carry? How many stops do they make?



12—What automobile allowance should be made to roadmen? A flat allowance of so much per week? Or a mileage allowance on speedometer readings submitted to the office each day together with a daily report of places visited and results accomplished?

13—Bus Lines? Are they under jurisdiction of Public Utilities Commission in your state? What rates do they charge? Do they file tariffs? Do certain lines refuse to carry papers? What do you do about complaints? What efforts have been made by your state associations to standardize bus rates?

14—Railroad Baggage rates in the south? What states are starting to benefit by these rates? Are they on zone

J. N. EISENLORD

ROBERT WEIR

rate basis, or a flat rate for the whole railroad system?

15—What percentage should a boy receive on a 65 cent monthly collection? What percentage should the office finally receive?

16—Downtown Street Sales Slump. What causes them? Does the installation of buses decrease your sale? Does rigid enforcing of traffic and parking rules cut them down? Does the bus cut down the reading habit of the public because of the vibration and poor lighting of a majority of the busses?

17—What is the best method of distributing a carrier boy's paper on a newspaper with 30,000 city circulation?

18—What are the best methods of handling Base Ball editions in residential neighborhoods?

19—Should district managers or substations be employed, one man to a certain number of subscribers, or to a certain area, or to so many boys?

20—How often should carrier contests be employed? What are the best periods of the year?

21—What has been the BEST stunt employed during the year through carrier organizations? What was the cost per order?

22—Premiums. What has been the most popular premium used during the year, to either boys or readers? If charge is made for premium how and when is the collection made for same? Are subscribers permitted to secure premium before expiration of their contracts?

23—What results have papers had in dish distribution on R. D. Routes? What percentage of subscribers failed to make regular payments where installment payments were permitted?

24—What is the best method of securing and holding Negro readers, especially in the South and South-West?

25—In towns where competitive papers have a circulation of more than 100 copies or more—is it best to have joint or independent agents?

26—Is it possible or practical for competitive newspapers to co-operate successfully in handling country agents circulations? Can they make use of each other's roadmen when it is economical to do so?

27—What satisfactory arrangements can be made with country agents so that they will have the residential neighborhoods of their towns covered thoroughly by sales boys on Sunday mornings?

28—Is it best to have country territories divided into small districts with a travelling representative in charge of each or to have larger districts with fewer travelling men and a few solicitors?

29—Would it be advisable to black list "No Good Foreign Dealers" in the Monthly Bulletin? Would all members co-operate? Would it be possible to have a clearing house where all members could write for the list of O. K. out-of-town newsstands? Would this work a hardship on the secretary-treasurer to keep this revised? Should a charge be made for this service? If so, how much?

30—Best method of changing from office owned routes to independent delivery?

31—Various suggestions to keep carrier complaints to a minimum?

32—How can carriers in outside towns be induced to secure new subscribers without prizes or premiums?

33—How can a newsdealer's counter sales be increased?

34—How many papers have predate editions? How many have eliminated them? How many have reinstated them? Why? How do you bill them? On day they are dated?

35—Overcoming Summer Slumps. Who has succeeded in cutting this Holiday and Summer Half Holiday slump below the previous year? How about Christmas, New Years, Decoration Day and 4th of July? Which is the heaviest loss suffered on? Why?

36—How many publishers are paying full rates on mail bundles and hauling them a great distance before shipping them on trains or trolleys? What can be done to have this matter discussed by the Publishers' Postal Committee or our own Committee?

37—What is expected of a roadman?

38—What is fair to a dealer that receives his papers late, through no fault of his own? Should he receive full credit for them?

39—What methods can be used in promoting street sales in towns less than 60,000?

40—Contest Circulation. What results have been secured through the recent automobile and house contests?

41—What methods have been used in keeping records of paid-in-advance subscriptions?

42—What value is a promotion manager to a Circulation Department? Should Circulation Promotion be handled through the Circulation Department or through a specially organized promotion department entirely separate from circulation?

43—What is the best means to secure better representation through Railway News Agencies and Steamship Agencies?

44—Does a Bull Dog edition of a morning paper in a town where the competitive morning paper does not have a Bull Dog edition, work to the detriment of the morning sales with the regular morning sale of the paper that prints the bull dog?

45—What is the best method to stop "Stops"?

46—What is the most practical way to order PRESS RUNS by editions to hold down left overs and returns?

47—What percentage of Single Mail Subscribers renew each year? What would you consider a fair percentage? What have you found to be the most general reason for not renewing?

48—How would you combat the free distribution of a paper by a department store?

49—Do you save money on upkeep of your mail list by putting in addressing machines?

50—Which is the most practical for dealer labels? For Single Mail List?

51—Should we offer in our club combinations of magazines more than 50 per cent of the face value of the magazines suggested? For example, is it better to offer three magazines at their face value, which would amount to $1.00, and then cut it 50 per cent plus your paper charge, or is it better to educate the farmer to receive a big offer for a great number of magazines, say twelve or thirteen whose face value is possibly $3.00 and for which the agencies charge only 75c, plus your regular charge? Is there any special advantage in using this great number of magazines in clubs? Will the A. B. C. OK them and what about the Post Office Department rulings? Are you educating the farmer to hold out on his renewal with the hope of getting many dollars worth of reading matter for a dime?

52—How to hold a morning subscription of a laboring man who goes to work at 7 o'clock in the morning.

53—Advantage of using "stuffing machines" for assembling complete Sunday paper over "hand" stuffing. Difference in cost.

At 4 P. M. Thursday afternoon, all members and their families are invited to inspect the publishing plant of the CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, publishers of the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal and Country Gentleman.

THURSDAY P. M.

Election of Officers
Selection of Next Meeting Place
Unfinished Business
Adjournment of Convention
Meeting of Board of Directors

ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM

MONDAY, JUNE 7

General reception and get together party at Benjamin Franklin Hotel.
For Early Arrivals

Monday afternoon—Baseball at National League Park, Phillies vs. St. Louis.

Monday evening—Parties at various theatres, where there will be some "real" shows.

TUESDAY, JUNE 8

9:30—Ladies of the Convention register in the LaFayette Room, Mezzanine floor, Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

10:00—Tour of inspection for ladies to John Wanamaker's and other department and retail stores, under the escort of the wives of the Philadelphia members.

12:30—Luncheon will be served for the visiting ladies by the local hostesses at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. Ladies are to be together.

1:45—Ladies of the convention should be ready in the lobby of the hotel promptly to be transported to the Chestnut Street wharf.

2:00—Trip on the Delaware River, on the steamers "Wanamaker" and "Ashbridge," through the courtesy of Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick.

4:00—The ladies will return to the hotel from their boat trip. Meeting of the business session will be adjourned.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

June 8-10—International Circulation Managers' Assn., annual convention, Philadelphia, Pa.
June 11-13—Texas Press Assn., annual convention, San Antonio, Tex.
June 16-17—New York State Publishers' Assn., summer meeting, Ithaca, N. Y.
June 16-17—New York State Press Assn., summer meeting, Ithaca, N. Y.
June 18-19—Associated Dailies of New York, summer meeting, Ithaca, N. Y.
June 18-19—Oregon State Editorial Assn., annual session, Prineville, Ore.
June 19-24—Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, 22nd annual convention, Philadelphia, Pa.
June 19-26—American Golf Assn. of Advertising Interests, Spring tournament, Cooperstown, N. Y.
June 24-26—Kentucky Press Assn., mid-summer meeting, Pineville, Ky.
June 25-28—New Jersey Press Assn., summer outing, Lake Minnewaska.
June 28-29—Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Assn., convention, State College, Pa.
June 20-July 1—National Editorial Assn., 41st annual convention, Los Angeles, Cal.

Visit to the Sesqui-Centennial grounds for members and their ladies. Tickets will be furnished through the courtesy of Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9

9:30—Ladies meet in the LaFayette Room of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

10:00—Ladies of the convention will leave in automobiles at ten o'clock for a trip through Fairmount Park, up to Valley Forge, visiting Washington headquarters, Starvation Hill, Memorial Chapel, and then a motor trip to the Manufacturer's Country Club, arriving there about 1 P. M. for luncheon and cards.

4:30—Leave the Country Club, arrive at Benjamin Franklin Hotel at 5:30.

7:00—Annual Banquet in Ball Room, Benjamin Franklin Hotel,—dancing, entertainment and surprises.

THURSDAY, JUNE 10

This farewell day will offer an opportunity to see Philadelphia and its historical sights.

INDIANA A. P. MEETING

E. T. Cutter Describes Work of New Automatic Printer Circuit

Improvement in the relay system of the Associated Press which will bring international and domestic news into Indianapolis 50 per cent faster than before was the principal subject discussed at a meeting of the Indiana Associated Press Editorial Association at Indianapolis, May 24. Edgar T. Cutter, superintendent of the Central division of the Associated Press, who came from Chicago to attend the meeting, told of the superior speed of the new high-speed automatic printers which have been installed in the A. P. offices in Indianapolis.

In incidental discussion at the meeting it was decided to open the night wire to Indiana points one hour and a half earlier on Saturday to send out sports news.

Rudolph H. Horst, managing editor of the South Bend Tribune, and president of the association, presided. A luncheon was held at noon. Organization problems were discussed following a paper presented by Thomas Keene, managing editor of the Elkhart Truth. Hilton U. Brown of the Indianapolis News also spoke.

N. Y. DELEGATES TO GO BY BUS TO I.C.M.A.

Circulators Invited to Use Wanamaker De Luxe Line to Philadelphia, Leaving June 7—James McKernan Heads Transportation Committee

New York delegates to the International Circulation Managers Association's convention to be held in Philadelphia, June 8-10 have been invited to use the Wanamaker De Luxe Bus Line to make the journey. The bus will leave from Wanamaker's New York store June 7 at 9.30 A. M.

Those intending to go this way include: N. H. Hoover, circulation manager, New York World; A. A. Brandon, circulation manager, Long Island Star; F. Bresnan, city circulator, New York Evening World; William Baldwin, Metropolitan News; L. Weinstock, foreign language newspaper distributor; L. Gautier, circulation manager, New York Morning Telegraph; E. A. Scholz, United States Daily; James McKernan, Associated Newspapers; E. S. Dobson, circulation manager, Brooklyn Daily Times; John Sternecker, Kings County Delivery Company; James Allardice, circulation manager, Brooklyn Eagle; and O. O. Scattergood, circulation manager, New York Evening Graphic.

Mr. McKernan is chairman of the transportation committee.

NEW EASTMAN WILL CONTEST

Seven Cousins Again Ask Court to Declare It Void

The will of the late John C. Eastman, publisher of the Chicago Evening Journal, in which he left all of his $1,000,000 estate, including the newspaper to three of his employes is called a written jest, in a bill filed in the Circuit court, Chicago, by seven first cousins of the publisher who seek the estate.

The bill charges that Mr. Eastman was not of sound mind and memory when he made the will in April, 1922. The cousins have lost several previous appeals to break the will.

In his will the publisher directed that his entire estate be shared equally by W. Frank Dunn, now president of the Journal company; O. L. Hall, dramatic critic, vice president, and H. C. Deuter, treasurer.

The bill now filed by Mr. Eastman's cousins asserts that the publisher executed the will in writing as a jest and declared at the time that it was fictitious.

JOINS MASONS AT 69

V. S. McClatchy, Former Sacramento Bee Publisher, Tells Why He Waited

V. S. McClatchy, former editor of the Sacramento (Cal.) Bee and present secretary of California Joint Immigration Committee, of San Francisco received his third degree in Golden City Lodge No. 526, F. & A. M. in San Francisco recently.

Mr. McClatchy, who is 69 years old, made an address after the ceremony, in which he explained why he had waited so long before becoming a Mason.

He said that, when his father died, and he and his brother inherited the Sacramento Bee, they made an agreement that, so long as they guided the destinies of that paper they would join no fraternal organizations, nor would they own stock in any public utility corporation, nor have any financial holdings or fraternal affiliations that could, in any way, bias their viewpoint, or editorial or business policy; making it sure that the Bee, under their management, should be free from any and all strings.

Denison Herald to Build

The Denison (Tex.) Daily Herald has let a contract for a new office building and equipment to cost approximately $75,000. The building will be a two-story fire-proof structure.

COLVER, EDITOR AND PUBLIC SERVANT, DEAD

Long an Executive of Scripps-Howard Concern—Was One of Organizers of NEA—As Wartime Chairman of Federal Trade Commission He Instituted Vigorous Protection of Public Welfare

By MARLEN PEW

WILLIAM BYRON COLVER, nationally known newspaper man and Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission for four years during the Wilson administration, died at his Washington residence, 3303 18th street, N. W., May 28, after seven months' painful illness.

He is survived by his wife, daughter Polly Anne and a brother, Dr. Benton Colver of Battle Creek, Mich.

Simple funeral services were held on Tuesday, attended by many newspaper men, public officials and personal friends. Honorary pall bearers were Hon. Huston Thompson, H. N. Rickey, Gilson Gardner, William Philip Simms, Frank Friend and Marlen Pew. Burial was at Washington.

William Byron Colver was born at Wellington, O., in 1870. After common school education he studied law and was admitted to the bar. He practised law for a short time and then entered newspaper work, first on the Cleveland Leader, then the Plain Dealer and then with the Cleveland Press, edited by Robert F. Paine, with H. N. Rickey managing editor.

As a junior reporter he was a brilliant success, being quickly rewarded with executive positions. Mr. Colver served in every editorial capacity of the Scripps-McRae, latterly Scripps-Howard organization, retiring as editorial director more than a year ago on account of failing health. He was one of the organizers of NEA Service, of which he was editor and general manager for more than ten years, participated in the formation of the Scripps-McRae Press Association, nucleus of the United Press Associations, and assisted in starting or inspiring the policies of many of the Scripps-Howard newspapers and auxiliary services.

Mr. Colver was a writer of editorials that bristled with purpose and solid information. He was a campaigner for notable public causes and dozens of the best remembered crusades of the Scripps-Howard newspapers were creatures of his imagination. It was W. B. Colver's editorial skill, for instance, that exposed the celebrated power site and forest exploitation case and forced Ballinger to resign from Taft's cabinet. Never happier than when fighting for ideals he engaged in almost every progressive campaign of national importance for more than 25 years. Bitterness had no place in his make-up, going cheerfully into his battles, magnanimous in victory and smiling in defeat.

Mr. Colver was a close political and personal friend of the late Tom L. Johnson, for ten years Mayor of Cleveland, and during his famous 3-cent fare fight, he withdrew from journalism and devoted himself with energy and enthusiasm to the civic cause.

He was appointed secretary of the Municipal Traction Co., the original 3-cent fare line, and was one of a group of half-a-dozen men who, under Johnson's leadership, fought for public control of the street car lines.

The Tayler Grant, under which Cleveland street cars have been operating for many years, was one outcome of the fight. Others then associated with Johnson were Newton D. Baker, William Stage, Erman Dupont and John R. Stockwell.

Through Johnson's influence, Mr. Colver was appointed Cuyahoga county tax inquisitor.

For several years Mr. Colver was editorial director of the Clover Leaf newspapers, of the Northwest and it was while thus serving that President Wilson appointed him to the chairmanship of the Federal Trade Commission, which developed into a war-time post of grave responsibility. Mr. Colver's associates have given credit to his practical vision for many of the stoutest principles set up for the administration of the commission to govern competition and prevent unfair trade practices. He led a number of important fights, including the famous "stolen files" case against the Chicago beef packers.

The late William B. Colver

During the war Mr. Colver, at the request of EDITOR & PUBISHER, wrote a notable article on good will in advertising, setting forth the principle in such crystal language as to deserve a place in the memory of the craft. The question of the day was whether or not national advertisers should curb their schedules as a war measure. Mr. Colver declared that this would be false economy and discouraged it in the following language:

"Good-will, in my estimation, is far more valuable than the physical property with which it is linked. The physical property is, in a measure, useless without the vitalizing spark of good-will. The Proctor & Gamble plant might be completely destroyed by fire, and yet the havoc would not extend to the commercial identity represented by the name Ivory Soap. Far from sustaining loss, the good-will inherent in the word "Ivory" would, of anything, be enhanced by reason of that trait of human nature which makes the public the more eager to obtain that which is denied to it or which is obtainable only over difficulty." * * *

"Dominating the minor considerations of ways and means is the big idea that an advertiser is justified, in the face of suspended animation, commercially speaking, in doing everything within his power to sustain his commercial integrity and preserve his commercial identity. Let the corporation with such an asset use its surplus, employ its undivided profits, or even borrow money to protect, by means of consistent and insistent advertising, that invaluable, intangible asset—good will, which is the one thing that cannot be bought out of hand after the war.

"They told me when I was a youngster that 'even the Lord can't make a two-year-old calf in a minute.' Big advertising spreads after the war will meet equally big spreads. Business will bid for public attention and interest on a bull market. The purpose will be to put a punch into the good-will that has gone flabby. The man who goes into that contest with a public attention and interest which he has never allowed to relax will go in with his good-will trained to the minute. He will win."

Upon his retirement from public office President Wilson sent to Mr. Colver a letter of unusual warmth expressing appreciation of the service he had rendered to the commission and to the War Industries Board, of which he was a member.

Mr. Colver returned as editorial director of the Scripps-Howard newspapers. He wrote some stirring material in reference to the Teapot Dome exposures. At that time, in a letter to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, he said: "Teapot Dome reveals to the public the invisible government which all newspaper men have known existed and many newspapers have denied. Its symptoms take varied forms: graft for political influence; blackmail for silence; public influence for jobs for the family; perjury; indolence and stupidity; party obligations paid out of the public purse.

"The whole theory of appointing bi-partisan prosecuting counsel is wrong. The bi-partnership is on the other side of the trial table, as both political parties are on trial.

"Newspapers and newspaper men have not escaped, for that this state of affairs should have flourished in secret in Washington is itself an indictment of the newspapers of the country. One definite lesson is that when a newspaper publisher substitutes for a newspaper editor the result is deplorable."

The most recent enthusiasm of the subject of this sketch was the tabloid newspaper and Baltimore (Md.) Post and Washington (D. C.) News were in large part influenced by him. Throughout his life he preached the gospel of terse, bright, "say it and quit" news writing, with a first page "punch," wholesome and entertaining features, legible type, ample volume of interesting pictures (but no duplication of subjects), and editorials which "had something to say." The tabloid newspaper fitted his scheme, not as a sensational paper to stand apart from the standard sheets, but as a soundly readable form in which brevity could easily be conserved and displays made without waste of materials. He predicted widespread employment of the tabloid idea in strict competition with the newspapers of standard size.

It is said that Mr. Colver influenced more young newspaper men than any editor of this generation. His mind was open to any idea and he believed the laborer was worthy of his hire. His great delight was in boosting a bright young fellow up the ladder. Unfailing enthusiasm, sense of justice, courage, intelligence, generosity flowed from him and inspired men to do their best work. News of his death brought to his widow a sheaf of telegrams expressing love and devotion from newspaper men in all parts of the country. He numbered personal friends by thousands.

A glimpse into the ample mind of this editor may be gained from an address he made several years ago during the annual Journalism Week at the University of Missouri. His subject was "Tendencies in American Journalism" and he applied to the theme the following serio-comic parody on Shakespeare's Seven Ages of Man:

"At first the infant
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms."

Those of you who have stood by at the first day's publication of a baby newspaper will agree that that is a pretty good description of the first age of a newspaper.

Like the human infant, brought into an uneager world without its consent being asked, it finds itself "mewling and puking in its nurse's arms," its baby brain bewildered and its parents wondering whether it will live long enough to prove that the second summer is the hardest.

Friend Shakespeare describes the second stage in the life of man:

"And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And his shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school."

So the baby newspaper, if it did survive the second summer, having gotten its little stomach settled and eased off on the mewling stuff, enters upon the boyhood stage. It is going to the School of Experience. It is too big by now to command the pity and sympathy to which it was entitled as an infant, and like a boy, it takes advantage of this fact and the fact that it is not big enough and old enough to be held accountable for its whining, for its reluctance to go to the School of Experience. I suppose the line, "creeping like snail," means the ingrained reluctance of a newspaper in its earlier age, to go to press on time.

These are the childhood years when the newspaper is likely to be noisy and rude and unmannerly. To be, generally, a little rowdy. The exception, of course, is the flaxen haired blue eyed, little angel, dressed all-the-same Lord Fauntleroy and who never, never tells a lie or gets its hands dirty. As between the mollycoddle and the rowdy, give me the rowdy. For he, however unwillingly, is learning in the School of Experience where, if he has red blood enough to be a rowdy he will be able to survive the polishing process which will prepare him for his next and quite interesting age, when, according to Shakespeare:

"And then the lover,
Sighing like a furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow."

Here is the newspaper with the down beginning to show on its upper lip and its voice beginning to seek the lower registers — cracking occasionally — turned lover and "sighing like a furnace" as it woos its necessary mate.

There are always two of these gals. One is a coy miss, shy and bashful, but very, very canny. The lover "sighing like a furnace" will make small progress with this girl unless she knows all the time that his intentions are honorable and that he is a he-man. This girl's name is Circulation.

The other girl is a vamp. She is all for the jazz. She will have no dealings with our young lover unless she is perfectly certain that she will get the big end of the bargain. She won't stand by him in adversity. She won't nurse him when he is sick. I am not saying anything against this girl, except—that she is not exactly of a generous disposition. Her name is Advertising Copy—call her Addie for short.

It is at this point in life that many newspapers wreck promising careers by electing to lead Miss Circulation to the altar (thereby thinking they have her tied for life), while their real affections are given to the other girl—Addie. And the more the newspaper galivants around with his mistress the more certain it is that his jealous wife, Circulation, will effect a separation even if she has to take the road to Reno. And when she does separate—the alimony is something awful.

Well, if the newspaper gets through this rather perilous point in its career, it finds itself happily married to Circulation, who, on her part, fulfills her duty and provides him with a plenteous progeny, while the vamp girl is what we used to call the "hired girl" and now call the "maid." She is out in the kitchen preparing nourishing food for Mamma Circulation and all the little Circulations. Then everything is fine and our hero, thinking pretty well of himself, passes to Shakespeare's fourth estate, which is described:

"Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard;
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the Cannon's mouth."

And here you have the newspaper in the prime of young manhood, inclined perhaps to be sudden and quick in quarrel, though in most cases not his own quarrel but rather the quarrel of his community and of his own fellow citizens, and jealous of the honor and integrity of his town. This is the period and these are the years that decent living, courage, honesty, temperance charity and loyalty will prolong almost indefinitely. And these are the years when the newspaper pays back, or should pay back, to its suffering fellow citizens, for the inconvenience and the bother that it has inflicted upon the community during those years that it has been "mewling and puking" and "whining" and "sighing like a furnace" and being guided generally, by the selfishness and egotism of extreme youth.

Four of the seven periods are passed. These are the periods of growth and of achievement. So the fifth one:

"And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances."

There is your newspaper, no longer militant, no longer fighting on foot, the comrade and equal of his fellow citizens, but with "fair round belly" lined with dividends. Plant all paid for, money in the bank. Member of the best clubs; director in the bank; from the height of his own self-esteem, judging his humbler fellow citizens with "eyes severe."

"Beard of formal cut"—some of the jazz gone out of the make-up. Getting sobered down now. A bit conservative—eh what? And "full of wise saws and modern instances." The wise saws being its own particular inspired-from-on-high judgments on its fellow man and on nations and considerable less emphasis laid on "modern instances," which along back in the second, third and fourth periods of the newspaper's life, were the much-prized, but now vulgar news items.

Well, that can't last. Growth is ended. The decline begins. The wife, Circulation, is either dead or growing extremely feeble and all the little Circulations have married and left home. Addie no longer a vamp, thin and feeble, only works a few days at a time and the meals she cooks are not nourishing. Which, of course, brings us to Shakespeare's sixth age, decribed thus:

"The lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side:
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes and whistles in his sound."

Lean, hungry, spingle-shanked and too small for his socks—that means the fine, big building and the great plant are too big for the dwindling product. The lusty voice of former days turned to "a childish treble" which commands neither attention nor respect but which in the nature of a querulous whine, annoys the neighbors and becomes a public nuisance. And the burden of the old man's plaint is that "things are not as they used to be."

These years are few. For the descent once started is rapid, and, none too soon for the comfort of the poor old man and for the pleasure of the community, the newspaper slips swiftly and unnoticed into the seventh stage, which is the:

"Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything."

One more job for the undertaker. Eyes too dim to see injustice or oppression; no teeth to bite into the problem of the day; no taste wherewith to savor the lust of battle and the joy of victory. "Sans everything."

And now come the lawyers with their green bags to advise the executors or the trustees how best to lay away the ancient ashes.

So you see the newspaper life cycle fits fairly well the Shakespearean life of man.

That is enough. The tendency of American Journalism is to live and to die, to love, to hate, to serve and to betray, to seek glory, wealth and fame, to be heroic and to be cowardly; to be good and to be bad and to prepare the way for another generation not much better; not much worse but just like human beings—just folks.

And just as we love folks in the mass and like or hate them as individuals, we like or dislike individual newspapers but love them in the mass and devote our lives to their service. And if we choose our masters well there is no more honorable service under the sun. If our paper's purpose is the public service, we become the servants of the servant of our fellow man. We prosper and our papers live. Truly that is a place of honor.

THE IDEAL EDITORIAL

Newspaper Ought to Be a Living, Breathing Human Personality

The following classic analysis of the newspaper and its ideal of service to the reader was written as a letter to a friend by the late William B. Colver in April, 1911,

THE newspaper, it seems to me, ought to be a living, breathing, human personality. It is one of the merchants and citizens of the town in which it is printed. It contracts to sell to its readers the news of the day, and it contracts with its adverisers to tell a definite number of people each day of the goods that other merchants have for sale.

Now the contract for the delivery of news to the reader is a real and serious obligation. First of all, you are bound to print real news—that is, facts. Having the facts, it is fine to dress them up as attractively as possible with good writing and display and all that. But adjectives and "human interest" padding and exaggeration do not supply the place of fact nor discharge your obligation. And putting a glittering headline over a simple little item is like putting a layer of fine apples over a basket full of windfalls and selling the whole as "extra prime."

The contract to tell the news does not permit us to slight stories which we have not gotten first. That is, to dishonestly "play down" or leave out stories that morning papers have covered or that our opposition saw first. So that our first duty is to clearly rewrite and print all the essential stuff that the other fellows—morning and evening—have had, and in judging this do not judge it by what we like to do, but by what we ought to do. If the story that came in the night, or too late yesterday afternoon is the story our readers will most enjoy if properly and honestly treated, we must treat it that way.

If one of your merchants laid in a stock of coal-bucket hats this fall, and the other didn't, the second man, if he is a wise merchant and if the coal-bucket is the popular lid, won't try to bull his buyer's blunder by insisting on selling only turbans, he will get a stock of coal-bucket hats and get in the game as quickly as he can. He'll do that or lose his trade, for he has contracted to sell people what they want.

Then there is the other kind of news—department stuff, semi-editorial, humor and all that. These are on the "notion" counter in your merchandising and they should be sound and clean and of good material. They should interest, instruct, amuse and divert. By custom you are as much under contract to furnish this matter as you are the more conventional brands of "news."

Now this brings us to the editorial. I've had in my mind up to now that you are a merchant and these things—staple and fancy news—are on your shelves displayed for sale.

Your staple news is honest, truthful, attractively put up, clean and condensed. That is, if you sell corn it is shelled and the sugar hasn't any sand or water in it. Your customer won't have to pick pebbles out of the peas or toothpicks out of the breakfast food.

That is, you will not let a bright young man write a josh story in order to save the bother of going out and getting the facts, and you won't let the real nub of the item be lost or distorted in a maze of adjectives.

But all this is simply bargain and sale. You have contracted to tell the plain and fancy news of the day and you have done so. Very well. Up to now, the paper is your store, or your delivery wagon. You are impersonal. The only reputation you have up to now is that you are a man whose scales are honest and whose stock is fresh. You are no more than you can rightly be expected to be, and you can lay no claim to virtue for simply doing those things which you are duty-bound to do.

This brings us to the Editorial Column. Here is where the man shows himself behind the merchant; where the taxpayer and citizen gets the human touch with his fellows; where the careful workman and honest merchant commands the personal esteem of others of his kind.

The Editorial Column is the personality of the paper, its incarnation into human being. What was merely a store crowded with a miscellaneous stock of goods becomes the setting forth of the merchant himself.

What kind of a person shall this be? If I can describe him I have described my idea (or ideal) of the Editorial Column, for what column is his manifestation to his readers.

To begin with, he must be human and make his mistakes. One of the silliest customs in the business is the tradition that a newspaper must never admit an error (except to escape a libel suit). This man (or column) must be many-sided—else he is a crank or a bigot. He must be well posted and talk pleasantly and entertainingly on serious subjects. Also, he must have a sense of humor and must get both fun and information out of little things, for any stupid ass can see something to think and talk about in the biggest topics of the day. But he mustn't get the little things out of proportion with the big or else he is a mere gabbler or liar.

Somehow, I don't seem to get the thing out of my system as I feel it lurks there. Let me try a new tack.

Suppose I am a subscriber to your paper. I read it—that is, I visit your store and select from your stock the goods I want. I have traded with you before and I know your goods are full weight, fresh, first quality, unadulterated with padding and chaff, and generally dependable. Having finished my shopping, I turn to the Editorial Column and have a little chat with the person who, to me, is the identity of the establishment. What sort of man shall I meet?

Well, suppose you dropped into a department store and got a pair of socks and a curling iron, and, as you were leaving, you met the proprietor at the door. Suppose he greeted you cheerily and you two started home together. Weather? Oh, yes, he might have some inane remark ready or he might let slip some queer little bit of information that he had picked up from the weather man at lunch that day. Politics? He doesn't stop in his walk, clutch you by the coat, get red in the face and bellow like a bull. No, but as you walk a couple of blocks you realize that what he is saying is the talk of a thoughtful, patriotic citizen. Then he tells you of some little occurrence of the day at the store and that suggests a thought from a book he has read, and you have two observations. Just little flashes that show he sees and knows and thinks. Then the talk jumps to some bit of popular science, and again you feel that he thinks and knows and enjoys both thinking and knowing. Then he speaks of his kids—his ambitions for them and how much of his success he owes to his wife. And that reminds him of an anecdote that is short and funny, and you get another observation. The schools? Oh, yes, he knows about them and understands not only the course of study but the theory of education, or lack of it, that impelled the school superintendent to lay it out. The tariff? Well, for instance—and he tells how it has affected his business.

And so on, until you have walked clear to his gate and you stand there chatting for a few minutes, and then you go on.

And you say to your wife, "I walked home with Brown tonight. He's a clever chap. Just plain and simple and honest, but wonderfully informed. I don't see where he gets the time to do all the reading he must do. And he knows all about the city hall and what the legislature is up to. You can't fool him a bit. Yet he is jolly, and he seems to love people, and to understand them, too. He's an interesting talker, but not a gabbler; he's well informed but doesn't claim to know it all; he seems a decent fellow but he doesn't preach and he isn't a bit of a pharisee. He's just a darned nice, comforable, common, wholesouled, keen, sensible cuss and I'm going into his store about six tomorrow night and buy a paper of pins on the chance that he'll be ready to walk out home."

FRENCH A. A. C. W. DELEGATES HERE NEXT WEEK

D. Marcel Knecht, Leon Renier, Jr., Adrian Muller and Gillis Duroulet Officially Represent French Press at A. A. C. W. Convention—British Delegation Will Arrive June 18

THE first of the overseas delegates to arrive on this side for attendance on the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Philadelphia, June 20-24, will be the French delegation under the chairmanship of Dr. Marcel Knecht, general secretary of Le Matin. Dr. Knecht is also general secretary of the French Parisian and Provincial Newspaper Publishers' Association, composed of 52 of the most important newspapers in France. He is an honorary member of the Advertising Club of New York.

Included in the delegation of distinguished French visitors is Leon Renier, Jr., managing director of the Agence Havas; Adrian Muller, chief of the foreign department of Havas, and Gillis Duroulet, another of the important executives of Havas, who will make the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel their New York headquarters. Others of the French delegation are Andre Kaminker of the Agence Damour of Paris, France, who is attending the convention as the personal representative of Etienne Damour, vice-president of District 17 of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, comprising Continental countries, and Henri Dumay, director of Services Exploitation and Publicity Quotidien Progres Civique, who will make the Pennsylvania Hotel their headquarters while in New York.

Dr. Knecht and M. Renier sailed on the "Paris" June 2, an enthusiastic group of their colleagues bidding them bon voyage on the boat train. They bear official greetings from the associated French newspapers to the newspapers of the United States.

Senator Paul Dupuy, proprietor and editor of Le Petit Parisien, also an honorary member of the Advertising Club of New York and a member of the Caillaux Debt Commission, will arrive in New York on the "France" June 16, and go directly to the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia.

Recently President Doumergue and Premier Briand made Dr. Knecht an Officer of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his work toward furthering Franco-American friendship. The Hon. Myron T. Herrick, U. S. Ambassador to France, acted as Marcel Knecht's sponsor on his induction into the Legion. Dr. Knecht has since 1905 organized several committees for the betterment of the cordial relations between France and America; he was the organizer of the great drive for French education in 1912 and after being in charge of the French press bureau in Switzerland, he was afterward assigned to serve, under Ambassador Jusserand as Director in Washington, D. C. of the French Information Bureau. In 1921 he escorted the American Legion delegation to France, and he also escorted the delegation of the Knights of Columbus when they presented the Lafayette statue to the city of Metz. While in the United States, he accompanied, as liaison officer, Marshal Joffre, Rene Viviani, M. Henri, Franklin Bouillon and others, and later he was awarded the degree of LL.D. by the University of Wisconsin.

Elaborate plans are on foot to accord a worthy reception and welcome to these distinguished French citizens. The night after their arrival on the "Paris," a special dinner in their honor will be given at the Advertising Club of New York, at which it is expected that Mayor Walker will officially bid them welcome. This will be the evening of June 10.

A luncheon will be tendered them at the Advertising Club of New York on Wednesday, June 16, to be broadcast by WEAF. Other functions will be given by the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents and the Press Congress of the World.

The British delegation under the chairmanship of Lt. Col. Edward Frederick Lawson, D. S. O., will arrive on the "Berengaria" on Friday afternoon, June 18. They will be met down the bay by a special delegation of advertising men under the direction of the Hon. Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the Mayor's Committee to receive distinguished guests.

Dr. Marcel Knecht

The Special Reception Committee of the Advertising Club of New York has arranged the following program for the overseas delegates:

Friday evening, June 18, an informal reception at the Advertising Club.

Saturday, June 19, a luncheon at the Advertising Club followed by an automobile sightseeing tour of the City, with dinner at the Ritz-Carlton, followed by a theatre party at the Casino to witness "The Vagabond King," and an after-theatre supper at the Cafe de Paris on the Century Roof.

The delegates will be taken to Philadelphia on a special Pennsylvania train, leaving ten o'clock Sunday morning. A luncheon will be served on the train. While in Philadelphia, the overseas delegates will stay at the Bellevue-Stratford. They will attend the official welcome by the Governor of Pennsylvania and the Mayor of Philadelphia, at Independence Hall at 2 p. m. on Sunday. At 4 o'clock they will be present at the inspirational meeting to be presided over by Rowe Stewart, chairman of the Poor Richard Club Convention Committee, at which Dr. S. Parkes Cadman of New York is the principal speaker.

After the Convention, the visitors will be entertained by John McEntee Bowman at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club.

The list of British and French delegates follows:

British Delegates

Col. E. F. Lawson (President Advertising Association), London Daily Telegraph, and Mrs. E. F. Lawson.

Edward N. Illingworth, London manager Belfast Telegraph.

William M. Teasdale, advertisement manager, London and North Eastern Railway.

Ivor Nicholson, Director and Business Manager, National Magazine Co., Ltd.

Eric Field, Director, Erwoods, Ltd.

James Howard Perkin, Advertising Manager, Goodall Backhouse & Co., Leeds.

George Edward Bowman, Goodall, Backhouse & Co., Leeds.

Herbert Stephen Boyd, Leeds.

Harold Herd, proprietor, Regent Institute, London.

Herbert Osborne, managing director, Granose Foods, Ltd., Watford, Herts.

Sir William Henry Veno, advertising advisor, Veno Drug Company, Ltd.; also President Manchester Publicity Club. William Henry Veno, Jr.

Col. E. Watts Allen, C. B. E., general manager, Civil Supply Association, and Mrs. Allen.

Andrew Milne, advertisement manager, Daily Chronicle, London.

Sir Robert Baird (president Belfast Advertising Club), managing proprietor, Belfast Telegraph.

Victor Salter, advertising representative, Belfast Telegraph.

Herman Baeckert, branch manager, Mabie, Todd & Co., Ltd., London.

Thomas Philpot, advertising manager, Mabie, Todd & Co., Ltd.

William Conor, artist, Belfast.

W. H. Webb, D. L., director, Old Bleach Linen Company, Randalstown, Co., Antrim.

Arthur Berry Richardson, manager, Vaseline preparations, Chesebrough Manufacturing Company.

W. H. Lynas, Alfred Graham & Co.

Albert C. Douglass, governing director, Douglass & Co., Ltd., Liverpool.

Ernest Hope Prince, Editor, Liverpool Echo.

Sinclair Wood, director, Advertising and Publicity, Ltd., London.

Frederick A. Spearing, London.

G. Russell Chapman (Campaign Director, Middlesex Hospital, Reconstruction Fund), London.

Norman Bower, Aldwych Club, Editor Advertising World.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean, Austin Reed, Ltd., London.

Mr. Sharter, display manager.

French Delegates

Dr. Marcel Knecht, General Secretary of Le Matin, Paris. Also General Secretary of the French Paris Provincial Newspaper Publishers' Association, composed of 52 of the most important newspapers in France, and an honorary member of the Advertising Club of New York.

Senator Paul Dupuy, proprietor and editor of Le Petit Parisien, Paris. Member of the Caillaux Debt Commission.

Leon Renier, Jr., Commercial Manager of Agence Havas, Paris, France.

Adrian Muller, chief of foreign department of Agence Havas.

Gillis Duroulet, Agence Havas.

Andre Kaminker, representative of M. Etienne Damour, Vice-President for District 17 of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Henri Dumay, Jr., Director Services Exploitation Publicity Quotidien Progres Civique.

Overseas delegates are expected also from Switzerland, Belgium and Germany.

N. A. CRAWFORD RESIGNS

Rogers Succeeds Him as K. S. A. C. Journalism Director

The vacancy created by the resignation of Prof. Nelson Antrim Crawford, head of the department of journalism at the Kansas State Agricultural College, has been filled by the appointment of Prof. C. E. Rogers to that post. Professor Rogers has been acting head of the department since Mr. Crawford's leave of absence started a year ago when he joined Secretary Jardine as director of information for the United States Department of Agriculture.

N. A. Crawford

The new department head of journalism at Kansas State was graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1914. He has had varied practical experience on newspapers and been a reporter on the Tulsa (Okla.) World, copy reader and feature writer with the Kansas City Star, and for seven years a member of the department of journalism at the Kansas State College.

Maynard W. Brown, Wisconsin, '23, succeeds Professor Rogers at the Kansas College as associate professor of journalism. Professor Brown was for two years on the staff of the St. Charles (Minn.) Union, and has done special service for the Associated Press.

LONDON POST AT PENNY PRICE

Announced as Meeting Demand Long Made by Conservatives

The London Morning Post on May 18 announced a new price of a penny, explaining the change, in part, as follows:

"The directors of the Morning Post have realized for long the need of a penny paper professing strong and definite conservative principles, informed continually by a loyalty to those principles which can only acknowledge one greater loyalty—allegiance to King and country. Many resolutions have been passed by many Conservative Associations demanding such a newspaper at such a price. There have been difficulties and doubts which from time to time have seemed insuperable. They have been overcome.

"It is impossible to estimate the support we may obtain or to gauge exactly the success of a bold venture."

LIBEL PENALTY DAILY'S REWARD FOR ATTEMPT TO AID PUBLIC

Southern Publisher Tells of Damage Cases Based on City Health Officers' Reports in Typhoid Scare—Praises Editor & Publisher's Libel Series

By R. CHARLTON WRIGHT

Editor and publisher, Columbia (S. C.) Record

I HAVE been reading with sustained interest myself, and have been urging every member of the news staff of The Record to read, the series of articles on libel, by Philip Schuyler, now appearing in EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Experience has taught me, somewhat painfully, to appreciate the full significance of those articles.

The following story of two libel suits against my newspaper, within recent months, illustrates the dangers that lurk in apparently not only the most innocent publications, but in publications made for no other purpose than to minister to the public welfare.

On May 23, 1924, several persons in a restricted area in Columbia became ill with fever, which was diagnosed as typhoid. An attending physician notified the city health department. On investigation that department observed that, without exception, the persons attacked by the fever were customers of a certain dairy. Pending an inspection of the dairy premises and personnel, the health officers closed the dairy and notified at least a hundred of the dairyman's customers that the dairy had been closed by order of the board of health and advised these customers to be inoculated immediately. A clinic was instituted, all the public nurses of the city were put on duty, and within five weeks about 3,000 persons were inoculated against typhoid as a result of the outbreak on this dairy route.

Pending the results of the inspection, the dairyman and his milker were forbidden to handle milk to be sold in Columbia.

On Sunday, May 25, two days after the closing of the dairy, The Record printed a story under the caption: "City Health Department Nips in the Bud Typhoid Outbreak," from which the following principal details are quoted:

"Paying high tribute to the prompt and efficient work of the city health officer, whose timely work, he felt confident, nipped a threatened outbreak of typhoid fever in the bud, Dr. ————, physician and surgeon, recounted in detail last night the circumstances of the incident which had deeply impressed him."

The story went on to relate how the physician had discovered several cases of the fever, and reported them to the health authorities, and that the health board, "after a test of the milk found in the home had showed typhoid germs," closed the dairy.

"The water used by the family of the first patient," wrote the reporter, "was found perfectly pure, Dr. ——— said, in the earliest stages of the inquiry, so the conclusion was inevitable that milk was the source of the typhoid germs that were spreading like the proverbial wild fire.

"The investigators found out as another detail of the case that the milk had been contaminated almost overnight, as a new milker who was in charge of the dairy for the regular milkman, who was ill, was the 'importer' of the germs. Working the investigation down to the finest point, the health officers located the source of the germs which the new milkman had unknowingly transported to his new work."

In the publication neither the name of the dairyman nor of the milker was mentioned, and there was nothing to indicate where the dairy was located, and, furthermore, as I have pointed out, the story was not published until two days after the dairy had been closed and all the dairyman's customers had been notified of the closing by the health authorities. Subsequently, on May 27, the dairy was allowed to resume business, in a new location, using new milkers and city water. The Record printed this circumstance.

Very soon thereafter the dairyman sued The Record for $25,000 and the unnamed milker sued for $3,000. The milker's case was tried first and a verdict was rendered for $850, which the trial judge cut to $600. The defendant appealed. On May 12, this year, the Supreme Court of South Carolina affirmed the judgment of the lower court and The Record has paid the judgment.

The case of the dairyman was tried a little later, at the spring term of the circuit court, 1924. It was shown that the testimony of the city health officer that there was no doubt in his mind that the typhoid was caused by the milk that had come from the dairy in question, but, as the inspection made later disclosed no infection at the dairy, it was presumed that the milk had become infected through an unsterilized bottle. The presiding judge directed a verdict for the plaintiff for actual and punitive damages, taking from the jury altogether the consideration of any of the evidence and leaving to them only to determine the quantum of damages. The jury rendered a verdict for $6,000, actual, and no punitive damages, which amount the presiding judge later cut to $4,000. The Record appealed mainly on the ground that the testimony should have gone to the jury.

On May 12, this year, the Supreme Court reversed the decision of the circuit court and remanded the case for a new trial, on the ground that there was error in the direction of the verdict, that certain questions of fact should have gone to the jury, as to whether the damages suffered by the plaintiff resulted from a publication or from other matters upon which there was evidence (i. e., the action of the health authorities in closing the dairy and notifying its customers of the typhoid outbreak on the route), "and whether defendant's plea of justification had been sustained." In its opinion the Supreme Court said: "Two days after the dairy was closed, the defendant published an account of the sensation naturally created by the circumstances above detailed, in commendation of the energy with which the health department had grappled with the situation, and manifestly to allay public feeling about the matter." (Italics mine.)

Here then, is a case in which, with the most laudable purposes a reporter wrote a story told to him by a reputable physician, who wished to see that the health officer was praised for his prompt work in heading off a typhoid epidemic. The reporter erred in that he did not call up the health department and check up on all the details. It turned out that, on investigation, the milker was not found to be a carrier, and that, though the health officer testified there was no doubt in his mind that the fever had been caused by the milk served by the dairyman, he had not found the source of infection at the dairy and assumed that the infection had been caused by flies getting into a bottle or bottles after they had been emptied by customers and set out on the porches or steps for the milkman to gather, and that these bottles, or as the health officer stated, "this bottle was not thoroughly sterilized, thus contaminating the milk."

All the facts in the story, however, were substantially correct, save that the milker was not found to be a carrier; there was obviously no malice; the dairyman's damage resulted from the closing of his dairy by the health authorities, and not from the publication of the story after the event, and the names of the plaintiffs were not printed. Nevertheless, because of the fact that there were some purely unessential and technical inaccuracies between the story and the final report and testimony of the health officer, The Record was mulcted in very substantial damages, the circuit court itself directing a verdict for the plaintiff not only for actual, but also for punitive damages, which latter damages the jury did not award.

As a consequence of this damage suit it is impossible to get either the morning or afternoon newspaper in Columbia to publish any information or reports from the city health department with regard to milk inspections, and the people have no means of getting any knowledge on the subject. All of which goes to show that when the lawyer can be found to bring such actions (and there are plenty of them in Columbia, as there are elsewhere), it behooves a newspaper reporter to watch his step closely, as it behooves a publisher to count the cost of public service before he tries to render it. We hope, of course, to win the case on the new trial.

FIX LEGAL AD RATE IN CALIFORNIA

Ten Cents Per 8 Point Line First Insertion, 8 Cents for Following Printings Recommended by Editorial Assn.

Following almost a year of intensive investigation into legal advertising rates with a view to determining a fair and reasonable rate to both publisher and customer, a committee of the Southern California Editorial Association has recommended 10 cents per single column line of 8 point type for the first insertion as a price to be made universal with association members, and eight cents per line of eight point type for subsequent insertions. Notices published in other than 8 point type to be figured upon a basis equivalent to 8 point.

The recommendations of the committee have been approved by a referendum vote of the membership and adopted by the executive committee.

In arriving at these figures the committee studied the costs of production, service required from the publisher and responsibility attaching to correct and proper publication of such notices.

DAILY WINS LEGAL POINT

Richmond Times-Dispatch Granted Writ of Error in Libel Case

The Richmond Times-Dispatch on May 27 was granted a writ of error by the Special Court of Appeals from a libel judgment of $750 given by the circuit court of Fairfax county to Charles Zoll, mayor of Fairfax.

Zoll sued because of a publication saying that he was arrested with others on charges of possessing liquor. The defendant offered witnesses to testify that the publication was based on an official report made by State Prohibition Inspector Virgil Williams to Attorney-General Saunders, but the trial court excluded this testimony.

Eureka Editor Asks Pardon

Alfred Lindsley, former editor of the Eureka (Cal.) Humboldt News, has applied to Governor Friend W. Richardson of California for a pardon. Lindsley is now serving a three year term in the Humboldt county jail as the result of his conviction for contempt of court last winter. His sentence is in default of $2,000 fine levied by Superior Judge Denver Sevier as the result of alleged contemptuous articles printed by Lindsley during his trial for libel. The libel complaint was brought by a member of the county "dry squad."

Chicago American Issues Notes

The Chicago Evening American has sold $3,000,000 five year 6 per cent notes to Halsey, Stuart & Co. and Whiting & Co. Public offering was made last week.

MUSSOLINI MOVES FO RIGID PRESS CONTRO

Fascist Directorate Orders Sev Revision of Daily and Weekly Newspapers to List Those Authorized by Party

Severe revision of all daily and wee newspapers in Italy in order to draw a list of those authorized by the pa has been ordered by the Fascist Direct ate, under Premier Benito Mussolini.

Those not authorized will be warn that police authorities will revoke th licenses if they print illicit speculation

Control of the Italian press has be severely exercised since the Fascisti we into power, but Italy for many years h had a law which empowers prefects seize newspapers "for reasons of pub order." The Fascist directorate obtain a royal decree extending this power, a last December the Senate passed a b which had already been approved by t Chamber, making such regulation a la This law gave the prefects authority seize or suspend newspapers containi attacks on the King, religion, State ins tutions and friendly nations.

Later another law was passed provi ing severe penalties for criticism of Fa cism or Mussolini, and this was follow by an act providing for the revocation citizenship and the confiscation property held in Italy by critics abroa including those who had fled the countr

One of the persons who was so punishe was Vincenzo Vacira, city editor of New York Italian newspaper.

Several newspapers have been su pressed by the Fascisti under the pre regulations, including Il Mattino Naples, one of the most famous journa in Italy; Unita, Avanti and La Giustizi the three latter Socialist journals, an the former, Liberal. Pietro Nenni, editc of Avanti, was ordered arrested, D Giuseppe Donati, editor of the Roma Catholic journal, Il Popolo, was name for arrest, and former Senator Albertin editor of The Corriere della Sera, Rome, was forced to resign by th Fascisti.

BOURNE WINS TIMES' REWARD

Given $100 for Information Leadin to Conviction of Fraud Advertiser

The New York Times has awarded t Stephen Bourne, 247 Park Avenue, Ne York, the reward of $100 which it offer for information leading to the arrest an conviction of anyone who may have ob tained money under false pretense through the medium of a fraudulent ad vertisement in the Times.

The reward to Bourne was in connec tion with the recent conviction and sen tence to 15 years' imprisonment of Edwi Arden Noblett on the charge of using th Times' advertising columns fraudulently Mr. Bourne co-operated with the Work and the Times in steps that led to Nob lett's arrest.

Editor Charged With Criminal Libel

Andrew A. Strauch, aged publisher o the Chadwick (Ill.) Weekly Clarion, has been held under $1,000 bond to the Carroll County Grand Jury for criminal libel as the result of complaint of J. O. Kerch, a Chadwick attorney. Kerch took offense at articles published about him in the Clarion.

Fined for Printing Students' Paper

Lee Hettick, owner and editor of the Gridley (Kan.) Light, entered a plea of guilty in district court, Lawrence, and was fined $100 and costs for his part in the publication of The Red, alleged objectionable publication issued by a fraternity at Baker University, Baldwin.

Discontinues Sunday Roto Section

The Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier has discontinued its Sunday rotogravure section.

ISSING NOTEBOOKS AND MISREPRESENTATION

Hand-in-Hand Down Libel Lane—Thorough Understanding Needed for Plain Writing—Reporters Urged by Editors and Lawyers to Use More Care in Note-Taking

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

"Do the best that is in you to be fair, to judge as impartially as you may upon all the facts that diligence and common sense can accumulate, to allow any man who is accused to speak in his defense if this be humanly possible, to understand a matter thoroughly before you commit it to paper, and then to write it as plainly and directly as the language permits.

"A newspaper whose men and women make this the standard of their work need never fear to present its case to any jury."

This advice, quoted from "Newspapers and the Libel Law," by William H. Oppenheimer, attorney for the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, is used with permission as the foreword to this the 12th article obtained by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, stripping the libel law of legal verbiage.

old tradition among American newspaper men is one of the best -breeders in the business. It has me what might be called the anti-book complex, is hoary with age, and, rding to some editors and libel ers, is ripe for the discard.

lewspaper men should bear in mind, say, that the aim of all legislation judicial precedent on the subject of is simply to prevent wanton, ghtless, careless, or ignorant mis-sentation.

issing notebooks and misrepresenta-go hand in hand down Libel Lane.

nd yet the anti-notebook complex and without sound reason becomes rt of every newspaper neophyte's hology. The new man on the job, ous to be careful, is laughed into essness and laughed into the libel ts with the same taunting guffaw.

he old boys on the paper see ab-ely no use for a notebook, prefer-folded copy paper, envelope backs, cuffs, railroad timetables, or their human memories. The notebook, ever, is symbolic of precision and while the present hand-me-down od spells sloppiness, recklessness, gence, and a wild eagerness to get trouble.

notebook!" the veteran scoffs, "Har! a! That's rich! Who do you think are? A newspaper hero in a movie ha?"

hen he goes out on a booze raid , chuckling up his sleeve. He bles some notes on the back of his week's laundry bill, comes back to ffice and can't quite make out what written. Finally he braves it, but the address wrong. The next day furiated Methodist minister sues for claiming his reputation as a divine been damaged to the extent of $50,000 use the daily paper said his house been raided and a still found on premises by prohibition officers.

he courts do not recognize the alibi nonest mistake." Malice on the part he newspaper is presumed in the r's complaint. Carelessness is re-ed as the equivalent to malice and intent to injure.

ice again the man with the anti-book complex goes out to interview umber of politicians collecting a d of defamatory charges and ter-charges against a candidate. He n't want to scare his sources of in-ation out of talking and doesn't use tebook. Libel litigation follows and defense lawyer has no definite de-material to work on.

other words, "flash a notebook and an interview" today seems to have weight as a newspaper proverb, "get it first, but first get it right." consequence, the newspaper man ed in America is often first getting isted and then getting it in the neck.

ith this anti-notebook complex goes ole catalog of reportorial evils, and in editors and newspaper lawyers agreed that a little psychoanalysis do no harm.

solutely the best editor I know in business had this to say this week t missing notes and misrepresenta-o maintain public respect for and dence in a newspaper the utmost rtorial care is necessary. The pres-persistent sloppiness in note-taking certainly not consistent with this amental requisite.

ll important stories and interviews ld be collected neatly in notebooks filed away in the event they are ed by the defense in subsequent libel ation.

n the evening field, the speed re-ed makes it impossible for a reporter to be too methodical, but speed does not necessarily exclude care. Morning newspaper men, on the other hand, have no excuse usually for recklessness in news fact collection and writing. Let them take complete and careful notes, using shorthand preferably, or the Phillips telegraphers' code. It is their duty to their editors and their readers to understand an entire story thoroughly before they start to type it out. In order to gain this understanding, they should not be ashamed to ask to have facts or opinions repeated to them several times if necessary, when they are gathering material for a story. They must be perfectly sure of their spelling, printing out proper names. Then let them take time to plot out the whole story, before they begin to typewrite."

A lawyer's opinion on the subject was obtained from Harold L. Cross, of Sackett, Chapman, Brown & Cross, attorneys for the New York Herald Tribune.

"A reporter ought to bear in mind that his duty to his publisher not only lies in his obligation to avoid libel suits, but also to be able to assist intelligently in libel defense," Mr. Cross declared. "It is very important that a reporter should know where to lay his hands on defense material when it is needed. Carefully kept notes are of considerable assistance to the defense counsel."

Mr. Cross agreed that sloppy note-taking was symbolic of much reportorial carelessness responsible for a large share of libel litigation.

"Seventy-five per cent of all libel suits arise out of police court incidents and arrests by police where the newspapers have claimed to have printed statements by public officers, and the arrested person beats the case.

"Careful reporters certainly would know that they cannot print these libellous statements under privilege. The statute plainly says that statements made at the time of court proceedings, which are not a part of them, are not privileged."

William Preston Beazell, assistant managing editor of the New York World, has in his long newspaper career been involved in only one libel suit. That was in 1917, when the World attacked John F. Hylan, candidate for mayor, in a series of articles. Just before election, Hylan sued the World for a total of $525,000 libel damages. When the case came to trial, the World's attorneys were fully prepared to defend the newspaper. Mr. Beazell had kept a careful and accurate notebook containing evidence of the truth of all the alleged libels. Attorneys for Hylan discontinued the cases.

"I've never known a big, involved or extended story to be covered as it should be, without the taking of careful notes, kept in a notebook, filed away for ready reference," Mr. Beazell said this week.

Jackson S. Elliott, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, who, before taking his present executive position, spent many years as chief A. P. correspondent in Washington, favors a re-birth of reportorial care in America.

"I think that by all means reporters should record names and dates and a quotation which they intend to use with extreme care, and if the occasion warrants it, in a notebook.

"It is true, I believe, that notebook pullers give the impression of inexperience, and are not apt to gain confidences as they should. But when a man is saying something important, when he is speaking clearly and with care, a reporter will help himself, by interrupting to take out his notebook and to say: "'May I take down those words and use them?'

"After using his notebook in this fashion, let him put it away."

After all is said and done a reporter's chief business is to write a story truthfully and plainly. Can a man write the truth plainly from garbled and messy notes? Very obviously, an incubator for libellous insinuations and inferences is the American newspaper man's scrap paper method.

Addressing the editorial staff of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, William H. Oppenheimer, attorney for that newspaper, once declared:

"In considering any alleged libellous statement, the courts will view the language used in the light of the question: 'How would ordinary men naturally understand it?'

"It is immaterial what meaning you intended to convey. The language must speak for itself in the light of the surrounding circumstances. You may have intended no harm, you may have even been ignorant of the full import of your words, yet if you set afloat a false declaration which might convey a libellous meaning to an ordinary man, the communication is libellous. It is not necessary that the charge be direct or positive. The tendency of the language used and not its form is the criterion, and hence insinuations may be as defamatory as direct assertions.

"A defamatory charge published as an expression of belief or opinion is as effectual as if made in positive language; the fact that the reasons for the belief are also given will not affect the question, unless these reasons explain away the charge.

"You may libel another by putting your communication in the shape of hearsay as effectually as by making distinct assertions of defamatory matter and hence the fact that your article is published with the qualification, 'if reports are true,' 'report says,' or other similar qualification does not effect its libellous character."

Mr. Oppenheimer closed his address with this significant statement:

"A newspaper to be of service must take some risks; things that are old are not 'news.' You do not have time to investigate everything. The publisher must necessarily rely largely on your judgment as to the reliability of your sources of information, your discretion in so wording your articles as not to impute motives or actions beyond the facts of the case."

THE TABLOID CITY EDITOR TO HIS REPORTER

A Reply

(Reprinted from F.P.A.'s Conning Tower, New York World, May 24)

Slave of assignments, on your way!
But keep in mind these facts to-day.
CHECK UP ON PICTURES. Get a report.
Cover the story but KEEP IT SHORT.
Slice it and Boil it. Keep it Down.
Get every angle that breaks in town.
Make it snappy and make dead-line
(The presses begin at quarter to nine).
Here's your assignment—that's enough—
Do your stuff.

GET ME A PICTURE—don't forget.
I've one photographer waiting yet.
Call me up if he can crash
In for a flashlight—then we'll smash
It for the Pink—do all your tricks.
Get me a story and GET ME PIX.
Get facts for a first-class staff,
Then write half.

Write me half, but all those facts
Got to get in or you get the ax.
Get me facts and PICTURES, too.
GET ME PICTURES, whatever you do.
Pix of dogs and of bathing girls,
Walter Ward's home and Peaches' curls,
That rum boat you spoke of, awash with booze,
Peg Joyce's next one—although not news;
Blue blooded heiress, children's tricks,
GET ME PIX.

Slave of assignments—lucky wight—
I'm desk-tied here for half the night.
Out in the open, you should fret!
All in the world that you have to get
Is—no wonder your job attracts—
PIX and facts.

WAMP

HEARST MEN GIVEN ONE DAY IN JAIL M. E. FINED $5,000 FOR CONTEMPT

Baltimore Judge Praises Their Candor on Stand, But Declares Dignity of Court Was Directly Challenged in an Important Criminal Case

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

BALTIMORE, Md., June 1—The right to appeal today was granted by Judge Eugene O'Dunne to the three editors and two photographers of the Hearst newspapers of Baltimore, upon whom he imposed sentences of one day in jail each and, in the case of Harold Elliston, managing editor of the Baltimore News, a fine of $5,000.

Those sentenced, in addition to Mr. Elliston, were Earl C. Deland, managing editor of the Baltimore American, Harry Clark, city editor of the Baltimore News, and William Sturm and William Klemm, photographers.

Their sentence followed conviction by Judge O'Dunne of contempt of court by taking and publishing pictures of the trial of Richard Reese Whittemore after the court had forbidden the taking of photographs.

He ordered immediate release of all five defendants on their own recognizance, pending decision of the court of appeals. Judge O'Dunne pointed out that the court of appeals may decide that it has no jurisdiction and indicated that this was his own view.

In his opinion Judge O'Dunne said in part: "The testimony of all defendants has been characterized by the utmost frankness and candor, without the slightest attempt at any time to either suppress the facts or color the evidence."

"The profession of journalism might point with pride to this fact if it could be thought that it was due to habit begotton of long journalistic training.

"Personally, I must attribute it to their own integrity rather than habits formed by their professional careers.

"Whatever the cause, the fact is at least commendable, and, if I may say so, refreshing in the criminal court.

"While admiring their candor, the boldness of their contention would challenge admiration except for the alarm that it creates in the attempted encroachment of the press on the undoubted rights of the courts to control those institutions in the protection of the public interests.

"Because of the importance of the public question here presented, and because of the bold manner in which the authority of courts as institutions is definitely challenged, and the usurpation of authority by the press sought to be substituted for the exercise of judicial discretion of the courts in controlling the decorum of legal tribunals when engaged, as it was, in the most serious undertaking of the trial of a notorious bandit, since convicted of murder in the first degree, I would be recreant to the trust imposed in me as the temporary incumbent of the office of judge if this public challenge of the authority of the tribunals of the people was not fearlessly met, and firmly disposed of in the public interest."

After passing sentence on to five defendants, the judge continued:

"All of these defendants are but the product of a journalistic system which looks upon its conception of duty to its employer and its reading public as above the law.

"The person highest in authority in this jurisdiction to whom the trial of personal responsibility leads as far as disclosed by the record in this case is Mr. Harold Elliston, the managing editor of the Baltimore News, one of the Hearst newspapers in this community.

"As the dignified affairs of the legal forum were shifted to the commerce of the street for the benefit of the Hearst International News Reel Corporation—with its world-wide distribution, it may not be too much to expect that the system and the syndicate of which they are but the local operators, will pay the fine, and in that way, commercialism will be robbed of its chief incentive to make profit out of the administration of justice in defiance of the orders of the court.

"The newspapers represented by these defendants have since the institution of these contempt proceedings published fully the entire accounts of the proceedings with an impartiality which is admirable.

"This only further demonstrated how fairly great newspapers can be operated, when there is a disposition of the managers to do so.

"While I do not believe the case is appealable, they are represented by counsel who entertain a different view of the law.

"It would ill become me to deny them opportunity even to reach a legal forum where that question may be determined.

"They will be accorded that opportunity for determination.

"In the prosecution of the appeal, if it should be decided on appeal that they have no right of appeal, then in that case I sincerely hope that the court of appeals will also indicate whether, in its judgment, they are guilty of contempt of court, irrespective of the technical question of whether they have the right of appeal.

"If, in the event of the denial of the right of appeal, the court should indicate that the acts do not constitute contempt of court, or that this court is or was without authority to pass the order made the basis of this contempt proceedings, then I will reconsider and strike out the sentence and strike out the verdict if such power to right a wrong still exists in a judicial tribunal."

During his remarks Judge O'Dunne spoke of the suggested conference between the press and the bar.

"What we now want to accomplish is something constructive for the future," he declared. "We want the future cooperation of the press as a most valuable public agency of a private nature which is capable of great work in promoting the public interest in the general administration of justice. Mr. Bowen and Mr. Coleman, representing the Baltimore Bar Association, have, as I understand it, suggested a conference between the bar, the bench and the press, looking to a more detailed plan of operation for the future, in which the rights, necessities and limitations of each can be more carefully examined and determined upon.

"A general spirit of co-operation may well result from such a conference. No one entering such conference will be asked or expected to surrender any of his rights."

Judge O'Dunne referred in his decision to an editorial in the Baltimore Post in the following words:

"As children, in the formative period of their moral character, are scandalized by the evil example set by their elders and their betters, so are infant newspapers in a community affected in the tone of their journalistic work by the evil example of their elders and their betters.

"The evil consequence of bad example is aptly illustrated in this case by the editorial of the Post, read into the record for the purpose toward the close of the case (or so much thereof as bore upon that question), namely, that the only reason that they did not print the picture in defiance of the court order was that they did not attach sufficient importance to its news value to inspire them to flaunt the court's order.

"It is even questionable in my mind whether a widespread editorial statement of that character is not actually more subversive of the wholesome respect due courts, as institutions, than the actual publishing of the picture, unaccompanied by such statement. The latter act might, in most cases, pass as an unknown defiance of judicial authority—whereas the former carries with it the evil effect of premeditated, deliberate, contemptuous disregard of judicial authority.

"This journalistic organ, disappointed in the recent decision of our associate, his Honor Judge Frank, in upholding the United Railways valuations at a certain figure, expressed the hope that, on appeal of the case, they would be fortunate enough to find a court 'less corporation-minded.' The imputation there is plain; the consummate insolence, appalling!

"Whether such editorial comment is contempt of court under the established decisions is not a question on which I am called to pass in this case. That it is the kind of actual contempt (as distinguished from the use of the term in the technical legal sense) which has, in fact, a tendency to undermine the public confidence in the institutions of courts, I have no doubt. It strengthens the growing tendency, in an age of irreverance for all things, to undermine the public confidence in judicial tribunals. When contempt for law, and contempt for judicial authority, become general and widespread, thereafter our American institutions cannot long endure."

WHAT NEWSPAPERS WOULD BE LIKE IF THEY WERE RUN BY LAWYERS

Jesse N. Bowen, president of the Baltimore Bar Association, has been invited to edit one day's editions of the Baltimore Post, Scripps-Howard newspaper, by Harold D. Jacobs, editor. The invitation was issued after Bowen, representing the court in the contempt proceedings last week against the five Baltimore Hearst newspaper men for taking pictures in court, had made the following statements in the courtroom:

"Newspapers have no right to photograph anybody, anywhere, without obtaining their conseni.

"If a newspaper wishes to test a court order it should do so by certain 'orderly procedure'—that is, by notifying the court that it takes an exception to the order and then appealing to a higher tribunal."

Under the announcement that Bowen had been invited by the Post to take charge for a day followed the article reprinted here.

SCENE: City room of an afternoon newspaper. Time: 10 a. m. (The work day of a common, ordinary newspaper man starts at 7 a. m. and the first edition usually is to press by 10.)

Reporters, rewrite men, copy readers, office boys and various sub-editors rise and stand solemnly at attention as His Honor, the Editor-in-Chief, stalks in and seats himself behind a high rostrum at one end of the room.

Bailiff Office Boy—"Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye! The honorable Daily Bazoo is now in session."

Telephone tinkles. His Honor frowns ominously.

Attorney Rewrite Man answers phone and consults State's Attorney City Editor, who approaches Editor-in-Chief's bench.

State's Attorney City Editor—"May it please Your Honor; it is averred and alleged that a fire, or conflagration, is now burning, or raging, at Baltimore and Charles Sts., in the City of Baltimore, situated in the State of Maryland, U. S. of America, or thereabout; and it is further averred and alleged that aforesaid fire, or conflagration, is rapidly getting beyond control; and it is further averred or alleged . . ." etc., etc., for at least half an hour.

State's Attorney City Editor finally concludes his report.

His Honor—"You may cite w authorities you will that such conflag tion as you report is, ipso facto, a per se."

There ensues a delay of several ho while State's Attorney City Edit assistants are looking up the citatic Eventually they stagger in under a tru load of musty tomes, which are solem consulted for a few more ho Finally—

State's Attorney City Editor—"M it please Your Honor, we here have case of Mrs. O'Leary's cow versus lantern, involving a destructive fire the City of Chicago, situate in C county, State of Illinois, in which afo said cow did kick or otherwise pro said lantern into a pile of hay, caus . . ." etc., etc.

He goes on to cite the case of destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, Baltimore fire of 1904, the burning the Peggy Stewart, the origin of expression "a burning shame," and s eral cases of sunburn.

His honor—"The court will take matter under advisement. Call the n case."

Attorney Art Editor—"May it ple Your Honor, there is a parade of 5,(National Guardsmen which is alleged have started two days ago. May I h the court's permission to take a pho graph of aforesaid parade?"

His Honor—"The case of Bow versus the Baltimore press says v plainly that no newspaper has a ri to photograph anyone, anywhere, with their permission, e pluribus unum. Y will proceed at once to obtain such permission from aforesaid 5,000 Natio Guardsmen, individually and collective pro bono publico. Call the next case."

The dignity of the scene is disturt by a man pressing forward. He spea

Attorney Circulation Manager—"M it please Your Honor, I learn on relia authority that the opposition plans wit two weeks to issue a so-called ex on the fact Coolidge defeated Davis the recent Presidential elections."

His Honor—"Such unseemly has Such violation of our ethics! We w apply at once to the American Nev paper Publishers' Association for an junction to estop aforesaid extra."

Attorney Rewrite Man starts to pou on typewriter.

Chorus of Bailiff Office Boys "Silence! Silence!"

Attorney Telegraph Editor remo coat and rolls up shirt sleeves, preparat to tackling immense pile of press serv news from all over world, which h been collecting for weeks. Editor-Chief espies him.

"Bailiff, bring that man before me

Bailiff Office Boy drags offending A torney Telegraph Editor before t bench.

His Honor—"You have offended t dignity of this newspaper by removi your coat. Besides, I don't like yo looks. You are adjudged in contempt this honorable publication. As that gr authority, Lewis Carroll, would say, 'C with his head!'"

After Attorney Executioner chops the varlet's head, forthwith, His Hon relents and grants him an appeal to t Government Printing Office.

His Honor—"Call the next case!"

Attorney Managing Editor—"May please Your Honor, the newspap readers are alleged to be anxious r garding the next appearance of the Da Bazoo. May I ask Your Honor if will be possible to go to press with t Noon Edition by Sept. 1?"

His Honor—"Ahem! Harr-r-r-ump Mr. Clerk Assistant City Editor, w you please consult the docket?"

Clerk spends next several hours loo ing over docket, then holds whisper conference with His Honor.

His Honor—"Mr. Attorney Managi Editor, the court regrets to say t docket is so congested with stories a articles as yet completely unverified substantiated or otherwise undisposed that it will be impossible to go to pre with the Noon Edition before June 1933."

CURTAIN

A.N.A.E. PHILADELPHIA PROGRAM COMPLETED

oy Durstine, J. M. Cleary, Col. Lawson, Among Speakers Named for Annual Convention June 20-24

Promotion problems, free publicity, id merchandising service are the outanding topics to be considered by the ssociation of Newspaper Advertising xecutives at their annual convention in hiladelphia, June 20-24 in connection ith the meeting of the Associated Adertising Clubs of the World.

The complete program, just issued by resident Frank T. Carroll, advertising anager of the Indianapolis News, llows:

MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 21, 10 O'CLOCK—OPENING SESSION.

This short session will be devoted to a getgether and general introductory meeting. Orinization and business matters of importance e scheduled.

MONDAY AFTERNOON, 2 O'CLOCK—NEWSPAPER PROMOTION.

W. G. Bryan, president, The W. G. Bryan rganization of New York—"What is Newspaper fficiency?"

L. E. McGivena, manager of publicity, the ew York News—"No Place for a Plumber."

B. T. McCanna, manager of publicity, Chiago Tribune—"Good Will Through Public Serce."

Subjects scheduled for general discussion om the floor during this session are:

"How may a radio station be used to develop od will for newspapers?"

"How may more readers be secured for exting circulation?"

"What are effective methods of meeting comtition from mail advertising?"

"Why don't newspapers advertise as consistntly as they urge others to do?"

"Should promotion advertisements inserted in ewspapers own columns be considered as hage in advertising reports?"

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22, 9 O'CLOCK—NATIONAL ADVERTISING

Miss Grace Walton, advertising manager, ulius Kayser & Co.—"If Retailers Can Make ewspaper Space Pay, So Can Manufacturers."

Roy S. Durstine, secretary-treasurer, Barton, urstine & Osborn, Inc., and president of the merican Association of Advertising Agencies—Suggestions From the Advertising Agency ngle."

J. M. Cleary, sales manager, The Studebaker rporation of America—"Why Is Free Pubcity?"

Subjects for open discussion:

"Is a revision of the present Standard of erchandising Practice for Newspapers, as lopted by the A. of N. A. E. in 1921, exdient?"

"What is the best current experience in deing local advertising and national advertisg and what are the best methods of enforcg established policies?"

"What is the best method of handling situaons arising when an advertising agency deavors to cancel a contract that has been effect for six or eight months in order to ace a new contract for one year from its te?"

"How do national advertisers check up on sults secured from periodical publication adrtising?"

"Recently some newspapers have issued rate rds entirely eliminating cash discounts to encies and allowing agency commissions only nen payment is made in full on or before the th or the 20th of the month. Is this good actice for other newspapers to adopt?"

UESDAY AFTERNOON, 2 O'CLOCK—LOCAL DISPLAY ADVERTISING

I. R. Parsons, advertising director, New rk Telegram (formerly a department store vertising manager)—"Merchandising a Newsper."

Frank B. Jennings, advertising manager, The y Company, Cleveland—"Is Circulation Your ief Merchandise?"

Edwin S. Friendly, business manager, New rk Sun—"Development of Modern Newsper Advertising."

Subjects for open discussion:

"What are the best methods for selling spec l editions and what results are secured by advertiser and by the newspaper?"

"Should special sections or editions at a h rate be encouraged?"

"What program might a newspaper suggest merchants as a means of causing people to de at home?"

"Should a newspaper combat merchants who ertise untruthfully?"

"What should be the attitude of newspapers ward requests from periodical publication ertisers urging the newspapers to sell soled 'tie-up' advertising to retailers?"

EDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23, 9 O'CLOCK—CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Walter W. Murdock, classified advertising nager, Detroit Free Press—"Building Classifi Advertising."

Frank McCabe, classified advertising manr, New York World—"The Relative Importe of Classified and Display Advertising."

Open discussion of classified advertising problems will follow the two addresses. In case all discussions from previous sessions have not been completed, they will be taken up at this time.

Previous to this session the judges will have considered the various stories of newspaper advertising success that were entered in the competition for the A. L. Shuman trophy. Success stories specified by the judges will be presented at this session.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, 2 O'CLOCK—GENERAL PROBLEMS CONCERNING COMPLETE ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

Wm. B. Bryant, publisher, Paterson (N. J.) Press-Guardian—"The Advertising Department as Seen by a Publisher in a City of Medium Size."

Col. Edward F. Lawson, London Daily Telegraph—"Modern Newspapering."

Frank E. Tripp, general manager, Gannett Newspapers—"Why Every Man for Himself?"

Subjects for open discussion:

"What is the most satisfactory solution to the position problem?"

"In case of a newspaper consolidation, what is the most satisfactory manner in which to handle old contracts?"

"What are the most practical standards of measurement for advertising?"

"What is the most equitable differential between the average net retail rate and the average gross national rate?"

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 24, 9 O'CLOCK—CLOSING SESSION

Any discussions not completed during previous sessions will be taken up at this time.

Reports of committees, election of officers and other closing business matters.

NEW FORT WORTH PRESS BUILDING

PRINTERS AND ADVERTISERS

How the Former Can Help the Latter to Be Discussed at A.A.C.W. Meet

How the printer can best help the advertiser will be discussed by speakers before the Graphic Arts Department meeting, June 22, during the 22nd annual convention week in Philadelphia of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Bernard Lichtenberg, advertising manager of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, New York, and Verne Burnett, secretary of the institutional advertising committee of the General Motors Corporation, Detroit, will be speakers on this general subject.

Other speakers before the Graphic Arts Department include: Jack W. Speare, advertising counsel, Rochester, N. Y.; W. Arthur Cole, vice-president of the Corman Company, New York, and president of the American Institute of Graphic Arts; Charles Austin Bates, New York advertising counsellor, and David Silbe, consulting typographer, New York.

R. R. BARLOW RESIGNS

Quits as Head of University of Minnesota Journalism School

Ruel R. Barlow, head of the department of journalism of the University of Minnesota, St. Paul, announced his resignation June 2, effective at the close of the school year. He declared that the University has been "notoriously deaf to the demands for sound journalistic training."

Mr. Barlow criticized what he termed was the "reactionary" attitude in the Arts College. He charged that "every man who has been an instructor in journalism at Minnesota has been squelched in his attempts to provide adequate journalistic training."

He has been head of the department since 1920.

NEW CALIFORNIA GROUP

Lower San Joaquin Valley Publishers Name Chatters Chairman

Publishers of the lower San Joaquin Valley, which comprises Fresno, Kings, Tulare and Kern counties, met the 24th of May at Visalia, Cal., and organized a unit of the Southern California Editorial Association.

While each member will hold an individual membership in the Southern California Editorial Association, the group will work primarily through the San Joaquin Valley unit. The organization plans to meet at least quarterly for the discussion of affairs affecting their particular district.

About twenty members have joined the unit, and at the organization meeting nine publishers were present. Ford A. Chatters of the Lindsey Gazette was elected chairman.

Harry S. Webster, publisher of the San Bernardino Sun, and vice-president of the Southern California Editorial Association, attended the organization meeting.

FREE DAILY IN KANSAS

M. C. Langley to Give Away His Iola News, to Start June 7

The Daily News is the name of the new free evening daily which will make its initial appearance in Iola, Kan., on June 7.

The paper will be delivered by carrier to all homes, business houses, stores, hotels, and offices in Iola and suburbs, according to M. C. Langley, the publisher. The size of the paper will be five columns wide, 15 inches long.

Langley has had 11 years' experience as advertising manager and business manager on the Iola Daily Register. He will have charge of the advertising and will be the business manager.

Mrs. M. C. Langley, wife of the publisher, will assist in the office. She will also handle society news. The city editor will be Floyd H. Lynn. Miss Christine Henrichs will be the reporter.

The Daily News will be printed in the office of the Laude Printing Company at Iola.

INSURANCE PROGRAM READY

Members of Conference to Discuss Newspaper Advertising at Philadelphia

Whether newspaper advertising helps the insurance business will be discussed at the annual convention of the Insurance Advertising Conference to be held in Philadelphia, June 22.

Edward A. Collins, conference president, will preside.

The question will be taken up by Charles H. Holland, president of the Independence Companies, Philadelphia.

Other insurance advertising men on the program include: B. N. Mills, advertising manager, Bankers Life Insurance Company, Des Moines; John W. Longnecker, advertising manager, Hartford Fire Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn. Sidney C. Doolittle, publication manager, Fidelity and Deposit Company, Baltimore; and Franklin Dorcet, Whittet & Shepperson, Richmond.

FT. WORTH PRESS OPENS NEW $150,000 HOME

Plant Is One-Story Fireproof Structure 100 Feet Square With Room for Expansion — New Press Installed

The Fort Worth Press, Scripps-Howard newspaper, on June 1, celebrated the occupancy of its new home with a reception to its readers and friends.

The new building at Fifth and Jones streets, was occupied May 10. It is a steel and concrete fireproof one-story structure, 100 feet square. The foundation and concrete framework is built to carry two more stories, to provide for expansion. Backing up to the building is a paper storage warehouse up to the door of which a Santa Fe railroad spur track runs.

Building and lot, and a new Hoe Octuple press, new stereotype and composing room equipment, represent a cost of about $150,000.

The Fort Worth Press was established Oct. 3, 1921, by Editor Leon M. Siler and Business Manager William McIntosh. The newspaper attracted wide attention for its successful campaign to drive wildcat oil stock promoters out of Fort Worth.

The Press also opened editorially the campaign for city manager government in Fort Worth, and saw the successful conclusion of that campaign in the spring of 1925 when the city began operating under a new charter and a city manager, O. E. Carr.

M. R. Toomer is present editor of the Press, and Peter Hamilton is business manager.

$500,000 TO "SELL" TEXAS

Half-Million to Be Spent in Telling Resources of State

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 2.—Meeting in San Antonio Wednesday the executive committee of the "Advertise Texas" committee, Tenth District Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, decided to proceed with a $500,000 five-year campaign to advertise the state's resources. W. V. Crawford of Waco, chairman of the committee, was appointed managing director of the campaign organization with Waco headquarters. W. W. Woodson, Waco banker, was named treasurer and custodian of the preliminary fund, some of which was subscribed. Another meeting will be held in Waco June 29, to adopt a set of declarations, consider plans to raise the necessary money, and go into permanent organization.

DAILIES AIDED PARK FIGHT

President Signs Measure Backed by Scripps-Howard Newspapers

The Knoxville News is exhibiting in its display window clippings from the Scripps-Howard newspapers over the country, which show how they cooperated in helping to get through a bill creating the Great Smoky Mountains and Shenandoah National Parks.

The Scripps-Howard newspapers strongly boosted the national park movement. President Coolidge has signed the measure. The Smokies National Park is near Knoxville.

Times Correspondent Weds on Ship

Lincoln Eyre, Berlin correspondent of the New York Times, was married June 2, to Dinna Gralla, Polish screen star, on board the President Roosevelt in the North Sea on the way from Bremen to Southampton. Miss Gralla will continue her screen career. The couple are spending their honeymoon in England.

Editor Entertains Correspondents

Capt. Charles L. Weymouth, editor and manager of the Hanover (Va.) Herald-Progress published in Ashland, was host to 32 of his country correspondents at a banquet in Ashland, May 29.

HOWARD NAMED CHIEF OF TYPO'S UNION

Chicago Man Defeats President James M. Lynch Who Beat Successful Candidate Two Years Ago—Administration's Upset Not Complete

Charles P. Howard, of Chicago, is again president of the International Typographical Union. His defeat of James M. Lynch, candidate for re-election was conceded at the union's national headquarters in Indianapolis, June 1. Two years ago the story was reversed, with Lynch defeating Howard, who was then president.

CHARLES P. HOWARD

Returns from 739 local unions on June 1, showed Howard leading by 2,203 votes, with about 75 unions yet to hear from. When Lynch was elected in 1924, he led Howard by 2,600 votes.

New York offices of the union announced Howard's victory on June 3, but were unable to supply EDITOR & PUBLISHER with any later returns than those given out in Indianapolis two days before.

The upset for the "Administration" party within the union was not complete. Lynch adherents still control the Executive Council through the re-election of J. W. Hays of Minneapolis, Secretary-Treasurer, over Woodruff Randolph of Chicago, and of Seth R. Brown of Los Angeles, Cal., first vice-president, over Theodore Perry of Indianapolis.

Austin Hewson of New York apparently was defeated by George Bentley of New York for second vice-president. The fifth member of the Executive Council is Charles N. Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y., head of the Mailers' Trade District Union, an "Administration" man.

Lynch's defeat is attributed to dissatisfaction over the Administration's handling of the union's old age pension problem.

Col. McCormick Host to Veterans

Col. Robert R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune was host at a reunion of members of the Illinois Branch of the Society of the First Division, composed of about 100 A. E. F. veterans, near Wheaton, Ill., May 30. Col. McCormick was a major in the Fifth United States Field Artillery.

Women Edit Minnesota Paper

The club women of Marshall, Minn., last week edited the Marshall News-Messenger, issuing a 20-page paper. All the news stories, feature articles and editorials were contributed by the women. Trap-shooting and golf were front-page stories and editorials dealt with prohibition, community endeavor, the local rest room campaign and similar local topics.

Zeigler Retained by Gatti-Casazza

Edward Zeigler, former music critic of the New York World, now an assistant to Giulio Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, has been retained in that capacity under contract until May 1, 1931, it was announced this week.

Mainardy Joins N. Y. Graphic

George E. Mainardy, for many years advertising manager of the American Tobacco Company, and recently with the H. E. Lesan Advertising agency, has joined the national advertising department of the New York Evening Graphic.

WRITERS ON AWARD JURY

W. A. White and Chester Crowell Named by Harmon Foundation

Two newspapermen, William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, and Chester Crowell, former editor and publisher of the Fresno Republican, have been named on the jury of five of the Harmon Foundation, New York, to award $500 to the author of the article appearing in 1926 in any American newspaper or periodical which, in the opinion of the judges, makes the most distinctive contribution of the year to social or industrial welfare in the United States."

Articles must be submitted by mail in their printed form by the author, editor, or others interested, and reach Jury Harmon-Survey Award 2, c/o Harmon Foundation, Room 710, 140 Nassau Street, New York City, prior to Dec. 30, 1926.

Burr Joins Monitor's N. Y. Office

Hudson C. Burr has joined the staff of the Christian Science Monitor's New York office as an advertising representative. He was graduated with an engineering degree from Brown University, and was for eight years sales engineer for the Burwak Elevator Company. He was recently manager of the Cellokay Manufacturing Company.

JANUARY BEST BUSINESS MONTH

So Survey Shows Prepared by Agency for New York Herald Tribune

More advertising schedules are prepared in January than in any other month of the year, according to a survey which has been compiled by the research department of Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., for the New York Herald Tribune. The agency has drawn up a monthly chart showing when advertising schedules are prepared by 2422 national advertisers.

January leads December slightly—324 to 303. April is lowest with 94. The other months are: February, 142; March 118; May 95; June 146; July, 169; August, 195; September, 198; October, 209; and November, 254.

Huckle Buys Semi-Weekly

A. W. Huckle, publisher of the Rock Hill (S. C.) Herald, purchased of A. S. Gravely, of Martinsville, Va., the controlling interest of the Bulletin Printing & Publishing Company of the latter city, May 25. This company publishes the Henry Bulletin, semi-weekly, only paper in Henry County, Va. Huckle, former publisher in Michigan, purchased the Rock Hill (S. C.) Herald in 1922. He will continue his residence in Rock Hill and will have associated with him at Martinsville R. P. Beck, who has been a stockholder in the Bulletin for a number of years, and who has been the manager of the company. A new Duplex press will be installed.

Air Handbills Curbed in Richmond

Aviators will no more have the privilege of circularizing the city of Richmond from the air with small hand bills dropped from their planes. Chief of Police Robert B. Jordan has held it is against city ordinances to scatter paper in the streets and that future perpetrators will be vigorously prosecuted. J. S. Charles, an aviator who recently performed the hand bill-scattering stunt, was haled into police court on orders of Chief of Police Jordan for the offense. Justice H. A. Maurice released him, but administered a caution.

Virginia Writers on College Board

Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, editor of the Richmond (Va.) News-Leader, Miss Virginia Lee Cox, editor of the woman's page of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, and J. B. Fishburne, editor of the Roanoke (Va.) World-News, have been elected to the board of trustees of Hollins College, near Roanoke.

MARTIN HEADS CLEVELAND TIMES

Resigns As Editor of Cleveland Press—Cook Succeeds Him

Earle E. Martin resigned this week as editor of the Cleveland Press and took complete charge of the Cleveland Times, a morning and Sunday newspaper, as publisher. Mr. Martin's resignation was accepted with expressions of regret by Roy W. Howard and Robert P. Scripps of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, of which Mr. Martin has been an editor for many years.

EARLE E. MARTIN

E. E. COOK

E. E. Cook, editorial chief of the Central Group of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, has assumed editorial charge of the Press.

Mrs. Hotaling Wins N. E. A. Prize

Mrs. H. C. Hotaling, of the Mapleton (Minn.) Enterprise, and wife of the executive secretary of the National Editorial Association, has won first prize in the contest for the best story on the N. E. A. tour of Virginia in 1925.

INTERVIEW BY WIRELESS

T. T. Topping, A.P. Correspondent, Uses Radio to Get Syrian News

T. T. Topping, member of the Paris staff of the Associated Press, carried on an interview by wireless, with Henry de Jouvenal, French High Commissioner to Syria, to get news of the Syrian situation, May 29.

Commissioner de Jouvenal was on board the S. S. Sphinx, homeward bound from Alexandria. The steamer Pierre Loti, aboard which the A. P. correspondent was proceeding to Syria, was then 200 miles away, going towards Alexandria.

At the request of the Associated Press, the two vessels got into communication. M. de Jouvenal was asked to come to the wireless room as the correspondent desired to ask him a few questions. Then the interview was carried on, with questions and answers going back and forth by radio.

VIRGINIA GAZETTE SUSPENDS

Revival of First Virginia Paper Quits When Professor Leaves

Checks representing the difference between the annual subscription price and the value of the issues each subscriber has received, will be mailed to the subscribers of the Williamsburg Virginia Gazette, which suspended publication with its issue of May 15.

The paper was a reproduction of the first newspaper published in Virginia, the Virginia Gazette having been the first paper to print the news of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The modern day issues have carried a column of news of 150 years ago gleaned from the columns of the original paper.

Suspension of the Gazette was occasioned by the resignation of Prof. H. Bocock, of the faculty of the College of William & Mary, who goes to another institution, and the announcement says, "No one is forthcoming who would care to undertake the operation of the paper.

"The paper received no subsidy from the college, though members of the class of the Wm. Parks School of Journalism were on the staff.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE IN LIBEL SUIT TRIAL

Fail to Return Verdict In Action Brought by Mrs. Anne Campbell Against New York Times—N. Y. Sun Won Its Case

A jury in Judge Walsh's part of New York supreme court disagreed and failed to return a verdict in the libel case brought by Mrs. Anne McCoy Campbell, Christian Science practitioner, against the New York Times.

Mrs. Campbell had objected to a story carried by the Times, March 30, 1922, telling of a suit that had been brought against her by Mrs. Elizabeth S. Nichols for $16,000 for alleged fraud.

The case was argued for the Times by E. M. Souza, of the firm of Cook, Nathan & Lehman, New York.

Because no court action had been taken on Mrs. Nichols complaint, which was later dismissed, Mrs. Campbell contended that the Times was not privileged to print its charges. A Times reporter, however, had called on Mrs. Campbell, and had obtained comments concerning the suit for publication from her.

On May 17, the New York Sun, defended by Macdonald DeWitt, of DeWitt and Van Aken, won a suit brought by Mrs. Campbell on the same charge.

Suits on account of similar publications are still pending against the New York World, New York Tribune, and New York Evening Post.

DEFUNCT DAILY'S PLANT SOLD

Danville (Va.) Register and Bee Buy Danville News Equipment

Plant of the defunct Danville (Va.) News afternoon paper published from June 11, 1923, to Oct. 28, 1925, has been purchased by Rorer A. James Jr., publisher of the Danville Register and Bee, from Albert Patton, trustee for bondholders of the Danville News Publishing Company.

The consideration was not made public. A 32-page press, six linotypes, stereotype equipment and other material was included in the deal. The equipment will be used by the Register, it was stated.

New Toronto M. E.

Hector Charlesworth, music and dramatic editor of Toronto Saturday Night, has been appointed managing editor in succession to the late C. F. Paul. He started his journalistic career on the paper of which he now becomes managing editor, but later entered daily journalism, working on the Toronto World, Toronto News and Toronto Mail and Empire successively. He returned to Saturday Night in 1910. Last year he published a book of reminiscences entitled, "Candid Chronicles."

Denver Post Delivering by Air

Claiming to be the first newspaper to offer regular daily delivery by air mail, the Denver Post has tied up with the government air mail service newly inaugurated between Denver and Cheyenne, Wyo., and is offering papers "hot from the press" to Pueblo, Colo., 125 miles away, to Cheyenne, 107 miles distant and other points. By aerial route, deliveries are made to Cheyenne in 60 minutes and to Pueblo in 90 minutes.

To Study Stereotyping Abroad

George A. Kubler, president of the Certified Dry Mat Corporation of New York, will sail for Europe on the Maestic June 5. While abroad he will study newspaper mechanical problems with special reference to stereotyping.

Weekly Prints 24-Page Edition

The Storm Lake (Ia.) Pilot-Tribune, weekly, published a 24-page regular edition, May 27, claimed to be the largest regular edition of an Iowa weekly. W. C. Jarnagin is publisher.

INDUSTRY VS. INDUSTRY IN "NEW COMPETITION"

Straight-Line Methods of Yesterday Have Disappeared As "Distributive Pressure" Has Increased, New York Banker Declares—Business Men "Huddling" Before New Threat

By O. H. CHENEY

Vice-President, American Exchange Pacific National Bank, New York

(EDITOR & PUBLISHER believes the following article to be the most thoughtful and penetrating discussion of the huge problem of mass production, distribution, and instalment selling which has appeared recently. It presents new ideas on a subject which has many modern business men sorely puzzled. The article appeared in the June issue of the The Nation's Business and is reproduced by special permission.)

"IT would be better for us all if we could at one sweep scrap all our ideas of distribution."

I made this statement the other day in addressing a group of New York bankers and the chorus of agreement which is greeting these words from many parts of the country and from many lines of business makes me feel that I have been guilty of a platitude. Yet almost every day I meet some business men whose ideas of distribution would appropriately grace the quill-pen and silk-hat period of American business.

They think distribution is a semi-sacred process the rites and procedure of which are written somewhere into the Constitution of the United States and that it would take at least a constitutional amendment to change them. They still think the word "competition" means the struggle of two grocers on the same street to sell a woman a can of beans or the battle between two automobile manufacturers in Detroit. They believe in that aphorism which has guided the economic politics of this nation, "Competition is the life of trade"—they believe it probably more enthusiastically about other lines of business than about their own.

Ten years ago distribution and competition were not what they are today. In fact the methods of yesterday in many lines will probably be antiquated tomorrow. Those of us who are thinking in terms of yesterday's competition are asleep. The noises which you hear in trade association convention halls, in congressional corridors and in the courts are the moans of such business men tossing in their sleep; and the loud cries you are hearing more often are those of some business men waking up with a start to the new competition.

In the late war, which the peace conferees are still so valiantly fighting, warfare left the ground and the waves and invaded the earth under the ground and the sea under the waves—and the air. So it has been with business warfare in the past few years—it has left the old battlegrounds and the old weapons. The business man these days doesn't know where he is going to be hit next, or how. The day is over when a man could see his competitor. It is a wise man who knows his competitor.

It is an interesting study in a neglected field of psychology to observe the degree of consciousness, in the average business man, of this new competition. Some of his reactions appear to be almost instinctive—he does not actually realize why he does certain things, but they very often turn out to be right.

The growth of trade associations is an example of this. By some form of herd instinct, men who still consider themselves competitors flock together for mutual protection from the mysterious dangers that lurk around them in the wild business jungle. They do not really realize that the reason why they act that way is that they unconsciously feel that the competition between them has become of minor importance compared with the new competition.

In the good old days (meaning almost anything more than thirty days ago) distribution was along a straight line and competition was along other straight lines—at right angles to it. In other words, the line of distribution was from producer through wholesaler and retailer to consumer. The lines of competition were between producers turning out similar products, between wholesalers in the same line, and between retailers selling practically identical goods.

The old competitive methods ranged from price-cutting to arson, including slander, bribery, espionage, man-stealing and fomenting strikes. Competition was competition in those days. When two competitors happened to meet in the same room it was against business ethics for more than one to be able to leave the room unassisted. But nowadays, in these wishy-washy times, when two men in the same line meet, they start talking about co-operative advertising or standardizing sizes, eliminating unnecessary styles, uniform cost accounting or standard terms to the trade. And, if certain senators from the middle west are not within earshot, they may actually talk of a merger.

The new competition is like the new art—the few simple lines which we could recognize and understand in the old competition have been replaced by a confusing criss-cross of angles and curves. Distribution becomes direct and cuts corners in some fields, in others it becomes more intricate with new middlemen. Competition breaks away from old lines, jumps across established methods, and travels up and down the very line of distribution itself.

But closer study seems to reveal a logic in the confusion—an apparent method in the madness. But before the song of the new competition can become clear it is necessary to tune out a lot of interfering misconception and overcome considerable static. In fact, it is desirable to switch off and start all over again. That is why I have said that it would be helpful for us to forget all our previous ideas on the subject. As a beginning it is suggested that we do away with the word "competition" altogether and in this way get rid of the old conceptions that cling to the word. Instead of the word "competition" a phrase like "distributive pressure" is suggested; not that it is euphonious or picturesque, but it is more accurately descriptive of the intricate processes which constitute modern competition.

The new competition is, broadly, pressure for distributive outlets; where this pressure was formerly exerted within certain established channels, the intensity of competition has broken these down and is making its own channels. The basic reasons for these terrific and newly directed pressures are, of course, the surplus plant capacity available for production and the tremendous progress in the arts and sciences of promotion and exploitation through advertising, publicity and salesmanship.

These pressures are impatient; they will not allow the stream of distribution to work through from producer to consumer at the old, slow rate. And this accounts for numerous merchandising phenomena which, seen alone, seem strange and often inexplicable; but when they are viewed together from this angle are seen really to be different currents and eddies in one stream. Such phenomena, for example, are hand-to-mouth buying, instalment buying, direct selling and group buying.

This distributive pressure, in almost every line of business, assumes the form of intra-industrial competition. Not only do retailers compete with each other, wholesalers with each other and manufacturers with each other, but individuals in each group compete with those in other groups—often with those who may be distributing or manufacturing their products.

This competition may be observed, at the very beginning of the process, with the producer of the raw material. The dairy farmers join a league which buys milk routes and milk-product and ice-cream plants, entering into competition with their own customers. A copper mining company buys a brass factory. Growers in many agricultural lines form gigantic co-operative marketing organizations. Manufacturers become dissatisfied with the volume which they are selling through wholesalers and begin to sell direct to the retailers, as in the grocery field.

Both manufacturers and wholesalers enter into competition with the retailers by organizing chains of retail stores. They go even further and try to eliminate the retailer and sell through house-to-house canvassers, as in the case of hosiery or household appliances; further still, they try to eliminate the canvasser by using the mails, as in almost every conceivable type of goods; and even further, try to eliminate every selling method by getting the buyer to do more selling, as in the recent "endless chain" schemes for selling hosiery.

This distributive pressure does not work in only one direction along the line of distribution; it works in the other direction also. The flow of distribution is accelerated not only by the pressure of production but also by the vacuum of merchandising; outlets want goods to sell—goods which they can sell more quickly and on which they can make more profit. This type of the new competition also takes on many interesting forms.

The most striking and successful is, of course, the chain-store system, as in groceries, dry goods, variety goods, tobacco, and the like. By multiplying outlets under one control, the retailer assumes the function of the wholesaler and competes with him. Independent retailers combat chain competition by organizing group buying associations or combining their buying power through resident buyers, as in the dry goods field. Chain and group retailers go even further and enter the producing field, entering into competition with the manufacturer, and frequently the wholesaler does likewise.

This "pulling" force to attract goods and to control the source of supply goes still further back along the line of production and distribution; automobile manufacturers buy parts plants, Henry Ford buys and builds steel, textile and glass plants, sugar refiners buy cane plantations, tire manufacturers buy rubber and cotton plantations, canners subsidize fruit and vegetable growers.

And these two forms of intra-industrial competition become the logical basis of the vertical trust; in which we may possibly see important developments in this country in the next decade.

The tragedies and comedies, with and without music, of the current business drama, are mostly expressions of this intra-industrial competition. Of course the struggle between the poor but heroic small-town store and the rich villainous mail-order house belongs back almost in the days of the ten-twenty-thirty melodramas. The down-trodden corner grocer crushed under the cruel high-powered machine of the chain system is also not a new theme.

They cannot compare with the nation-wide pageantry of the embattled department, dry goods and hardware stores, fighting the army of the house-to-house canvasser—with the rather anti-climatic last scene in the Supreme Court.

They cannot compare with the nice clean triangle recently in the news—the outcry of the bakers' supply houses against the proposed big bakery merger which threatens to wipe out the small, independent bakers who are their customers.

Nor can they compare in beauty and vigor of dialogue with the resolutions adopted by the women's wear manufacturers and wholesalers against the resident buyer and the unspeakable villainies of group-buying by department stores. The drama becomes more and more interesting and exciting every day as more individuals and groups discover that the real villain who has been ruining their lives is not the other fellow across the street but the man higher up. During the next year or two we may see the business drama combine the best features of a Chaplin picture, Ibsen, the three-ring circus, Hamlet, Luna Park and the Follies.

But this intra-industrial competition, this conflict of distributive pressures along the line of distribution, is only one type of the new competition. There is the competition between two divisions of the same general industry which produce commodities used alternatively. This type we may call inter-commodity competition.

When the weary rent-payer decides to build, he becomes the object of competition between lumber, brick, stone, Portland cement, tile and new combinations—not to forget slate, treated wood

TO THIS OLD TYPEWRITER

By Joseph H. Adams

Syracuse Post-Standard staff

How many eager hands have dipped
In you to write a manuscript,
Have sought your keys in nervous haste
And for the first edition raced!
By day, by night, old pal of mine,
You've helped me o'er the halting line,
Groaned over sad obituary
And chuckled when the quip was merry.
Year after year you laboreth,
Announcing birth, recording death;
Time passes, mortals turn to clay
But you seem proof against decay;
And as the present hours fly
You link me with an age gone by
When long-forgotten stories crept
From you the while the city slept.

shingle, asbestos, copper, zinc and asphalt compositions for the roof.

When his wife answers the call of spring with a new dress she is confronted by the competition of cotton, wool, silk and rayon and the almost countless number of varieties and combinations of these. And the number of products which compete for a place on the dinner table is even less calculable.

In the same category, for instance, is the competition of fuel oil with coal; of the motion-picture with the theater, the radio and the book; of the automobile, bus and truck with the railroad and street-car; of magazine, newspaper and billboard for advertisers. That this type of competition is increasingly recognized is proved by the growth of trade associations and of their constructive co-operative activities on behalf of all interested in a particular commodity of service, and sometimes of destructive efforts against competing interests.

But, again, inter-commodity competition is also not one-way competition. There is not only the competition of commodities for outlets but of outlets for commodities. There are hundreds of products for instance, which are sold in hardware, drug, grocery and department stores. There is a natural tendency of almost every kind of store to follow the liberality of the drug store in interpreting its function. Only Mr. Wrigley knows all the different available outlets for chewing gum. Real estate and automobiles are being sold by department stores.

Of all the forms of the new competition the one with probably the greatest economic and social significance is that of inter-industrial competition. Only a few scattered individuals at present realize the import of these developments which must inevitably assume a vital intensity in the next decade. A few among the masses of business men are beginning to see and to raise their voices, but their vision is generally trivial, distorted and colored by thwarted self-interest. These men are right, but they are helpless unless they use all the intelligence and energy they can command.

Inter-industrial competition is here; it is the competition of all industries for as much as they can get of the national income—for their share and more of the consumer's dollar. This type of distributive pressure has, of course, existed ever since our cave-man ancestor had to make up his mind whether he should put in some time killing a saber-toothed tiger for dinner or in making some drawings on the wall of his cave. This, in principle, is the equivalent of the conditions decried, for instance, by the clothing merchant who complains that the descendant of the cave-man is not spending so much on clothes because he has to pay instalments on his car. The fact is that this case is only a beginning, and only the first recognition of a widespread stress in our economic structure.

What is the cause? In seeking it we shall mistake the effect for the cause, because they are inter-related inextricably. The next few years may see legislative attempts to ease the tension, forced by those who are losing. But such attempts at reversing the economic laws of gravity will be doomed to failure if they concern themselves with what are thought to be causes.

Inter-industrial competition is one aspect of the pressure of goods for outlets —of increased pressure due to overcapacity for production. This pressure, working through all the powerful machinery of advertising exploitation has raised the American standard of living to the highest in the world and in history. The ways of spending money have been multiplied a thousand-fold. And, in turn, the American standard of living, especially the margin over subsistence, stimulates more production and new products. Work makes work and buying power makes buying power. There is the circle—not vicious, but certainly vital.

Instalment selling is the dominant manifestation of this inter-industrial competition. The industries using it have unconsciously recognized that, in spite of the high income and purchasing power of the American people, there are limitations. Realizing that this week's pay envelope is pretty well exhausted, they are making organized attempts to assure themselves a good share of next week's. There is no question that instalment selling stimulates demand, increases production, and therefore tends to raise the level of prosperity and buying power. There is no doubt that this accelerated speed of the wheels makes for a feeling of economic exhilaration and social well-being. The question is: How long can this acceleration be maintained? Can the wheels stand this speeding up?

"The automobile industry did it; why can't we do it?" This is the logical question which one industry after another is asking itself and answering in the affirmative. Who can deny that the present prosperity of the automobile industry is the result of time-payment sales when fully three-quarters of the vehicles sold are financed? Who can deny to the clothing manufacturers, to the paint manufacturers, the right to sell on time? But what can be done about it if the aggregate of instalment buying goes too far? What is too far? The answers to these questions will have to be faced by business in the next few years. "Competition is the life of trade"—and it's a great life.

Did we have to wait for the delightful debate between Florida and California to realize that there is competition between communities for population? What of the frequent competition between factories for labor? What of the competition between industries for investors?

Overshadowing all these types of competition in the vastness of its effects is international economic competition. True, it is old, but its effects are ever with us—more violent than ever in the last decade. Every day brings new evidence that the distributive pressure of nations is becoming more intense. The techniques of exploitation which have been developed in internal competition have been held in abeyance because of economic difficulties in other countries. When they become active, it is difficult to prophesy what the next few years will bring.

The drama of the new competition becomes more absorbing, more vivid, more hectic. It becomes universal in its sweep. It is impossible for anyone to see it all, because we are all actors as well as audience. And unless we can break away and see clearly, it may be too much for us.

BULLEN LAUDS U. S. AFTER REPORTING IT FOR LONDON DAILY 21 YEARS

AFTER viewing the United States for 21 years as U. S. correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, Percy Sutherland Bullen, dean of foreign correspondents in this country believes that America provides the fullest opportunity for youth of any nation, and that there is more fraternity and equality in the best sense of the word in the United States than in any other country with which he is personally acquainted.

PERCY S. BULLEN

The veteran correspondent expressed these views at a luncheon tendered him Thursday, June 3, at the Lawyers' Club, New York, by the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents, marking the 21st anniversary.

During his remarks acknowledging the honor paid him, Mr. Bullen touched on the changes in the news field here and abroad in the past 21 years.

"Twenty-one years to date corresponds with the period during which the countries of the older civilizations have been busily engaged in the task of discovering the United States," he declared. "Today America stands at the peak of power and prosperity with possibilities of progress which no man can estimate.

"Twenty-one years ago America as a field for news was not even scratched by the foreign correspondent. London, Paris and Berlin asked only for 'human interest' yarns—stories of lightning marriages and Reno divorces, the escapades of some fool millionaire, society episodes at Newport, bathtub theatre orgies, and the like.

"Today we still send human interest cables, but for the most part the big events of the nations, current history—political, legislative, social, economic—have the place they merit. During the same period of 21 years, and more particularly since the war, the American newspaper press has been engaged in the discovery of European affairs and with such success that in the case of the great strike in England the New York papers actually carried far better and fuller reports by cable and wireless photographs than the British papers.

"Twenty-one years ago Europe and America rather ignored each other, but today there is a growing exchange of news and the interpretation of news by accredited correspondents coupled with a growing recognition of the fact that no country can live to itself alone in a watertight compartment but all are linked together by bonds which multiply and strengthen as education advances and means of communication increase.

If I were to sum up my experience of the last 21 years I would say this: America can learn much from Europe, but Europe has most to learn from America.

"It is inadvisable to generalize about America, but I venture to emphasize three things which may be stated as self-evident to anyone equally acquainted with both sides of the Atlantic.

"First, America provides the fullest opportunity for youth.

"Secondly, relations between employers and employed in this country are more harmonious and cordial than elsewhere.

"It is true that the capitalist here as elsewhere is out for profit and the worker out for a high wage, but in America they manage best to work together for the common good. The two English engineers, Austin and Lloyd and the six English unionist workers who came to the United States to ascertain the reason why America pays the highest wages and the workmen here enjoy a higher standard of living all pay tribute to the cordial relations between employers and employed. This fact may explain in part why America with higher wages can produce at cheaper rates than many of her competitors.

"Thirdly, there is more fraternity and equality in the best sense of the word in the United States than in any other country with which I am personally acquainted. There is far less of that class antagonism, latent feudalism—call it sheer snobbery if you like—which you find so often in the countries of the older civilizations. It may be that one here shows less tendency than elsewhere to 'order himself lowly and reverently to all his betters'—to quote the words of the church catechism—but who shall complain in a country where 'all men are by nature born free and independent' and where social equality, as Mr. Bryce remarks, prevails to a greater extent than any other country in the world."

South Joins Birmingham Age-Herald

Ray S. South, for the past seven years circulation manager of the Birmingham (Ala.) News, has resigned, and on June 1 became circulation director of the Birmingham Age-Herald. John B. Fletcher, of the Milwaukee Journal, has been named to succeed South.

LONDON TIMES MA GIVEN FELLOWSHIP

Thomas T. E. Cadus to Spend Year in U. S., Arriving July 1, As Walter Hines Page Fellow

Thomas T. E. Cadette, foreign sub-ed tor of the London Times has been a pointed the first British journalist spend a year in the United States und the American Newspaper Fellowships Memory of Walter Hines Page estal lished by the English-Speaking Union the United States, according to a cab from England just received at the hea quarters of this organization in Ne York.

The general purpose of the Fello ships is to promote fuller knowledge a understanding of American affair Cadus, who is expected to reach Ameri July 1, was selected from among a nun ber of candidates by the cooperati British Newspaper Committee, of whi Lord Burnham is the chairman and S Campbell Stuart the vice-chairman. Oth members are: Maj. J. J. Astor, R. I Blumenfeld, Sir Robert Bruce, H. Cadbury, Sir Robert Donald, J. L. Garvi Lord Riddell, Evelyn Wrench and A fred E. Johns, honorary secretary.

Julian S. Mason of New York is chai man of the American Newspaper Com mittee which will carry out the practic arrangements for the visiting Fellows i the United States. This Committee composed of some 25 leading newspap men representing all sections of the cou try, through whom arrangements will b made for the holder of the Fellowshi to divide his time between the Pacifi Central and Eastern parts of the Unite States, working on newspapers an familiarizing himself generally wit American conditions, problems and view points.

The Committee representing the Eng lish-Speaking Union of the United State in the establishment of the Fellowship consists of H. J. Fisher, chairman: Joh W. Davis, George Wickersham, Ott Kahn, Langdon P. Marvin, A. N. Mar quis, Charles C. Goodrich, treasurer, an John Daniels, secretary.

KELLY BUYS 2 DAILIES IN FALL RIVER, MASS.

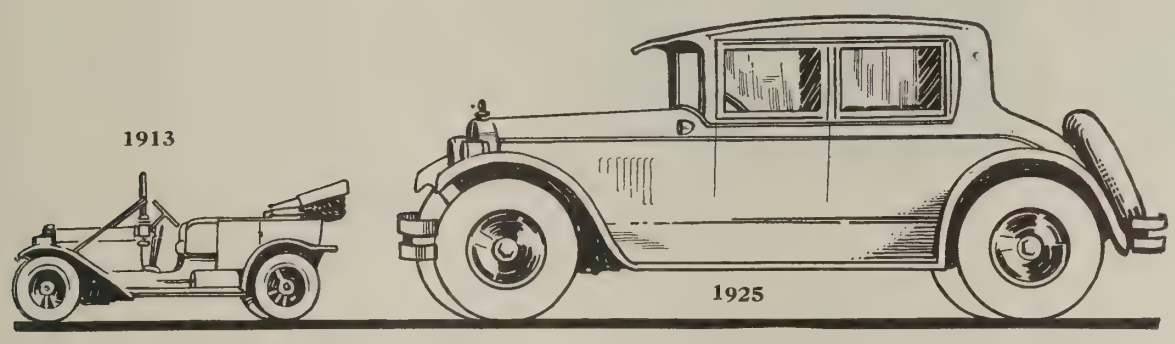
Herald and News Taken Over by Ne York Newspaper Representative— Announces Realization of Life Ambition

C. F. Kelly, head of the Kelly-Smit Company, newspaper advertising repre sentatives, New York, has purchased th Fall River Herald and the Fall Riv Evening News.

In announcing his purchase of the for mer paper from Ross F. Walker, Akron, O., Mr. Kelly said:

"In making this purchase, I have real ized my life-long ambition to publish i this city a newspaper dedicated to it service, for I was born here, and live and worked here for a great many years

"It is my purpose to continue th Herald as an independent newspaper with out prejudice or subservience to any fac tion, but devoted wholeheartedly to th welfare and upbuilding of Fall River."



Mr. Walker had taken over control o the Herald recently from Mrs. G. R. H Buffinton. Frank S. Almy was publishe of the News.

Lightning Damages Missouri Plant

The printing plant of the Trento (Mo.) Republican-Tribune was damage by fire May 26, after a bolt of lightnin struck the building. Paper stocks, th press, and other equipment were dam aged. A motor was rushed by truc from Jamesport and publication con tinued. A year ago the plant was seri ously damaged by fire.

Detroit's Great Industry Is Ever Growing

First Third 1926 Auto Production Exceeds That of Other Years

In 1925 the total production of passenger cars was eight times as great as that of 1913. Each year but two during this whole period has seen tremendous increases in passenger car production. In 1925 the increase over 1924 was 533,000 cars. During the first four months of 1926 automobile production is in excess of 1925 by 217,460 cars. A glance at the table below will show the tremendous volume reached by this industry which is centered about Detroit and which is causing Detroit to grow as no other city in the United States ever has. Detroit is enjoying a state of prosperity unparalleled in this country. For this reason if for no other Detroit should have your greatest advertising efforts. But there is another important reason and that is The Detroit News—the only medium in the United States covering a city of Detroit's size thoroughly, and enabling you to sell the whole Detroit market at one time and one cost.

	PASSENGER CARS	TRUCKS
1913	461,500	23,500
1914	543,679	25,375
1915	818,618	74,000
1916	1,525,578	92,130
1917	1,740,792	128,157
1918	926,388	227,250
1919	1,657,652	316,364
1920	1,799,522	311,531
1921	1,452,902	142,402
1922	2,313,558	244,499
1923	3,563,785	374,421
1924	3,144,999	359,863
1925	3,678,328	475,029

The Detroit News

Detroit's HOME Newspaper

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By HAROLD J. ASHE

RECEIVING his newspaper training in the Kansas City (Mo.) Star school, D. W. Lawson, general manager of the Long Beach (Cal.) Morning Sun, subscribes now to the principles of newspaper publishing laid down to him years ago—serving the community, no one special interest, not even the newspaper's own interests.

"Making money in the newspaper business is incidental," declared Mr. Lawson this week, in an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER. "The first thought is to serve the community well. Furthermore, if the newspaper makes itself necessary to the city in which it is published, and champions the best interests of that city, it will succeed."

Lawson emphatically stated that the business side of the Sun is, and that of any newspaper should be, divorced from the news room. There should be no dictation for the sake of expediency, he declared.

"A newspaper must be well-rounded out at all times, regardless of how it affects the business office," said Lawson. "In the long run this policy is bound to put the business side on the right side of the ledger.

"The average advertiser, today, doesn't care what the news policy of a newspaper is, except that it is such that compels reader-interest and makes for pulling-power of advertising."

The great ambition of Lawson's life is to return to the Orient, where he spent six years as a newspaper executive, first in Manila, and later as the general manager of the Shanghai Press. He is planning to organize a company to launch an American morning paper in Shanghai.

Lawson started in the newspaper business as a bookbinder, which he followed for ten years. Then realizing the limitations of that trade, he became an advertising solicitor for the Hutchinson (Kan.) Daily News. From the News he went to the Kansas City Star and was in charge of that publication's Chicago office for many years.

D. W. Lawson

He went to the Long Beach Morning Sun last November, direct from his service in the Orient.

EXTRAS PRINTED FROM TRUCK DURING RACE

Atlantic City Evening Union Took Staff, Compositors and Press to Scene of Automobile Speed Classic

The Atlantic City (N. J.) Evening Union published extras at the speedway during the recent 300-mile automobile race at Speedway, N. J. Five editions were run from the press, and 10 minutes after the race was finished the completed account was printed and in newsboys' hands.

Elaborate preparations had been made for the field publication stunt. A large truck carried a printing press and composing equipment obtained from a job printing house the 26 miles from Atlantic City to a spot in back of the grandstand. A force of expert printers set the news by hand as the copy was given to them by W. P. Houpt who dashed it off on a typewriter set up on a packing case. Mr. Houpt was getting the news from other members of the Evening Union staff established in the press box in the grandstand. The press was run by power from the automobile engine, a belt arrangement having been hooked up.

There were 50 Evening Union newsboys on hand to distribute the papers, printed on pink paper, through the grandstands.

As the "final edition" was coming off the press, hundreds leaving the race track stopped to watch the sight.

Arrangements for the field edition were completed by Lloyd Lippincott, circulation manager of the Press-Union publication Paul J. O'Neill, secretary and treasur of the company and in charge of circul tion; and Managing Editor Edward Beach of the Evening Union.

LEEDS MERCURY'S RECORD

Issued More Than 250,000 Copies in Day During British Strike

LEEDS, May 20.—While the recent gen eral stoppage lasted, Leeds was able t produce newspapers more successfull than any other other town in the cou try. The penny morning paper, th Leeds Mercury printed to begin with typeset, four page paper, afterwards re duced to two. The circulation rapidl rose to more than a quarter of a million and was on sale not only throughout th North of England, but also in London 200 miles away.

Early in the strike, it had the larges circulation of any paper in the country It maintained full editorials, its dail commentary "It Seems to Me" by th editor, W. L. Andrews, cartoons, an sporting news. Typists helped to se type, the leader-writers set headlines, and sub-editors and reporters ran the presses.

Robert C. Glass Marries

Robert C. Glass, editor of the Lynchburg (Va.) News and Advance, and nephew of Senator Carter Glass, and Miss Susie Gray Wright were to be married Saturday morning, June 5, at 10:30 o'clock in Holy Trinity Church, Richmond. After July 1, they will be at home at Tunstall and 805 Court Street, Lynchburg.

PUBLISHERS TO ATTEND LUNCHEON FOR PRINCE

Newspaper and Magazine Notables Invited to Luncheon Tendered by Dr. H. G. Leach, Forum Editor

Editors and publishers of American newspapers and magazines were to attend a luncheon for Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus given at the Century Club, New York, June 4, by Dr. Henry Goddard Leach, editor of the Forum.

Those invited included:

Capt. Gosta Asbrink, secretary to H. R. H.; A. W. Barmby, manager, Curtis Brown, Ltd.; William Beebe, author, scientist, explorer; John G. Bergquist, Chairman, American Reception Committee; Karl Bickel, President, United Press Association; Robert Woods Bliss, American Minister to Sweden; W. F. Bostroem, Swedish Minister to United States; Borje H. Brilloth, manager, Amercan Swedish News Exchange.

Arthur Brisbane, editor, New York Journal; Henry Seidel Canby, editor, the Saturday Review; William L. Chenelly, editor, Collier's; Kent Cooper, manager, the Associated Press; John O'Hara Cosgrave, Sunday editor, the World; James Creese, Secretary, American-Scandinavian Foundation; Wilbur Cross, editor, the Yale Review; Whitney Darrow, manager, Charles Scribner's Sons; Edward H. Dodd, President, Dodd, Mead & Co.

William Green, President, American Federation of Labor; Briton Haddon, general manager, Times; Col. George Harvey, editor, North American Review; Fritz Henriksson, chief official, Swedish Press Bureau; Hadar Hessel, correspondent, Dagens Nyheter; Sidney Hillman, President, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Arthur M. Howe, editor, Brooklyn Daily Eagle; Hewitt H. Howland, editor, Century Magazine; Charles K. Johansen, editor, Nordstjernan; Paul U. Kellogg, editor, the Survey.

Olof H. Lamm, Counsul General of Sweden; Ray Long, editor, International Magazine; G. Hilmer Lundbeck, American Reception Committee; Julian S. Mason, former managing editor, New York Herald Tribune; Harry E. Maule, editor, Country Life; James G. McDonald, Chairman, Foreign Policy Association; Charles M. Norton, Treasurer, the Forum; Adolf Nygren, correspondent, Stockholms-Tidningen; George W. Ochs Oakes, editor, Current History Magazine; Adolph Ochs, publisher, the New York Times; C. K. Ogden, science editor, the Forum; Rollo Ogden, editor, New York Times; Henry Fairfield Osborn, President, American Museum of Natural History.

Arthur W. Page, editor, World's Work; Douglas Parmentier, president, Harper & Bros.; Col. Count Goran de Posse, chief of staff; George Palmer Putnam, treasurer, G. P. Putnam's Sons; Ogden Reid, editor, New York Herald Tribune; Paul R. Reynolds, president, Paul R. Reynolds; Nils de Rudebeck, Marshal to H. R. H.

Charles Scribner, president, Charles Scribner's Sons; Don C. Seitz, associate editor, Outlook; Waldo W. Sellew, advertising manager, Forum; Albert Shaw, editor, American Review of Reviews; Stuart P. Sherman, literary editor, New York Herald Tribune; David E. Smiley, editor, New York Evening Post; Col. Oscar Solbert, United States aide to H. R. H.; Vilhjalmur Stefansson, author and explorer; Frederick Abbot Stokes, president, Frederick A. Stokes & Co.; Eric Swenne, correspondent, Svenska Dagbladet; Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor, World; Oscar von Sydow, Governor of Gothenburg.

The Rev. Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for Governor of New York; Ronald Tree, associate editor, Forum; Arthur T. Vance, editor, Pictorial Review; Albert Van Sand, editor, Nordlyset; Oswald Garrison Villard, editor, Nation; Louis Wiley, business manager, New York Times; Michael Williams, editor, The Commonweal, and William S. Woods, editor, Literary Digest.

Air Handbills Taboo in Chicago

Distribution of advertising and propaganda from an airplane circling over the city is illegal, according to an opinion handed down June 1 by Francis X. Busch, Chicago corporation counsel. The ruling was given after numerous complaints had been made that aviators littered up certain wards with circulars.

Today in Jacksonville

The customary ceremony of hoisting the Stars and Stripes to the topmost girder of the Barnett National Bank, to commemorate the completion of the steel work, was solemnized a week ago.

Towering 18 stories, or 247 feet, above the sidewalk, this mammoth structure is a monument to the faith of officials in this pioneer bank.

Fifty years the Barnett National Bank has been serving this community. Matching its career is the sixty years of service rendered by this newspaper. Both continue to grow and serve the greater Jacksonville.

The Florida Times-Union
~ JACKSONVILLE ~

DAILY, 53,000 SUNDAY, 70,000

THE word "tabloid" is descriptive of page size only—not of editorial character. The Daily News is a five cloumn newspaper—clean and constructive—edited for intelligent people. From the decks of the Mayflower to Chevy Chase, The News is welcomed as a newspaper of standing by legislators, by Government officers and employes, by the permanent Washington population.

WASHINGTON NEWS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

A. A. C. W. IS PLANNING INNOVATIONS IN ADVERTISING WORK

C. K. Woodbridge Announces His Willingness to Be Candidate for Re-Election on Project to Be Announced at Philadelphia Convention, June 19-24—France Seeking Convention

DECLARING his willingness to be a candidate for re-election as president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, C. King Woodbridge in an interview in New York this week, hinted at important innovations in association activities now being planned for possible adoption following the forthcoming convention to be held at Philadelphia, June 19-24.

Mr. Woodbridge will present the plans in detail at the convention, and declined to be specific when questioned this week. He said enough, however, to indicate plainly that the innovations were concerned with the larger development of constructive work for A. A. C. W. members.

"It is high time," he said, "for the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to define more clearly the functions of certain types of advertising, to save the business men of the country from resorting so much to guesswork.

"Too few people understand the relative value of the different advertising media today."

Following its organization and its concern with the development of advertising clubs in this country and abroad, the A. A. C. W.'s chief interest has been its plea for truth in advertising, and the education of the public to an acceptance of advertising.

Mr. Woodbridge's assertion that it was time for the A. A. C. W. to define the functions of the different types of advertising media was made during an interview in New York following his return from a five weeks' trip abroad. He told of a strong feeling in France that the 1927 A. A. C. W. convention should be held in Paris, and declared another reason why he was willing to again be a candidate for the A. A. C. W. presidency was because he wanted to assist in "perpetuation of the international relationships we have developed through the Associated Clubs."

"France would like to have the next convention held in Paris at the Philadelphia convention," Mr. Woodbridge said. "Belgium is also hoping that the meeting will be held soon in Brussels.

"About seventy-five delegates will cross the Atlantic to attend the Philadelphia convention. Of this number about 50 will come from England, eight from Germany, eight from France, two from Switzerland, one from Belgium and one from Holland.

"The French delegation is sponsored by the French press, and is being sent to this country to interpret the business man's view of France to American advertising men.

"The reason why the Europeans feel that the A. A. C. W. convention should return over-seas is because they believe that American advertising men coming to their country could assist them in educating their public to an appreciation of the value of advertising.

"Their attitude in this: America has used advertising as an effective tool in building up business and in acquainting the public with worth-while products. The European public, on the other hand, has not a broad appreciation of advertising nor is there the same individual advertising enterprise abroad as in this country. Thus we Europeans believe that Americans can teach us a great deal. We believe we must emulate America in its organized advertising plan."

Mr. Woodbridge went abroad to attend the British Advertising Clubs Association convention which was to have been held in Blackpool, England, May 3, but which was called off on account of the general strike, after the first day's session. He also visited in France, Belgium and Holland.

Mr. Woodbridge was entertained at luncheon in Paris by Senator Paul Dupuy, owner and editor of Le Petit Parisien. Col. Bunau-Varilla, owner of Le Matin, also honored the American advertising man, giving him a luncheon at which the purposes of the French delegation to this country were discussed.

"BRITISH STRIKE MADE INDUSTRIAL HISTORY"

H. R. Swartz Says Other Countries Should Emulate Peaceful Handling of Labor Dispute in Which Not a Shot Was Fired

The British general strike in which 5,000,000 workers were involved, and which was settled without the firing of a shot and without any serious riots "made industrial history that would be well for other countries to emulate," H. R. Swartz, president of the Intertype Corporation and R. Hoe & Co., told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. Mr. Swartz who was in England during the industrial crisis, and watched developments at first hand, returned to this country last week.

H. R. SWARTZ

"It was the general opinion that the strike could never have been averted by anything short of the surrender of the Government to the general council of the Trades Union Congress," he said. "In the drafting of the general strike order some trouble was taken to mitigate, as far as words could do it, the severity of the threat, for there was an appeal for the preservation of peace and order by the members of the trade unions. The appeal was not made in vain for while there were 5,000,000 men on strike, not a shot was fired and England made industrial history that would be well for others to emulate. There was the recommendation, as distinct from the imperative instructions as to the ceasing to work in general by the men called out, that there would be no interference with the health and food services."

Mr. Swartz told of the dissemination of news by the British Broadcasting Company as follows:

"To every owner of a wireless set in Great Britain the voice of the Government gave news, advice and information as to the country's need of help. Of all the measures taken, none was more effective than this in maintaining the spirit of the people. In the first days before the press recovered a measure of its freedom, wireless meant more than any words can say to innumerable householders.

"Great crises such as this produce unusual methods for dealing with them. A wholly novel achievement at the London Offices of the Dictaphone Company, Ltd., is well worthy of note.

"The Wireless Strike Bulletins issued daily by the British Broadcasting Company were received in the Company's offices and from a Burndept Ethophone Loud Speaker were recorded direct on the Dictaphone. Then they were transcribed by typists practically simultaneously with their reception and within a very few moments of the termination of the message the complete bulletin, neatly typed, was being exhibited in the windows of the Company's show room.

"The whole process of reception and transcription was carried on in full view of the public and naturally the novel experiment attracted enormous attention.

"Within a few minutes of the exhibition of the news in the windows the Company issued the bulletin in the form of typed sheets, neatly headed and reproduced by a special duplicating process. These 'Wireless News Bulletins,' thanks to the speed at which the messages were transcribed and typed, were far ahead of the newspapers and were eagerly received by the public."

252,330 was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening issues) for the month of

May, 1926

The average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN per Sunday for the month of May, 1926, was 192,051.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

Planning Illinois Weekly Tabloid

The Washington (Ill.) Printing Company has been dissolved and the Illinois Valley Herald Printing Company has been formed to succeed it. A new Duplex press and several linotype machines are being installed in the plant, which has been remodeled and enlarged preparatory to the publication of the Illinois Valley Herald, a tabloid newspaper devoted to the Illinois valley interests. The paper will be issued early in June.

SCHOLZ JOINS U. S. DAILY

Former Butterick Man Named Fie Circulation Manager

E. A. Scholz, for the past seven yea circulation director for the Butteri publications, was this week named fie circulation man ger of the Unit States Daily Washingto D. C., by Dav Lawrence, pre dent. Scholz h established hea quarters at Vanderbilt Av nue, New Yor and opened number of bran offices in oth parts of the cou try.

E. A. SCHOLZ

Years ago M Scholz was circ lation manager of the Chicago Record Herald, and later business manager o that paper. Following that he came t New York to organize for the Crowe Publishing Company its system of bran sales offices and became circulation di rector of that organization.

He is a brother of Emil M. Scholz former publisher of the New York Evening Post and now president of the Worl Wide Advertising Corporation, and o Charles Scholz, for years circulation manager of the Sacramento Bee and now assistant circulation manager of th Crowell Publishing Company.

Better Business Bureau in Orlando

Organization of a Better Business Bureau in Orlando, Fla., is being planned under the leadership of Carl Hunt, executive secretary of the Orlando Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Hunt was formerly manager of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, with headquarters in New York.

The INDIANAPOLIS NEWS

In March and again in April, The Indianapolis News established new national linage records — the largest two months in the 56-year history of The News. Always first! Increasing leadership!

Dan A. Carroll
110 E. 42nd
NEW YORK

J. E. Lutz
Tower Bldg.
CHICAGO

Frank T. Carroll,
Advertising Director

You may deal with these 28 Iowa daily newspapers as with one publication. Under the "Iowa plan," they pledge uniform cooperation throughout the state in marketing your goods.

Your advertising dollars work overtime—in Iowa

By every test, this responsive market is one of the most desirable that you can cover.

Nearly two and a half million of the most typically American people in the Nation. Over 91% are native whites.

Iowa ranks 51% above the Nation's average in per capita, taxable wealth. Average taxable wealth for U. S. A. is $2731. That of Iowa is $4146. (Latest U. S. Census Bureau Financial Report.)

Iowa has the smallest percentage of illiteracy of any state in the union—a good criterion when judging living standard.

Iowa people are engaged in many pursuits—about 42% in agriculture. Yet there is one common denominator for Iowa people. That is the daily newspaper. Through their local dailies they keep up every day with the baseball scores, the stock market, the newest thing in the auto field, the latest beauty cream.

The logical, economical way for you to tell your story to these people is with the 28 leading daily newspapers which comprise this association.

Their combined circulation covers the state very effectively. (Total circulation —571,151. Families in Iowa—550,000.) Our "Iowa plan" of merchandising help is of especial value for an initial sales campaign in this market.

Full information and rates on request.

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT. IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

Yes! The All Star Sunday Com
Build Circulation to

An average increase of 33 per cent is the record of newspapers that buy the ready printed comic supplements which are produced under the same editorial direction responsible for the enormous growth of the Hearst Sunday editions.

Although the yearly average increase in POPULATION in American cities is only five per cent, the CIRCULATION increase of the 42 typical newspapers listed shows that they had a total of 378,750 readers in May, 1924, and 502,550 readers in May, 1926. The gain of 123,800 readers, or increase of THIRTY-THREE PER CENT in two years, followed the publication of KING FEATURES READYPRINT COMICS.

Newspaper	May 1st, 1924 Circulation	May 1st, 1926 Circulation	Circulation Increase in Two Years	Newspaper	May 1st, 1924 Circulation	May 1st, 1926 Circulation	Circulation Increase in Two Years
Akron, O. Times	27,500	39,000	11,500	San Bernardino, Cal. Sun	9,000	10,000	1,000
Amarillo, Tex. Globe News	10,500	17,750	7,250	Texarkana, Ark. 4 States Press	8,000	10,000	2,000
Athens, O. Messenger	10,500	11,300	800	Walla Walla, Wash. Union	3,500	4,200	700
Denison, Tex. Herald	5,000	5,250	250	Asheville, N. C. Citizen	13,750	17,000	3,250
Dubuque, Ia. Telegraph-Herald	7,300	8,650	1,350	Danville, Va. Register	8,000	10,000	2,000
Fargo, N. D. Tribune	12,000	14,000	2,000	Norfolk, Va. Ledger Dispatch	8,000	9,000	1,000
Harrisburg, Pa. Courier	5,000	6,250	1,250	Petersburg, Va. Progress Index	8,000	9,000	1,000
Jackson, Miss. Clarion Ledger	7,700	8,700	1,000	Portsmouth, Va. Star	4,500	6,300	1,800
Lima, Ohio News	9,000	18,000	9,000	Daytona, Fla. News	5,000	8,000	3,000
Mansfield, Ohio Journal	5,000	8,500	3,500	Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Sun	2,500	6,500	4,000
Pine Bluff, Ark. Graphic	4,500	5,000	500	Ft. Meyers, Fla. Tropical Sun	1,500	5,000	3,500
Pomona, Cal. Bulletin	3,000	3,400	400	Miami Beach, Fla. Tribune	2,000	20,000	18,000

241 W. 58th STREET
New York City

KING FEATURES

Pages of King Features Syndicate Newspapers EVERYWHERE

Newspaper	May 1st, 1924 Circulation	May 1st, 1926 Circulation	Circulation Increase in Two Years
Orlando, Fla. Reporter Star	6,500	11,000	4,500
Pensacola, Fla. Journal	7,000	8,500	1,500
St. Augustine, Fla. Record	2,200	4,000	1,800
West Palm Beach, Fla. Post....	6,000	16,500	10,500
West Palm Beach, Fla. Times ..	4,500	11,500	7,000
Ashland, Ky. Independent	7,500	9,000	1,500
Bridgeport, Conn. Herald	12,000	17,500	5,500
Clarksburg, W. Va. Exponent ...	11,500	14,250	2,750
Marion, Ohio Star	12,950	14,550	1,600
Springfield, Ohio Sun	13,000	15,250	2,250
Zanesville, Ohio Times Signal....	8,300	8,800	500
Allentown, Pa. Morning Call ...	21,000	25,000	4,000
Atlantic City, N. J. Press	15,000	20,000	5,000
Clarksburg, W. Va. Telegram....	12,300	15,500	3,200
Danville, Ill. Morning Press.....	9,500	10,500	1,000
Kokomo, Ind. Dispatch	10,000	11,000	1,000
Lima, Ohio News (state ed.).....	17,450	22,400	4,950
South Bend, Ind. News Times....	23,000	26,000	3,000
Total, 42 Papers	378,750	502,550	123,800
Percentage Increase 33%

Get the best in comics—they are the cheapest. Order now the pages that have demonstrated their circulation-building power!

Examine the four and eight page combinations of readyprint comics drawn by world famous artists available to your newspaper. Select the combination you prefer—and WIRE TODAY—for reservation and price.

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE READYPRINT COMICS

will solve your circulation problem at a minimum of cost and mechanical work. They relieve your plant of trouble with colored inks, registry, paper, stereotyping and press work. Study the following four and eight page combinations before making your selection.

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Barney Google
3—Polly and Her Pals
4—Katzenjammer Kids

Page 1—Polly and Her Pals
2—Elmer
3—Toots and Casper
4—Abie the Agent

Page 1—Polly and Her Pals
2—Elmer
3—Just Kids
4—Barney Google

Page 1—Boob McNutt
2—Tillie the Toiler
3—Elmer
4—Barney Google

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Barney Google
3—Little Jimmy
4—Katzenjammer Kids

Page 1—Boob McNutt
2—Toots and Casper
3—Elmer
4—Barney Google

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Mr. Dough and Mr. Dubb
3—Little Jimmy
4—Katzenjammer Kids

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Mr. Dough and Mr. Dubb
3—Just Kids
4—Polly and Her Pals

Page 1—Polly and Her Pals
2—Elmer
3—Toots and Casper
4—Barney Google

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Barney Google
3—Mr. Dough and Mr. Dubb
4—Katzenjammer Kids

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Mr. Dough and Mr. Dubb
3—Dumb Dora
4—Katzenjammer Kids

Page 1—Tillie the Toiler
2—Elmer
3—Just Kids
4—Barney Google

Page 1—Barney Google
2—Tillie the Toiler
3—Dumb Dora
4—Little Jimmie

Page 1—Felix
2—Freddie the Sheik
3—Just Kids
4—Polly and Her Pals

Page 1—Felix
2—Freddie the Sheik
3—Tillie the Toiler
4—Dumb Dora

Page 1—Boob McNutt
2—Tillie the Toiler
3—Elmer
4—Barney Google

Page 1—Barney Google
2—Tillie the Toiler
3—Polly and Her Pals
4—Elmer
5—Just Kids
6—Freddie the Sheik
7—Abie the Agent
8—Felix

Page 1—Dumb Dora
2—Toots and Casper
3—Just Kids
4—Elmer

Page 1—Polly and Her Pals
2—Elmer
3—Bringing Up Father
4—Dumb Dora

Page 1—Polly and Her Pals
2—Felix
3—Bringing Up Father
4—Dumb Dora

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Freddie the Sheik
3—Abie the Agent
4—Felix
5—Polly and Her Pals
6—Dumb Dora
7—Elmer
8—Thimble Theatre

Page 1—Polly and Her Pals
2—Elmer
3—Just Kids
4—Dumb Dora

Page 1—Thimble Theatre
2—Felix
3—Just Kids
4—Dumb Dora

Page 1—Felix
2—Freddie the Sheik
3—Tillie the Toiler
4—Dumb Dora

Page 1—Bringing Up Father
2—Dumb Dora
3—Little Jimmy
4—Katzenjammer Kids
5—Toots and Casper
6—Thimble Theatre
7—Boob McNutt
8—Tillie the Toiler

Wire or write NOW for full information, price, and reservation

YNDICATE, INC.

M. KOENIGSBERG
President

"NAMES" BEST ONE-WORD FORMULA FOR SMALL CITY NEWSPAPER SUCCESS

An "Old-Time" Policy But One Which Still Attracts and Holds Readers, Uniontown Editor Says—They Please Both Subscribers and Advertisers

By J. FRED SHEAN
Editor Uniontown (Pa.) Herald-Genius

REFERENCE has been made from time to time in EDITOR & PUBLISHER to the importance of "locals" in the newspapers. I wonder if the experience of two newspapers which have emphasized this department with much attendant success would be of interest?

Some years ago, a syndicate house organ sent out a questionnaire asking editors and news editors to name the most important feature of a newspaper. I returned the card with the single word "Names." It drew a request for an article elaborating upon the thought. Subsequent experience as news editor, managing editor and editor has only served, in my humble estimation, to emphasize the importance of that one-word formula.

We pay much attention to our society and local columns. One young woman handles society news exclusively. Another handles locals and personals exclusively. The latter works entirely on a space basis. In order to earn her salary she works for it. We never publish less than two columns of personals daily, the average is nearer two and a half. Set in solid eight point, without slugging, it is easy for any editor to estimate the number of names contained in that department alone.

Local baseball leagues and sand-lot games are a prolific source of names. It is unnecessary to add that a box score has an irreducible minimum of 18 names of players.

Names of those present at social functions add to the grand total.

No newspaper omits publication of names of high school graduates. We go a step further and insist upon lists of eighth grade graduates from local and township schools. Experience has shown that the superintendent who fails to get that list to our newspapers hears from the eighth grades and their families.

One advertiser took the lists of high school graduates in the county and sent the graduates themselves a personally addressed letter concerning a special shoe design. Three hundred sales were made in a few days.

Our merchandising establishments are careful readers of our personal columns. Our managing editor, who has been with us only a brief time, was married the other day. When he returned, he had a deluge of congratulations in the form of invitations to furnish his new home from this and that store.

These examples may tend to the impression that we publish these columns as a service to our advertisers; that they are more commercial than news. The young woman who handles the personals column has a regular "beat" which she covers each day; stores, clubs, hotels and telephones to a selected list of women. There isn't a person upon whom she calls but who shows especial pleasure when he or she is able to report a half dozen or more newsy local items.

It seems to me that the secret in this careful attention to publishing names accurately is in the friends it makes for a newspaper. Seeing one's name in print —with certain notable exceptions—has an undisputed fascination; call it vanity, if you please, but it pleases, just the same, and makes friends for your paper. Friends mean subscribers; subscribers mean circulation; circulation means advertising—the whole means a deep-rooted prestige that cannot be undermined.

There is no truculence in this policy of printing names. Names are news. If John Smith and his wife take an automobile trip; if they visit the Sesqui; if they merely call on friends—those trips have an intimate personal interest to them. It is something they talk about to their friends. And if they see mention of it in their favorite newspaper there is a bit more personal interest to them in that newspaper. As I write this a prominent minister calls by phone to say that he and his wife are planning a little visit to the Sesqui and it might be an item for the personal column. You bet it is.

More personal phone calls are received by the society and personal reporters than any two other members of the staff. Isn't that a proof that people like to see their names in print?

Citizens called for jury duty in the courts are performing an important duty. Could you say that publication of the lists of jurors for civil as well as criminal courts and the names of jurors as they are chosen for trial cases are not news?

Some newspapermen say this policy smacks of the old-time weekly style. They say that readers are more interested now in the "big news" and press association reports. Readers are more interested in world-news than ever before; but that, in our experience here, does not mean that they are less interested in the local news as well. There is a place for both. We try to give them both. And I am constrained to believe that if circumstances should eventuate whereby we would be forced to discontinue either the world news or the personal and society columns we would hesitate many thoughtful hours before the personal columns would go into the discard.

We do not minimize importance of general news, foreign and domestic but "names," our personal columns are "must" copy.

Dailies' Merchandising Work Surveyed

A report on "Merchandising Service by Newspapers" has just been published by the Policyholders' Service Bureau, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The report traces the history of the development of merchandising service, citing specific examples of the growth of local and national advertising accomplished through merchandising service. Accomplishments of the Columbus Evening Dispatch, Boston Herald, Milwaukee Journal, New York Journal, Chicago Tribune, New York World, and other newspapers are described.

Daily Backing Water Carnival

The Richmond (Va.) News-Leader will hold a city-wide water carnival at Shields' Lake, Richmond, June 25 and 26.

No dull Summer IN Los Angeles!

Keep your schedules active—in June, July, and August!

Los Angeles Examiner

TRENTON EDITOR HONORED

Men of National Prominence Attend Testimonial Dinner to James Kerney

James Kerney, editor of the Trenton Times, was given a testimonial dinner Thursday night, May 27, at which 400 guests were present, among them a number of men of national prominence. The dinner was arranged by the Trenton Press Club to welcome Mr. Kerney home from a trip in Europe, and, at the same time, to compliment him as the author of "The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson," which came from the press while he was abroad.

JAMES KERNEY

Included in the list of speakers were Dr. Henry van Dyke, of Princeton, former Minister to the Netherlands; Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada; Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary of the late Woodrow Wilson; former Governor Silzer, of New Jersey; Vice-Chancellor Vivian M. Lewis, and Dr. Herbert Adams Gibbons, noted Princeton writer on international affairs.

Former Governor E. C. Stokes, of New Jersey, was toastmaster. Charles L. Swem, confidential secretary to President Wilson throughout his administration, and now editor of the Gregg Writer, came to Trenton to report the testimonial speeches.

Comstock Leases Cranston News

The Cranston (R. I.) News, weekly, has been leased to Clarence H. Martin, dating June 1. Jonathan F. Comstock, publisher, is traveling through the West, and next winter will go abroad. The News, which has been a sectarian publication, will be managed by Martin as an independent newspaper. Martin was for many years with the Providence (R. I.) Journal and Fall River (Mass.) News.

TAIT TO LAUNCH DAILY

St. Louis Agency Man Resigns to Start Columbus (Miss.) Discoverer

John L. Tait has resigned as vice-president of the Fisher-Brown Advertising Agency effective June 1, and on July 1, will establish a morning paper at Columbus, Miss., to be known as the Discoverer. Mr. Tait owns a majority of the stock of the publishing company and will be president and general manager. He was with the agency for ten years and for 14 years previously was with the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Other stockholders include thirty business men of Columbus.

George Y. Banks, president of the First National Bank of Columbus is vice-president J. S. Marx, a local capitalist, will be treasurer and cashier. Jack Senter, former newspaperman of Columbus and assistant manager of the St. Louis office of the American Type Founders Company will be secretary and business manager.

About $35,000 in new equipment is being installed.

The new paper will be issued seven days a week.

Ludlow Laureate

EXPERIENCED Compositors buy
36 Point

NEW EQUIPMENT Printing costs less by
30 Point

SCHEDULES Produce more work with this
24 Point

EXTENDED Measures can be set by this method in no
18 Point

FOR advertising and job composition --- The Ludlow system of matrix composition provides new, clear-cut printing faces on slugs for every job. Its speed, versatility, 6 to 60 point range in a wide variety of quality typefaces, including bold and extended, ranks it first for display and job work. Because you set matrices, not type, you secure your slug lines immediately, never running short of sorts for any job.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

San Francisco: 5 Third Street
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
New York: 63 Park Row
Boston: 261 Franklin Street

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

ANOTHER BROKEN RECORD!

ON MAY EIGHTEENTH, 1926

Oakland Tribune

Exclusive Associated Press Service
United Press
Consolidated Press Association

PUBLISHED

120,050 AGATE LINES

OF

PAID ADVERTISING

IN A 64-PAGE PAPER

LOCAL ADVERTISING . . .	99,526 AGATE LINES
NATIONAL ADVERTISING .	8,288 AGATE LINES
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING .	12,236 AGATE LINES

This total of 120,050 agate lines represents the greatest volume of paid advertising ever printed by any newspaper in Northern California in any regular week-day issue!

Oakland Tribune

Exclusive Associated Press Service
United Press
Consolidated Press Association

Oakland, California

ONE OF THE WEST'S GREAT NEWSPAPERS

Oakland's only locally owned and locally controlled daily

THE HOME OF RADIO STATION KLX

National Representatives

WILLIAMS, LAWRENCE & CRESMER CO.

285 Madison Avenue, New York City
360 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago

SIMPLICITY ESSENTIAL TO GOOD LAYOUT IN GRAVURE SECTIONS

Over Ornamentation Impairs Faithful Reproduction—Half-Page Pictures Preferred—Arrow Indicators Difficult to Use Attractively

By E. LESLIE WATHEN
Rotogravure Editor, Buffalo Courier

MUCH thought and energy is given to the selling of rotogravure advertising, selection of pictorial copy and the writing of captions, but the layout of the pages is without question the most neglected of all and it is one of the most important steps in producing a first class gravure section.

Mr. Wathen demonstrates an example of good layout

With gravure, you may select the finest pictures available, write the best captions possible and present them to the public in a poorly laid-out section and they are lost. Your competitor can have inferior material and a good layout that is pleasing to the eye, and his section will prove the most popular. There is something about a poor layout that jars the nerves; it has somewhat the same effect that you get when you see color combinations that are not harmonious—it irritates. If you were to show one of your readers two roto sections, one poorly arranged and the other a well-planned and balanced section, and ask him which he liked best, he would pick the latter. Then ask him "why?" He would say, "I don't know why, I just like this one the best." It is merely the reaction of something that he found was easy to look at and rythmic in appearance.

It is quite essential, in my mind, that the rotogravure editor have a thorough knowledge of the principles of layout. He does not have to be an artist; if he is, so much the better, but he should be able to make a dummy indicating just what he wants. The artist submits his pencil drawing of the layout to the editor. The editor should know at a glance if the layout is right or wrong and tell the artist just what to do. Many newspapers are fortunate in having roto editors who are able to select pictures, write captions and make their own layouts.

The first step in laying out a page of gravure is to select the pictures you want to put on that particular page. From these photographs select one to be played up, a picture that is interesting and that has the tone quality and detail to stand enlargement. If this picture is not the proper proportions to occupy the top half of the page, it should be played up in the top corner away from the fold. The picture that is secondary in importance should go in the upper corner near the fold, or the lower corner away from the fold. In short, the balance of the page should be away from the fold.

A common fault that I have noticed in many rotogravure sections is the wasting of space. By this I mean too much white space between pictures and the use of large and unnecessary ornamentation. A well-planned page should be compact and the pictures tied together, proper caption space, etc. Don't have any pictures that look as if they were floating off into space.

It is good policy to adopt a conservative style of layout, using very little decoration. Let the grouping of the pictures give the section its beauty, not a lot of ungainly floral decorations and scrolls.

The reason that gravure has become so popular as a newspaper supplement is that photographs can be reproduced in the soft sepia tones of the intaglio process and retain their original tone values and detail. Too much fancy work on the layout detracts from the pictures. Look at the rotogravure sections of some of the leading newspapers in the United States. You will find that their roto sections are conservative in layout, with little or no decoration.

There is still another type of layout that I have not mentioned that helps to ruin an otherwise beautiful gravure supplement. That is a page of pictures that are well selected and probably well balanced, but silhouetted and cut into many peculiar shapes and crowded together in such a way that the reader has to figure out how many pictures he is looking at, and then has to grope around to find the caption that belongs to the various pictures.

You can never go wrong by playing a picture up to a half-page size, provided the picture will stand enlargement and has the pictorial merits to warrant such a display. The New York Times presents an excellent example of the use of half-page pictures. A page in gravure should average from seven to twelve pictures, except on special pages. I have known a double-truck in gravure to contain as many as 188 photographs. Of course, these were all portraits. I had a page recently that had 47 pictures. It showed all the officers of a fraternal order, covering all the districts in a county. It is not advisable to do this very often. If you do, the foreman of the gravure plant will be gunning for you. It is a big job to strip in 47 negatives on one page.

Avoid the use of arrows on the layout to indicate the picture the caption goes with. It is much better to use the words (Left) and (Right). This, however, is not an important detail, and is optional. The main reason for avoiding arrows is that so many layout artists make them too big or too crudely. If they are used, they should be small and neatly drawn.

This is the third and last article on Rotogravure by E. Leslie Wathen, written especially for EDITOR & PUBLISHER. His next article will be on the topic of Staff Photographers.

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

We opened 1926 with the greatest newspaper campaign ever conducted, and secured over $300,000 in prepaid subscriptions for The Cleveland Plain Dealer. We can attain similar success for you!

THOUSANDS OF NEW, PREPAID, BONA-FIDE HOME-DELIVERED SUBSCRIBERS SECURED IN TEN WEEKS' TIME

HOLLISTER'S
Circulation Organization
Wire or Write us at 717-718 Commercial Exchange Bldg., LOS ANGELES

MACY BUYS IN PORT CHESTER

T. J. Blain Sells Interest in Item But Continue as President

Thomas J. Blain, owner of the Port Chester (N. Y.) Daily Item, announced on June 1 that J. Noel Macy had become associated with him in the publication of that newspaper. Mr. Macy is actively interested in the Yonkers (N. Y.) Statesman and the Tarrytown (N. Y.) Daily News. He is the son of V. Everit Macy, prominently identified with numerous Westchester County public interests, including the County Park System.

T. J. BLAIN

The Daily Item was established by Mr Blain in 1899. In February, 1911, Mr Blain incorporated the business under the name of the Daily Item Press, Inc.

Mr. Blain remains as president of the Daily Item Press, Inc., and will continue active in the management of the business.

The sale of this interest was made through Harwell & Cannon of New York.

Mr. Blain has for many years been active in New York newspaper associations and has been a regular attendant at conventions of the National Editorial Association.

Davis Heads Kansas Group

E. D. Davis, editor of the Whitewater (Kan.) Independent, was elected president of the Eighth District Editorial Association at the recent annual spring meeting in Sedgwick. Mrs. Lela White, editor of the Clearwater News, was re-elected secretary-treasurer and Raymond Cline, Conway Springs Star, vice-president.

The Pittsburgh Post
THE PITTSBURGH SUN

"We are pleased to enclose herewith trial test acceptance agreement properly executed and to start with the issues of THE PITTSBURGH POST and THE PITTSBURGH SUN of June 1st, 1926.

The inquiries we have made concerning the service being rendered by your bureau, we are glad to say, reveal a very high degree of satisfaction with the manner in which you are handling this work."

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 79 Madison Avenue NEW YORK

After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the well-fitted letter-count—all of these things go to make this new type a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over the seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H, Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be unfair for me or any one else who realizes the amount of good that will result from your recent change in the style of type you use in the makeup of the News if this was not recognized, appreciated and so acknowledged by every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that hastens the day when artificial aid must be sought. Although not versed in the nomenclature of the type you have been using for the last few days, it is of a style and character that immediately makes itself felt, and is far more readable and comfortable than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the well-fitted letter-count—all of these things go to make this new type a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H. Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be unfair for me or any one else who realizes the amount of good that will result from your recent change in the style of type you use in the makeup of the News if this was not recognized, appreciated and so acknowledged by every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that hastens the day when artificial aid must be sought. Although not versed in the nomenclature of the type you have been using for the last few days, it is of a style and character that immediately makes itself felt, and is far more readable and comfortable than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the well-fitted letter-count—all of these things go to make this new type a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H. Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be unfair for me or any one else who realizes the amount of good that will result from your recent change in the style of type you use in the makeup of the News if this was not recognized, appreciated and so acknowledged by every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that hastens the day when artificial aid must be sought. Although not versed in the nomenclature of the type you have been using for the last few days, it is of a style and character that immediately makes itself felt, and is far more readable and comfortable than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the well-fitted letter-count—all of these things go to make this new type a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H. Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be unfair for me or any one else who realizes the amount of good that will result from your recent change in the style of type you use in the makeup of the News if this was not recognized, appreciated and so acknowledged by every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that hastens the day when artificial aid must be sought. Although not versed in the nomenclature of the type you have been using for the last few days, it is of a style and character that immediately makes itself felt, and is far more readable and comfortable than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the well-fitted letter-count—all of these things go to make this new type a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H. Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be maximum le… things go to mak… desirable newspaper … "pin holes" or sharp c… with ink; no fine lines … in stereotyping. The ev… aracters is particularly … oughness" of newspap… tstanding advantage … s conservation of … throughout is … being …

LINOTYPE MARK

Study the design of this NEW face

Linotype 6½ Point Ionic No. 5

See how perfectly it meets the difficult requirements of modern newspaper printing conditions. Notice the full, round contours of the letters; no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping.

Ask the nearest Linotype Agency for copies of newspaper set in this face and compare it with the body type you are now using both for legibility and word count. You will find it easier to read than 7 point faces and that it gives the same word count as a 6 point.

The 6½ Point Ionic is made with italic and small caps and also in combination with Bold Face No. 2.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

CORPS OF EXPERTS NEEDED TO PREPARE EVENING DAILY'S FINANCIAL PAGE

Each Tabulator Handles a Fifth of a Mile of Ticker Tape Daily While Compositors Set and Correct Quotations by Hand

HOW an evening newspaper prepares its daily financial page was told a radio audience Tuesday night by Paul Willard Garrett, financial editor of the New York Evening Post, from station WGBS, New York.

Methods of handling the complicated stock and bond lists and the other financial tables were described by Mr. Garrett as follows:

"For the Evening Post to get its Wall Street edition on the street within half an hour after the markets close, its clerks, tabulators and reporters must each, under the stress of pressure of a very rigid routine, do their appointed tasks promptly and accurately as the dead lines approach. On their shoulders rests the responsibility of putting out the first record of the day in Wall Street. In setting up the complicated statistical tables and quotation sheets they have nothing to go by. They must build up the financial pages from the raw material. Such a joy as a leisurely luncheon is not theirs.

"A morning newspaper is not under such a strain since it is not obliged to build up its tables from the raw state. It very often does not begin its compilations until after the market has closed when completed records of the day's transactions are available.

"The Evening Post keeps a crew of tabulators at work on the stock and bond tables all day, a task that does not fall upon the morning newspaper. These Post tabulators sit beside stock tickers from ten o'clock in the morning when the New York Stock Exchange and New York Curb Markets open until three in the afternoon when they close. Through the fingers of each tabulator flows one-fifth of a mile of ticker tape every day. At intervals of about an inch on this tape are printed abbreviations by which the alert tabulator instantly can tell what stock has just been bought and sold down at the stock exchange and at what price. If, for example, the tabulator sees the flash '3 A 146' he knows that 300 shares of Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad shares have just sold at $146 a share. Each tabulator is responsible for a certain section of the list. The man responsible for the first section of the list must take down the Atchison transaction. By that time he probably will see several others of his stocks bobbing out on the ticker and these too he must record without for a moment losing his head or making an error. The tabulators, by constant application, make a record on the sheets before them of the day's transactions. But how to get the record from the tabulator's sheet into type and this into the newspaper is another problem.

"Opposite each tabulator stand two compositors. These compositors are expert in the handling of hand type. As the tabulator reads his prices from the tape, and calls them out to the compositor, the compositor corrects his type. The tabulator spends the whole day making his record and correcting it as new sales appear. The compositor spends the whole day putting the record into type and correcting it as new changes appear. The tabulators and compositors several times each day check their results in the interest of accuracy. That is how these experts are able to have a completed record of the day's transactions by the time the market closes. As the last sale appears on the tape the compositors rush to the composing room with their type and soon thereafter the presses start. Within a little while the papers are off the press, the distributing wagons and messengers pick up papers on the run and before the early crowd in the financial district starts homeward the Post is on sale at the stands.

"The financial writer has to be well equipped. First he must be a man of high character; absolutely trustworthy. In the ordinary course of his day's work he often comes into possession of confidential information that would lose thousands of dollars to somebody if it were known. He must know just how his duty to his paper coincides with his relationship to his news source. He must know when he is privileged to write the news and when he isn't.

"The financial reporter's value is his connections and these connections he often holds sacred even before his editor. Wall Street is a very small world. News develops at a few important points. Any breach of confidence on the part of the reporter at one point would immediately close other news sources to him and his usefulness to his paper would cease.

"The successful financial writer is subjected to all the demoralization brought about by rubbing shoulders with great wealth. He must be a likeable fellow and a good mixer; able to mix socially with the wealthy man in the Street—without losing his balance.

"The financial reporter must have all the ability of a general reporter plus a training in economics. He must have a nose for news and he must be able to write news. He must be able to see the 'Human interest' side of the Street without descending to cheap, flashy language which would offend Wall Street men.

"The most important asset a financial reporter has is personality. Without it he could never succeed. He is dependent for his news on what others tell him. If they did not like him and trust him they would not tell him anything."

Public Relations Contest Announced

Forbes Magazine announces a public relations contest among members of the American Electric Railway Association to close Aug. 10. Three awards will be made. The company having the best public relations record during the past year will receive a cup and certificate of award. Engraved certificates will be awarded companies finishing second and third. Judges will be: James O'Shaughnessy, secretary American Association of Advertising Agencies; Louis Wiley, business manager New York Times; J. C. McQuiston, publicity manager Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Company, East Pittsburgh; T. J. McManus, manager of publicity General Electric Company, and B. C. Forbes.

Prizes for Newspaper Music Ads

Winners in a prize contest for the best newspaper advertisements promoting music will be announced in New York June 8-9 at the annual meeting of the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce. Several thousand newspaper advertisements have been judged.

Our Customers Write Our Ads

San Francisco, Calif., Chung Sai Yat Po Says—

"We are perfectly pleased with our DUPLEX FLAT BED press. It is running smoothly like a sewing machine."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Weekly to Enter Daily Field

George Wood, editor and owner of the Eureka (Kan.) Weekly Herald, has announced that he will issue the Herald as a daily Oct. 1. New mechanical equipment has been ordered.

QUINCY HERALD AND WHIG-JOURNAL MERGED

Publishing Economy Cause of Illinois Consolidation—Owners of Separate Dailies Are Incorporators of New Herald-Whig

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

QUINCY, Ill., June 2.—The publication on June 1 of the Quincy (Ill.) Daily Herald-Whig marks the consolidation of Quincy's two daily newspapers, the Quincy Herald and the Quincy Whig-Journal.

The Quincy Herald established in 1835 is the oldest daily newspaper in point of continuous publication in Illinois. The Quincy Whig was established in 1838 and the Quincy Journal in 1883 the latter papers consolidating six years ago.

The Quincy Herald-Whig is published by Quincy Newspapers, Inc. All editions will be printed in the present Herald building on Herald Square. Plans are now under consideration for additions and improvements to the plant.

The Herald-Whig will print evening, morning and Sunday editions. All editions will have morning and evening Associated Press service.

Incorporators of Quincy Newspapers, Inc., are: Charles F. Eichenauer, former editor of the Herald; Ray M. Oakley, former general manager of the Herald, Charles W. Gay of Quincy, A. O. Lindsay, former editor of the Whig-Journal, and Frank M. Lindsay, general manager of the Decatur Herald.

The editorial, advertising, circulation and mechanical staffs have been chosen from employees of the two papers.

Charles F. Eichenauer is editor of the merged papers; Ray M. Oakley, manager, and Arthur O. Lindsay, director of sales. Charles W. Gay is office manager and John Hart, advertising manager. Robert Switzer associate editor of the Whig Journal becomes associate editor of the Herald-Whig. Arthur Higgins becomes news editor; Helen B. Osborn, city editor; Fred Gray, former city editor of the Whig Journal, sporting editor.

In a statement published last week, announcing the merger the Daily Herald said: "The consolidation was made necessary primarily by the present economic conditions in the business of newspaper making. Two seven-day daily newspapers in Quincy's newspaper field, each publishing also morning edition, could not continue to be sound business propositions. The managements of the two newspapers competing, even to the point where the soundness of the investment seemed imperiled, were reluctant to make the reductions which the conditions demanded, but which they believed would have been a step backward for the newspapers and for Quincy. The consolidation which was the result of many months of negotiations, was the only solution."

MONTREAL TABLOID ASSURED

L. M. Roberts States World Will Start Publishing About July 1

Leslie M. Roberts, secretary-treasurer and managing editor of the Montreal World Publishing Company, has announced his company will publish a daily tabloid paper about July 1.

The president of the new firm is John H. Roberts, former publisher of the Montreal Morning Sun. A. St. Martin, formerly of the Toronto (Ont.) Star and the Halifax (N. S.) Herald, is press room superintendent.

The World will operate a feature syndicate handling United States features for Canadian papers.

A building has been leased at 220 Lagauchetiere street. Builders have completed necessary adjustments and the presses are now being installed.

"The Boss of the Press"

The Boss of the Press

Of what use would be your editorial writers and reporters, your advertising solicitors, compositors and pressmen—if you were not able to get your paper printed—and out on time?

Everything in your organization depends, at the last, on your presses—and your presses depend on their electrical control apparatus.

Cline System is unfailing. Safely and surely it controls the power which makes possible the publication of hundreds of newspapers throughout the United States. Specify Cline equipment for your printing requirements.

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.

Eastern Office
Marbridge Bldg.
47 W. 34th St.
New York

Conway Bldg.
111 W. Washington St.
CHICAGO

Western Office
First Nat'l Bank Bldg.
San Francisco, Calif.

CLINE SYSTEM

Metropolitan Dry Mat

The Philadelphia Inquirer

JAMES ELVERSON, JR., Publisher

May 25th, 1926.

My dear Mr. Wood,

It is now nearly six months since The Inquirer began using dry mats and the immediate results were so satisfactory that we definitely adopted your new process after the first few days trial and are now permanently on the dry mat basis.

Your Wood Flong dry mats have eliminated the blistering and sticking which a year or so ago was a serious difficulty.

Seven hundred and sixty-eight plates are required to equip The Inquirer's presses with thirty-two casts from each mat on a sextuple run and we have had no difficulty in getting the full complement of plates.

With two moulding machines we handle two forms a minute regularly and have moulded seven forms in three minutes, when rushed, with a saving in time of ten to fifteen minutes in getting started in the press room.

We have no hot forms to handle and there is a consequent saving in the composing room in making quick lifts.

We use the same number of men in packing out but are able to get deeper and better printing plates than before.

There will also be a saving of over two hundred feet in floor space as soon as our steam tables have been taken out.

We have cut one inch off our full roll width, which is now 71-1/2", and this brings a saving in excess of 1-1/3% in newsprint cost with a proportionate reduction in freight bills.

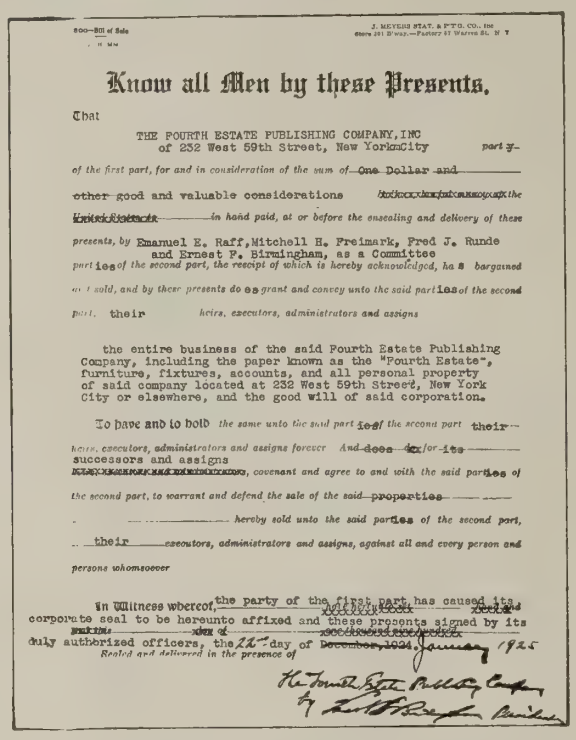
We are well pleased with the results obtained through the use of dry mats, which is undoubtedly another step forward in the efficiency and economy of newspaper production.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) James Elverson Jr.

Mr. Benjamin F. Wood, President,
Wood Flong Corporation,
501 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

President & Publisher.



WOOD FLONG CORPORATION

501 Fifth Avenue, New York

"What has happened to THE FOURTH ESTATE?"

As asked by Ernest F. Birmingham in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, May 29, 1926

HE SOLD IT

Bill of Sale

Know all Men by these Presents,

That THE FOURTH ESTATE PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC of 232 West 59th Street, New York City party of the first part, for and in consideration of the sum of One Dollar and other good and valuable considerations in hand paid, at or before the ensealing and delivery of these presents, by Emanuel E. Raff, Mitchell H. Freimark, Fred J. Runde and Ernest F. Birmingham, as a Committee parties of the second part, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, has bargained and sold, and by these presents do grant and convey unto the said parties of the second part, their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns the entire business of the said Fourth Estate Publishing Company, including the paper known as the "Fourth Estate", furniture, fixtures, accounts, and all personal property of said company located at 232 West 59th Street, New York City or elsewhere, and the good will of said corporation.

To have and to hold the same unto the said parties of the second part their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns forever And does for its successors and assigns, covenant and agree to and with the said parties of the second part, to warrant and defend the sale of the said properties hereby sold unto the said parties of the second part, their executors, administrators and assigns, against all and every person and persons whomsoever

In Witness whereof, the party of the first part has caused its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed and these presents signed by its duly authorized officers, this 11th day of December, 1924. January 1925

Sealed and delivered in the presence of

The Fourth Estate Publishing Co.
By Ernest F. Birmingham

GENERAL RELEASE

Julius Blumberg, Law Blank Publisher 241 Grand Street New York

To all to whom these Presents shall come or may Concern,

Greeting: KNOW YE, That I, ERNEST F. BIRMINGHAM, for and in consideration of the sum of One Dollar, lawful money of the United States of America to me in hand paid by FOURTH ESTATE PUBLISHING CO. INC., the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have remised, released, and forever discharged, and by these present do for myself, my heirs, executors and administrators, remise, release and forever discharge the said FOURTH ESTATE PUBLISHING CO. INC., its successors and assigns, of and from all, and all manner of action and actions, cause and causes of action, suits, debts, dues, sums of money, accounts, reckoning, bonds, bills, specialties, covenants, contracts, controversies, agreements, promises, variances, trespasses, damages, judgments, extents, executions, claims and demands whatsoever, in law or in equity, which against it I ever had, now have or which my heirs, executors or administrators, hereafter can, shall or may have for, upon or by reason of any matter, cause or thing whatsoever from the beginning of the world to the day of the date of these presents

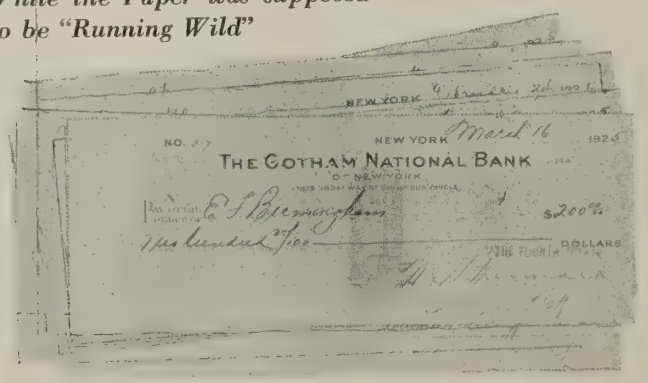
In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal the 8th day of December, in the year one thousand nine hundred and twenty four.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of (L.S.)

Decision of Justice Proskauer, March 12, 1926

"Matter of Birmingham (Fourth Estate Pub. Co.)—The motion is denied. . . . There is no satisfactory proof that the petitioner, Birmingham, has any real interest in the corporation or is one of the directors having the management of the concerns of the corporation. . . . There was filed against this corporation a petition in voluntary bankruptcy. As a condition of withdrawing the petition the petitioner herein, Ernest F. Birmingham, caused a Creditors Committee to be formed, to which was transferred a substantial portion of the stock which Birmingham and his associates had refused to transfer on the books of the company, but since this time the corporation has been in actual control and management of this committee of creditors. There are judgments against Birmingham, and he has sworn in Supplementary Proceedings that he does not own any of the stock, and there is a serious question whether Follmar's stock is not his and subject to be taken for the satisfaction of this judgment against Birmingham. While the present status is exceedingly informal and would be open to attack on the part of any creditor having a real interest, it is obvious that the creditors are the only persons who are really interested and none of them complains."

Decision of Justice Lydon, Law Journal, April 29, 1926



Runde vs. Fourth Estate Pub. Co.,—Motion is granted in all respects. There is no doubt as to the ownership of the stock held by the Creditors Committee, and there is every reason why the books of the corporation should be returned to the officers of the corporation. If there is objection to the distribution of any of the funds received on the sale of the business the respondent may take proper steps to protect himself if advised. Settle order on notice.

Decision of Justice Tierney, Law Journal, May 10, 1926

Motion for injunction to restrain the sale of the corporate assets pending appeal from Order of Justice Lydon.

Runde, as stockholder, etc., v. FOURTH ESTATE PUB. CO., et al.—Motion is denied and the injunction contained in the order to show cause is vacated. There seems to be no merit in this application, nor does there seem to be any likelihood of success on the appeal from the order made at Special Term by Mr. Justice Lydon. The controversy has been before several justices of this court, who have expressed opinions in writing regarding it. The stockholders meeting under the Special Term order is to be held May 8, at 10 o'clock A. M. To restrain that would seriously prejudice the sale of the corporate assets about to be consummated. These papers were submitted this afternoon (May 7). Even if there were sufficient time to elaborate the reasons for this determination it would serve no useful purpose to do so.

While the Paper was supposed to be "Running Wild"

Examination of Ernest F. Birmingham in Supplementary Proceedings to Collect Runde Judgment Which Still Remains Uncollected

Q. Have you any stocks or bonds? A. I have not.
Q. Have you any personal property of any kind? A. I have not.
Q. Have you no income then at the present time, Mr. Birmingham? A. No.
Q. Do you own any real estate? A. No.
Q. Do you own any stock in any other company than The Fourth Estate Publishing Company? A. No.
Q. Are you in business? A. No.
Q. None since July last? A. No.
Q. Are you engaged in any way in the publishing business? A. No.
Q. You gave him, Follmar, all of the capital stock of the corporation, Fourth Estate Publishing Company, except one share held by your wife, one share held by John D. Mason, two hundred shares held by Fred J. Runde and eighty shares held by the Estate of Fremont W. Spicer? A. Yes.

WE SOLD IT May 11, 1926

Creditor's Committee (formerly operating) THE FOURTH ESTATE

FRED J. RUNDE, M. H. FREIMARK, E. E. RAFF

——and That is what happened to THE FOURTH ESTATE

WHEN The Fourth Estate was offered for sale in January of this year to the present owners, an offer was made subject to the clean transfer of the property. The matter was then handed to attorneys who were requested to recommend the purchase if it was found to be as represented, or to reject it, if not. The Fourth Estate was purchased some five months later.

We are not interested in the quarrels between the Creditors' Committee, which operated The Fourth Estate prior to our purchase, and Mr. Ernest F. Birmingham.

We are engaged in a sincere effort to render an honest service to the field The Fourth Estate has always served.

THE FOURTH ESTATE PUBLISHING CORPORATION
25 West 43rd Street
New York City

MERGED WILLIAMSPORT DAILIES NOW PRINTING FROM REMODELLED PLANT

Williamsport Sun and Gazette & Bulletin plant

OPERATIONS are now on a routine basis in the remodelled plant of the Williamsport (Pa.) Sun and Gazette & Bulletin, the latter a morning paper purchased by the Evening Sun about two months ago. Press and stereotyping equipment are housed on the ground floor of a mechanical department annex recently completed on land purchased a year ago by the Sun adjacent to its building. The Gazette & Bulletin was acquired shortly after the annex was completed and is now published as the morning edition.

GEORGE E. GRAFF

The present Sun building, illustrated above, was erected in 1910, six years after the accession of George E. Graff to the general managership. The paper now occupies the entire building, with the general and business department offices on the first floor, the editorial department on the second floor and mechanical operations in the annex. Mr. Graff is now preparing plans for remodelling the first floor of the main building.

The building and plant of the Gazette & Bulletin have been sold and all assets not taken over by the Sun have been liquidated, it is said. The morning paper was established 125 years ago and is the seventh oldest newspaper in the state. To date, according to Mr. Graff, the results of consolidating the operations of two papers under one roof have been satisfactory in every way.

Consideration is now being given to a pension and old-age benefit system for all employees of both newspapers. Co-operative company insurance has been in effect for a number of years and practically every employee who has been with the company for three years or more is a stockholder in the business. The stock ownership plan was established in 1922, employees being enabled to purchase the common stock at par, and the company financing the purchase on convenient terms. Cash and stock dividends were paid to employees while the installment payments were being carried. Results cited by the management are low labor turnover, long periods of service by employees and general production efficiency in all departments of the paper, including one of the lowest page-costs of composition in the country.

The sun is politically independent, upholding principles and candidates whom it deems will best serve the public interest. The Gazette and Bulletin continues as a Republican newspaper, as it has been since the inception of the Republican party in 1856. The independent editorial policies of the two newspapers permits expression to both Republican and Democratic parties—and precludes any "monopoly of opinion."

Halvorsen Newspaper Stuffing Machines are now being used by many of the leading newspapers from coast to coast and border border. In one plant the machine has saved one-fifth of its cost in six months. ¶Papers can be delivered in better condition to distributors and to the readers.

After a thorough investigation you will want to invest
Write for full particulars

NONPAREIL MACHINE COMPANY
36 S. Throop Street, Chicago

Capt. Patterson's Daughter Weds

Miss Elinor Medill Patterson, daughter of Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson, co-editor of the Chicago Tribune and publisher of the New York Daily News, was married to Russell Sturgis Codman, Jr., of Boston, May 25, it was announced at an "elopment party" given by Capt. Patterson for the bride at the Ritz Carlton Hotel New York, June 1. Miss Patterson is 22. She played the part of the nun in the "Miracle" in Chicago, and intends to keep up her stage career.

PEKIN (ILL.) TIMES SOLD

Gundersen and Quanbeck Buy Property From Don McGiffin

The Pekin (Ill.) Daily Times was sold May 18 by W. J. and Don McGiffin to G. N. Gundersen, of Englewood, N. J., and C. W. Quanbeck, of Chicago. The amount involved in the transaction was not made public.

Quanbeck will be the editor and Gundersen will assume the business management. The transfer was effected June 1.

The Pekin Times has been owned by the McGiffin brothers, Iowa newspaper operators, for the past two years. The McGiffin brothers will confine their attention to their newspaper properties in Iowa, located at Ft. Madison, Fairfield, Albia, and Shenandoah.

The sale of the Pekin property was made through the H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill.

DAILIES IMPROVE PLANT

Hagerstown (Md.) Herald and Mail Have New Press in Annex Building

The Hagerstown (Md.) Herald-Mail Company has installed a new 32-page Hoe two-unit press. The Morning Herald and Daily Mail, morning and afternoon papers published by the company, have both been changed from seven column to eight column papers.

The new press is housed in a brick and concrete building just completed, built next to the present newspaper office building. The new building will accommodate the advertising offices as well as the press and stereotyping outfits. The main building, erected about five years ago, is being remodeled; editorial offices are to be changed from the third to the second floor, a new telegraph room installed, and the main business office on the ground floor has been enlarged.

Tampa Times to Build Annex

The Tampa (Fla.) Daily Times has purchased a site upon which a three-story building to house the mechanical department of the paper will be erected. A new Duplex press will be installed. The building will be 70 by 105 feet. D. B. McKay is publisher.

Pettit Handling Foreign Accounts

P. R. Pettit has been appointed manager of foreign advertising of the Cincinnati Post. Lynn O. Roark, continues as advertising manager.

CANTON, ILL., DAILIES MERGED

U. G. Orendorff, Ledger Publisher, Buys Register from C. E. Snively

U. G. Orendorff, multi-millionaire head of Parlin & Orendorff Company, and owner of the Canton (Ill.) Daily Ledger, has purchased the Canton Daily Register, consolidating the two papers under C. E. Warwick, formerly of Keokuk, Ia., who since November, 1923, has had charge of the Orendorff newspaper properties. The consolidation was effective June 1. C. E. Snively, who has owned the Register the last 48 years, retains the publication building, but the Ledger is understood to have an option on it. Mr. Snively is now postmaster of Canton.

U. G. ORENDORFF

C. E. WARWICK

Both papers were established in 184 as weeklies, the Register entering the daily field in 1890, but the Ledger continuing as a weekly until Oct. 3, 1912 when it was purchased by Mr. Orendorff The owner is prominent in the agricul tural implement field. Mr. Snively pur chased the Register from James K Magie, June 7, 1878, and has since pub lished it.

The Allen Klapp Company, which ha represented the Ledger, will continue th representation of the Daily Ledger an Register in the national field.

NEW TABLOID BUYS PRESS

Newark Jersey Transcript to Begi Publication Soon

The Newark (N. J.) Jersey Transcrip new tabloid which is to appear in th near future, has ordered a $22,500 Ho press. The editorial, art and photo de partments are now ready, and Unite Press and Universal Service have bee contracted for.

R. H. Reed, formerly of the New Yor American is president of the publishin company, William Steinke, newspap cartoonist is secretary, and Rex Cas formerly of the Newark Ledger, treasurer.

Skippy Says:

"I feel as good as I look ever since I've been going out on Certifieds."

By Courtesy of Johnson Features, Inc.

Why the Steamtables?

IF you are still baking wet mats on your forms—consuming valuable time and incurring considerable expense in doing so, it will repay you to find out about Certified Cold stereotyping.

There's no obligation

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION

340 Madison Avenue New York, N. Y.

for wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility—use Certifieds

MADE IN THE U. S. A.

At Your Service

Sturtevant

Atlanta, Ga.
Boston, Mass.
Buffalo, N. Y.
Camden, N. J.
Charlotte, N. C.
Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati, O.
Cleveland, O.
Dallas, Texas.
Denver, Colo.
Detroit, Mich.
Hartford, Conn.
Indianapolis, Ind.
Kansas City, Mo.
Los Angeles, Cal.
Minneapolis, Minn.
Montreal, Canada
New York, N. Y.
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Portland, Ore.
Rochester, N. Y.
St. Louis, Mo.
Salt Lake City, Utah
San Francisco, Cal.
Seattle, Wash.
Toronto, Ont.
Washington, D.C.

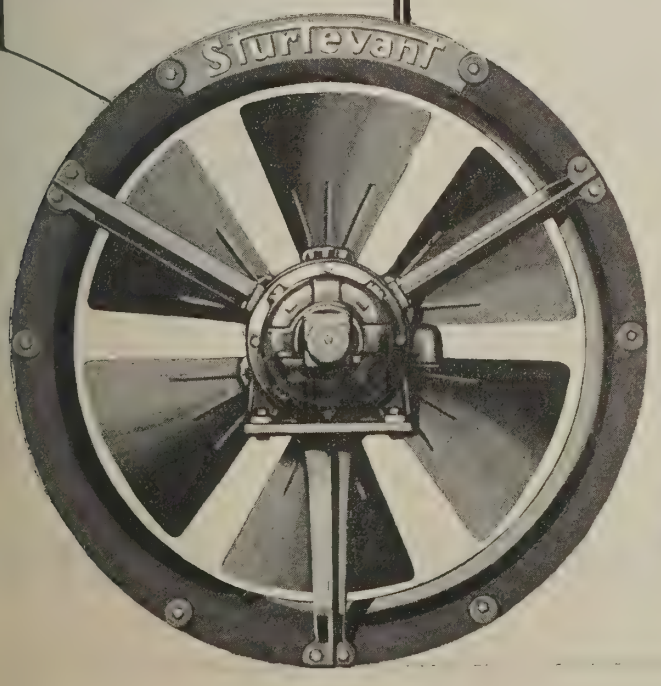
GraybaR

Albany, N. Y.
Atlanta, Ga.
Baltimore, Md.
Birmingham, Ala.
Boston, Mass.
Brooklyn, N. Y.
Buffalo, N. Y.
Charlotte, N. C.
Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati, O.
Cleveland, O.
Columbus, O.
Dallas, Texas
Davenport, Ia.
Denver, Col.
Detroit, Mich.
Duluth, Minn.
Grand Rapids, Mich.
Harrisburg, Pa.
Houston, Texas
Indianapolis, Ind.
Jacksonville, Fla.
Kansas City, Mo.
Los Angeles, Cal.
Memphis, Tenn.
Miami, Fla.
Milwaukee, Wisc.
Minneapolis, Minn.
Nashville, Tenn.
Newark, N. J.
New Haven, Conn.
New Orleans, La.
New York, N. Y.
Norfolk, Va.
Oakland, Cal.
Omaha, Neb.
Philadelphia, Pa.
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Portland, Ore.
Providence, R. I.
Richmond, Va.
St. Louis, Mo.
St. Paul, Minn.
Salt Lake City, Utah
San Antonio, Texas
San Francisco, Cal.
Savannah, Ga.
Seattle, Wash.
Spokane, Wash.
Syracuse, N. Y.
Tacoma, Wash.
Tampa, Fla.
Toledo, O.
Worcester, Mass.
Youngstown, Ohio

Hot, stale air saps vitality—slows up work!

Fight hot-weather fatigue with fresh, invigorating air—keep things moving!

Fresh air—good ventilation—is good business. It keeps things moving—it keeps news-writer, compositor, stereotyper, pressman, delivery-room gang geared to their jobs—particularly during the hot summer months.



Hot, stale air means tired, listless workers—it slows up work. Drive it out.

Sturtevant Ventilating Fans for Newspaper Plants drive out the hot, stale air of the inside—bring in the fresh, invigorating air of the outside. They can be secured at once—can be quickly and easily installed at very little expense and without interrupting your operations.

The Sturtevant and Graybar Electric Company offices listed in the panel are at your service. Phone or write to the nearest one. Or show this advertisement to your electrical contractor.

B. F. STURTEVANT COMPANY, HYDE PARK, BOSTON, MASS.
Distributors: Graybar Electric Company and Leading Electrical Contractors Everywhere

The most efficient fan of its type ever developed

The Sturtevant Ventilating Fan shown is the latest Sturtevant achievement.

The fact that this fan is more efficient—that size for size it will deliver more air—than any other similar fan on the market, is a Sturtevant advantage that speaks for itself.

The Sturtevant is a fan that you can depend on—there is not a single piece of flimsy construction in it. Sturdy—efficient—dependable—backed up by the largest manufacturer of ventilating equipment in the world.

If the name STURTEVANT is on a fan you can install it with confidence.

Sturtevant
Ventilating Fans

How Wide is the D

ARE you satisfied to permit presses and press crews to stand idle waiting for plates to trickle through slou hand boxes

?

ARE you satisfied to permit your stereo room to continue to be the neck of the bottle and limit production, economy, increased circulation and progress

?

The Pony A

WOOD NEWSPAPER MACHINERY CORPO

r of Your Foundry?

THE AUTOPLATE opens wide the door of your foundry. It removes the limitations and delays of hand-made plates. It permits maximum production of presses and men. It enables the making and keeping of definite schedules with late closings, early starts and quick finishes. It helps build circulation and very definitely reduces production costs.

There is an AUTOPLATE Machine to meet the requirements of every publisher—large or small. And it is a fact that the publisher who is not on an Autoplate basis works under a costly handicap. He must close his forms earlier than need be, he must devote unnecessary space, labor and time to plate making, and he must needlessly accept defective printing and frequent paper breaks.

There is no more popular tool in the newspaper office than the AUTOPLATE Machine.

ON, 501 Fifth Avenue, New York City

EDITORIAL

WILLIAM BYRON COLVER

ABLE craftsman, idealist to the marrow, ruggedly honest, tireless and fearless defender of worthy causes, good citizen, friend and inspiration of thousands of newspaper makers, glowing spirit, warm heart throbbing for all mankind.

This is no mere formal eulogy to fit an occasion when written of "Bill" Colver. It is but a scant outline of his noble character. Shirt-sleeve newspaper men scattered over the length and breadth of the country, knowing him and loving him for his acts, have long paid tribute to his depth of soul and brilliance of mind. His death at Washington, following a prolonged and anguishing illness, cast a shadow of personal grief over a wide circle in journalism.

For more than 30 years rich vitality flowed into newspaper columns from Bill Colver's fingertips. He was a man of action, throughout his career combining the enthusiasm of a zealous cub and the skill and sagacity of a veteran campaigner. No newspaper under his control could possibly be drab, passive, mean or published merely to furnish white spaces to be let out to advertisers. "Do something, even if it's wrong," was one of his familiar spurs. Out of his fiery soul truth poured, in terms direct and unadorned. The great quest was justice, . . . justice for the multitude that knew not how to wrest it from greedy, organized minorities.

Bill Colver preached the time-worn gospel of applied democracy, equal opportunity, self-improvement, banishment of ignorance and superstition to set hearts and minds free, brotherly love—the simple creed of American "rights," unmixed with any "ism," though in economics he had long subscribed to the principle of Henry George's theory of a single tax. His liberalism was no shallow sentiment. It was a calculated, balanced program for rational, satisfying national life. He spun it into the fabric of all that he wrote and did, consistently and persistently, when it was in and out of fashion, for more than a quarter of a century.

Tell us of a people's fight against political, social or economic oppression and we shall show you the imprint of Bill Colver's tireless hand. No individual accomplished more than he in stamping character and efficiency into the newspapers and services that have become the Scripps-Howard organization of this day. As a writer of bright, terse, informative news and editorial copy he had few equals. Patient, sympathetic, sensitive to the calls of the public, believing ardently that the truth can set men free, he was one of the great editors of the generation. Articles by him, appearing in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, on questions of advertising and publisher technique, revealed profound penetration of those subjects, and in a publisher's chair or in the world of commercial propaganda he would have registered a notable success. As H. N. Rickey, his life-long associate remarked to this writer this week, Bill Colver was great by any test.

Colver's two flings outside of journalism revealed capacity. He was one of "Tom Johnson's boys" and in the heat of the famous Ohioan's historic civic experiments in Cleveland he resigned his newspaper post and took to the political battlefield. On a later occasion he accepted an appointment by President Wilson as Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission. He used new weapons in these adventures, but his fire was directed at ramparts which he had a hundred times shelled with printers' ink. Tom Johnson gave to Cleveland civic standards which make it notable among all cities, and Colver had a hand in it, the mayor often glorying in the quality of his public spirit. In recognition of his intelligence and valor in setting up in the Federal Trade Commission, despite terrific opposition, principles of fairness in trade competition, some of which appear to stand up even under the present régime's submissive reaction, Woodrow Wilson sent to Colver, when his work was finished, a stirring letter of appreciation to compensate for four years of abuse and powerful politico-commercial resistance.

Bill Colver was the disciple of the late E. W. Scripps' journalism, strongly influenced in his youth by Robert F. Paine. As a boy he studied law, but loathing the chicanery and deceit of much that passes for "legal practice," reached into the free field of newspaper work for his heart's desires, first on the Cleveland Leader, then the Plain Dealer and finally the Cleveland Press. Within a few weeks he was out "stirring up the animals" with stories of the "bludgeoning of little oil men by the Standard octopus." Paine raised his salary and gave him additional space in which to "blow 'em up" when a Standard fixer tried to bribe the paper with an advertising contract for Ajax Axle Grease, which is another story.

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in His holy place?
He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.—Psalms. XXIII; 3, 4.

The aggressions of organizations of capital, through political privilege, gave Colver a topic throughout his life. He was a persistent thorn in the side of reactionaries. Since Thomas Jefferson's day no man has had greater contempt than he for gaps in the system of government which opened the way for class preferment and injustice.

The subject of this sketch was one of the organizers of the NEA Service and was long its editor and manager. He "took a hand" in starting many new Scripps papers and services, and latterly, until ill-health weakened his body, was editorial director of the Scripps-Howard newspapers. When E. W. Scripps died recently, Mr. Colver wrote for EDITOR & PUBLISHER:

> Circumstances threw me into the newspaper field and chance brought me into "The Concern" (as we called it then) only shortly before it was in such financial security that he (Scripps) could set up his journalistic laboratory. After a brief apprenticeship at straight newspaper work, it was my luck to have close personal association in a series of big and little experiments that spread over nearly a quarter of a century.
>
> "I don't know of anybody who got more of a lifetime of fun out of journalism than Mr. Scripps. He hated and avoided humdrum and detail and, I think, more than any of my associates, I escaped the routine and treadmill by being in the laboratory.
>
> "He said to me once that he liked to do the impossible and so did I, with the difference that when an experiment failed, he had to pay, and when it succeeded I wanted an increase in salary."

Seven months ago while in Florida, Mr. Colver's illness intensified. Diagnosticians finally located a deep-seated, virulent growth in his back and the patient suddenly divined the hopelessness of his case. Taking the hand of a friend he gazed for many minutes out of the hospital window and then cheerily said: "Well, it has been a wonderful, beautiful life." He uttered no complaint, but with amazing vitality and courage fought the hopeless battle for months beyond the maximum limit that the best medical talent had set.

The end of the mortal story came on Tuesday when his family and friends, newspaper men and public officials, followed the body to a shaded nook in Maryland's rolling hills and tearlessly said farewell to the apostle of wonderful and beautiful life for all God's children.

Edsel Ford says Mussolini is doing an excellent clean-up job in Italy; we'll say that he has cleaned up every editor that has dared to criticize his dictatorship.

OUR LANGUAGE REFORMS

ERUDITE members of the newspaper and advertising fraternity in such encouraging numbers have adopted EDITOR & PUBLISHER's suggestion that the silly and futile first "e" be dropped from the word "lin(e)age," that we are tempted to essay an even higher flight in the realm of lexicographic reform.

There are two common ways of pronouncing the word advertisement. As indicated in this tower of pure English last week, the wrong way harshly stresses the third syllable, whereas the very nicest people of our tongue gently accent the second syllable—adver'-tisement—and in so doing are upheld by the highest authorities.

Frank H. Vizetelly, America's eminent lexicographer, who agreed with EDITOR & PUBLISHER that the "e" should be eased out of linage, again ag that the advertising fraternity should bring order of chaos in the pronunciation of our favorite w advertisement. We have the honor herewith to sent his authoritative opinion:

> Thank you for your kindly reference to me in dis cussing the pronunciation of the word advertisement Every educated and cultured American places th stress in this word on the antepenult instead of upo the penult.
>
> The pronunciation advertisément was advocated b Walker in 1791 before he had thoroughly investigate the subject, for he revised his own opinion of thi in a later edition, and indicated the stress upon th second syllable, the antepenultimate, as the correc pronunciation of the cultured people of his later day The last edition of Walker's "Pronouncing Diction ary" published before his death was issued in 1806
>
> How mistaken Walker was is proved by Jame Buchanan's "Standard of Pronunciation of th English Language," published in 1766, in which wor the author indicates adver-tisement as the prevailing pronunciation of the educated people of Scotland This was repeated also by Perry in a later diction ary, "The Royal Standard," published in 1775. Sub sequently, Sheridan, who issued his dictionary i 1780, indicated this pronunciation as the preferre pronunciation of the cultured Irish people of his time Adver-tisement is the pronunciation recorded down the centuries by Ash, 1775; Jones, 1798; Fulton an Knight, 1802; Walker, 1806; Jameson, 1820 Knowles, 1835; Smart, 1840; Reid, 1844; Noa Webster, 1845, Worcester, 1859, and all the moder dictionaries.
>
> Furthermore, the Advisory Committee on Disputed Pronunciations of Funk & Wagnalls New Standar Dictionary decided in favor of this pronunciation b majority vote of 24 to 1, and it is the pronunciatio found in the "Encyclopedic," the "Imperial," Stor month, the "Century," Murray's "New English Dictionary," as well as in the modern Webster.

In the light of this knowledge, EDITOR & PUBLISHER's readers may proceed with confidence to st America out of accenting the penult. From t virtuous beginnings other language reforms ma undertaken. For instance, it is not improbable we may some day venture to attack such ugly pronunciations as "linneotype," "roto-gray-vure" "stair-o-type."

The horrors of demon rum include a third per cent editorial space apportionment, in th average newspaper, to discussion of the effec of the Volstead Act.

BALTIMORE CONTEMPT CASES

THE theory of newspaper reporting of court ceedings is that the busy outside world may proper concern with this department of the p business. Information is conveyed in the mo newspaper both by the medium of language an graphic display.

Judge Eugene O'Dunne, of Baltimore, has sente five newspaper men to a day in jail and a $5,000 for Managing Editor Harold E. Elliston, of E more News, for the alleged contempt in their ac making photographs in the courtroom of a noto criminal on trial for his life. The judge said tha decorum of his tribunal had been disturbed and the newspaper men, in violating his command to n no pictures, had challenged his authority. His is that the work of the editors and reporters merely for profit.

Judge O'Dunne erred when he forbade orderly tographing; the newspaper men erred when they tempted to override his order, even though mista The judge believes that his sentences cannot be pealed from and that important question is to be cided. Judge O'Dunne indicates uncommon zea protect what he regards as the dignity of his be his sentences were harsh and his cynical views cerning newspaper commercialism betrays a su ficial examination of the subject.

The judge was surprised by the "refreshing can of the Hearst men. He could find plenty of newspaperdom, usually encouraged by publis though often at great financial sacrifice. It i active virtue that ultimately will make the juc system as responsive to popular will as are the l lative and executive branches of government.

New York tabloids show remarkable circu lation gains, but it must be remembered tha this year the gods smiled upon them with th Rhinelander, Stillman and Earl Carroll bumpe crops.

PERSONAL

ʃHUR BRISBANE, Hearst edi-rial writer, was honor guest at a lon tendered by the Indianapolis ecently.

elph Ochs, publisher of the New Times, returned this week from a trip abroad.

ry J. Allen, editor of the Wichita) Beacon, was one of the principal rs at the thirty-sixth annual con-in of the Missouri Bankers Associa-t Excelsior Springs, Mo., recently.

l Maurice Scholz, president of the Wide Advertising Corporation, turned from Havana, Cuba, where nt recently on business.

n W. Dafoe, editor of the Winni-ee Press, has received the honorary of Doctor of Laws from the Uni-r of Manitoba. He has also been a Fellow of the Royal Society of za.

). Butler, publisher of the Mankato n.) Free Press, and Mrs. Butler ar-in New York May 29, from a ean tour. They left April 3.

ph L. Bristow, who sold the Salina) Journal last fall after owning the for many years, has returned to s from Virginia, where he has a plantation. Mr. Bristow, former l States senator, was connected he Journal for nearly 40 years.

ward Kahn, editor of the St. Paul News, entertained 30 members of aff at his bungalow on Lake St. May 27.

rles Sessions, managing editor of peka Daily Capital and postmaster peka since 1921, has resigned the astership. Sessions some months otained a leave of absence from his l appointment to resume his duties e newspaper.

. Marilla Stone, publisher of the City (Minn.) Post, has been made ent of the Chisago County Lincoln old Daane publisher of the Austin n.) Daily Herald, is making a three-s' tour of Spain, contributing ptive letters to his paper.

N THE BUSINESS OFFICE

R. LONGCOPE has been named classified director of the Boston rtiser, daily and Sunday, and the n Evening American.

ies E. Mullins, formerly national rising manager, Trenton (N. J.) r, and recently of the advertising Easton (Pa.) Express, has joined advertising department of the non-Salem (N. C.) Journal.

on D. Denison, Jr., of Des Moines, raduate of the University of Wis-and a former member of the cago Herald-Examiner advertising has joined the staff of the Hutchin- Kan.) News-Herald.

C. Fuller, after a year's newspaper at Moberly, Mo., has returned to Minot (N. D.) Daily News and the advertising department.

tephen G. Berger, of the advertising ment of the New York World, is ng to go to London and Paris in on a vacation trip.

Dothy Gorman, the dean of the New World's advertising men, has been ri on a pension after a service of ars.

rles E. Ader, formerly secretary easurer of the Carolinas Circulation gers Association, has recently been circulation manager of the Winston- (N. C.) Journal.. Ader formerly his position, but has recently been ted with the advertising depart-ʃHUR CHAPMAN, formerly of ew York Herald Tribune Sunday ment, with his wife, Kathleen r, assistant to Arthur Folwell, Sun-day editor, left Thursday for a four months' motor camping trip through the United States.

N THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

W. G. Hale, associate manager editor of the Des Moines Evening Tribune who two months ago went to the Iowa Lutheran hospital to take a complete rest, has left the hospital and will return to his duties within a few weeks.

Arthur G. Sheekman, dramatic critic of the St. Paul Daily News, is spending two weeks in New York following a visit to the Sesquicentennial exposition, Philadelphia, William Marzolf, literary editor, is handling Sheekman's work.

Marville Gill, former assistant, has succeeded Bob Bennett as sports editor of the San Antonio Evening News. Before he left for Kerrville, Tex., to reside Mr. Bennett was given a dinner by his fellow workers.

Claude Brodhecker, manager and editor of the former Jeffersonville (Ind.) Bulletin, has gone to Florida.

Leo A. Moore, cameraman of the St. Paul Daily News, recently toured northern Minnesota in connection with that paper's campaign to boost tourist travel in the state.

Ray A. Baldwin, who has been editing the McGregor (Minn.) Pilot Review, has joined the Woodsville (N. H.) Times.

J. Kenneth Jones, formerly of the Associated Press, has joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune as a reporter.

Mrs. Cass Baer Hicks, for more than 15 years dramatic editor of the Portland Oregonian, has resigned, effective next September.

David Lidman, formerly on the copy desk of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, has gone to Bethlehem, Pa., where he will manage a string of motion picture theatres.

P. W. T. Ross has resigned from the staff of the Newark Star-Eagle to join the Federal Title & Mortgage Guaranty Company, of Orange.

Frederick McPherson of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle and Robert Hereford of the United News staff, New York, are sailing for Europe June 5.

Col. T. G. Pownall, special writer for the Cumberland (Md.) News, made the principal address at Memorial Day ceremonies held by Reno Post, G. A. R., Hagerstown.

Mary Jane Ellis is the new society editor of the Leesburg (O.) Citizen.

H. G. Lee, managing editor of the Huron (S. D.) Evening Huronite, has resigned to join the Watertown Public Opinion.

W. N. Randolph, Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune reporter, has announced his candidacy for the post of common pleas judge of Tulsa county.

Miss Florence Wells, Meridian, Kan., a graduate of the Journalism department, K. S. A. C., Manhattan, has been made woman's editor of the eastern section of the Capper Farm Press, Topeka, Ray Blank, reporter on the staff of the Des Moines Register has resigned.

Clifford Hull, make-up editor, Miami (Fla.) News, is now on the desk of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register-Tribune.

E. H. Jolly has joined the editorial staff of the Des Moines Evening Tribune.

(Continued on next page)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

THE story of Harold P. Bentz, blind newspaper man of Picher, Okla., should serve as a mental tonic for the fellowmembers of his profession.

HAROLD P. BENTZ

Bentz arrived in Picher four years ago with a dime as his only material asset and his physical handicap as an almost overwhelming liability. Today he is a correspondent for several metropolitan newspapers, owns three houses in Picher and one in Springfield, Mo., and rides in his own automobile.

Bentz's eyesight began to fail in 1904 while he was editor of a little weekly newspaper at Richland, Pulaski County, Missouri. After six months' treatment, surgeons informed him he would never have more than four-hundredths normal vision.

Discouragement almost overbalanced determination during the next 17 years of Bentz' groping for success. Then he came to Picher. When E. E. Sanders, publisher of the Picher Leader, a weekly, agreed to employ the blind man as news writer and "hustler" for his paper, Bentz received the first boost toward his goal.

The new reporter devoted himself whole-heartedly to his job. He learned the touch system of typewriting and he trained his memory so that he could retain a long list of facts in his mind. In a short time he could remember scores of names and figures without taking notes. When he became adept in these preliminary phases of news gathering, he branched out into free lance work, and employed a young woman to correct typographical mistakes in his copy and read his correspondence. Newspaper editors in larger cities near Picher soon discovered that Bentz could be depended upon to cover special stories.

Part of Bentz' first earnings, and a considerable portion of later pay checks, were invested in Picher property.

DURING the fourth week in May the following newspapers signed yearly contracts for the Central Press Association's complete general illustrated service:

Clinton, Iowa, Advertiser
Huntington, West Va., Herald Dispatch
Vincennes, Ind., Commercial
Marshalltown, Iowa, Republican
Anderson, Ind., Herald
Hornell, N. Y., Tribune Times
Sharon, Pa., Herald
Jewish Forward (New York and Chicago)
Ridgway, Pa., Record.
Bloomington, Ill., Pantagraph
Waco Times Herald
Fort Myers Tropical News
Muncie, Ind., Star
Alameda, Calif., Times Star

This list does not include contracts for the World's Best Picture Page, or till forbid contracts for the general service.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNITT, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNITT, Editor and Manager

METROPOLITAN FEATURES

COMICS
GAS BUGGIES
or
HEM AND AMY
DAILY STRIP

DOWN THE ROAD
WEEKLY
By Frank Beck

ELLA CINDERS
DAILY STRIP
ELLA CINDERS
COLORED PAGE
(First Page Release Sept. 19)
By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

DICKEY'S DOGS
By Robert L. Dickey

A. A. MILNE
In Verse or Prose
Once a Week
Drawings by Bert Salg

JUVENILE SECKATARY HAWKINS
With New Club Page
Weekly

SPORTS
FEG MURRAY
Cartoons and Comment
Daily

FASHIONS
ELEANOR GUNN METROPOLITAN
Each Daily and Sunday

DAILY SERIAL
MILDRED BARBOUR
With Illustrations

WEEKLY WINNERS
STEPHEN LEACOCK
PINNACLE FICTION
ZENITH FICTION
EXPLOIT & ADVENTURE
and
PRE-EMINENT ARTICLES

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 37)

Chanler A. Chapman, of the Springfield (Mass.) Union staff, and Mrs. Chapman are parents of a son. Chapman is a son of John Jay Chapman of New York.

Miss M. MacCorquodale, editor of the fine arts department of the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle, has returned home after spending several weeks with friends in Chicago.

Miss Dorothy Faye, editor of the club department, Chicago Evening Post, will accompany her father and sister on a three months' trip to Europe this Summer. While away they will spend several weeks in Scotland as the guests of Sir James Urquhart.

William Westlake, known in Chicago as the "flying newspaper man since he pilots his airplane when not at work on the Chicago Evening Journal, has recently been appointed assistant city editor of that paper.

MARRIED

HERBERT J. BASSMAN, manager of the Riverside (Ill.) News, to Miss Miriam Marshall, reporter for the Elgin (Ill.) Daily News, June 5.

Walter Myers of the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News staff, to Miss Gladys Hackney, proofreader for that paper, May 23.

William Sharpe, managing editor Winston-Sales (N. C.) Journal, to Miss Sallie Herring of Goldsboro, N. C., in Raleigh, May 11.

Clarence Mugge, advertising solicitor, Des Moines Register to Miss Hazel Reisinger of Cummings, Kan.

Thomas G. Michelmore, of the copy desk, St. Paul Daily News, to Miss Florence G. Brown, feature writer of the News, recently. They have taken a cottage for the summer at Bald Eagle lake.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

BORGER (TEX.) HUTCHINSON COUNTY HERALD has let the contract for the construction of a new building and work has already started. The building will be 25 by 50 feet. with a stucco finish. Additional equipment has been ordered.

Cleveland (O.) Shopping News is installing new twinned Duplex tubulars, giving them a page capacity of 32-pages.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

E. M. FULLER, from advertising manager, Moberly (Mo.) Monitor-Index, to Minot (N. D.) News as advertising manager.

John Gavin, from police reporter, City News Bureau, Chicago, to police reporter, Chicago Herald and Examiner.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

JEFF TAYLOR, for several years an Emerson, Neb., newspaperman, has purchased the Winnebago (Neb.) Chieftain from D. L. Crelin and assumed control.

South Boston (Va.) News, one of the oldest weeklies in Halifax county, Virginia, has been leased by R. C. Beezley, the owner, for a number of years to Carroll Headspeth. Headspeth, who was connected with the Halifax Record-Advertiser, has resigned, and took charge of the South Boston plant June 1.

Roe Chase, owner and editor of the Anoka (Minn.) Herald has bought the Bethel Banner and merged it with the Herald.

T. C. Anderson has taken over the Falls City (Ore.) Enterprise. It has been published since February by the Falls City Chamber of Commerce with Mrs. A. W. Watt as editor.

Will McNeal, Lawrenceburg, Mo., has sold the Everton (Mo.) Journal to J. R. McVey, of Joplin, Mo.

Salina (Kan.) Leader, weekly, has been sold by Fred J. Fraley, owner and editor, to C. W. Wheeler, former business manager of the Salina Daily Union and now general manager of the General Printing Company, Salina.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

BENONI CRIST, for 32 years foreman of the composing room, Middletown (N. Y.) Times-Press is now in charge of make-up of the Newburgh (N. Y.) Sunday Herald.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

GALESBURG (Ill.) REPUBLICAN-REGISTER, Better Homes Week edition, May 24.

Ottawa Evening Citizen, Home Beautiful number, May 20.

Bloomington (Ill.) Telephone, 32-page National Publicity edition, telling industrial advantages of Bloomington, May 26.

Joliet (Ill.) Herald-News, 16-page section, including four pages in rotogravure, heralding Greater Joliet Week, Carthage (N. Y.) Republican-Tribune, 66th anniversary edition, May 20.

St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press, annual outing edition, May 23.

Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News, 18-page Annual Better Homes-Experience Section, May 27.

SCHOOLS

ALPHA MU CHI, local advertising fraternity at Oregon Agricultural College, has been granted a charter by Alpha Delta Sigma, national advertising fraternity. Installation took place June 3 by members of the University of Oregon chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma.

For the fourth consecutive year, students in the department of journalism, University of Colorado, took complete charge of all editorial departments of the Rocky Mountain News and Denver Times, Wednesday, May 26, collecting, writing and editing all news and making up the paper.

Russell H. Reeves of Cleveland has been appointed editor in chief of the Ohio State University Daily Lantern for next year. A reunion of members of the journalistic fraternities Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi will be at a luncheon at Ohio State University Saturday, June 12. Eight courses of journalism will be given in the summer quarter of Ohio State University by Professors J. S. Myers and L. C. Getzloe. The Lantern will be issued twice a week.

Members of the senior class of the department of journalism, Baylor College for Women, Belton, Tex., under direction of D. Q. Riddle, recently spent several days as special reporters on the Houston Post-Dispatch staff, the work counting as credits toward their degrees.

Pittsburgh Alumni Chapter Sigma Delta Chi, honorary professional journalistic fraternity, recently elected Chester L. Smith, sporting editor, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times and William Morrell, University of Pittsburgh, publicity man to associate memberships. Theodore Meier, of the Gazette-Times, and Samuel Braemer, of the Pitt Weekly staff were initiated as members. Charles E. Lewis, editorial writer, Pittsburgh Sun, was elected president.

ASSOCIATIONS

ADVERTISING CLUB of Denver recently elected Ralph A. Faxon president. W. F. McClure, president of the National Advertising Commission of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World was a speaker at the club meeting.

Thomas F. Kane was re-elected president of the BOSTON TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION No. 13 at the annual election of officers held last week.

CHAMPAIGN (Ill.) ADVERTISING CLUB has elected E. E. Stanford president to succeed Milton Dreyfus.

May Frank Norman, was recently elected president of the OKLAHOMA AUTHORS LEAGUE at the annual election in Oklahoma City.

Members of the NORTHERN MINNESOTA EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION will go to Winnipeg, Canada, for their summer outing, June 24-26.

EASTERN INTER-COLLEGIATE NEWSPAPER ASSOCIATION recently held its annual convention and election of officers at Hanover, N. H. C. W. Cole of Amherst College was elected president; E. T. Richards of Brown, vice-president; I. F. Maider of Amherst secretary-treasurer.

Charles E. Griffin, of the Hastings Sales Company, was elected president of the ADVERTISING CLUB OF KANSAS CITY at the annual election following last week's luncheon. He succeeds Earl E. Barker. Other officers include; Jerome G. Galvin, vice-president; Miss Gladys Rose, second vice-president; M. S. Munson, secretary; W. R. Snodgrass, re-elected treasurer.

Prof. H. H. Maynard, of Ohio State University, has been re-elected president of the COLUMBUS ADVERTISING CLUB. Other officers are: W. E. Putnam and H. H. Holderle, vice-presidents; C. S. Anderson, treasurer; Delmar G. Starkey, secretary; Miss Harriet E. Fisher, librarian.

Isaac Van Dillen, for the last five years treasurer of the NEW YORK EMPLOYING PRINTERS' ASSOCIATION, has been nominated as president of that organization. Van Dillen, is secretary of the Bartlett Orr Press, New York.

William P. Merry has been elected president of the PORTLAND (Ore.) ADVERTISING CLUB. Of a field of 16 directors the following 11 were chosen: Stanley Banbury, J. T. Crossley, E. W. Fenton, Roy Heath, Warren C. Katey, V. C. Hibbard, H. P. Nunn, H. B. Robinson, Guy A. Rogers and Charles Sanders. Other officers elected were: Vice-presidents, George B. Grayson and G. A. Rebentisch; secretary-treasurer, Harry Fischer.

INTERNATIONAL STEREOTYPE AND ELECTROTYPERS UNION OF NORTH AMERICA will hold its annual convention in Los Angeles, July 19-24.

NEW YORK NEWSPAPER WOMEN'S CLUB, at the annual meeting on May 5, elected Miss Theodora Bean, of the T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate, president.

Triennial meeting of the CANADIAN WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB will be held Toronto June 22 to 24.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

CHESTER KRAUSE, formerly sp writer for the Muskogee (Okl News, is now with the United Press Kansas City, Mo.

Charles A. Grummich, correspond of the A. P. at Wichita, has joined staff of the Kansas City Times. R. Patterson, Kansas City, has been m correspondent at Wichita.

M. A. White, general night ed of the Associated Press, left N York headquarters this week, on an spection tour of bureaus and mem newspapers between New York Kansas City. T. H. O'Neill, gen early editor, is taking over Mr. Whi work temporarily, while C. E. Honce, the Chicago office, has come to N York, to take Mr. O'Neill's position.

William Hillman, of the New Y office of Universal Service, will sail England next week to join Univers London bureau to work under H. Stansbury, former managing editor of New York American.

Barry Faris, associate editor of In national News Service, returned to N York headquarters this week, from automobile vacation trip.

Laura Knickerbocker, Moscow co spondent of Universal Service, is spe ing a month's vacation in Paris.

Cosmos Mideleff, copy editor in U versal Service's New York office, spending his vacation at Carmel, N.

A. W. Elliott, formerly of the York American, has joined the New Y staff of International News Service.

Jack Meddoff, of the Indianap bureau of International News Ser has been placed in temporary charge the I. N. S. Cleveland bureau, repla Jack Sejner, who is ill.

Robert James, of the Internati News Service's Kansas City Bureau spending his vacation on an auto t

PEJEPSCOT PAPER COMPANY

Manufacturers for Over Fifty Years of

NEWSPRINT

Combining the Three Essentials of Quality

Strength • Cleanliness • Color

Colored Newsprint a Specialty

Daily Capacity 160 TONS

PEJEPSCOT PAPER COMPANY MAINE

TRADEMARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

MILLS IN THE STATE OF MAINE, U. S. A.

Sales Office: • 42 Broadway • New York, N. Y.

Reduce Feature Costs

By Concentrating on NEA Full Service

A daily illustrated Service so complete clients find it unnecessary to buy anything outside.

NEA maintains its leadership with spot news pictures, special features, comics, fiction, women's features, sports, editorials and other necessary features that make up a complete newspaper.

NEA Service, with the largest reader following in the world, has materially helped more than eight hundred papers to increase and hold circulation.

COLOR COMICS READY-PRINT OR IN MAT FORM

Exclusive territorial rights---no contract to sign

Samples on request

NEA SERVICE, Inc.,

MAIN OFFICE

1200 West Third Street Cleveland, Ohio

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service---Backed by 33 Years' Experience

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

General Appeal, Sports, Art Features—Directory of Artists and Writers—List of Syndicates, Mat, News and Photo Services

(Copyright 1926 by Editor & Publisher Co.)

KEY:—Daily (d); weekly (w); twice a week (2w); thrice a week (3w), etc.; column width indicated by figures (1) to (8); full page (fp); half-page (hp); tabloid (tab).

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

(Continued from page 3)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Blue Ribbon Serials (d-w)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Blanket Service (w)		Editor's Copy
Blanket Service (d)	Staff	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Blanket Service (d)		Graphic Syndicate
Blanket Service (d)	Staff	NEA Service, Inc.
Bo Broadway (d) (1)	Van Raalte	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Bobbie and His Pa (3w) (½)	William F. Kirk	International Feature Service, Inc.
Bobs and Lip Sticks (w)	Delight Evans	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Bond Market News (N. Y.) (d) (¼)		Post Syndicate
Book Chat (d) (¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Book Review (w) (1)		NEA Service, Inc.
Book Reviews (w)	Fanny Burcher	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Book Reviews (w) (1)	Tom Masson	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Book Reviews (w) (tab)		New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Brain Tester (w)	Dr. Winston Mitchell	National Newspaper Service
Bridge Whist (w)	A. R. Metcalf	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Bright Bits (w) (4)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
"Broadway," (theatrical) (w) (2/3)	Bushnell Dimond	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Broadway's Current Success (w) (3)		Putnam Syndicate
Buffalo Bill Life and Adventures	Julia Cody Goodman	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Burgess Bedtime Stories (d) (¼)	Thornton Burgess	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Bug-a-Boos (d) (½)	"Bugs" Baer	International Feature Service, Inc.
Business Charts (d) (2)	Staff	Cambridge Associates
Business Day by Day (d) (ill)	Ralph E. Couch	Couch-Grimes Publishing Company
Business Features	Various	Holmes Feature Service
Business, How's (w)	Staff	Cambridge Associates
Business Letter (d-w) (1/3)	John T. Flynn	U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Business Review (w) (1)	Wilfred S. Cousins	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Business Today (d) (½)	Paul Willard Garrett	Post Syndicate
Business Weather (w) (1)		Publishers' Financial Bureau
Business News Service (d)		Ledger Syndicate
Business, Your (d) (1)	A. W. Shaw Company	Associated Editors, Inc.
Butler, Gen. Smedley D.	Gen. S. D. Butler	Bell Syndicate, Inc.

C

Cambridge Business Charts (d) (2)	Staff	Cambridge Associates
Canadian House Plans (ill) (w) (3)	H. G. Holman	Star Newspaper Service
Canadian Magazine Page Service (w) (4fp, 1 hp)		Star Newspaper Service
Canadian Radio Exchange (w) (1)	J. Montagnes	Star Newspaper Service
Card Index Cooking Recipe Service (d)		U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Care and Training of Dogs (d)	Robert S. Lemmon	United Feature Syndicate
Careers for Women (d) (¾)	Business Women	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Carroll's Washington Dispatches (d)	Raymond G. Carroll	Ledger Syndicate
Cars and Stars (auto) (w) (3)	Ray McNamara	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Character Close-Ups (d) (1/6)		Ledger Syndicate
Charades (d-w) (¼)	William Bellamy	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Charleston Lessons (d) (ill)	Gilda Gray	Imperial News Service
Charts, Business (d) (2)	Staff	Cambridge Associates
Charts, Business (d)	Ralph F. Couch	Couch-Grimes Publishing Company
Chatty Talks (d)	Alma Whitaker	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Cherub, The (d)	Rebecca McCann	George Matthew Adams Service
Child Training (3tw) (¼)	L. Lamar Matthews	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Children's Club "Many Happy Returns" (d)		Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Children's Dot Puzzles (3w) (2)	Various	International Syndicate
Children's Dot Puzzles (d) (1)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
Children's Features—Dot Cartoons (d)	George Bell	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Children's Features—Hart's Puzzles		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Children's Features—Nat'l Sunshine Club (w)		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Children's Page (w)	Various	International Syndicate
Children's Page (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Children's Poems—"Muvver and Me" (d-w) (¼)	Robert Livingston	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Children's Serial (d)	Florence Smith Vincent	Central Press Association
Children's Story, "Jack Rabbit"	David Cory	George Matthew Adams Service
Children's Story "The Nickledicks" (d)	Wm. Donahey	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Children's "Teepee Tales" (d)	El Comancho	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Children's Stories — "Tiny Tot Tales" (d) (1.4)	Martha Hart	Register and Tribune Syndicate
Children's Stories—"Toby Tinkle" (w) (½)	Martha Hart	Register and Tribune Syndicate
Children's Stories ("Twin Stories") (d) (½)	Lucy Fitch Perkins	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Children's Supplement Weekly, Junior (w) (4p)	Various	Daily Feature Newspaper Syndicate
Children's Vogue (3t-a-w) (¼)	Conde Nast	United Feature Syndicate
City Editors' Service (d)	W. B. Morgan and Others	Associated Editors, Inc.
Club Ethics (w)	Maud Swalm Evans	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Club, National Sunshine (w)		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Coffee Market (N. Y.) (d) (¼)		Post Syndicate
Coded Limericks (d)		Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
College Comics (d) (1¼)	College Comics Magazine	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
College Humor (w) (hp)		Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Column "The Conning Tower" (d)	F. P. A.	N. Y. World Syndicate
Column, Humor (w)	Frank Sullivan	N. Y. World Syndicate
Column, "It Seems to Me" (d)	Heywood Broun	N. Y. World Syndicate
Columns—"Line O'Type"	"R. H. L."	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Column—"Telling the World"	Neal O'Hara	N. Y. World Syndicate
Column—"The Once Over"	H. I. Philipps	Associated Newspapers
Column—"The Way I Feel About It" (d) (1)	Wilbur Sutton	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Column—"Today" (d) (1)	Arthur Brisbane	International Feature Service,
Columns "Way of the World" (d)	Grove Patterson	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Combination News Service (d)		Ledger Syndicate
Common Sense Investing (3w) (½)	John K. Barnes	D. P. Syndicate
Conduct and Common Sense (ds)	Vogue	Conde Nast Newspaper Servic
Confessions of Authors (w)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' dicate
Conning Tower, The (d) (1)	F. P. A.	New York World Syndicate
Cook's Cook-Coos (d) (1) (ill)	Ted Cook	International Feature Service,
Cookery Articles (d-w)	Jane Eddington	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' dicate
Corner, Zoe Beckley's (d) (½)	Zoe Beckley	Famous Features Syndicate, I
Correct English (d) (1/6)	Charlotte Brewster Jordan	Ledger Syndicate
Cosmos Editorial Board (d)	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate,
Cotton Market Review (w) (2/3)		Post Syndicate
Cotton Market (N. Y.) (d) (½)		Post Syndicate
Criticism, Literary (w)	H. L. Mencken	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' dicate
"Crossed Wires" (w)	John T. McCutcheon	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' dicate
Crossword Puzzle (d)	Selected	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Cross Word Puzzle (d) (2)		Graphic Syndicate
Cross Word Puzzles (d) (2)	Various	International Syndicate
Cross Word Puzzles (d) (2)	J. C. Boyd	King Features Syndicate, Inc
Cross Word Puzzles (d) (2)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Cross Word Puzzles (d)	Richard Tingley	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Cross Word Puzzles (d-s)		New York Herald Tribune S cate
Cross Word Puzzles (w) (3 and 4)		Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Cross Word Puzzles (d) (2)		Star Newspaper Service
Financial Curb Market News (N. Y.) (d) (¼)		Post Syndicate
Curious Facts (d) (1/3)	Prof. G. Samuels	Keystone Feature Syndicate
Current Fiction (d)	Various	NEA Service, Inc.
Current Health News (d) (1)	Dr. Morris Fishbein	Current News Features, Inc.
Current Radio (d) (¼) (ill)	American Radio Relay League	Science Service

D

Daddy Dusk (d)		Graphic Syndicate
David Lloyd George (Fort) (2)	David Lloyd George	United Feature Syndicate
Daily Mirror of Washington (d) (½)	Clinton W. Gilbert	Ledger Syndicate
Daybook of a New Yorker (d) (1)	Burton Rascoe	Editors' Feature Service-Jo Features, Inc.
Dear Caroline (d)	Various	Editors' Syndicate
Derringforth (serial)	Frank A. Munsey	Service for Authors
Detective Story Serials (d)		Ledger Syndicate
Detours (d-w) (½)	Philip S. Marden	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate B
Diet and Health (d)	Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters	George Matthew Adams Serv
Diet Service (d)		U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Dial's Diary, The (w) (radio) (1)	Staff	Ullman Feature Service
Diary of a Fashion Model (ill.) (3tw) (½)	Grace Thorncliffe	Newspaper Feature Service,
Dish a Day, A (d) (¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Do You Mean What You Say	Christine Holbrook	Register and Tribune Syndic
Doctor Talks, The (d) (½)	Dr. Frederick Damrau	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Dorothy Dix Service (d) (1)	Dorothy Dix	Ledger Syndicate
Dog's Life A (w) (1) (ill.)	Leon F. Whitney	Science Service
Dog Hill Paragrafs (d)	George Bingham	George Matthew Adams Serv
Domestic Economy (d) (½)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Domestic Science (3w) (½)	Hannah Wing	International Feature Service
Doris Blake Chats (d-w)	Doris Blake	Chicago Tribune Newspapers dicate
Double Truck Feature (serial) (w) (2p)	Various	International Feature Service
Dramatic Criticisms (w)	George Jean Nathan	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Dramatic Events in Bible History (w) (6)	Harlowe R. Hoyt	Publishers' Syndicate
Dramatic Letter (w)	George Halasz	Continental Features
Dramatic Letter (w)	Burns Mantle	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' dicate
Dramatic Letters	Alexander Woollcott	N. Y. World Syndicate
Dreamland Adventures (d) (½)	Arthur W. Stace	Ledger Syndicate

E

East Side West Side (d)	Jack O'Donnell	George Matthew Adams Se
Economy Kinks (3w) (¼)	L. B. Robbins	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate
Editorial, Inspirational (w) (ill.)	Arthur Brisbane	International Feature Service
Editorial Paragraphs (d) (½)	Tom Sims	NEA Service, Inc.
Editorials (d) (½)	Rogers Wickes Wamboldt	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Editorials (d) (1)	Col. Henry W. Bunn	Editors' Feature Service-J Features, Inc.
Editorials (d) (½)	Dr. Frank Crane	Associated Newspapers
Editorials (d)	Dr. Frank Crane	McClure Newspaper Syndica
Editorials	Paul V. Collins	Paul V. Collins Editorial Sy
Editorials (d) (⅜)	John Carlyle	Associated Newspapers
Editorials (d-w)	Glenn Emmons	Arco Newspaper Feature an tion Service
Editoriol (d)	Mary Stewart	Current News Features, Inc
Editorials (w)		Editor's Copy
Editorials (d)	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicat
Editorial Paragraphs (d) (1)	Robert Quillen	Publishers' Syndicate
Editorials for Women (d) (½)	Florence Davies	New York Herald Tribune cate
Editorials—Women's (d) (1)	Sophie Irene Loeb	Editors' Feature Service-J Features, Inc.
Efficient Housekeeping (d) (2)	Laura Kirkman	George Matthew Adams Se
Enemy, The	Channing Pollock	Continental Features
Epigrams (d) (¼)	Wayne Haisley	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Etiquette (d) (¾)	Katherine dePeyster	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
European Events	Sir Philip Gibbs	United Feature Syndicate
European Letters (series) (1)	Strickland Gillilan	International Syndicate
Evening Story, The (d) (1)	Selected	Associated Newspapers
Everyday Poems (d)	George Elliston	Associated Newspapers
Every Day Questions (d) (1)	Dr. S. Parkes Cadman	New York Herald Tribune cate
Expert Bridge (w) (1) (ill.)	Sidney Lenz	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Exploit and Adventure (w) (fp)		Metropolitan Newspaper Ser

F

Fables in Slang (ill.)	George Ade	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Fairyland Tales (w) (tab)		World Color Printing Co.

(Continued on page 42)

ERIAL FICTION

by Beatrice Burton
Author of "Love Bound," "Her Man," "The Petter."

VOMAN'S PAGE

Editorials
by Sophie Irene Loeb
Fashions
by Sally Milgrim
Health Talk
by Dr. Andrew F. Currier
"The Daybook of a New Yorker"
by Burton Rascoe
"Bo-Broadway"
by Joseph Van Raalte
"Just Among Us Girls"
by Kathryn Kenney
"Her Day of Work and Play"
by Amy Abbott
Daily Poem

EDITORIAL PAGE

News Cartoons
by Satterfield
by Thiele
Washington Letter
by Frederic William Wile Column of Comment
by Wilbur F. Sutton
"Kellygrams"
by Fred C. Kelly
Editorials
by Henry W. Bunn
by Joseph Van Raalte

NEWS PICTURE PAGE

The World in Pictures. An attractive daily pictorial record of World Events.

Do you want six pages of exclusive, well balanced, compelling newspaper features each day at a moderate price?

Do you want to share in the price advantages of a specialized service, widely distributed, and to protect yourself against ever-increasing feature costs?

Wire

for particulars of place and territory.

NEWS FEATURE PAGE

Three or more arresting illustrated news feature stories daily.

SPORTS PAGE

Edited by Roy Grove

Sport Cartoon
Special Verse and Comment
by George Moriarity

Tennis
by Mary K. Browne

A finely illustrated page on National Sport with special articles by well known sports authorities.

COMIC PAGE

"Skippy," comic strip
by Percy L. Crosby

"The Old Home Town"
by Lee Stanley

"Pippin Junction" Cartoon
by Russell Cole

"Etta Kett" strip
by Paul Robinson

"Campus Cowboys" a strip of campus antics
by Dow Walling

"Girliettes"
by Roy Grove

together with attractive double column comics by Messner and Walling with a variety of single column specialties.

EDITORS' FEATURE SERVICE, INC.

Allied with JOHNSON FEATURES, Inc.

NEW YORK OFFICE
1819 Broadway

The Best of News Pictures and News Features

CLEVELAND OFFICE
E. 22nd St. and Payne Ave.

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

(Continued from page 40)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Famous Fiction (d) (1½)	Various	Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.
Farming and Finance (w) (1)		Publishers' Financial Bureau
Farm & Garden (d-w)	Frank Ridgway	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Farm Gossip (w) (1)		Editor's Copy
Fashion Art Layout (w) (1)	Margery Wells	New York World Syndicate
Fashion and Household Service (d-w)	Mary Marshall	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Fashions (w) (1)	Henri Bendel	NEA Service, Inc.
Fashions (d) (ill.)	Marie Belmont	International Feature Service, Inc.
Fashions (d) (⅜)	Helen M. Emery	Associated Newspapers
Fashions (d-w)	Eleanor Gunn	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Fashions (d)	Lucille Lorraine	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Fashions (3tw) (ill.)	Mildred Lodewich	New York World Syndicate
Fashions (d) (¼) (ill.)	Sally Milgrim	Editors' Feature Service-Johnson Features, Inc.
Fashions (w) fp)	Ruth Stuyvesant	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Fashions, Children's (3tw) (ill.)	Vogue	Conde Nast Newspaper Service
Fashions—Dear Caroline (d)	Various	Editors' Syndicate
Fashion Doll Cut-Outs (w) (4)		World Color Printing Co.
Fashion Etiquette (d) (ill.)	Clare Standish	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Fashion Hints (w) (½)	Louisa	Editor's Copy
Fashion Hints (d) (1)	Mabel Whitney	International Syndicate
Fashions, Men's (d-w)	A. T. Gallico	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Fashions, Men's (3tw) (ill.)	Vanity Fair	Conde Nast Newspaper Service
Fashions, Men's (d) (½)	Sylvester Martin Zinns	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Fashions—"Modes Miniature" (d)	Margette	National Newspaper Service
Fashion Page (w) (fp)	Edith M. Burtis	Ledger Syndicate
Fashion Page (w)	Sally Milgrim	Editors' Feature Service-Johnson Features, Inc.
Fashion Page (w)	Various	International Syndicate
Fashion Page (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Fashion Paris Letter (w)	Anne Somerhausen	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Fashion, Paris (w) (fp) (c or b)	Unsigned	International Feature Service, Inc.
Fashion Sketches (3tw) (3)	Julia Boyd	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Fashions "Vogue" (d) (½)	Conde Nast	United Feature Syndicate
Fashions, "Vogue" (d) (ill.)	Vogue	Conde Nast Newspaper Service
Fashions, Women's (d-w)	Corinne Lowe	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Fashions, Women's (d) (½)	Selected	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Famous Fortunes (ill.) (2tw) (½)	Mark Stuyvesant	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Famous Sweethearts (d) (½)	Blanche Greer	Ledger Syndicate
Fatty Lewis (ill.) (w)	Arthur F. Killick	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Feature Letter (w)	Staff	Arco Newspaper Feature and Fiction Service
Feature Page (w)	Various	International Syndicate
Feature Page (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Feature Stories	Various	Holmes Feature Service
Fiction	Popular Authors	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Fiction	Various	Service for Authors
Fiction, Famous (d) (1½)	Various	Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.
Fiction—"The Enemy"	Channing Pollock	Continental Features
Fiction Page (w) (fp)		Ledger Syndicate
Fiction Serials (d)		Ledger Syndicate
Fiction Service (d-w)	A Hundred Novelists	D. P. Syndicate
Fiction—Short Stories	Henrique R. France	Arco Newspaper Feature and Fiction Service
Fiction—Short Stories (d-w)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Fiction—Short Stories (w)	Various	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Fiction, Tabloid Short Story (d) (1)	Selected	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Fillers	Staff	Handy Filler Service
Fillers (d)	C. E. Brown	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Figures of Speech (d) (¼)		King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Film Folk (d) (1/3)	Thelma L. Ferguson	Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.
50 Famous Monuments (w) (4)	Hendrik Van Loon	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Financial Articles (d-w)	B. C. Forbes	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Financial—Common Sense Investing (3w) (1.2)	John K. Barnes	D. P. Syndicate
Financial ("The Investor") (d)		Post Syndicate
Financial—Investor's Aid Service (d) (½)		Chicago Journal of Commerce
Financial (London Daily Radio) (d)	Arthur W. Kiddy	Post Syndicate
Financial Markets (d) (½)		Post Syndicate
Financial, Money at Work (d) (1)	Various	Associated Editors, Inc.
Financial News Service (d) (13)		Post Syndicate
Financial—Stock-a-Day (d) (ill.)		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Financial Tables (d-w)		Chicago Journal of Commerce
Financial—"What's Behind Your Stock" (d)		Cambridge Associates
Financial, Your Business (d)	A. W. Shaw Company	Associated Editors, Inc.
Finding Your Job and Making Good (d)		Graphic Syndicate
First Jobs of Big Men (d) (¼)	Philip Nowlan	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Flapper's Notebook (d) (1)	Constance Talmadge	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Foreign Exchange (N. Y.) (d) (¼)		Post Syndicate
Foreign News Service (d)		Ledger Syndicate
For the Woman Reader (w) (2½)	Florence Riddick Boys	Woman's Page Copy
Food Service—"Let's Go a Marketing" (d-w)	Winifred Worth	Harland H. Allen Feature Service
Fun in Black & White (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Fun Shop (d)	M. F. Judell	George Matthew Adams Service
Frank Sullivan (humor) (w) (1)	Frank Sullivan	New York World Syndicate

G

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Galli-Curci Travels (w) (fp)	Galli-Curci	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Garden, Farm and (d-w)	Frank Ridgway	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Gardening for the Amateur (ill) (w) (2)	T. H. Rand-McNally	Star Newspaper Service
General Features	Various	Holmes Feature Service
Gentleman From—, The	The Benton Howard	Editors' Syndicate
Get Fit Quick (d) (½)	Wm. J. Herrmann	Ledger Syndicate
Gibbs (w) (2)	Sir Philip Gibbs	United Feature Syndicate
Gilbert's Washington Dispatches (d)	Clinton W. Gilbert	Ledger Syndicate
Girl About Town, The (w) (½)	Margery Dykeman	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Gloria, the American Girl (w) (fp) (c)	Penrhyn Stanlaws	International Feature Service
Goodhousekeeping (w) (ill)	Various	International Feature Service
Good Manners (d) (½)	Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Good Night Stories (d) (2/3)	Blanche Silver	Newspaper Feature Service,
Goops (d)	Gelett Burgess	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Grain Market (N. Y.) (d) (1/3)		Post Syndicate
Greatest Thing in the World, The (d)	Laurel Gray	National Newspaper Service
Grin's Fairy Tales (d) (½)	Gregory Grin	Ledger Syndicate
Gross Exaggerations (w) (1) (ill)	Milt Gross	New York World Syndicate

H

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Hadleys, The (w)	Inez Haynes Irwin	McClure Newspaper Syndicat
Handicraft in the Home (3w) (2-3)	Alice U. Fewell	International Syndicate
Handy Fillers	Staff	Handy Filler Service
Handy Headed Fillers	Staff	Handy Filler Service
Haskin Letter (d) (1)	F. J. Haskin	Frederic J. Haskin
Health Articles	Dr. James W. Barton	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Health Articles (d)	Dr. W. A. Evans	Chicago Tribune Newspapers'
Health Articles (d) (1)	Dr. A. F. Currier	Editors' Feature Service—Jo Features, Inc.
Health Articles	Paul J. Veatch	Graphic Syndicate
Health, Diet and (d)	Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters	George Matthew Adams Servi
Health, Heart, and Home (w) (fp)	Various	International Feature Service
Health News (d) (1)	Dr. Morris Fishbein	Current News Features, Inc.
Health Talks (d-w)	Dr. William Brady	National Newspaper Service
Health Talks (d) (1)	Royal S. Copeland	Newspaper Feature Service,
Health Talks (d) (½)	Dr. Chas. A. L. Reed	King Features Syndicate, Inc
Health—"That Body of Yours" (d)	Dr. James W. Barton	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Health, Your (d) (¼)	Dr. Woods Hutchinson	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate
Helen and Warren (w)	Mabel Herbert Urner	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Her Own Way (d) (½)		NEA Service, Inc.
Herold's Humor (w) (¼) (ill)	Don Herold	New York Herald Tribune
Hints for the Motorist (3w) (2)	Albert L. Clough	International Syndicate
Holding Your Husband (d) (½)	Lorene Bowman	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Hollywood Holidays (d) (¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Home-Building (w) (fp)		New York Herald Tribune
Home Dressmaking (3w) (½)	Mildred Ash	International Feature Service
Home Harmonious (w)	Anti de Campi	Chicago Tribune Newspapers

(Continued on page 44)

Day
and Night
Service

American Matrix & Plate Co.
4 White Street
NEW YORK CITY
Telephones: Canal 6885-6886

OLD FAVORITES WITH NEW HUMOR—
POTASH and PERLMUTTER
By MONTAGUE GLASS

A Weekly Mirth Packed Release—Always on Top of the News.

THE BELL SYNDICATE, INC.
JOHN N. WHEELER, PRES.
154 Nassau Street, N. Y. C.

YES we print ANY preferred combination of Colored Comic Pages (Ready-Prints

IN OUR plant we have all of the POPULAR Colored Comic Page Classics of the different syndicates — CAST, ROUTED, and STEEL-COATED ready for ANY favored make-up of 4-PAGE, 6-PAGE or 8-PAGE sections.

Newspapers must own local rights to comic pages used from the respective syndicates.

Write or Wire for Sample Proofs and Low Prices

THE WORLD COLOR PRINTING CO
Est. 1900 R. S. GRABLE, Pres. St. Louis, Mo
"Color Printers to the Nation's Publishers."

TRAILING THE NORSE EXPLORERS

Three Women Will follow Leif Ericson

McNaught Syndicate is able to announce an extraordinary feature. The MacMillan Expedition is setting out June 19 for the Far North. For the Field Museum, Chicago, it will endeavor to trace the old Norse adventurers who first discovered North America, hunting for remains and records more than a thousand years old. It will be a thrilling expedition, and important to history.

For the first time, women are going to report a great exploration in the North. Miss Maude Fisher, of New York, now a student at Wellesley College, Mrs. Rowe Metcalf, of Providence, R. I., and Miss Marion Smith, of Wiscasset, Me., are the women.

Miss Fisher will write a diary, which will be sent by radio from the ship. This diary will be released through McNaught Syndicate in twelve weekly installments. From 2,000 to 3,000 words to each release.

It will be the big newspaper feature of this summer. Wire for rights or for particulars.

CRAIG KENNEDY

A new daily strip. Not comic. Detective story interest replaces the comic factor. Stories by Arthur B. Reeve himself. Art work by Harry J. Flemming, who works with Reeve.

Each detective story in this series features Craig Kennedy, the scientific detective. Each story runs through from two to three weeks. But each day's strip carries the sustained mystery interest.

This feature is beautifully executed. It is utterly unlike anything else that is being offered to newspapers. It is sold already in Chicago, Boston, Baltimore, Albany, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Wheeling, Erie, Milwaukee, Rochester, Syracuse, Toronto, Passaic, Hamilton, O., and Union City, N. J.

"SAID BY MARK TWAIN"

Here is a new daily feature that is a big success already, although only just released. A little group of paragraphs and wise and humorous sayings by the Master Humorist. Never before printed in newspapers. Fully protected by copyright. Daily, with thumb-nail cut of Mark Twain. Here's a feature that has its audience waiting for it. Everybody loves Mark Twain.

"FORE!"

A new daily one-column golf feature; art and humorous text, by Kent E. Straat. It takes little space, but it is dear to the hearts of the golfers.

ELLISON HOOVER

In September we will begin releasing a series of three-column daily cartoons by this well-known artist. If you look at them you'll smile.

RUBE GOLDBERG
Daily cartoon strip

H. J. Tuthill, daily and Sunday
The Bungle Family

Carolyn Wells, daily
Funny stories

The Two-Way Pulpit, weekly
John Roach Straton and H. C. Herring

Roe Fulkerson
Andrew and Imogene, daily
Hotel Stenographer, daily
Sunday Morning Breakfast, weekly

WILL ROGERS
Daily and weekly

GUS MAGER
"Oliver's Adventures"
Daily Strip

O. O. McINTYRE
Daily and weekly

Irvin S. Cobb, daily
Favorite stories

Clifford McBride, weekly
Wordless Side-splitters

Albert Payson Terhune, weekly
"Tales of Real Dogs"

Fatty Lewis, weekly

Julia Boyd Fashion Service
Three times a week

THE McNAUGHT SYNDICATE, Inc.

TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

V. V. McNITT, President F. J. MURPHY, Treasurer C. V. McADAM, Vice-President

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

(Continued from page 42)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Home Interest Page (w) (fp)	Florence Brobeck	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Home Kitchen (3tw) (½)	Jeanette Young Norton	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Home-Making Helps (3tw) (½)	Wanda Barton	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Home Notes (d) (1/6)	Jenny Wren	Ledger Syndicate
Home Sewing (d)	Ruth Wyeth Spears	George Matthew Adams Service
Horoscope (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Horoscope (6tw) (⅓)	Genevieve Kemble	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Horoscope, Scientific (d) (¼)	Mme. Alpha	Science Service
Horoscope Service (d-w)	Mary Blake	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
House and Garden (d) (ill)	House and Garden	Conde Nast Newspaper Service
House and Garden (d) (½)	Conde Nast	United Feature Service
House Organ "Ad-route" (m)	W. S. Ball	International Syndicate
House Plans (d)	George E. Fowler	George Matthew Adams Service
House Plans (w)	"House and Garden"	United Feature Syndicate
House Plans (w) (3)	W. W. Purdy	International Syndicate
Household, The (d) (ill)	Lydia LeBaron Walker	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Household Economy Series (3tw)	Ida Bailey Allen	New York World Syndicate
Household Hints (d)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
Housewife's Economy Calendar (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Housewife's Idea Box (d) (1/6)	"The Housewife"	Ledger Syndicate
Hotel Stenographer (d) (1/3)	Roe Fulkerson	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Howe About Everything (w)	Ed Howe	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
How's Business (w)	Staff	Cambridge Associates
How Do They Do It? (w) (interviews)	Alice Rohe	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
How it Started (d)	Jean Newton	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
How to Achieve Beauty (d) (¼)	Mme. Helena Rubenstein	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
How to Break into the Movies (w) (ill)	Inez Wallace	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
How to Earn Money at Home (d)	Sara Spence	Graphic Syndicate
Hughes, Rupert (w)		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Human Discoveries (w)	Preston Wright	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Humor, College (w) (hp)		Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Humorous Anecdotes (d)	Carolyn Wells	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Humorous Letter (w) (ill)	Ring Lardner	Bell Syndicate, Inc.

I

"I and George" (w)	Nina Wilcox Putnam	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Illustrated Story (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
I'm the Gink (d)		Republic Syndicate, Inc.
In and About New York Society (w)	"Marionette"	Continental Features
In New York (d) (½)	Gilbert Swan	NEA Service, Inc.
In the Garden with Burbank (d) (⅓)	Luther Burbank, editor	C. C. Powell Newspaper Features
Indoor and Outdoor Gardens (d) (½)	Jane Leslie Kift	Ledger Syndicate
Information Bureau (d-w) (½)	R. H. Lecraw	Thompson Feature Service
Inspirational Editorial (w) (ill)	Arthur Brisbane	International Feature Service, Inc.
Inspirational Talks (4tw) (2/3)	Winifred Black	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Interior Decoration (d) (¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Interpretation of Foreign Affairs (d)	Frank H. Simonds	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Interior Decoration (3w) (¼)	Christine Holbrook	Des Moines Register and Tribune Syndicate
International Sunday School Lesson (w) (1)		Editor's Copy
Interviews	Paul V. Collins	Paul V. Collins Editorial Syndicate
Interviews	Various	Holmes Feature Service
Interviews (w) (2)	Bradley Kelly	Imperial News Service
Interviews (w) (1)	Drew Pearson	U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Interview—Editorials (d) (1/3)	W. J. Ballinger	U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Into the North with Commdr. Mac Millan (d)	Ross Coles	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Into the Light (d) (½)	Helen Keller	Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.
Investor's Aid Service (d) (½)		Chicago Journal of Commerce
Investor, The (d)		Post Syndicate
Isn't it Odd (w) (½)	William Atherton DuPuy	Science Service
It Seems to Me (d) (1)	Heywood Broun	New York World Syndicate

J

Jack Rabbit Stories (d)	David Cory	George Matthew Adams Service
John Smith and His Car (w) (½)	F. C. Russell	Ullman Feature Service
Jokes (d) (ill) (1)		Associated Newspapers
Jubilee's Pardner (d)	Judd Mortimore Lewis	George Matthew Adams Service
Just Among Us Girls (d) (½)	Kathryn Kenny	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Just Folks (d)	Edgar A. Guest	George Matthew Adams Service
Justice Series (w)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Junior Weekly Supplement (w) (4p)	Various	Daily Feature Newspaper Syndicate

K

Kellygrams (d) (1)	Fred Kelly	Editors Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Kiddie Klub (d) (¼)	Eleanor Schorer	New York World Syndicate
King Fuzzy-Paws (d) (¾)	Gleb Botkin	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.

L

Labor Articles (w)	James M. Lynch	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Lait, Jack—(story) (w) (ill.) (fp)	Jack Lait	International Feature Service, Inc.
Latest from Paris (ill.) (d) (ill.) (2)	Paris Staff	International Feature Service, Inc.
Laughs from Life (d) (2)		Life Syndicate
Stephen Leacock (w)	Stephen Leacock	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Let's Plan a Party (w) (½)	Susan Gardner	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Literary Criticism (w)	H. L. Mencken	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Syndicate
Life and Times of Buffalo Bill (w)	Courtney Riley Cooper	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Life of Christy Mathewson (d) (ill)	Bozeman Bulger, Mrs. Mathewson	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Lights of New York (d)	Pierre Van Paasen	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Limericks, Coded (d)		Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Line O'Type (d-w)	"R. H. L."	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Syndicate
Listening In on the United States (2w)	Robert Heinl, D. Heinl	Radio News Syndicate
Listen World (d-w) (1)	Elsie Robinson	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Literary Criticism (w) (1)	Tom Masson	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Little Benny's Notebook (d-w)	Lee Pape	George Matthew Adams Service
Little Stories for Bedtime (d) (⅝)	Thornton W. Burgess	Associated Newspapers
Living Inventions (d) (1/6) (ill)	Gaylord Johnson	Science Service
Living to Live (d)	Herbert M. Shelton	Graphic Syndicate
London Lights (w) (personalities)	Marion Ryan	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
London Daily Radio (financial) (d)	Arthur W. Kiddy	Post Syndicate
Louisa's Letter (w) (½)		Editor's Copy
Love Confessions of Great Men (w) (¾)	Joseph Kaye	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Love Notes (d) (1/6)	Kay Kean	Ledger Syndicate
Love Trap, The (Serial) (d)	Idah McGlone Gibson	National Newspaper Service
Lyrics of Life (d)	Douglas Malloch	McClure Newspaper Syndicate

M

Ma (Gov.) Ferguson Says (w)	Steve Stevenson	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Magazine Features (w) (tab)		New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Magazine Page (w)		Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Magazine Pages (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Magazine Pages (w) (fp)		Ledger Syndicate
Magazine Pages Sunday (w) (fp)		Ledger Syndicate
Magic Motifs (w) (½)	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Maiden Meditations (w)	Sara Moore	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Make Your Own Toys (w) (tab)		World Color Printing Co.
Making Modern Menus (d) (1)	Kathryn Kenney	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Making the Most of Your Looks (d) (1/3)	Dorothy Stote	Ledger Syndicate
Manhattan Aisles (w) (1)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Manhattan Days & Nights (d) (¾)	Herbert Corey	Associated Newspapers
Man Nobody Knows (d) (series)	Bruce Barton	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Many Happy Returns (d)		Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Maps (News) (d) (2)	Clinton R. Thompson	International Syndicate
Market Leads (N.Y.) (Bonds, Curb, Foreign Exchange, Grain, Cotton, Coffee, Sugar) (d)		Post Syndicate
Marriage Game (d)	Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hatton	National Newspaper Service
Married Life Serial (w) (ill)	Connie and Bert	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Married Life Serial (d) (1)	Ann Lisle	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Married Life Serial (w) (ill)	Mabel Herbert Urner	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Matrimonially Speaking (d) (1/6)	Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKay	Ledger Syndicate
Medbury Says (d) (¾)	J. P. Medbury	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Meditations of a Married Woman (4tw) (½)	Helen Rowland	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Melting Pot, The (w) (½)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Men and Markets (financial) (d) (1)		Publishers Financial Bureau
Men and Women (d)	Rudolph Valentino	National Newspaper Service
Men's Fashions (d-w)	A. T. Gallico	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Mental Daily Dozen (d) (½)	A. L. Wilbert, M. A.	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Menus (d) (⅜)		Associated Newspapers
Menus (d)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
Menus, Making Modern (d) (1)	Kathryn Kenney	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Merry Go Round of the Drama, The (w)	Jessy Trimble	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Milady Beautiful (d) (½)	Lois Leeds	Ledger Syndicate
Milgrim Fashion Page (w)	Sally Milgrim	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Mind and Body Talks (d) (½)	H. Addington Bruce	Associated Newspapers
Mind Meter, The	Dr. J. Lowell Henderson	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Mind Tests (d)	Dr. Winston Mitchell	National Newspaper Service
Miniature Magazine (ill) (d) (1½)		King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Minute or Two With Books, A (3tw) (1)	Ruth Snyder	New York World Syndicate
Modern Problems In Bible Study (w) (½)	R. W. Thompson	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate

(Continued on page 46)

Send for Our

NEW CATALOGUE

Describing 62 Features
and
6 News Services

LEDGER AND POST SYNDICATE

PHILADELPHIA NEW YO

What Every Editor Wants
What Every Reader Looks For

Personalities in the News.
How Do They Do It? Why Do They Do It?
News Facts. News Features.

Talk of Them in the Street!
Read Them in the Home!

The News Syndicate of Personalities—One Year Old To-Day.
Write for Terms and Samples.

T-BEAN NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE

299 Madison Ave., New York THEODORA BEAN, Editor

...ore than sixty fea-
...res daily by out-
...anding artists and
...nd writers.

The Syndicator

"A Feature Paper For Newspapers"

Tentative Release Date For Contents of This Issue, July 5, 1926.

...r-Nicholson, Inc NEW YORK, JUNE 5, 1926 Entered as second ... Post Office, ... York

...EATURE PERIODICAL LAUNCHED

...ME : WHEELER-NIC...

...ars ago it was decided to add a dozen or so ...cars to take care of ...increasing traffic. ...ter the elevated lines ...with their curious ...rives—but transporta... in a jam. The sur... filled to their capac... ...teds not having any ...nce and yet they, too, ... Then the first sub... ...gurated running only ...ace. This did not re... ...sation and other sub... ...structed. These, too, ...ome congested with the ...ng crowds. So today ...subway construction ...at will be the most ...ransportation feat ...nsion of the national ...from the Mississippi ...e Coast. Hundreds of ...to be spent to rush ...of souls to and from ...And I venture a guess ...ew years additional ...ve to be employed to ...the city's transporta...

...how that over sixty ...people attend the ...rew York City. These ...ach the subways on ...me at just the same ...llion others from shop ...As a result there is ...ed a "subway jam." ...ci in subway coaches ...on a can. If you accid... your elbow in a fel...'s eye you must leave ...ll the next station ...rill be a slight change ...he gentlemen who is ...ely on your back may ...another will take his place. The fat lady who has been standing on your bunion from 42nd to 72nd may decide to stand on your other foot for a while. As soon as the transportation question is solved in New York the sale of corn cures will fall off fifty per cent in the city.

At 191st Street the subway is some twenty stories underground. To reach the trains one is forced to use an elevator similar to a lift in a mine. Two hundred feet, and more, below the earth's surface are express trains rushing through their narrow tunnels at a mile-a-minute clip. New Yorkers think nothing of this engineering feat, but at the same time they will get a real kick out of a sidewalk magician who carries a butcher knife stuck through his fore-arm.

In practically every subway station is a licensed peddler of pencils, shoe strings, and other whatnots. Their incomes vary according to locality. Contrary to the usual first thought the best paying locations for such sales are in the poorer sections of the city. Shop girls are most susceptible to the supplications of the crippled or blind.

One vendor of pencils on the East Side subway downtown, has educated three children, and owns his home. He is brought to his stand each morning by the youngest of his children, a boy now in first year college. Then in the late afternoon his son calls for him and pilots the way home. The father is totally blind. He says that he will never retire, even though offered a life of comparative ease by his children. The sound of hurrying feet to and from the subway, and the clatter of the turnstiles have become a part of his life.

...LY HEALTH TALKS

FREDERIC DAMRAU, M.D.

...tely one person in ...s so deaf that he can... own living. Accord... Harold Hays, there are ...ine hundred thousand ...ew York City suffer... ...fness sufficient to in... ...em socially or eco... ...urthermore, probably ...f us are afflicted with ...e of impairment of hear... ...er both ears. So pro... ...ct of deafness is one ...ctical importance.

...e a patient that he had ...ion of his middle ear. ...that he had only two ...g and a left one. ...if you were to push ...o your ear canal, a ...uld never try, it would ...nor a distance of about ...a quarter and then ...mbrane. That mem... ear drum. On the ...e the ear drum is the ...

...id ear is an important ...hearing apparatus. It ...the tiny bones, linked ...form a lever. When ...ves set the ear drum ...vibrations are mag...darried by these tiny ...internal ear, the or... ...ceives the sound and ...ssages to the brain. ...e majority of cases of ...due to disease of the ...When this part of the ...on inflamed, the little ...ted within it may be ...d, as it were, by ad... ...middle ear cavity itself ...on swampy with mucus ...on abscess may form ...the ear, burst through ...and destroy the three ... It is small wonder, ...circumstances, that the ...not hear well!

...ear cavity is con... ...the back of the nose ...y means of a tube, ... eustachian tube. It ...derstand why Nature ... the eustachian tube ... to the top of a high ..., a will find the atmos...ere rarefied. On the ...of you pass through a ...n the air will be con... ...ou had no eustachian ...ear drum would be ...hen you climbed the ...d pushed in when you ...tunnel. The eustachian ...o air from the outside ...middle ear, with the ...he pressure on both ...or drum is equalized. ...nly the eustachian ...germs as well as air ...ough it. If you have ...head, the germs lodged ...f your nose are given ...ry tickets.

...the openings of the ...tube at the back of the nose do not stand wide open. Only when you swallow or blow your nose do they open their portals.

If you have a cold in the head, you must be extremely careful not to encourage the infection to travel to the middle ear. Forcible blowing of the nose is sure to blow some of the mucus and pus from the back of the nose through the eustachian tube and into the middle ear. Douching of the nose, a most dangerous practice, is only too likely to wash some of the germs on their destructive journey to the seat of deafness. Bathing with the head under water while one has a cold is another way of taking a chance with the odds against you.

Influenza, pneumonia, and the childrens' diseases are other conditions commonly followed by inflammation of the middle ear. The infection follows the same route from the back of the nose.

If you have a cold in the head or a bad attack of the "flu," some of the germs are apt to travel to the middle ear in spite of all precautions But to blow your nose like an army bugle or rinse it with salt water is to give every germ in the back of your nose an engraved invitation to spend a week end in your middle ear.

PAIN IS FELT IN THE BRAIN

From Missouri. My brother, who lost a leg in France, tells me that he suffers from pain in that foot. I can't see how the foot can hurt him when it isn't there any more.

A. Your brother is telling the truth. All pain is really felt in the brain. If the nerve coming from the foot is irritated up in the thigh, brain says that the foot hurts, even though that foot is over in France You can try it out for yourself by rapping your funny bone at the elbow. In doing so, you stimulate one of the nerves coming from the hand. After knocking the funny bone, the numb sensation goes all the way down into the ring and little fingers.

EPILEPSY NOT INHERITED

D.N. Is epilepsy hereditary?

A. No. Many medical men have said that epilepsy is hereditary; but, where careful statistical studies have been made, this statement has not been borne out.

BE SURE FIRST

Worried. I have been told that I have lung disease. As I work in an office now, they say that I must lead my life in the open air. Do you think I could cure myself by driving a taxicab for a living, so as to be in the open?

A. If you have tuberculosis, driving a taxicab would be the worst thing for you. It is entirely too strenuous. Rest is even more important than fresh air. You had better see your doctor and be guided by his advice. Who told you that you have "lung disease?"

Beauty Hin...

By Peggy Hopkins ...

"THE PERMANENT ...

How many hideous wool... we saw last season. H... tales of havoc, left in ... of last year's permanen... lated over bridge t... these are just enoug... "permanents" seen, ... proposition puzzling ... "We'll be frank," ... know, "the 'perm... certain amount of ... only in proportion ... which the hair and ... both before and afte...

A healthy head of ... ter what the textur... ways takes a good ... wave. Color calls in ... scalp, are not destro... process. Split ends a... which result, are easil... But the process is str... constant care must be ... the hair afterwards.

First Make Test

To play really safe, one ... persuade the hair dresser to ... a lock of one's hair as a ... first. Then the result won... such a gamble. Oily hair ... rally takes a good wave b... hair is often stronger and ... less during the process. ... if your hair is dyed! Ce... oring stuffs react like ... the permanent wave pr...

Choose your shop wit... be sure your hair is in ... dition before you tak... manent" step.

Remember those ... mops you've seen? ... at all necessary, no... fault of the process ... ent wave will get ... too frequent washing ... hair brush, instead. ... with long, soft, pliab... and brush with upward... ward strokes. This not on... the hair, but it brings ... down from the scalp. Th... manent" dries it out of th...

Wash your brush frequen...

Cotton For Tonics

Oils and tonics, if you ... needs them, should be appl... cotton. Be sure your s... sorbs them. Don't let t... main on the surface.

Split ends should be ... off, not singed. Treat th... oil, applied with the finger...

Last but not least—let me ... courage those frequent and expe... sive trips to the hair dresser for ... water waves. Do it yourself. Just ... get some nice long, broad, combs ... or even hair pins. It's easy to ... learn to slip them into place. Tie ... a little net over the ensemble, then ... do what you please about the ... house for a half hour till the ... waves emerge all trim and gleaming. One of the worst things for your permanently waved hair is the artificial dryer.

Your best shampoo is a castile soap and olive oil solution, but let me reiterate, you with the permanent wave, your best friend is your hair brush. Use it.

TESTED RECIPES FOR LONG LIFE

By Alumni of the Three-Score-and-Ten Society

By George Haven Putnam, Famous Publisher.

"I have no actual recipe for long life. I follow the practiced prescription of Teufelsdrockh in 'Sartor Resartus'; 'Do the thing that lies next and the thing will take care of itself.'

"The work by which a man earns his living should not be permitted to monopolize his thoughts and his interests.

"The day, or the work, should include a proper allowance of physical activity. My own routine has been, during the winter, to walk about four miles a day. In summer there is less walking but opportunity has been made for tennis and surf bathing among other things.

"A man's obligations may be classed as, to himself, to develop his ideals and shape his life as far as he may find it practicable in accordance with those ideals. To fulfil his duty to those for whom he is responsible; to fulfil his duty to the community he lives in, to his city, his State and his nation, not simply by refraining from breaking the law, but to share in securing better law.

"It is my conclusion that the prospect of securing a fairly long life is probably furthered by the maintenance of a well-ordered and balanced activity."

At Last, The Feature Paper For Newspapers!

The SYNDICATOR is launched to-day as the final solution of the syndicate problem. The SYNDICATOR provides the finest syndicate service at the lowest cost on the market..

It smashes custom and prices! It makes syndicate service scientific and certain and ends the chaos in the syndicate field.

The SYNDICATOR cuts cost by doing away with expensive sales force and expensive mail promotion, with costly advertising of separate features and expensive preparation of separate editorial copy. It further cuts costs by carrying advertising.

The SYNDICATOR raises quality by buying fresh, timely material on the open market as does any other periodical. It will end the condition of dry rot and sterility of ideas afflicting the syndicate field.

The paper that subscribes to the SYNDICATOR service will inevitably be the brightest and most sparkling paper in its community.

Watch for your copy of the SYNDICATOR, a standard size paper printed on regular news print in 8 columns.

Reflect on the vast possibilities that such a service opens up to an editor heretofore shackled by the limitations of oldfashioned syndicate methods.

Only one paper in each community can have SYNDICATOR service.

YOUR SUBSCRIPTION ORDER SHOULD BE WIRED IN QUICKLY TO

WHEELER-NICHOLSON, Inc.

Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, Pres.

373-4th Avenue New York City

City ... Wheele... features ... country.

Among the ... Wheeler-Nicholson ... series

"The Adventures of Vivian Vanity"
"Ivanhoe"
"The Gold Bug," and
"Treasure Island"

Wheeler-Nicholson's Daily Comics, including

"Ambitious Ambrose"
"Little Otto"
"Cheerful Charlie"
"Duckville Doings"
"Mike O'Kay"
"Looney Land"
"Uncle Eph"
"Squirrel Food"
"College Comics"

"The Syndicator" also contains six pages of features for women, a daily fashion feature for men, two complete pages of sports features, a page of daily editorials, with editorial cartoon, a crossword puzzle page, and a page of news pictures.

Subscribers using "The Syndicator" service will clip printed matter, two copies being sent each subscriber for this purpose. Mats of picturized novels and short stories, as well as mats of all other cuts or illustrations, are forwarded promptly to all subscribers, and mats of the daily picture service are sent daily by fast mail.

"The Syndicator," one of the most important innovations in the syndicate field in years, is a permanent institution. It provides you with a comprehensive service of the highest class at a minimum of cost.

WIRE IMMEDIATELY FOR PRICE QUOTATION ON EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS IN YOUR CITY. THE TERMS WILL ASTONISH YOU.

WHEELER-NICHOLSON, Inc.
373 Fourth Avenue New York City

WHEELER-NICHOLSON MAKES SENSATIONAL INNOVATION IN NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE FIELD

Publication Radically Lowers Cost and Raises ...ality of Features—Unique Combination of Clip Service and Mats

PERMITS GROUP BUYING

Wheeler-Nicholson In Announcement ...ns Details of System Expected to ...evolutionize Feature Marketing

...YORK, June 5.—Major Malcolm Wheeler-... President, Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc., today an... inauguration of a new syndicate service. The ...mber of the new weekly feature paper, the ...TOR, was issued today. "Syndicate service as ...e newspapers up to now is basically faulty," he ...here is no reason in the world why syndicate mate... ...continue to be so low in quality and so high in ...nly the newspapers of this nation are well able ... material at lower cost if someone will inaugu... ...r system.

...Nicholson, Inc., offers this system. This offer ...erious study and hearty co-operation of news... ...s publishing the SYNDICATOR which starts as ...t will eventually be converted into a daily syndi..., packed and crammed with a wealth of artistic ...ry material of highest quality, sold at absolutely ... price in the mrket.

Old Evils Corrected

...YNDICATOR at one blow removes all the very ...ils of the present syndicate system. These evils ... As regards the syndicates, they have become ...ng entities rather than creative forces They ... lacking in originality. Their prices are out... there are too many syndicates bidding up the ...riters and artists. Too many expensive salesmen ...ained. Syndicates indulge too much in costly ad... promotion. They should devote vastly more energy ...ng and originating. They have not yet grasped th... of the word 'service.' They indulge in wastefulness. ...cation of features, in trying out unsalable matter and ...g poor material. It is difficult for a syndicate, ...nder the old plan, to show originality. It is too ... a matter to try out new features. Syndicates are ... with the best artists and writers who will not ...n syndicate work, prefering to sell outright to ... Syndicates cannot afford to buy good stuff for ...s, not knowing whether costs will be met by suffi...s. These are a few evils from the syndicate side ... editorial side are the evils of high prices and the ...kmanship they receive from syndicates, the smudgy ...aphed copy, the slip shod work, the harping on one ... Editors give syndicate writers and artists publicity ...h are forced to pay higher prices because of this ...y. Editors do not receive first rights on good mate... ...nd are forced to tag along behind even mediocre maga...s. The editor is dependent upon syndicates and can only ...oose the least of the evils offered. Syndicates raise prices whenever and however they can. After a feature has been established by one paper it is very liable to be sold out at a higher price to a competitor. The whole wasteful, clumsy game reacts to the newspaper in the form of mediocre material at the highest price. Today, throughout the country, the newspaper reading public is subjected to third and fourth rate material whereas they are entitled to the best that can be found in the market.

"Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc., has broken entirely away from old syndicate methods. It strives for originality. It knows from experience that good material will sell itself without heavy sales expense. It specializes on high quality rather than an expensive sales force and returns the savings to the editor in phenomenally low prices. By publishing a syndicate paper it immediately frees itself from the necessity of depending upon the itinerant and inept or the artist and writer who demand long contracts and heavy percentages. It buys new, timely, interesting material in the open market, in the same manner as Life, Judge, Liberty, the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, and other publications.

"Not being committed irretrievably to any artist, writer or feature, except of course such continuous serials or strips as are sold on contract, it can offer an immense assortment of good material to its subscribing papers. The service is kept growing and improving by discarding those features that do not meet with favor and by providing a constant new selection. Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc., features are designed to aid the editor by making his pages sparkle with the best literary ar... artistic work to be found in America.

Mediocrity Is Shunned

"...e steadfastly refuse to handle the trite, the banal and the mediocre. To give a well rounded service it is necessary for us to handle some stock features but even these are marked with an unusual freshness and vigor. None of our features is retained after it has passed its prime but the service is constantly freshened with new ides. We are constantly on the look out for new things.

"We shamelessly admit that our best ideas come from where they should come—the newspaper editors themselves. We have developed a most ideally flexible system, a system that is slowly but surely building up a group of selected features, the finest in America. This is due to the fact that we put the burden of selection upon the editors of our subscribing papers. We do the preliminary work choosing a few of the best from hundreds of features offered us every week. These are listed as trial features in the SYNDICATOR and are sent out to the editors for their approval or disapproval.

(Continued on Page 2)

CAPITAL STOCK IS INCREASED $185,000

Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc., is solidly founded on a secure financial basis. It recently has increased its capital stock by $185,000.00 to finance the publication of "The Syndicator." It banks with the Guarantee Trust Co. of N. Y., where inquiries in reference to it can be made. It already has a large and ever growing list of papers using its various features, listed in "The Syndicator."

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

(Continued from page 44)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Modes Miniature (d)	Margette	National Newspaper Service
More Truth Than Poetry (verse) (d)	J. J. Montague	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Morgue Mat Service (s-m)		Central Press Association
Mother-Child Rhyme Feature (d)	Winifred S. Gibbs	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Mothers and Their Children (d) (1)	Helen J. Millar	Associated Editors, Inc.
Motion Picture Service	Various	Holmes Feature Service
Moulton Articles (d) (¼)	Roy K. Moulton	International Feature Service, Inc.
Movie Letter (w)	Rosalind Schaeffe	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Movie Page (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Moving Picture Album (w) (2)	R. E. Sherwood	Life Syndicate
Music Column (w)	Olga Samaroff	Post Syndicate
Mutter and Mumble (w) (1)	J. P. Medbury	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Muvver and Me (Poems for Children) (d-w) (¼)	Robert Livingston	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
My Favorite Stories (d)	Irvin S. Cobb	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
My Idea of Happiness (d) (½)	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
My Mother (3-w) (¼)	Joseph Kaye	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
My Neighbor Says (d) (⅜)		Associated Newspapers
Mystic Maze (d) (2)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Myth and Magic (3tw) (¼)	R. H. Tingley	New York World Syndicate

N

Nature Articles (w) (1) (ill.)	Thornton Burgess	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Nature's Notebook (d) (1/6) (ill.)	Dr. Frank Thone	Science Service
Nature Notes (d) (¼)	John Burroughs Nature Club	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Needlework, Practical & Fancy (w)	Clotilde	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
New Automobile Inventions (w) (½)	R. H. Lecraw	National Feature Service
News Features (w) (ill.) (fp)	Various	International Feature Service, Inc.
News Feature Stories (d) (1-2-3)		Editors' Feature Service-Johnson Features, Inc.
New York Day by Day (d) (½)	O. O. McIntyre	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
New York Letter (d)	Herbert Corey	Associated Newspapers
New York Letter (d)	Jack Doherty	George Matthew Adams Service
New York Letter (w)	George Halasz	Continental Features
New York Letter (w)	Mark Hellenger	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
New York Letter (d)	Karl K. Kitchen	New York World Syndicate
New York Letter (d)	"Mann Hatton"	Post Syndicate
New York Letter (d) (1)	Burton Rascoe	Editors' Feature Service-Johnson Features, Inc.
New York Letter (d)	Charles Hanson Towne	United Features Syndicate
New York Letter (d)	Walter Winchell	Graphic Syndicate
New York Letter (d) (½)	Gilbert Swan	NEA Service, Inc.
New York Society (w)	"Marionette"	Continental Features
New York Society Letter (w)	Grace Robinson	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
New York Stage Review (w) (1)	Gene Cohn	NEA Service, Inc.
New York Theatre Letter (w)	John Anderson	Post Syndicate
New York Theatrical Letter (w)	George Halasz	Continental Features
News-in-Views in Gravure (w) (tab.)		National News Service
Nickledicks, The (d)	Wm. Donahey	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Notes and Comments (w) (1)		Editor's Copy
Novelettes	Various	Service for Authors
Novelette (d) (¼)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
Novels	Various	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Now You Tell One (d) (¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.

O

Of Interest to Women (w) (⅛)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
Old Gardner Says, The (d) (⅛)		Associated Newspapers
Once Over, The (d) (½)	H. I. Phillips	Associated Newspapers
Once Overs (d) (¼)	J. J. Mundy	International Feature Service, Inc.
150 Years Ago Today (d) (¼)	Jonathan A. Rawson, Jr.	Putnam Syndicate
O. O. McIntyre's Articles (ill.) (w) (½)	O. O. McIntyre	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Optimistic Outbursts	Nosmo King	Arco Newspaper Feature and Fiction Service
Odd Facts (6tw)		Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Our Children (d)	Angelo Patri	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Our Common Road (d) (½)	Agnes Edwards	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Our Family Food (w)	Winifred S. Gibbs	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Our Government (d) (1/3)		Audio Service
Ourselves and Our Children (d) (1/3)	Helen Harrington	Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.
Outline of the Arts (d-w)	H. G. Wells	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Over Life's Hurdles (d) (½)	Dr. Louis E. Bisch	Premier Syndicate, Inc.

P

Parent-Child Feature (d)	Shirley R. Williams	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Parents (w)	Dr. Arthur Dean	National Newspaper Service
Porking with Peggy (d)	Frank Ellis & Laura Lou Brookman	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Paris Fashions (d) (1/3)	Eva A. Tingey	Ledger Syndicate
Paris Fashion (w) (fp) (o or b)	Unsigned	International Feature Servi
Personalities in the News (w)	Susie Sexton	T-Bean Newspaper Syndica
Personality in Dress (¼)	Marion Metzer	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Physical Culture (w) (fp) (ill.)	Unsigned	International Feature Servi
Picture Page Service (d) (fp)		Star Newspaper Service
Picture-Word Puzzle (d) (2)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Pinnacle Short Fiction (w) (fp)		Metropolitan Newspaper Se
Poems I Love (d)	Charles Hanson Towne	Central Press Association
Poems (d)	Miscellaneous	Editors' Feature Service-Features, Inc.
Pointed Paragraphs (d) (⅛)		Associated Newspapers
Political Reviews (4tw) (1)	Mark Sullivan	New York Herald Tribune dicate
Political—"The Gentleman From—"	Benton Howard	Editors' Syndicate
Popular Fallacies (d)	E. F. Wagner	National Newspaper Service
Popular Science (d) (¾)	Garrett P. Serviss	International Feature Servi
Popular Superstitions (d)	Frank Ellis	Des Moines Register & Syndicate
Portraits (d) (1)	Various	International Syndicate
Potash & Perlmutter Stories	Montague Glass	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Potters, The (ill.) (w) (hp)	J. P. McEvoy	King Features Syndicate, I
Practical & Fancy Needlework (w)	Clotilde	Chicago Tribune Newspape dicate
Pre-Eminent Articles (w) (4 to fp)		Metropolitan Newspaper Se
Problems of Every Day Behavior (1)	Janet Paige	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Pure Food Articles (2tw) (2/3)	Royal S. Copeland	Newspaper Feature Service
Puzzles (Cross Word) (d)		Associated Newspapers
Puzzles (Cross Word) (d) (2)		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Puzzles—Cut Outs (3w) (2)		International Syndicate
Puzzles—Dot (3w) (2)	Various	International Syndicate
Puzzles—Dot, for Children (d) (2)		Keystone Feature Syndicat
Puzzles, Hart's		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Puzzlette (d) (1/6)	Alan S. Foster	Ledger Syndicate
Puzzlicks (d) (1/6)		Ledger Syndicate
Puzzlefacts (d)	William Stevens	George Matthew Adams Se
Puzzle Pictures (d) (1)		Associated Newspapers
Puzzles, Sam Loyd's (d)	Sam Loyd	Sam Loyd Syndicate
Puzzles—"Snappy Thinking" (d)		Republic Syndicate, Inc.

Q

Queen's Counsel (d) (1/3)	Her Majesty, Marie, Queen of Roumania	Famous Features Syndicate
Queer Life (d)	R. M. Williamson	Des Moines Register & Tr Syndicate
Question Box, Ed Wynn's (w)	Ed Wynn	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Questions and Answers (d-w) (2/3)	F. J. Haskin	Frederic J. Haskin

R

Racing Service (d)	J. B. Snodgrass	Post Syndicate
Radio (d) (2)	Frank Chapman	International Syndicate
Radio—Around the Dial (d) (1/3)		Audio Service
Radio-By-The-Clock (d) (1)		Audio Service
Radio, Current (d) (½) (ill)	American Radio Relay League	Science Service
Radio Doings (d) (¾)		Audio Service
Radio Features (w) (tab)		New York Herald Tribune dicate
Radio—Fifteen Minutes of Radio Each Day (d) (½)	Joseph Calcaterra	United Feature Syndicate
Radio—John Smith and His Radio (w) (½)	F. C. Russell	Ullman Feature Service
Radio—"Listening In on the United States" (2w)	Robert D. Heinl	Heinl Radio News Syndica

(Continued on page 48)

Among The Newspapers Publishing

Constance Talmadge's Flapper Series

Chicago Journal — Philadelphia Sun
Detroit News — Buffalo Times
Toledo Blade — Louisville Courier J'l
Omaha Bee — Oakland Post Enquirer
Peoria Star Journal — Memphis News Scimitar
Newark Jersey Transcript

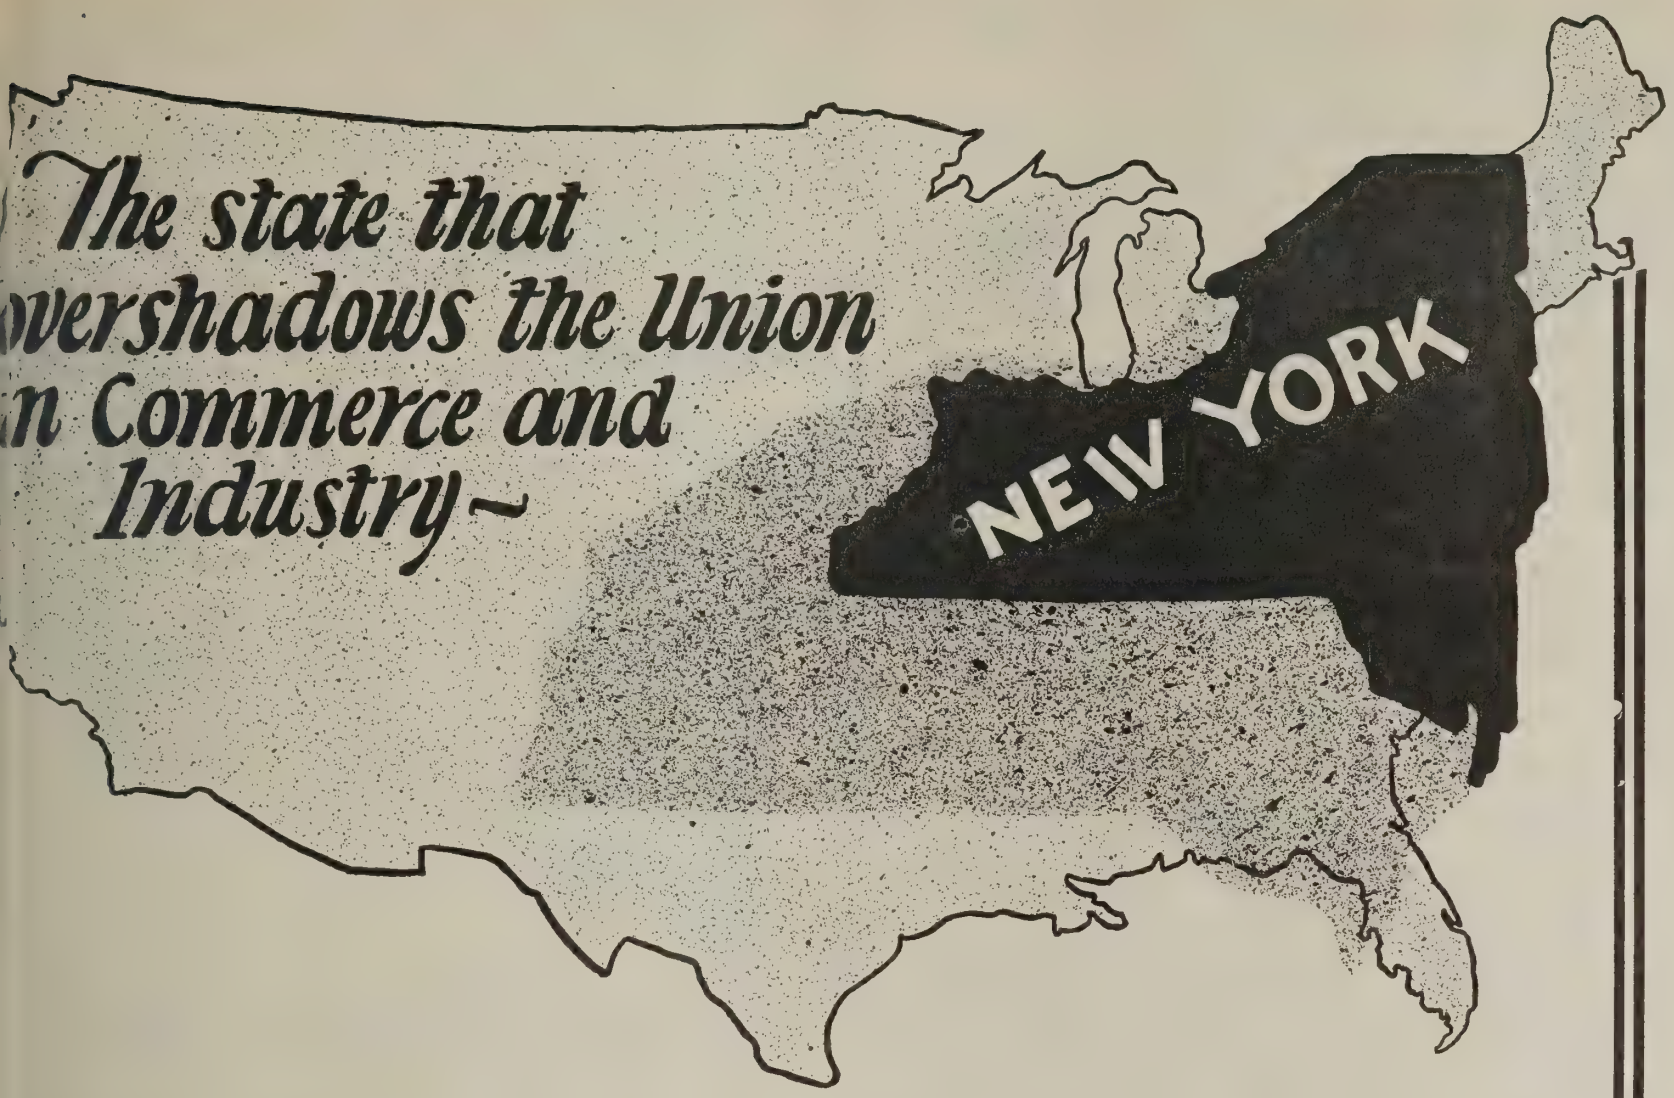
Why Not Join This List of Papers
Wire for Terms and Territory

COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY

Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief
Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President and General Manager

Mary Marshall
FASHION WRITER
is sending a
COMPLETE DAILY AND SUNDAY FASHION FEATURE
and a
DAILY FASHION NEWS SERVICE FROM PARIS
Authoritative
Entertaining
Full of Ideas

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York



Magazine Sections
and COMICS
in Full Colors

This company specializes on high grade work. Our aim is constantly—how good can we make them—rather than how many can we grind out per hour.

Yet You'll Find Our Prices No Higher

MISSOURI AGRICULTURAL PUB. CO.
J. E. Nicholson, Business Manager
2206 Pine St. St. Louis, Mo.

Let Us Be Your Printer

First in Commerce, in Industry and Population, national advertisers always head the list with the daily papers of New York State as the most direct method of reaching the actual buyers of this great state.

New York's splendid railroads, automobile roads and water ways make freight movements economical and speedy. Its modern stores are numerous and the hundreds of communities and shopping centers are surpassed by no other state.

Get the benefit of this great source of buying power through the daily papers.

		Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News	(E)	34,444	.10	.10
Albany Knickerbocker Press	(M)	34,018	.11	.11
Albany Knickerbocker Press	(S)	56,924	.16	.16
Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat	(E)	7,810	.04	.04
††Auburn Citizen	(E)	6,389	.065	.055
Brooklyn Daily Eagle	(E)	73,764	.22	.22
Brooklyn Daily Eagle	(S)	84,997	.22	.22
*Buffalo Star and Enquirer	(E)	30,134	.13	.09
*Buffalo Courier	(M)	58,083	.17	.13
*Buffalo Courier	(S)	104,303	.27	.22
Buffalo Evening News	(E)	138,294	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times	(E)	102,562	.21	.21
Buffalo Sunday Times	(S)	108,219	.21	.21
Buffalo Express	(M)	53,254	.14	.12
Buffalo Express	(S)	59,243	.18	.14
††Corning Evening Leader	(E)	9,339	.05	.05
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser	(E&M)	33,487	.11	.11
Freeport Daily Review	(E)	7,991	.05	.05
††Geneva Daily Times	(E)	5,040	.04	.04
Gloversville Leader Republican	(E)	7,238	.035	.035
††Ithaca Journal-News	(E)	7,751	.05	.05
*Jamestown Morning Post	(M)	11,636	.04	.035
Middletown Times-Press	(E)	7,127	.04	.04
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus	(E)	9,871	.05	.05
Newburgh Daily News	(E)	12,132	.06	.06
††New Rochelle Standard-Star	(E)	8,598	.04	.04
The Sun, New York	(E)	257,067	.60	.56
New York Times	(M)	356,471	.80	.784
New York Times	(S)	610,041	.95	.931
††New York Herald-Tribune	(S)	345,484	.693	.672
††New York World	(M)	287,682	.595	.58
††New York World	(S)	582,929	.595	.58
††New York Evening World	(E)	294,442	.595	.58
Niagara Falls Gazette	(E)	20,629	.07	.07
Port Chester Item	(E)	4,732	.03	.03
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise	(E)	12,824	.06	.06
††Rochester Times-Union	(E)	70,406	.21	.20
††Syracuse Journal	(E)	65,326	.16	.16
Troy Record	(M&E)	22,679	.06	.06
Watertown Times	(E)	17,334	.08	.08

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1925.
 A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

(Continued from page 46)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Radio News (w) (3)	Thomas Stevenson	Stevenson Radio Syndicate
Radio News Notes (d) (¾)		Audio Service
Radio Programs (d) (1½)		Audio Service
Radio Programs (w) (1)		Editor's Copy
Radio Programs (d)		United Press Association
Rambler, The (d) (column)	Norman W. Ralston	Urbana Feature Service
Real Life Serials (d) (1)	Winifred Van Duzer	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Recipes, Bettina's (d) (¼)	Louise B. Weaver	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Red Magic (w) (tab) (4pp)	Houdini and Staff	New York World Syndicate
Revelations of a Wife (serial) (d) (1)	Adele Garrison	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Review of London Markets (w) (½)	Arthur W. Kiddy	Post Syndicate
Rhymes of the Road (w) (½)	Dudley Glass	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Rhyming Optimist, The (d) (⅛)	Aline Michaelis	International Feature Service, Inc.
Right Word (d) (⅜)	W. Curtis Nicholson	Associated Newspapers
Rippling Rhymes (d)	Walt Mason	George Matthew Adams Service
Romance of Words (d) (1¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Romeo's Twins (d) (ill)	Charles Livingston Bull	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Rubicam Serials (d)	Marion Rubicam	George Matthew Adams Service

S

Said by Mark Twain (d) (¼)	Mark Twain	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Sally's Sallies (d) (1)	Scott	Editor's Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
Salome Sun (S) (4)	C. G. Putnam	C. C. Powell Newspaper Features
Sam Loyd's Daily Puzzle (d)	Sam Loyd	Sam Loyd Syndicate
Sam Loyd's Puzzle Gymnasium (w) (3)	Sam Loyd	Sam Loyd Syndicate
Sayings of Mrs. Solomon (2tw) (½)	Helen Rowland	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Science and Invention (ill) (w) (fp)		Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Scientific Features	Various	Holmes Feature Service
Science for Home and School (w) (2) (ill)	Staff	Science Service
Science News Bulletin (d) (i ¼)	Staff	Science Service
Science, Popular (d) (¾)	Garrett P. Serviss	International Feature Service, Inc.
Science Shorts (w) (1)	Emily C. Davis	Science Service
Science Specials by Telegraph (d) (½)	Watson Davis and Others	Science Service
Science, Ventures Into (d) (1.2)	Watson Davis	Science Service
Scientific Horoscope (d) (¼)	Mme. Alpha	Science Service
Scrambled Zoo (d or w) (1)	C. V. Fry	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Scrap Basket, The (w) (1)	Selected	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Screen Door, The (w)	Delight Evans	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Secretary Hawkins Club Page (w)	Robert F. Schulkers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Secretary Hawkins (w)	Robert F. Schulkers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Second Love (d) (serial)	Malcolm Duart	Eugene MacLean Newspaper Features
Second Thoughts on First Nights (theatrical) (1)	Alexander Woollcott	New York World Syndicate
Secrets of the Stars (d) (1/3)		Audio Service
Seen on 5th Avenue (ill) (2tw) (½)		Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Semi-News (ill) (w) (3fp)		Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Sentence Sermons (d)	Rev. Roy L. Smith	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Serial, "Sylvia" (d) (2)	Ninon Romaine	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Serials (d)	Virgania Swain	NEA Service, Inc.
Serials (d)	Various	NEA Service, Inc.
Serials (d)	Hazel Deyo Batchelor	Ledger Syndicate
Serials	Glen Emmons, Lilah Thompson, and Others	Arco Newspaper Feature and Fiction Service
Serials (d)	Idah McGlone Gibson	National Newspaper Service
Serials (d)	Jane Phelps	George Matthew Adams Service
Serials (d)	Popular Authors	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Serials (d)	Marion Rubicam	George Matthew Adams Service
Serials (w) (fp) (ill)	Various	International Feature Service, Inc.
Serials (d)	Various	Service for Authors
Serial (w) (2p)	Various	International Feature Service, Inc.
Serials (d)	Winifred Van Duzer	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Serials (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Serials "Blue Ribbon" (d-w)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Serials (d)	Malcolm Duart	Eugene MacLean Newspaper Features
Serials (d)	Various	Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.
Serial, Children's (d)	Florence Smith Vincent	Central Press Association
Serial, "Crossed Wires" (w)	John T. McCutcheon	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Serial Love Story (d) (¼)	Fay Stevenson	New York World Syndicate
Serials—Women's (d) (ill)	Lucille Van Slyke, May Christie, Winifred Hopkins, Mildred Barbour Mark Allerton	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Serials "The Taxi Dancer" (d) (1)	R. Terry Shannon	International Feature Service, Inc.
Sermons, Sentence (d)	Rev. Roy L. Smith	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Shopping Economy (d)	Mrs. Harland H. Allen	Harland H. Allen Feature Service
Shopping Notes (d) (⅛)		Associated Newspapers
Short Furrows (w)	Kin Hubbard	National Newspaper Service
Short Stories	Various	Service for Authors
Short Stories (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Short Stories (Fiction) (d) (1)	Various	International Feature Service, Inc.
Sid Said (d)	Sidney A. Silberman	National News Service
Sideshows of Science (d) (⅛)		King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Side Talks (d) (2)	Ruth Cameron	George Matthew Adams Service
Signs & Charms the World Has Believed In (d) (¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Silver Lining (d) (½)	Fullerton Waldo	Ledger Syndicate
Sketches from life (w)	Harry J. Westerman	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Smiles (d) (1) (ill)	Various	International Syndicate
Snappy Thinking Puzzles (d)		Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Snuggle Pups-Promotion Feature (d)	Hop	National Newspaper Service
Society and Fashions (w) (1)	Betsy Schuyler	NEA Service, Inc.
Society Letter (New York) (w)	Grace Robinson	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
Something to Think About (3tw) (¾)	Bruno Lessing	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Special Auto Article Service (w) (1)	William Ullman and F. C. Russell	Ullman Feature Service
Special Features	Paul V. Collins	Paul V. Collins Editorial Syndicate
Spectator, The (3w) (½)	Unsigned	International Feature Service, Inc.
S. S. McClure Says (d) (1)	S. S. McClure	Famous Features Syndicate
Star Map (m) (2) (ill)	James Stokley	Science Service
Starr Sterling's Adventures (juvenile) (w) (3)	Bert Reed	Star Newspaper Service
Starry Skies (m) (1)	Prof. S. G. Barton	Keystone Feature Syndicate
Statistical Surveys	Staff	Arco Newspaper Feature and Fiction Service
Stock-A-Day (d) (ill.)		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Stories (w) (ill) (fp)	Jack Lait	International Feature Service
Stories That Must Be Told (d) (½)	Evelyn Norton	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Story Behind the Story, The (w) (1) (ill)	J. J. Geller	New York Herald Tribune cate
Story of Home Making, The (d) (¼)	Mary E. Wright	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Story Telling Philosopher, The (d) (¼)	John Pilgrim	Associated Newspapers
Straight Talks to Women About Money (d)	Mary Elizabeth Allen	Harland H. Allen Feature S
Strenuous Americans (d)	R. F. Dibble	Continental Features
Sue to Lou (ill)	Gettier	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Sunday Articles (5w) (3)	Ada Patterson, N. P. Babcock, et al.	International Feature Service
Sunday Magazine (w) (10pp) (tab)	Staff	New York World Syndicate
Sugar Market (N. Y.) (d) (¼)		Post Syndicate
Sunday Morning Breakfast (w) (1)	Roe Fulkerson	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Sunday Motorist, The (w) (1)	William Ullman	Ullman Feature Service
Sunday Benny's Notebook	Lee Pape	George Matthew Adams Se
Sunday Magazine Features	Staff	Arco Newspaper Feature an tion Service
Sunday School Lessons (w)	Dr. Wm. T. Ellis	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Sunday School Lesson, International (w) (1)		Editor's Copy
Sunday School Lesson (w)	William Sothern, Jr.	Republic Syndicate, Inc.

T

Table Manners for Auction Bridge Players (d) (1)	Marie Van Riper Watts	Imperial News Service
Tales of Real Dogs (ill) (w)	Albert Payson Terhune	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Talks to Girls (w) (ill)	Kathleen Norris	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Talks to Mothers (d) (½)	Lucy M. Wheelock	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate
Taxi Dancer, The (serial) (d) (1)	R. Terry Shannon	International Feature Servic
Teasers (d) (1/6)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Tell It to Elsie (d) (¾)	Elsie Robinson	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Telling the World (d) (1)	Neal O'Hara	New York World Syndicate
Teepee Tales (d)	El Comancho	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Test Yourself (d) (¼) (ill)	Watson Davis	Science Service
Tested Recipes for Long Life (d) (¼)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
That Body of Yours (d)	Dr. James W. Barton	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
That Motor Car of Yours (w) (½)	William Ullman	Ullman Feature Service
Theatre, The European (w)	Staff	Continental Features
Theatrical (Broadway's Current Success) (w) (3)		Putnam Syndicate
Theatrical Features	Various	Holmes Feature Service
Theatrical (N. Y. Letter) (w)	John Anderson	Post Syndicate
Theatrical Letter (w) (2/3)	Bushnell Dimond	Newspaper Feature Service,
Theatrical Letter (w)	George Halasz	Continental Features
Theatrical Letter (w) (1)	Percy Hammond	New York Herald Tribune cate
Theatrical Letter (w)	Burns Mantle	Chicago Tribune Newspaper dicate
Theatrical Letter (w)	Alexander Woollcott	N. Y. World Syndicate
Then and There (w) (ill)	Irvin Cobb	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Things Never Told About (w) (w)	William H. Crawford	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicat
This Dumb World (ill) (w) (hp)	Bruno Lessing	King Features Syndicate,
This Marriage Business (w) (ill)	Connie and Bert	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Through a Woman's Eyes (3-w)	Jean Newton	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Three Minute Journeys (ill) (2tw) (¼)	Temple Manning	Newspaper Feature Service,

(Continued on page 49)

For Your Readers —

SCIENTIFIC NEWS AND FEATURE

SCIENCE SERVICE FEATURES ARE WRITTEN IN A STYLE THAT YOUR READERS WILL NOT ONLY UNDERSTAND—BUT ENJOY.

These services may be purchased singly—or you may take advantage o some very interesting group prices—issued daily, weekly, monthly.

DAILY SCIENCE NEWS BULLETIN

- Illustrated Feature
- Current Radio
- Isn't It Odd
- Nature's Notebook
- Telegraphic Science Specials
- Why The Weather
- Test Yourself
- Living Inventions
- A Dog's Life
- Science Shorts
- Ventures Into Science
- Star Map

SCIENCE SERVICE WASHINGTON, D.

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES

HOTALING'S NEWS STAND

BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.

NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING

"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street a Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from eve city in the world. . . Every town has similar stands, but none as huge as th and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."

—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29,

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YOR

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

(Continued from page 48)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
...y Tot Tales (d) (¼)	Martha Hart	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
...y Topics (w) (1)	"Tip" Bliss	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
...y Tinkle (w) (½)	Martha Hart	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
...ay (d)	Arthur Brisbane	International Feature Service, Inc.
...ay's Fashions (2tw) (1)		Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
...ay's Great Birthdays (d) (1/6)		C. C. Powell Newspaper Features
...ay's Talk (d)	George Matthew Adams	George Matthew Adams Service
...n Masson on Books (w) (1)	Tom Masson	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
...morrow's Menu (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
...tical Articles (w)	Arnold Bennett	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
...tical Articles (w)	Sir Philip Gibbs	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
...e Stories (d)	Various	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...e Stories (d)	Various	Graphic Syndicate
...e Stories (short) (d)	Various	Graphic Syndicate
...e Life Stories (d-w)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers' Syndicate
...th, The (2tw) (1/3)	Elinor Glyn	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
...nty Years on Broadway and ...e Years it Took to Get There	George M. Cohan	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...n Stories (d) (½)	Lucy Fitch Perkins	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
...-Way Pulpit, The (religious) ...w) (2)	Rev. John Roach Straton and Hubert C. Herring	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

U

...ommon Sense (d)	John Blake	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...le Ray's Corner (d) (2)	Ramon Coffinan	Publishers' Syndicate
...le Sam's Cook Book (d-w) (¼)	R. H. Lecraw	National Feature Service
...le Sam Says (d)	R. H. Lecraw	Thompson Feature Service
...and Down Broadway (d) (1)	Karl K. Kitchen	New York World Syndicate
...less Information (d) (1/3)		Audio Service

V

...ity Fair (3tw) (¼)	Conde Nast	United Feature Syndicate
...tures into Science (d) (½)	Watson Davis	Science Service
...se (w)	A. A. Milne	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
...se—Daily Poem (d)	Miscellaneous	Editors' Feature Service—Johnson Features, Inc.
...se—"Everyday Poems" (d)	George Elliston	Associated Newspapers
...se—"Goops" (d)	Gelett Burgess	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
...se—"Just Folks" (d)	Edgar A. Guest	George Matthew Adams Service
...se—"Lyrics of Life" (d)	Douglas Malloch	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
...se—"More Truth Than Poetry" ...i)	S. E. Kiser	International Syndicate, Inc.
...se—"More Truth Than Poetry" ...i)	J. J. Montague	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...se—"Muvver and Me" (d)	Robert Livingston	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
...se—"Poems I Love" (d)	Charles Hanson Towne	Central Press Association
...se—"Rippling Rhymes"	Walt Mason	George Matthew Adams Service
...se—"Rhyming Optimist" (d) ...s)	Aline Michaelis	International Feature Service, Inc.
...ws and Reviews (w) (1/3)		Editor's Copy
...nettes of Life (w) (fp)	Frank Godwin	Ledger Syndicate
...orous Health (d)	Paul J. Veatch	Graphic Syndicate

W

...ke of the News (d)	Harvey Woodruff	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
...lks in New York (w)	Winifred James	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
...ll Street Paragraphs (d) (½)		Post Syndicate
...nt Ads (d)	G. M. Adams	George Matthew Adams Service
...shington Letter (d) (½)	C. P. Stewart	NEA Service, Inc.
...shington Letter (d) (2)	Frederick Wm. Wile	Editor's Feature Service-Johnson Features, Inc.
...shington News Letter (d) (2)	Robert Barry	New York World Syndicate
...shington News Service (d)		Ledger Syndicate
...shington Notes (w)		Editor's Copy
...ter Nymph Club (d) (½)	Merze M. Seeberger	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
...y I Feel About It, The (d) (1)	Wilbur Sutton	Editor's Feature Service-Johnson Features, Inc.
...y of the World (d)	Grove Patterson	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
...Women (d) (⅜)	Betty Brainerd	Associated Newspapers
...ather, The Probable (w)	A. D. Elmer	Cambridge Associates
...ek in Finance (w) (2/3)	Paul Willard Garrett	Post Syndicate
...ekly Dozen Shorts (auto) (w) ...1)	Staff	Ullman Feature Service
...ekly Sermon (w) (1)	Rev. T. B. Gregory	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
...ekly Story (w)	Fannie Hurst	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
...at Do You Know About Your ...overnment? (d)	C. E. Brown	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
...at Does Your Child Want to ...know? (d) (ill)		Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...at Every Woman Knows (d) ...½)	Gabrielle Forbush	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
...at Today Means To You (d-w)	Mary Blake	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...at's Behind Your Stock (d)	Staff	Cambridge Associates
...at's In a Name (d) (¼)	Leslie Gray	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
...at's It All About (d)	Paul Allen	Graphic Syndicate
...at's What (d) (1/3)	Helen Decie	Ledger Syndicate
...en I First Met (d)	Wm. Tilden 2nd	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...ere Are They Now (3-w) (½)	Joseph Kaye	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
...o—Why—What—When—Where ...d) (1/6)	W. N. Taft	Ledger Syndicate
...y the Weather (d) (1/6)	Dr. Charles F. Brooks	Science Service
...ide's Letters to Bernhardt (w) ...fp)		Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
...ll Rogers Articles (ill) (w)	Will Rogers	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
...llie Willis (d) (1)	Robert Quillen	Publishers Syndicate
...lson, Woodrow (ill)	William Allen White	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...nning the Game (d)	James Hay, Jr.	Current News Features, Inc.
...t Bits (w)	George Halasz	Continental Features
...man of It, The (5tw) (1)	M. M. Marshall	New York World Syndicate
...man's Editorial (d) (½)	Cynthia Gray	NEA Service, Inc.
...man's Page (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
...men's Page Articles	Edith Johnson	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
...men's Page-Domestic Science ...3w) (½)	Hannah Wing	International Feature Service, Inc.
...man's Page-"Economy Kinks" ...3w) (¼)	L. B. Robbins	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
...man's Page Feature (w) (fp)	Kathleen Norris	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...man's Page Feature (d-w)	Mabel Grace	Arco Newspaper Feature and Fiction Service
...men's Page-Home Dress Making ...3w) (½)	Mildred Ash	International Feature Service, Inc.
...men's Page "Our Common Road" ...d) (¼)	Agnes Edwards	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
...man's Serial (d) (1)	Mildred Barbour	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
...man's Special Page (w)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
...men, Careers for (d) (¾)	Business Women	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau

(Continued on page 50)

I am pleased to announce the following additions to the personnel of our organization;

VERNE PRIDDY
formerly of N. W. Ayer & Son
and
The Butterick Publishing Company

STEPHEN BOURNE
formerly of the Brandes Products Corp.
and
Thomas F. Logan, Inc.

MR. PRIDDY AND MR. BOURNE will be associated with the staff of our New York Office

H. WINTHROP TAYLOR
formerly with the Condé Nast Publications
and
The New York American

MR. TAYLOR will be associated with our Boston Office

FRED H. SALSMAN
formerly of the National Advertising Dept. of the Hearst Publications

JOHN H. POUGHER
formerly of Robert E. Ward,
Publishers Representatives

MR. SALSMAN AND MR. POUGHER will have their headquarters in our Chicago Office

PAUL V. HANSON
formerly Associate Manager of our Boston Office will, henceforth, be associated with the staff of our New York Office

Paul Block

NEW YORK CHICAGO BOSTON DETROIT PHILADELPHIA

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

(Continued from page 49)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Women, Chats To (d-w)	Doris Blake	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Women, Famous and Otherwise (w)	Martha Coman	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Women, Notes of Interest to (w) (½)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
Women's Editorials (d) (1)	Sophie Irene Loeb	Editor's Feature Service-Johnson Features, Inc.
Word of Comfort, A	F. G. Budlong	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Words of Wise Men (d)		Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
World on Broadway, The (w)	George Halasz	Continental Features
World Peace (w)	Eight Leaders of World Thought	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Worst Story I Have Heard Today, The (ill) (d)	Will Rogers	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Y

Ye Towne Gossip (d) (⅛)	K. C. Beaton	International Feature Service, Inc.
Yes or No (d) (¼)		King Features Syndicate, Inc.
You Said It, Marcelline (d) (¼)	Marceline D'Alroy	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Your Baby and Mine (d) (¼)	Myrtle Meyer Eldred	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Your Boy and Your Girl (d)	Dr. Arthur Dean	National Newspaper Service
Your Birthday (d)	Stella	Graphic Syndicate
Your Broadway and Mine (d)	Walter Winchell	Graphic Syndicate
Your Beauty (3tw) (¾)	Mme. Jeritza	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Your Business (d) (1)	A. W. Shaw Company	Associated Editors, Inc.
Your Child and You (d) (¼)	Elizabeth West	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Your Children (d)	M. Watson Kamm	National Newspaper Service
Your Folks and Mine (d)	Claud Callan	George Matthew Adams Service
Your Health (d) (¼)	Dr. Woods Hutchinson	Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau
Your Lucky Hour (d) (ill)	"The Veiled Priestess"	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Your Marriage Problems (d)	Patricial Lee	Graphic Syndicate
Your Marriage Problem (w)	Fifteen Women of International Fame	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Your Problems and Theirs (d) (¼)	Frank Wright	C. C. Powell Newspaper Features

Z

Zenith Short Fiction (w) (fp)		Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Zoe Beckley's Corner (d) (½)	Zoe Beckley	Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.

NEWSPAPER ART

(Cartoons, Comic Strips, Magazine Covers and Sketches)

A

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Abie the Agent (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Harry Hershfield	International Feature Service, Inc.
Adventures of Mr. A. Worm (w) (2)	Charles Sarka	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Amateur Etiquette (d) (1)	Dick Calkins	National Newspaper Service
"Ambitious Ambrose" (d) (5-6)	Oscar Hitt	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
And He Did (d) (1)	Various	Keystone Feature Syndicate
Antics of Arabella (d) (5)	L. M. Bull	Graphic Syndicate
Around the Dial (radio) (d) (1)		Audio Service
Art Masterpieces (w) (3)		Publishers Syndicate
Assorted Nuts (d) (1)	Ray Hoppman	Columbia Newspaper Service
Auto Sense (w) (5-6)	Jack Williamson	Associated Editors, Inc.

B

Barney Google (d-w) (6-7) (fp) (c)	Billy De Beck	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Believe It or Not (d) (3)	Robert L. Ripley	Associated Newspapers
Betty (w) (fp) (c)	Voight	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Boob McNutt (w) (fp) (o)	R. L. Goldberg	International Feature Service
Boots and Her Buddies (d) (6)	Martin	NEA Service, Inc.
Bound to Win (d) (6)	Edwin Alger, George Storm	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Boy Friend, The (d) (1)	Marjorie Henderson	Ledger Syndicate
Boys' and Girls' Page (w) (fp)	W. Boyce Morgan	Associated Editors, Inc.
Bringing Up Bill (d) (6)	Jack Farr	Columbia Newspaper Service
Bringing Up Father (d-w) (6-7) (fp) (c)	George McManus	International Feature Service
Brothers-In-Law (d) (6)	Jacquin	Premier Syndicate, Inc.
Bughouse Fables (d) (2)	Unsigned	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Bungle Family (d-w) (6) (fp)	H. J. Tuthill	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Butter & Eggs (d) (3)	Norcross	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.

C

Campus Cowboys (d) (6)	Dow Walling	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Cap Stubbs (d) (6)	Edwina	George Matthew Adams Service
Captain and the Kids (w) (fp) (c)	R. Dirks	New York World Syndicate
Cars & Stars (w) (3)	Ray McNamara	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Cartoons (Automobile) (w) (3)	Pete Keenan	International Syndicate
Cartoons, Human Interest (d) (5)	Fay King	International Feature Service, Inc.
Cartoons, Romantic (3w) (3-7)	Nell Brinkley	International Feature Service, Inc.
Cartoons, Topical (w) (fp)	Joseph McGurk	International Feature Service, Inc.
Cartoon (News) (d) (3)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Cartoon, Sport (d) (3)	Joe Archibald	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Cartoons (h-i) (d) (3)	Ripley, Fields, Scar Terry, Batchelor, Sid Greene	Associated Newspapers
Cartoons (All Year Sports) (d) (2)	Staff	George Matthew Adams Service
Cartoons (d) (2-3)	Bruce Bairnsfather	Ledger Syndicate
Cartoons (h-i) (d) (4)	Clare Briggs	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Cartoons (d) (3)	J. N. Darling	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Cartoon (edtl.) (d) (3)	Jess Cargill	Central Press Association
Cartoons (d-w)	John T. McCutcheon	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Cartoons (h-i) (3)	Ketten	New York World Syndicate
Cartoons (nameless) (w) (2-3)	Ed LeCocq	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Cartoons (news) (d) (3)	Ed LeCocq	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Cartoons (news) (d) (3)	W. C. Morris	George Matthew Adams Service
Cartoon (political) (d) (3)	Cassell	New York World Syndicate
Cartoon (political) (d) (3)	Rollin Kirby	New York World Syndicate
Cartoons (political) (d-w)	Carey Orr	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Cartoon (political) (d) (3)	Satterfield	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Cartoon (political) (d) (3)	Thiele	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Cartoon (Sports) (d)	Knickerbocker	NEA Service, Inc.
Cartoon (Woman's Page) (3-w) (4)	Ethel Hays	NEA Service, Inc.
Cartoons (d) (3)	Albert T. Reid	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Cartoons (romantic) (3-w) (3)	Juanita Hamel	Newspaper Feature Service
Cartoons (sports) (d)	Robert L. Ripley	Associated Newspapers
Cartoons (d) (3)	C. H. Sykes	Ledger Syndicate
Cartoons (d) (3)	H. T. Webster	New York World Syndicate
Cartoons (h-i) (d-w)	Gaar Williams	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Cartoons (d) (h-i) (3)	Gluyas Williams	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Cat Tales (d) (4)	Pusey	United Feature Syndicate
Champions Past & Present (3-w) (2)	Joe Archibald	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Character Sketches (w) (hp)	Russell	World Color Printing Company
"Charley the Chump" (d) (5-6)	Jim Navoni	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Children's Story Cartoon) (d) (6)	A. W. S.	Keystone Feature Syndicate
Cicero Sapp (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Fred Locher	New York World Syndicate
Comic Page (w) (fp) (c)	H. T. Webster	New York World Syndicate
Clarence (w) (fp) (c)	Cady	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Craig Kennedy (d) (6)	Arthur B. Reeve	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

D

Daffy Demonstrations (d) (2)	Ray Rohn	Ledger Syndicate
Dan Smith (w) (fp) (c)	Dan Smith	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Danny Dingle (d) (5)	Dib	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Darius Dubb (d) (6)	Doylie	Keystone Feature Syndicate
Detective Strip (d) (6)	Arthur B. Reeve	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Dicky Dippy's Diary (d) (5)	Sinnott	Associated Newspapers
Dickey's Dogs (w) (3)	Robert L. Dickey	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Discontinued Stories (d) (2)	Dow Walling	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Doodlebugs (w) (5)	Claude Shafer	George Matthew Adams Service
Dot Puzzle (d) (7)	Cobb Shinn	World Color Printing Company
Down the Road (w) (3-4)	Frank Beck	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
"Duckville Doings" (d) (5-6)	Bill Bly	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Duffs (d) (5-6)	Batsford	United Feature Syndicate
Dumb Bells (d) (1)	"Gar"	Ledger Syndicate
Dumb Dora (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Chic Young	Premier Syndicate, Inc.

E

Eddie's Friends (d) (3)	Unsigned	International Feature Service
Ella Cinders (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Bill Conselman, Charlie Plumb	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Elmer (w) (fp) (c)	A. G. Fera	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc
Embarrassing Moments (d) (2)	Unsigned	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Etta Kett (d) (6)	Paul Robinson	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Everett True (d) (2)	Condo	NEA Service, Inc.
Eve's Epigrams (d) (1)	Agnes Huck	Ledger Syndicate
Everyday Movies (d) (3)	Wortman	New York World Syndicate

F

Famous Fans (d) (3)	Hendrix	Columbia Newspaper Service
Famous Short Story Series (d) (5-6)	Nicholas Afonsky	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Felix (w) (fp) (c)	Pat Sullivan	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Feminisms and Fashions (3-w) (fp) (c)	Annette Bradshaw	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc
Fifty Famous Monuments (w) (4)	Hendrik Van Loon	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Flapper Fanny (d) (1)	Ethel Hays	NEA Service, Inc.
Folding Fun (w) (3)	Honti	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Freckles & His Friends (d) (6) (w)	Blosser	NEA Service, Inc.
Freddie the Sheik (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Jack Callahan	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Fritzie Ritz (d) (6)	Ernie Bushmiller	New York World Syndicate

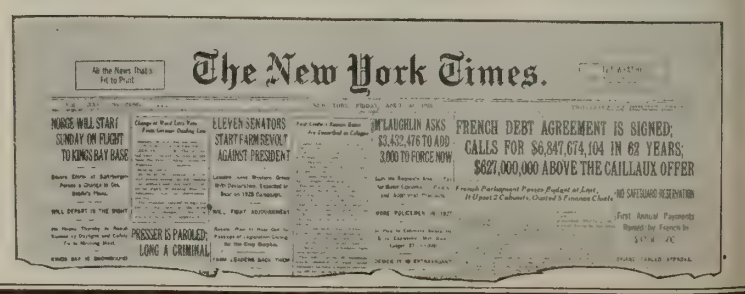
G

Gas Buggies, or Hem and Amy (d) (6)	Frank Beck	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Gasoline Alley (d-w) (c) (6) (fp)	Frank King	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (d) (16)	Anita Loos	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Geography at a Glance (3-w) (1-2)	E. C. Countryman	Putnam Syndicate
Girligags (d) (2)	C. R. Gettler	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Girliettes (d) (2)	Roy Grove	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Goldberg Comic (d) (6)	Rube Goldberg	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Good Scout Andy (d) (6)	Booth	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate,
Goofy Golf (d) (1)	H. C. Weagand	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Goo-Gags (d) (1)	Pat Pending	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Great Little Lovers (w) (4)	Grace G. Drayton	D. P. Syndicate
Gross Exaggerations (d) (6)	Milt Gross	New York World Syndicate
Grouches (d) (3)	Hendrix	Columbia Newspaper Service
Gus and Gussie (d) (6)	Jack Lait	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Gumps (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Sidney Smith	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate

H

Hairbreadth Harry (d-w) (6) (fp)	Charles W. Kahles	Ledger Syndicate
Hambone's Meditations (d) (1)	J. P. Alley	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Hank & Pete (d) (6)	Ray Hoppman	Columbia Newspaper Service
Happy Hunch (d) (5)	H. L. Kruckman	Graphic Syndicate
Harold Teen (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Carl Ed	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Helpful Henry (d) (2-6)	Paul Arnot	International Feature Service
Hen & Em (d) (2)		Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Highlights of History (d) (6)	J. Carroll Mansfield	Ledger Syndicate
Hi-way Henry (d) (2)	Oscar Hitt	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
How Do They Do It (d) (6)	Paul Arnot	International Feature Service

I



Illustrated Jokes (d) (1)		Associated Newspapers
Illustrated Jokes (d) (1)	Various	Keystone Feature Syndicate
Indoor Sports (d) (4)	"Tad" T. A. Dorgan	International Feature Service
In Rabbitboro (d) (6)	Albertine Randall	George Matthew Adams Service

(Continued on page 51)

No Standardized Intertype Has Ever Become Obsolete

50 INTERTYPES are being used by

NEWSPAPER ART

(Continued from page 50)

J

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
...po Jones (d) (6)	G. W. Walker	Columbia Newspaper Service
...r on the Job (d) (6)	Walter Hoban	International Feature Service
...nown Weekly (w) (2-4)	Barrie Payne and Check Stafford	Associated Editors, Inc.
...l Jingles (w) (7-8) (tab)	Dudley F. Fisher, Jr.	National News Service
...nets (d) (6)	Al Posen	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
...c (d) (6)	Vic	New York World Syndicate
...end Asbestos (d) (6)	Ken Kling	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...l Jingles (d) (4-6)	Graham Hunter	Ledger Syndicate
...l Jingles cover page (w) (fp-t)	Fisher	World Color Printing Company
...p Arden (d) (6)	Gladys L. Ripley	Editors Syndicate
...p (d) (6)	Hollman	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
...e Humans (d) (2-3)	Gene Carr	Ledger Syndicate
...e Kids (d-w) (3-5-6) (fp) (c)	Ad Carter	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
...e Like a Man (d) (2-6)	Jean Knott	International Feature Service

K

...enjammer Kids, The (w) (fp) (c)	H. H. Knerr	International Feature Service
...bble Kabaret (d) (2)	Harry Hershfield	International Feature Service
...ing Up with the Joneses (d) (6)	Pop Momand	Associated Newspapers
...r Kids (w) (7-8)	Lyman Young	National News Service
...l Kids (w) (fp) (c)	Lyman Young	World Color Printing Company
...cDuggan (d) (6)	Frank Best	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
...dle Kapers (d) (2)	Bill Bailey	Columbia Newspaper Service
...dies Can Do It (2)	Cobb Shinn	World Color Printing Company
...d in Our Block, The (d) (5)	Louis G. Ferstadt	Graphic Syndicate
...ty Kat (d-w) (2-6)	George Herriman	International Feature Service

L

...l Bountiful (w) (fp)	Gene Carr	Ledger Syndicate
...th and Learn (d) (5)	Kerry Conway	Graphic Syndicate
...e We Forget (d) (2)	Joe Archibald	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
...itthe Wedding Bells Ring Out (2)		King Features Syndicate, Inc.
...fs Little Comedies (w) (7-8-hp)	Frise	Star Newspaper Service
...ts Jimmy (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	James Swinnerton	International Feature Service
...ts Mary Mix-Up (d) (6)	Brinkerhoff	New York World Syndicate
...ts Napoleon (d) (6)	Bud Counihan	New York World Syndicate
...ts Nemo (w) (fp) (c)	Windsor McCay	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.
...le Otto" (d) (5-6)	H. T. Elmo	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
...y News Strip (d) (5)	Kolliker	Graphic Syndicate
...oy Land (d) (1)	Navoni	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
...e Leaves of History (d) (2-3)	P. E. Sumner	Premier Syndicate, Inc.

Mc

...ride, Clifford (w) (tab-hp)	Clifford McBride	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

M

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Magazine Cover (w) (7-8)	Various	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Magazine Cover (w)		Ledger Syndicate
Magazine Pages (w)		Ledger Syndicate
Magic Pictures (d) (1)		National Newspaper Service
Making the Grade (d) (3)	Kessler	Graphic Syndicate
Man in the Brown Derby (w) (fp) (c)	H. T. Webster	New York World Syndicate
Mazie the Model (d) (5-6)	Unsigned	King Feature Syndicate, Inc.
May and June (d) (5)	H. A. MacGill	Graphic Syndicate
Men Who Made the World (d) (5)	Dr. Eliot Shoring	National Newspaper Service
"Mike" O'Kay (d) (5-6)	Roberts	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Minute Movies (d) (6)	Ed Wheelan	George Matthew Adams Service
Miss Information (d) (1)	Hy Gage	Ledger Syndicate
Modish Mitzi (fashion) (d) (6)	Jay V. Jay	George Matthew Adams Service
Mom'n Pop (d) (6)	Taylor	NEA Service, Inc.
Moon Mullins (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Frank Willard	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
More Sports (w) (2)	H. F. Vorhees	National Newspaper Service
Mother Goose (w) (4)	Eleanor Schorer	Columbia Newspaper Service
Movie Strip (d) (7)	Link	World Color Printing Company
Mr. & Mrs. (w) (fp) (c)	Clare Briggs	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Mr. Dough and Mr. Dubb (w) (fp) (c)	F. B. Opper	International Feature Service
Muscle Movies (d) (1)	Staff	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Mutt and Jeff (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Bud Fisher	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Mystery & Adventure Series (Ivanhoe, etc.) (d) (5-6)	Nicholas Afonsky	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.

N

Nebbs, The (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Sol Hess	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Newlyweds, The (d) (6)	Charles McManus	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
News Comic (d) (3)	Haenigsen	New York World Syndicate
News Comic (d) (3)	Tom Johnstone	New York World Syndicate
Noozie (d) (1)	Hanny	International Syndicate

O

Oh! Margy (d-w) (1) (5-7)	John Held, Jr.	United Feature Syndicate
Old Home Town (d) (3)	Lee Stanley	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Oliver's Adventures (d) (6)	Gus Mager	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Once Upon a Time (d) (6)	W. J. Enright	Ledger Syndicate
Orphan Annie (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Harold Gray	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Otto Watt (d) (1)	Barrie Payne	Associated Editors, Inc.
Our Boarding House (d-w) (3) (fp)	Ahern	NEA Service, Inc.
Out Our Way (d-w) (6) (fp)	Williams	NEA Service, Inc.

P

"Pa and Abie" (d) (3)	Russell	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Papers Say, The (d) (2)	Knickerbocker	NEA Service, Inc.
Pa's Son-in-Law (d) (6)	Wellington	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Pa's Son-in-Law (w) (fp) (c)	Wellington	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Pa and Ma (d) (6)	H. F. Vorhees	National Newspaper Service
Pete (d) (5-6)	Charles Voight	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Peter Rabbit (w) (fp) (c)		New York Herald Tribune Syndicate

(Continued on page 52)

THE NEWFOUNDLAND POWER AND PAPER CO., Ltd.

MANUFACTURERS OF

Clean White Newsprint

PARTICULARLY ADAPTED TO THE NEED OF THOSE PUBLISHERS WHO TAKE PRIDE IN A WELL PRINTED NEWSPAPER

DAILY CAPACITY

CORNER BROOK · DEPENDABLE · NEWSPRINT

400 TONS

THE BOWATER PAPER CO., Inc.

342 Madison Avenue, New York

SOLE DISTRIBUTORS FOR THE U. S. A.

NEWSPAPER ART

(Continued from page 51)

AUTHOR	FEATURE	SYNDICATE
Pippin Junction (d) (3)	Russell Cole	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Polly and Her Pals (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Cliff Sterrett	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Problems of Conduct (d) (1)	Dick Calkins	National Newspaper Service
Puzzle Pictures (d) (1)		Associated Newspapers
Puzzlers (d) (3)	A. W. Nugent	New York World Syndicate

R

Radio Rhymes (d) (6)	Dan Napoli	Continental Features
Reg'lar Fellows (d) (6)	Gene Byrnes	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Reglar Fellers (w) (fp) (o)	Byrnes	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Roger Bean (d) (6)	Chic Jackson	George Matthew Adams Service
Romance of America (d)	Radner	NEA Service, Inc.
Russell Sketches (w) (7-8) (tab)	A. Russell	National News Service

S

$alesman $am (d-w) (6) (fp)	Swan	NEA Service, Inc.
School Days (d-w) (3) (fp) (o)	Clare V. Dwiggins	Ledger Syndicate
Science and Invention (w) (fp)	Various	Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Sketches	Lambert Guenther	T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate
Sketches from Life (d) (3)	Temple	World Color Printing Company
Sketches from Life (w) (7-8)	Temple	National News Service
"Skippy" (d) (6)	Percy Crosby	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Slim Jim (w) (fp) (c)	Armstrong	World Color Printing Company
Slim Jim (w) (7-8) (tab)	Armstrong	National News Service
S'Matter, Pop (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	C. M. Payne	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Smiles (d) (1)	Various	International Syndicate
Smitty (d-w) (6) (fp) (o)	Walter Berndt	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Syndicate
Snoodles (d) (6)	Cy Hungerford	George Matthew Adams Service
Snuggle Pups (d) (6)	Hop	National Newspaper Service
"Something New for Tots to Do" (d) (1)		Audio Service
So This Is Married Life (d) (6)	Zere	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Somebody's Stenog (d-w) (6) (fp)	A. E. Hayward	Ledger Syndicate
Sonny Sayings (d) (1)	Fanny V. Cory	Ledger Syndicate
Splinters (d) (1)	Jack Farr	Columbia Newspaper Service
Squirrel Food (d) (1)	Heck	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Striebel (d-w) (1-3-5)	John H. Striebel	Associated Editors, Inc.

T

Telling Tommy (d) (6)	Paul Pim	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Texas Slim (w) (fp) (c)	Ferd Johnson	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Syndicate
That Little Game (w) (3)	B. Link	National News Service
That's Not Half of It (d) (2)	Elmer Messner	Johnson Feature Service, Inc.
Then the Fun Began (d) (2)	Fred Faber	International Feature Service
They Never Do This But Once (d) (2)	Dunning	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Thimble Theatre (d-w) (2-6) (fp) (c)	E. C. Segar	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Tillie the Toiler (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	Russ Westover	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Toonerville Folks (d-w) (3) (fp) (c)	Fontaine Fox	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Toots and Casper (d-w) (6) (fp) (c)	J. E. Murphy	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Tree Top Stories (d) (1)	Florenz Clark	Associated Editors, Inc.
Tubby (d) (6)	Winner	United Feature Syndicate

U

Uncle Eph (d) (1)	Duncan	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Uncle Wiggily's Adventures (d-w) (4) (fp) (c)	Howard R. Garis and Lang Campbell	Ledger Syndicate
Us Boys (d) (6)	Tom McNamara	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Us Husbands (w) (fp) (o)	George Herriman	King Features Syndicate, Inc.

V

Vest Pocket Comment (d) (1)	Ed LeCocq	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Vignettes of Life (w) (fp-tab)	Frank Godwin	Ledger Syndicate
Vivian Vanity (d) (5-6)	Delevante	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Vivian Vanity Says (d) (1)	Delevante	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Voices of the Air (radio) (d) (1)		Audio Service

W

Washington Tubbs II (d) (6)	Crane	NEA Service, Inc.
Wedlocked (d) (5-6)	Leo O'Mealia	Associated Newspapers
When Great Were Young (d) (6)	Robinson & Foley	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Who's Zoo (d) (2)	Tom Dibble, Jr.	New York World Syndicate
Why Boys Leave Home (d) (2)	Davidson	Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Wishbone Man, The (d) (5)	Cornell Greening	Graphic Syndicate

SPORTING PAGE FEATURES

(Including Sports Page Cartoons and Art)

A

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
As Edgren Sees It (3-w) (ill)	Robert Edgren	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Asparagus Tipps (d) (1)	Gus Edson	Graphic Syndicate
Automobile Hints (3w) (2)	Albert L. Clough	International Syndicate
Automobile Letter (w) (ill) (¾)	H. L. Blanchard	International Feature Service

B

Baseball (d) (2)	George Moriarty	Johnson Feature Syndicate, Inc.
Baseball (Big League & Amateur) (2-w)	Babe Ruth	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Baseball News (w)	Frederick G. Lieb	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Basketball (d)	Noted Coaches	National Newspaper Service
Basketball, How to Play (series) (2)	The Captain	International Syndicate
Billy Evans Says (d) (1)	Billy Evans	NEA Service, Inc.
Boxing Anniversaries (d) (¾)	Staff	Devil Dog Syndicate
Boys' Club (d)	F. Turbyville	National Newspaper Service

C

Canadian Sports News (w)		Star Newspaper Service
Cartoons (d) (1)	Al Demaree	Publishers Syndicate
Cartoon (d)	Gus Edson	Graphic Syndicate
Cartoons (d) (2-5)	Will Gould	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Cartoons (d) (3)	Quin Hall	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Cartoon (with article) (w) (3)	Hype Igoe	N. Y. World Syndicate
Cartoons (d) (4)	Burris Jenkins	N. Y. World Syndicate
Checker Column (w) (½)	P. H. Ketchum	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate
Cartoons (d) (3-5)	Joseph McGurk	International Feature Service
Cartoons (d) (2-3-4)	Feg Murray	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Cartoons (with stories) (d) (3)	Robert L. Ripley	Associated Newspapers
Cartoons (3-w) (3)	John Sords	Central Press Association
Comment on Sports (w) (½)		Editor's Copy
Corbett Letter (w) (¾)	J. J. Corbett	King Features Syndicate, Inc.

D

Dempsey Article (w) (¾)	Jack Dempsey	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Down the Line (d) (1)	W. O. McGeehan	N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate
Doping the Major League Races (w)	Frederick G. Lieb	Christy Walsh Syndicate

F

Fight Game from the Inside, The (d)	Jack Kearns	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Football Articles (w)	Walter Eckersall	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Football Benefits (d) (½)	Football Stars	Devil Dog Syndicate
Football Plays (series) (2)	Various	International Syndicate
Football Reports (d)	Noted Coaches	National Newspaper Service
Funny Reviews of the Baseball News (w)	Nick Altrock	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Full Page Sports (d)	Staff	Johnson Feature Syndicate, Inc

G

Golf (d-w) (½)	Willie Macfarlane	D. P. Syndicate
Golf as Champions Play It (d)	Leading Players	Associated Editors, Inc.
Golf—Her Own Story (w) (½)	Glenna Collett	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Golf, Inside (d)	Chester Horton	National Newspaper Service
Golf Instruction (2-w) (ill)	H. B. Martin	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Golf Instruction (2-w)	Walter Hagen	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Golf Instruction (2-w)	Francis Ouimet	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Golf Instruction (w)	Gene Sarazen	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Golf Simplified (3w)	Charles Evans, Jr.	National Newspaper Service
Golf Strategies That Won (w)	"Bunker"	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
Golf—The Links Referee (d)	Innis Brown	Bell Syndicate, Inc.

H

Horse Race Service (d) (⅓)	J. B. Snodgrass	Post Syndicate

I

In Motordom (d-w)	J. L. Jenkins	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Inside Golf (d)	Chester Horton	National Newspaper Service

(Continued on page 53)

Whose copy of

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

is this that you are now reading? How long did you have to wait to get your turn at it? How much of it had been clipped before you got a chance at it? How much do you think you have missed by not getting it as

YOUR OWN PERSONAL COPY?

Did it ever occur to you that you can get a whale of a lot more out of Editor & Publisher by having a copy all to yourself?

Mr. Crombie Allen, Editor of The Daily Report, Ontario, California, has the right idea. Under date of May 15, 1926, he writes us:

"You know there is always a scrap around this shop over Editor & Publisher. When I get hold of it, I make sure of it by taking it home for reading dessert after I go to bed and switch on the headlight. Sometimes I miss something; sometimes the other fellows miss something; but invariably somebody misses something. So I have had in mind for some time to do the very thing you suggest—get an extra copy. Enclosed is my check."

WHY NOT DO LIKEWISE BY USING THIS COUPON?

EDITOR & PUBLISHER,
Times Bldg., New York, N. Y.

Send me EDITOR & PUBLISHER every week for a year, including with my subscription at no extra cost all the Special Numbers and the International Year Book and Space Buyers' Guide, as they are issued during the term of my subscription. Enclosed is my check for $.....
(Or, if you prefer, send me your bill.)

Name .....

Address .....

Paper (or Company) .....

Title or Position .....

Subscription Price, $4 per year
(In Canada, 50c extra; Foreign, $1 extra)

SPORTING PAGE FEATURES

(Continued from page 52)

L

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
ng Post, The (d) (1)	Walter Trumbull	Post Syndicate
ort Strip (d) (5) (photos)		Graphic Syndicate

M

Service—Sports (d)		Central Press Association
ar (d)	Barrie Payne	Associated Editors, Inc.
Sportograph (d) (¾)	Frank G. Menke	King Features Syndicate, Inc.

N

Picker, The (d) (⅛)	Joe Williams	NEA Service, Inc.

O

o Lore (d) (ill)	R. E. Jeanson	Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate

P

(art (w)	Chester Horton	National Newspaper Service
n: Races and Question Box
)	John J. McGraw	Christy Walsh Syndicate
ar Jinxes of Great Batters
)	J. P. Glass	Republic Syndicate, Inc.
n Proper Plays (3-w) (ill)	Eddie Collins	Bell Syndicate, Inc.

R

n Articles (w) (1)	O'Neil Sevier	King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Says (d) (1)	Damon Runyon	International Feature Service

S

Science (series) (2)	An English Captain	International Syndicate
t la Carte (d) (2)	Roy Grove	Johnson Feature Syndicate, Inc.
olumn (3-w) (ill)	Ed Hughes	Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Pictures (w) (fp)		Central Press Association
dio (d) (1/6)	W. N. Taft	Ledger Syndicate
dio (d) (1-stick)	W. N. Taft	Ledger Syndicate
g Goods, The (d-w)	Westbrook Pegler	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
ht	Grantland Rice	N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate
Done Brown (d)	Norman E. Brown	Central Press Association
Spoofs (cartoon-poem) (w)
)	Ed Anthony	Imperial News Service
Whirl (d) (2)	Ed Sullivan	Graphic Syndicate
Thru Sportville (d) (1)	W. F. Kirk	International Feature Service

T

i (2w)	Helen Wills	United Feature Syndicate
i (d-w) (½)	Suzanne Lenglen	D. P. Syndicate
i (2-w)	Helen Wills	United Feature Syndicate
i Dispatches (3-w) (½)	Vincent Richards	Putnam Syndicate
i for Beginners (d) (⅙)	Capt. R. Innes-Taylor	Star Newspaper Service
i How to Improve Your	Wm. T. Tilden	Ledger Syndicate
i Winning (d)	"Baseline"	National Newspaper Service
ittle Game (d) (3)	Link	World Color Printing Company
Sun and Rod (w)	Sandy Griswold	National Newspaper Service
n Years Ago (d) (1)	MacGreen	Graphic Syndicate

W

of the News (d)	Harvey Woodruff	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
e Tee (w) (½)	Grantland Rice	N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate
r' Out the Green (w) (1)	Walter Trumbull	Post Syndicate
t He Doing Now (3-w) (2)	Maxwell Cosmos	Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
t Is He Now (d)	William McNulty	Current News Features, Inc.
r We Were Young (d)	James M. Kahn	Graphic Syndicate
ng Tennis (d)	"Baseline"	National Newspaper Service
n.'s Athletics (d)	Mary I. Caldwell	National Newspaper Service

FEATURE AND PICTURE SYNDICATES OF THE UNITED STATES

Name	Address	Editor	Manager
r Matthew Adams Service	250 Park ave., New York	I. H. McHugh	Fitzhugh Green lad H. Allen Feature Service	440 Riverside Drive, New York	Harland H. Allen	Harland H. Allen
o Newspaper Feature and Fic- or Service	Irvington, N. J.	Glen Emmons	H. R. F. White
ated Editors, Inc	Rm. 930 440 S. Dearborn st., Chicago, Ill.	John H. Millar	John H. Millar
ated Newspapers	270 Madison av., New York		H. H. McClure
li Service	326 Madison st., Chicago, Ill.		V. E. Storey
News Service	255 Canal st., New York	E. J. Edmonds	G. G. Bain J. N. Wheeler, President
Syndicate, Inc	154 Nassau st., New York	Douglas Silver	H. M. Snevily
lidge Associates	174 Newbury st., Boston, Mass.	S. L. Sholley T. F. Tilton	Aaron M. Jones
tl Press Association	Cleveland, O.	H. A. McNitt	H. A. McNitt
Mitchell Chapple Associates,	952 Dorchester ave., Boston, Mass.	J. M. Chapple	C. F. Dillmann
co Journal of Commerce Syn- ice	12 E. Grand ave., Chicago, Ill.	Glenn Griswold	A. A. Judd
clo Tribune Newspapers	Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.		Arthur W. Crawford
l V. Collins Editorial Syndi- a	2016 Pierce Mill Rd., Washington, D. C.	P. V. Collins	P. V. Collins
ubia Newspaper Service	799 Broadway, New York	T. A. Webb	T. A. Webb
d Nast Syndicate	19 W. 44th st., New York		Howard Wheeler
ental Features	145 W. 45th st., New York		George Halasz
Grimes Publishing Co	521 Bond Bld., Washton, D. C.	W. H. Grimes	R. F. Couch

(Continued on page 54)

The

PREFERRED NEW YORK NEWSPAPER

THE AVERAGE net paid daily and Sunday circulation of The New York Times in New York City and suburbs (50 miles radius) for the six months ended March 31, 1926 was 296,605—larger than that of any other New York morning newspaper of standard size.

TOTAL average daily and Sunday circulation of The New York Times for the same period—392,695—also larger than the circulation of any other New York morning newspaper of standard size.

THE ATTENTION of the large number of families in which The New York Times is read—intelligent, substantial families whose standing, influence, buying power and discrimination are not excelled by the readers of any other newspaper—can be obtained only by announcements in The New York Times. The readers of The Times have the ability to appreciate and the money to buy. In practically all instances they are the men and women who lead in all worthy activities in their particular community.

FEATURE AND PICTURE SYNDICATES OF THE UNITED STATES

(Continued from page 53)

Name	Address	Editor	Manager
Current News Features, Inc.	(Edtl.) 63 Park Row, New York (Business) Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.	L. F. Parton	H. R. Baukhage
Daily Feature Newspaper Syndicate	145 W. 45th st., New York	H. C. Trowbridge	Florence Clark
Devil Dog Syndicate	154 Nassau st., New York	J. J. Stewart	T. W. Mack
D. P. Syndicate	Doubleday-Page Co., Garden City, L. I.	Ralph H. Graves	Ralph H. Graves
Editor's Copy	Orangeburg, S. C.	H. S. Sims	H. S. Sims
Editors' Feature Service	1819 Broadway, New York	Clark Kinnaird	W. H. Johnson
Editors' Syndicate	4 White st., New York	E. M. Maher	L. H. Berman
Electrocaster Service, Inc.	308 Baum Bld., Omaha, Neb.	C. F. Wadsworth	C. F. Hodge
Famous Features Syndicate	1819 Broadway, New York	S. S. McClure	Leslie Fullenwider
Gilliams Service	32 Union Sq. E., New York	T. F. Gilliams
Graphic Syndicate	25 City Hall Place, New York	Peter Finnegan	T. O. Davidson
Handy Filler Service	141 Drumm st., San Francisco
Haskin Service	Washington, D. C.		Frederic J. Haskin
Heinl Radio News Syndicate	Insurance Bld., Washington, D. C.	R. D. Heinl
Holmes Feature Service	135 Garrison av., Jersey City, N. J.	G. R. Holmes	M. E. Dollard
Houghton Mifflin Co., Syndicate Bureau	Park st., Boston, Mass.		W. B. Pratt
Imperial News Service	236 W. 55th st., New York	Bradley Kelly
International Feature Service	246 W. 59th st., New York	Rudolph Block Alexander Black	M. Koenigsberg
International Syndicate	1506-8 Guilford ave., Baltimore, Md.	R. M. Miller	Howard E. Miller
Johnson Features, Inc.	1819 Broadway, New York	Clark Kinnaird	W. H. Johnson
Keystone Feature Syndicate	512 Victory Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.	E. C. Cassard	A. S. Freed
Keystone View Co., Inc.	91 Seventh ave., New York
King Features Syndicate, Inc.	241 W. 58th st., New York	Alexander Black	M. Koenigsberg
Ledger Syndicate	Independence Square, Philadelphia, Pa.		John Elfreth Watkins
Life Syndicate	598 Madison av., New York	Robt. E. Sherwood	W. K. Ziegfeld
Sam Loyd Syndicate	246 Fulton st., Brooklyn, N. Y.	Sam Loyd
Eugene MacLean Newspaper Features	827 Folsom st., San Francisco, Cal.	Eugene MacLean	Harold Matson
McClure Newspaper Syndicate	373 Fourth ave., New York.		Irwin Barbour
McNaught Syndicate, Inc.	1475 Broadway, New York	C. B. Driscoll	V. V. McNitt
National Feature Service	4035 New Hampshire av., Washingt'n, D.C.	E. Parker
National News Service	1328 W. Lycoming st., Philadelphia, Pa.	S. A. Silberman	M. R. Jacobs
National Newspaper Service	326 Madison st., Chicago, Ill.	John F. Dille	L. V. Miller
NEA Service, Inc.	1200 W. 3 Third st., Cleveland, O.	J. W. Bean Herbert Walker	Fred S. Ferguson Winslow Abbey
Newspaper Feature Service	241 W. 58th st., New York	Alexander Black	M. Koenigsberg
New York Allied Press Bureau	1475 Broadway, New York	W. R. Auman	F. S. Beane
New York Herald Tribune Syndicate	225 W. 40th st., New York		Harry Staton
New York World Syndicate	63 Park Row, New York		F. B. Knapp
Post Syndicate	20 Vesey st., New York		J. E. Watkins
C. C. Powell Newspaper Features	141 Drumm st., San Francisco, Cal.		C. C. Powell
Premier Syndicate	241 W. 58th st., New York	Florence McIntyre
Publishers Financial Bureau	Babson Park, Mass.	C. F. Hayes, Jr.	E. Oakman Hood
Publishers Syndicate	30 North LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill.	Eugene P. Conley	Harold Anderson
Putnam Syndicate	2 W. 45th st., New York		G. T. Bye
Register and Tribune Syndicate	Des Moines, Ia.		H. P. Martin, Jr.
Republic Syndicate, Inc.	15 E. 26th st., New York		E. S. McClure
Science Service, Inc.	21st and B sts., N.W., Washington, D. C.	Watson Davis	Edwin E. Slosson
Service for Authors, Inc.	33 W. 42d st., New York	Lawton H. Ford
Star Adcraft Service	241 W. 58th st., New York	Harry S. Bressler	Harry S. Bressler
Star Newspaper Service	18 Kink st. W., Toronto, Canada		Kenneth McMillan
Stevenson Radio Syndicate	710—14th st. N. W., Washington, D. C.	Thomas Stevenson	W. W. Rapley
T-Bean Syndicate	299 Madison av., New York	Theodora Bean	Theodora Bean
Thompson Feature Service	132 W. 31st st., New York		A. L. Fowle
Ullman Feature Service	Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.	William Ullman	W. E. Schaff
United Feature Syndicate	63 Park Row, New York		Howard Wheeler
U. P. C. News Service, Inc.	243 W. 39th st., New York		John T. Flynn
Urbana Feature Service	Urbana, O.	Norman W. Ralston
Christy Walsh Syndicate	570 Seventh av., New York		J. A. Bihler
Washington Radio News Service	Washington, D. C.		Carl H. Butman
Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.	373 Fourth ave., New York		Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson
Western Newspaper Union	210 S. Desplaines st., Chicago, Ill.
World-Wide News Service	333 Washington st., Boston, Mass.		J. J. Bosdan
World Color Printing Company	701 Lucas ave., St. Louis, Mo.	R. Messing	R. S. Grable
Woman's Page Copy	Plymouth, Ind.	Florence Riddick
			Boys

TRADE PRESS PICTURE SYNDICATES AND NEWS SERVICES

King Editors Features	1170 Broadway, New York	A. Rowden King	A. Rowden Ki
Universal Trade Press Syndicate	522 Fifth ave., New York	T. A. Gallagher	A. P. Sachs

EDITORIAL RESEARCH

Editorial Research Reports	828—18th st. N. W., Washington, D. C.	Cleveland & Perkins B. P. Garnett, Richard Boeckel.

PHOTOGRAPHIC SERVICES

Acme Newspictures, Inc.	461 Eighth ave., New York	R. P. Dorman	R. P. Dorman
Ewing Galloway	15 E. 40th st., New York		Ewing Gallowa
International Newsreel	234 William st., New York	Vincent J. Palumbo. R. H. Gulick	R. Eugene Bo
Keystone View Company, Inc.	91 Seventh ave., New York		E. P. Van Lo
Henry Miller	Washington, D. C.		Henry Miller
Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc.	Tribune, Tower, Chicago, Ill. 25 Park Place, New York	A. A. Sorenson	H. B. Baker
Photo Topics, Inc.	265 W. 54th st., New York	Harold Stein	Harold Stein
Photograms News Photo Service	129 E. 27th st., New York	Alexander Starlight	P. Trenchard
Underwood & Underwood	242 W. 55th st., New York	George J. Kadel	George J. Ka
Wide World Photos, Inc.	Care: New York Times, New York	J. V. Dumont

NEWS SERVICES

Associated Press	383 Madison av., New York		Kent Cooper
Canadian Press, Ltd.	106 Bay st., Montreal, P. Q.		J. F. B. Live
Chicago Tribune Service	Tribune Building, Chicago, Ill.		Arthur W. Cr
Consolidated Press Association	Evening Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.	Horace Epes	H. R. Bauka
International News Service	63 Park Row, New York	George Shor	M. Koenigsbe
New York World News Service	63 Park Row, New York	R. E. Moyer	C. N. Snyder
United News Service	63 Park Row, New York	Ralph Turner	Karl A. Bick
United Press Associations	63 Park Row, New York	Robert Bender	Earl A. Bick
Universal Service	63 Park Row, New York	Chester Hope	M. Koenigsbe

(Continued on page 55)

I Get Circulation that Stick

It's old but true, that circulation is one of the easiest things to g and the hardest to hold.

Anybody and almost any method can get new business. Holding is another matter.

I get circulation that holds.

There is no mystery to my methods.

First I survey the papers I work for and recommend any chang that may be necessary in their contents to hold the new busine Then I get it.

I am a first class salesman myself and I have the most producti circulation organization in the country. My men are clean, resourc ful, intelligent; the kind who will be a credit to your paper.

Nothing really beats a good product and a clean, systematic canva

Let me help you make your paper better if it needs improving a let me get the circulation you want quietly, efficiently, and at low co

Write or wire for references and full details.

F. J. Marks Circulation Servic

2524 East 73d St., Cleveland, Ohio

Trade Mark FLEXIDEAL Reg. U S Pat. Off

THE IMPORTED DRY MAT OF SUPERIOR QUALITY

Write for Free Samples

FLEXIDEAL COMPANY, Inc.

15 WILLIAM STREET NEW YORK CITY

SYNDICATES SUPPLYING PHOTOGRAPHIC SERVICES

ewspictures.
ed Newspapers.
ws Service.
Daily News.
tal Features.
Galloway.
Features Syndicate, Inc.
Service.
Feature Service.
ional Newsreel, Inc.
ional Syndicate.
Features, Inc.
e View Company, Inc.
filler.
rk Herald Tribune Syndicate.
. Photos, Inc.
Service, Inc.
ood & Underwood.
Wide Photos, Inc.

DIPANIES PRINTING COLORED CTIONS FOR NEWSPAPERS

Times Publishing Company
nd Times Dispatch Publishing Company Newspaper Syndicate
i Agricultural Publishing Company
Color Printing Company

IRECTORY OF SYNDICATE WRITERS AND ARTISTS

A

Franklin P., New York World.
G. M., George Matthew Adams Service.
Edwin, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Mrs. Harland H., Harland H. Allen Feature Service.
Ida Bailey, New York World.
Paul, Graphic Syndicate.
J. P., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Mme., Science Service.
, Nick, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
on, John, Post Syndicate.
y, Ed., Imperial News Service.
song, World Color Printing Company.
Paul, International Feature Service, Inc.
Mildred, International Feature Service,
William L., Chicago Journal of Commerce.

B

k, N. P., International Feature Service,
, Roger W., Publishers Financial Bu-
"Bugs," International Feature Service,
Bill, Columbia Newspaper Service.
father, Bruce, McClure Newspaper Syndi-
W. S., International Syndicate.
er, W. J., U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
ir, Mildred, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
, John K., D. P. Syndicate.
Robert, New York World.
, Bruce, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
, Dr. James W., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
, Prof. S. G., Keystone Feature Syndi-n, Wanda, Newspaper Feature Service, line," National Newspaper Service.
lor, Associated Newspapers.
lor, Hazel Deyo, Ledger Syndicate.
rd, United Feature Syndicate.
, K. C., International Feature Service,
Frank, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
y, Zoe, Famous Features Syndicate. man, Mrs. Cornelius, Premier Syndicate.
George, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
y, William, Houghton Mifflin Syndicate eau.
nt, Marie, International Feature Service,
tt, Arnold, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
t, Walter, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate. am, George, George Matthew Adams Service.
Dr. Louis E., Premier Syndicate.
Winifred, Newspaper Feature Service,
Doris, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
John, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
hard, H. L., International Feature Service Inc.
, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Lucrezia, Newspaper Feature Service,
n, Gleb, Editors Feature Service.
J. C., King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Julia, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Florence Riddick, Woman's Page Copy.
ord, Ralph, Associated Editors, Inc.

Bradshaw, Annette, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Brady, Dr. William, National Newspaper Service.
Brainerd, Betty, Associated Newspapers.
Briggs, Clare, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Brinkerhoff, R. M., New York World.
Brinkley, Nell, International Feature Service, Inc.
Brisbane, Arthur, International Feature Service, Inc.
Brobeck, Florence, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Brookman, Laura Lou, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Brooks, Dr. Charles F., Science Service.
Broun, Heywood, New York World.
Brown, C. E., Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Brown, Innis, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Brown, Norman E., Central Press Association.
Bruce, H. Addington, Associated Newspapers.
Bulger, Bozeman, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Bull, L. M., Graphic Syndicate.
Bunn, Col. Henry W., Editors' Feature Service.
Burgess, Gelett, Chicago Tribune Newspaper Syndicate.
Burgess, Thornton, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Burgess, Thornton W., Associated Newspapers.
Burtis, Edith M., Ledger Syndicate.
Bushmiller, Ernie, New York World.
Butcher, Fanny, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Butler, Gen. Smedley D., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Byrnes, Gene, Bell Syndicate, Inc.

C

Cadman, Dr. S. Parkes, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Cady, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Calcaterra, Joseph, United Feature Syndicate.
Caldwell, Mary L., National Newspaper Service.
Calkins, Dick, National Newspaper Service.
Callahan, Jack, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Callan, Claude, George Matthew Adams Service.
Cameron, Ruth, George Matthew Adams Service.
Campbell, Lang, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Campbell, Walter S., Associated Editors, Inc.
Carfill, Jess, Central Press Association.
Carr, Gene, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Carroll, Raymond G., Ledger Syndicate.
Carter, Ad, King Features, Syndicate, Inc.
Cassell, J., New York World.
Chapman, Frank, International Syndicate.
Clark, Florenz, Associated Editors, Inc.
Clotilde, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Clough, Albert L., International Syndicate.
Cobb, Irvin S., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Cobb, Irvin, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Cohan, George M., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Coffman, Ramon, Publishers Syndicate.
Cole, Russell, Editors Feature Service.
Coles, Ross, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Collins, Eddie, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Collins, Paul V., Paul V. Collins Editorial Syndicate.
Collett, Glenna, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Coman, Martha, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
Conselman, Bill. Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Conway, Kerry, Graphic Syndicate.
Cook, Ted, International Feature Service, Inc.
Cooper, Courtney Ryley, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Copeland, Royal S., Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Corbett, J. J., King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Corey, Herbert, Associated Newspapers.
Cory, David, George Matthew Adams Service.
Cory, Fanny V., Ledger Syndicate.
Counihan, Bud, New York World.
Countryman, E. C., Putnam Syndicate.
Cousins, Wilfred S., King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Crane, Dr. Frank, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Crane, Dr. Frank, Associated Newspapers.
Crawford, William H., Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Crosby, Percy, Editors Feature Service.
Currier, Dr. A. F., Editors Feature Service.

D

Darling, J. N., N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
D'Alroy, Marceline, Premier Syndicate.
Davies, Florence, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Davis, Emily C., Science Service.
Davis, Watson, Science Service.
Dean, Dr. Arthur, National Newspaper Service.
De Beck, Billy, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
De Campi, Anti, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
dePeyster, Kathrine, Premier Syndicate.
Decie, Doris, Ledger Syndicate.
Demaree, Al, Publishers Syndicate.
Dempsey, Estelle Taylor, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Dempsey, Jack, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Dib, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Dibble, R. F., Continental Features.
Dibble, Jr., Tom, New York World.
Dickey, Robert L., Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Dimond, Bushnell, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Dirks, R., New York World.
Dix, Dorothy, Ledger Syndicate.
Donahey, W., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Donnelly, Antoinette, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Dorgan ("Tad") T. A., International Feature Service, Inc.
Doylie, Keystone Feature Syndicate.
Drayton, Grace G., D. P. Syndicate.
Duart, Malcolm, Eugene MacLean Newspaper Features.
DuPuy, William Atherton, Science Service.
Dwiggins, Clare V., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(Continued on page 56)

The big 5 of ILLINOIS

Mining — Industry — Commerce —

Illinois' business supremacy is based on these three factors and besides, is noted for its rich farms owned by up-to-date farmers who buy the best of everything.

When you advertise to the buyers of Illinois, you have 6268 retail outlets to distribute your products. All the more reason why you should advertise in Illinois through the daily papers.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	18,694	.06	.06
†Chicago Herald & Examiner.....(M)	385,276	.55	.55
†Chicago Herald & Examiner.....(S)	1,153,360	1.10	1.10
†Chicago Daily Journal.....(E)	123,771	.26	.24
Evanston News Index.....(E)	6,729	.04	.04
Freeport Journal-Standard .....(E)	9,613	.045	.045
Joliet Herald News.....(E)	19,591	.06	.06
††Mattoon Journal Gazette.....(E)	5,712	.03	.03
Moline Dispatch .....(E)	11,680	.045	.045
Monmouth Daily Review Atlas...(E)	5,416	.035	.035
Peoria Star .....(S) 22,497..(E)	29,874	.075	.06
Rock Island Argus.....(E)	11,248	.045	.045
Waukegan Daily Sun.....(E)	5,213	.03	.03

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926
†Government Statement, March 31, 1926
††Government Statement, September 30, 1925

DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE WRITERS AND ARTISTS

(Continued from page 55)

E

Eckersall, Walter, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Ed. Carl, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Eddington, Jane, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Edgren, Robert, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Edson, Gus, Graphic Syndicate.
Edwards, Agnes, Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau.
Edwina, George Matthew Adams Service.
Eldred, Myrtle Myer, Des Moines Register Tribune Syndicate.
Ellis, Frank, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Ellis, Dr. William T., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Elliston, George, Associated Newspapers.
Elmer, A. D., Cambridge Associates.
Emery, Helen M., Associated Newspapers.
Emmons, Glen, Arco Service.
Enright, W. J., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Evans, Delight, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
Evans, Maude Swalm, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Evans, Charles S., Jr., National Newspaper Service.
Evans, Dr. W. A., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.

F

Faber, Fred, International Feature Service, Inc.
Fairfax, Beatrice, International Feature Service, Inc.
Farr, Jack, Columbia Newspaper Service.
Fera, A. G., Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Ferguson, Thelma L., Famous Features Syndicate.
Ferguson, Wynne, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Ferstadt, Louis G., Graphic Syndicate.
Fewell, Alice U., International Syndicate.
Fields, Associated Newspapers.
Fishbein, Dr. Morris, Current News Features, Inc.
Fisher, Bud, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Fisher, Dudley F., National News Service.
Fisher, World Color Printing Company.
Flynn, John T., U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Forbes, B. C., Fremier Syndicate.
Forbes, Edna Kent, George Matthew Adams Service.
Fowler, George E., George Matthew Adams Service
Fox, Fontaine, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Frances, Henrique R., Arco Service.
Frank, Glenn, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Frise, Star Newspaper Service.
Fry, C. V., Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Fulkerson, Roe, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

G

Gage, Hy., Ledger Syndicate.
"Gar," Ledger Syndicate.
Galli-Curci, Amelita, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Gallico, A. T., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Gardner, Susan, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Garis, Howard R., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Garrett, Paul Willard, Post Syndicate.
Garrison, Adele, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Geller, J. J., N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
George, David Lloyd, United Feature Syndicate.
Gettier, C. R., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Gibbs, Philip, United Feature Syndicate.
Gibbs, Sir Philip, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Gibbs, Winifred S., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Gibson, Ida McGlone, National Newspaper Service.
Gibson, Walter B., Ledger Syndicate.
Gilbert, Clinton W., Ledger Syndicate.
Gillilan, Strictland, International Syndicate.
Glass, Dudley, Premier Syndicate.
Glass, Montague, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Goldberg, R. L., International Feature Service, Inc.
Goldberg, Rube, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Godwin, Frank, Ledger Syndicate.
Goodman, Julia Cody, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Gould, Will, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Grace, Mabel, Arco Service.
Grant, Jane, D. P. Syndicate.
Gray, Gilda, Imperial News Service.
Gray, Harold, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Gray, Laurel, National Newspaper Service.
Green, Mac, Graphic Syndicate.
Greene, Sid, Associated Newspapers.
Greening, Cornell, Graphic Syndicate.
Greer, Blanche, Ledger Syndicate.
Gregory, Rev. Thomas B., Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Grin, Gregory, Ledger Syndicate.
Griswold, Glenn, Chicago Journal of Commerce.
Griswold, Sandy, National Newspaper Service.
Gross, Milt, New York World.
Grove, Roy, Editors Feature Service.
Guenther, Lambert, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
Gunn, Eleanor, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.

H

Haenigsen, New York World.
Hagen, Walter, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Halasz, George, Continental Features.
Hall, Quinn, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Hamel, Juanita, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Hammond Percy, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Hanny, International Syndicate.
Hart, Martha, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Hartt, Helen Harrington, Famous Features Syndicate.
Haskin, Frederic J., Frederic J. Haskin.
Hatton, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold, National Newspaper Service.
Hay, Jr., James, Current News Features, Inc.
Hayward, A. E., Ledger Syndicate.
Heinl, Robert D., Heinl Radio News Syndicate.
Held, Jr., John, United Feature Syndicate.
Hellinger, Mark, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Helm, Jr., William P., Current News Features, Inc.
Henderson, Dr. J. Lowell, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Henderson, Marjorie, Ledger Syndicate.
Hendrix, Columbia Newspaper Service.
Herold, Don, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Herriman, George, International Feature Service, Inc.
Herring, Hubert C., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Herrmann, W. J., Ledger Syndicate.
Hershfield, Harry, International Feature Service, Inc.
Hess, Scl, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Hoban, Walter, International Feature Service, Inc.
Holbrook, Christine, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Hollman, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Holman, H. G., Star Newspaper Service.
Honti, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
"Hop," National Newspaper Service.
Hoppman, Ray, Columbia Newspaper Service.
Horton, Chester, National Newspaper Service.
Houdini, New York World.
Howard, Burton, Editors Syndicate.
Howe, Ed., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Hoyt, Harlowe R., Publishers Syndicate.
Hubbard, Kin, National Newspaper Service.
Hucke, Agnes, Ledger Syndicate.
Hughes, Ed, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Hughes, Rupert, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Hulbert, Mary Allen, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Hungerford, Cy, George Matthew Adams Service.
Hunter, Graham, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Hurst, Fannie, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Hutchinson, Dr. Woods, Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau.

I

Igoe, Hype, New York World.
Innes-Taylor, Capt. R., Star Newspaper Service.
Irwin, Inez Haynes, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

J

Jackson, Chic, George Matthew Adams Service.
Jacquin, Premier Syndicate.
James, Winifred, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
Jay, Jay V., George Matthew Adams Service.
Jeanson, R. E., Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Jenkins, Burris, New York World.
Jenkins, J. L., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Jordan, Charlotte Brewster, Ledger Syndicate.
Johnson, Ferd, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Johnson, Gaylord, Science Service.
Johnstone, W., New York World.
Judell, M. F., George Matthew Adams Service.

K

Kahn, James M., Graphic Syndicate.
Kamm, M. Watson, National Newspaper Service.
Kean, Kay, Ledger Syndicate.
Kearns, Jack, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Keenan, Pete, International Syndicate.
Kelleher, Agnes, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Keller, Helen, Famous Features Syndicate.
Kelly, Bradley, Imperial News Service.
Kelly, Fred, Editors Feature Service.
Kemble, Genevieve, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Kenny, Kathryn, Editors Feature Service.
Kessler, Graphic Syndicate.
Ketchum, P. H., Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Ketten, Maurice, New York World.
Kiddy, Arthur W., Post Syndicate.
Kift, Jane Leslie, Ledger Syndicate.
Killick, Arthur F., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
King, Fay, International Feature Service, Inc.
King, Frank, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
King, Nosmo, Arco Service.
Kirby, Rollin, New York World.
Kirk, W. F., International Feature Service, Inc.
Kirkman, Laura, George Matthew Adams Service.
Kiser, S. E., International Feature Service, Inc.
Kitchen, Karl K., New York World.
Kling, Ken, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Knerr, H. H., International Feature Service, Inc.
Knott, Jean, International Feature Service, Inc.
Kohles, Charles W., Ledger Syndicate.
Kolliker, Graphic Syndicate.
Kruckman, H. L., Graphic Syndicate.

L

Lait, Jack, International Feature Service, Inc.
Lardner, Ring, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Laurie, Annie, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Leacock, Stephen, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Leeds, Lois, Ledger Syndicate.
LeCocq, Ed, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Lecraw, R. H., Thompson Feature Service.
Lee, Patricia, Graphic Syndicate.
Lenglen, Suzanne, D. P. Syndicate.
Lenz, Sidney, Premier Syndicate.
Lessing, Bruno, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Lewis, Judd Mortimer, George Matthew Adams Service.
Lieb, Frederick G., Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Link, World Color Printing Company.
Link, B., National News Service.
Lisle, Anne, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Little, Richard Henry, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Livingston, John, Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau.
Locher, Fred, New York World.
Loderwich, Mildred, New York World.
Loeb, Sophie Irene, Editors Feature Service.
Lofting, Hugh, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Loos, Anita, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Lorraine, Lucille, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Lowell, Lucy, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Lowe, Corinne, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Lowndes, Elizabeth, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
Lynch, James M., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

M

Macfarlane, Willie, D. P. Syndicate.
McBride, Clifford, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
McCay, Winsor, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
McCann, Rebecca, George Matthew Adams Service.
McClure, S. S., Famous Features Syndicate.
McCutcheon, John T., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
McGeehan, W. O., N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
McGill, H. A., Graphic Syndicate.
McGraw, John J., Christy Walsh Syndicate.
McGurk, Joseph, International Feature Service, Inc.
McIntyre, O. O., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
McKay, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh, Ledger Syndicate.
McManus, Charles, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
McManus, George, International Feature Service, Inc.
McNamara, Ray, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
McNamara, Tom, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
McNulty, William, Current News Features, Inc.
Mager, Gus, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Malloch, Douglas, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Mann, Hatton, Post Syndicate.
Manning, Temple, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Mansfield, J. Carroll, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Mantle, Burns, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Marden, Philip S., Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau.
"Margette," National Newspaper Service.
Marie, Queen of Roumania, Famous Features Syndicate.
Marshall, M. M., New York World.
Marshall, Mary, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Martin, H. B., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Mason, Walt, George Matthew Adams Service.
Masson, Tom, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate.
Matthews, L. Lamar, International [illegible] Service, Inc.
Matthews, L. Lamar, King Features Syn[illegible] Inc.
Maxwell, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, [illegible]
Medbury, J. P., King Features Syndicat[illegible]
Mencken, H. L., Chicago Tribune New[illegible] Syndicate.
Menke, Frank G., King Features Syn[illegible] Inc.
Messner, Elmer, Editors Feature Servic[illegible]
Metcalf, A. R., Chicago Tribune New[illegible] Syndicate.
Michaelis, Aline, International Feature S[illegible] Inc.
Miles, John P., Cosmos Newspaper Syn[illegible] Inc.
Milgrim, Sally, Editors Feature Service
Millar, Helen J., Associated Editors, In[illegible]
Milne, A. A., Metropolitan Newspaper S[illegible]
Mitchell, Dr. Winston, National New[illegible] Service.
Momand, Pop, Associated Newspapers.
Montagnes, J., Star Newspaper Service.
Montague, James J., Bell Syndicate, In[illegible]
Moore, Sara, Chicago Tribune Newspaper[illegible] dicate.
Morgan, W. Boyce, Associated Editors, [illegible]
Morris, W. C., George Matthew Adams S[illegible]
Moulton, Roy K., International Features [illegible]ice, Inc.
Moriarty, George, Editors Feature Servi[illegible]
Mundy, J. J., International Feature S[illegible] Inc.
Murphy, J. E., King Features Syndicate, [illegible]
Murray, Feg, Metropolitan Newspaper S[illegible]

N

Napoli, Dan, Continental Features.
Nast, Conde, United Feature Syndicate.
Nathan, George Jean, Bell Syndicate, In[illegible]
Nicholson, W. Curtis, Associated Newspa[illegible]
Newman, Oliver P., Current News Fe[illegible] Inc.
Newton, Jean, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Norton, Henry Kittredge, N. Y. Herald T[illegible] Syndicate.
Norton, Jeanette Young, Newspaper [illegible] Service, Inc.
Nowlan, Philip, King Features Syndicate
Nugent, A. W., New York World.

O

O'Donnell, Jack, George Matthew Adams [illegible]ice.
O'Hara, Neal, New York World.
Ohl, Molly C., Cosmos Newspaper Syn[illegible] Inc.
O'Melia, Leo, Associated Newspapers.
Opper, F. B., International Feature S[illegible] Inc.
Orr, Carey, Chicago Tribune Newspaper [illegible]dicate.
Ouimet, Francis, Bell Syndicate, Inc.

P

Pape, Lee, George Matthew Adams Servi[illegible]
Patri, Angelo, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Patterson, Ada, International Feature S[illegible] Inc.
Payne, Barrie, Associated Editors, Inc.
Payne, C. M., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Pearson, Drew, U. P. C. News Service,
Pegler, Westbrook, Chicago Tribune New[illegible] Syndicate.
Pending, Pat, King Features Syndicate,
Perkins, Lucy Fitch, Houghton Mifflin [illegible]cate Bureau.
Peters, Dr. Lulu Hunt, George Matthew [illegible] Service.
Phelps, Jane, George Matthew Adams S[illegible]
Phillips, H. I., Associated Newspapers.
Plumb, Charles, Metropolitan Newspape[illegible]vice.
Pilgrim, John, Associated Newspapers.
Pim, Paul, George Matthew Adams Ser[illegible]
Pim, Paul, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicat[illegible]
Pollock, Channing, Continental Features.
Posen, Al, Chicago Tribune Newspapers [illegible]cate.

(Continued on page 57)

ATTENTION PUBLISHERS

PRESS FOR SALE

1 STRAIGHTLINE QUADRUPLE WEB PATENT NEWSPAPER PERFECTING PRESS; serial No. 332; with extra color cylinder and 2 extra color fountains, 9 type and 8 impression cylinders, 32-page capacity, 36 inch web, half page folder, Simplex drive self contained electric paper hoist; 4 to 32 pages, 8 cols., 12 ems, 22¼ inch column length. 1 Allis Chalmers D. C. motor, serial No. 2K3797-2, 30 H.P., 220 V., 115 Amps., 575 to 880 R.P.M.; with Sprague electric controller; push button stations; paper hoist motor, serial No. 205063E; manufactured by Goss Printing Press Co., Chicago, Illinois.

Installation of larger press necessitates selling this press. Address Harvey Habeck, Sentinel Company, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE WRITERS AND ARTISTS

(Continued from page 56)

dy, W. W., International Syndicate.
iam, C. C., C. C. Powell Newspaper Features.
y, United Feature Syndicate.

Q

len, Robert, Publishers Syndicate.
Vive, Mme., King Features Syndicate, c.

R

ton, Norman W., Urbana Feature Service.
dall, Albertine, George Matthew Adams Service.
d-McNally, T. H., Star Newspaper Service.
oe, Burton, Editors Feature Service.
son, Jonathan A., Jr., Putnam Syndicate.
d, Bert, Star Newspaper Service.
d, Dr. Charles A. L., King Features Syndicate, Inc.
d, Albert T., Bell Syndicate, Inc.
, Grantland, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
hards, Vincent, Putnam Syndicate.
gway, Frank, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
ley, Gladys L., Editors Syndicate.
ley, Robert L., Associated Newspapers.
bins, L. B., Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau.
inson, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
inson, Elsie, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
inson, Elsie, Premier Syndicate.
inson, Grace, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
inson, Paul, Editors Feature Service.
ers, Will, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
ie, Alice, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
in, Ray, Ledger Syndicate.
vland, Helen, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
enstein, Mme. Helena, Editors Feature Service.
incam, Marion, George Matthew Adams Service.
yon, Damon, International Feature Service, Inc.
ssell, A., National News Service.
ssell, F. C., Ullman Feature Service.
ssell, World Color Printing Company.
th, Babe, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
an, Marion, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.

S

naroff, Olga, Post Syndicate.
nuels, Prof. G., Keystone Feature Syndicate.
azen, Gene, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
ka, Charles, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate. terfield, Editors Feature Service.
ir, Associated Newspapers.
haeffer, Rosalind, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
horer, Eleanor, Columbia Newspaper Service and New York World Syndicate. aulkers, Robert F., Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
ott, Editors Feature Service.
eberger, Merze M., Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
gar, E. C., King Features Syndicate Inc. ears, Ruth Wyeth, George Matthew Adams Service.
rviss, Garrett P., International Feature Service, Inc.
vier, O'Neil, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
xton, Susie, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
afer, Claude, George Matthew Adams Service.
annon, Robert Terry, International Feature Service, Inc.
elton, Herbert M., Graphic Syndicate.
erwood, R. E., Life Syndicate. inn, Cobb, World Color Printing Company.
oring, Dr. Eliot, National Newspaper Service.
bley, W. G., Chicago Journal of Commerce.
lberman, Sidney A., National News Service.
lver, Blanche, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
monds, Frank H., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
nnott, Associated Newspapers.
nith, Dan, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
nith, Florence Vincent, Central Press Association.
nith, Rev. Roy L., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
nith, Sidney, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate. odgrass, J. B., Post Syndicate.
yder, Ruth, New York World.
merhausen, Anne, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
rds, John, Central Press Association.
ence, Sara, Graphic Syndicate.
ace, Arthur W., Ledger Syndicate. afford, Check, Associated Editors, Inc.
andish, Clare, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
anlaws, Penrhyn, International Feature Service, Inc.
anley, Lee, Editors Feature Service.
ella, Graphic Syndicate.
errett, Cliff, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
evens, William, George Matthew Adams Service.
evenson, Fay, New York World.
evenson, Steve, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
tevenson, Thomas, Stevenson Radio Syndicate.
tewart, Mary, Current News Features, Inc.
tokley, James, Science Service.
tote, Dorothy, Ledger Syndicate.
traton, Rev. John Roach, McNaught Syndicate, Inc. triebel, John H., Associated Editors, Inc.
tuyvesant, Mark, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Stuyvesant, Ruth, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Sullivan, Ed, Graphic Syndicate.
Sullivan, Frank, New York World.
Sullivan, Mark, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Sullivan, Pat, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Sumner, P. E., Premier Syndicate.
Sutton, Wilbur, Editors Feature Service.
Swinnerton, James, International Feature Service, Inc.
Sykes, C. H., Ledger Syndicate.

T

Taft, W. N., Ledger Syndicate.
Talmadge, Constance, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
Temple, World Color Printing Company.
Terhune, Albert Payson, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Terry, Associated Newspapers.
Thiele, Editors Feature Service.
Thompson, Clinton R., International Syndicate.
Thompson, Lilah, Arco Service.
Thompson, R. W., Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Thone, Dr. Frank, Science Service.
Thorncliffe, Grace, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Tilden, William, 2nd, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Tilden, William, 2nd, Ledger Syndicate.
Tingey, Eva A., Ledger Syndicate.
Tingley, Richard, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Tingley, R. H., New York World.
Towne, Charles Hanson, Central Press Association.
Trimble, Jessie, T-Bean Newspaper Syndicate.
Trumbull, Walter, Post Syndicate.
Turbyville, F., National Newspaper Service.
Tuthill, H. J., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

U

Ullman, William, Ullman Feature Service.
Urner, Mabel Herbert, Bell Syndicate, Inc.

V

Valentino, Rudolph, National Newspaper Service.
Van Duzer, Winifred, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Van Leon, Hendrik, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Van Paassen, Pierre, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Van Raalte, Joseph, Editors Feature Service.
Veatch, Paul J., Graphic Syndicate.
Vic, New York World.
Voight, Charles, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Vorhees, H. F., National Newspaper Service.

W

Wagner, E. F., National Newspaper Service.
Waldo, Fullerton, Ledger Syndicate.
Walker, G. W., Columbia Newspaper Service.
Walker, Lydia Le Baron, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Wallace, Inez, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Walling, Dow, Editors Feature Service.
Watts, Mary VanRiper, Imperial News Service.
Wayne, Priscilla, Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Weagand, H. C., King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Weaver, Louise B., Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Webster, H. T., New York World.
Wellington, N. Y. Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Wells, Carolyn, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Wells, H. G., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Wells, Margery, New York World.
Westerman, Harry J., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Westover, Russ, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Wheelock, Lucy M., Houghton Mifflin Syndicate Bureau.
Wheelan, Ed, George Matthew Adams Service.
Whitaker, Elma, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
White, William Allen, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Whitney, J. S., Current News Features, Inc.
Whitney, Leon F., Science Service.
Whitney, Mabel, International Syndicate.
Wilbert, A. L., King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Wile, Frederick William, Editors Feature Service.
Willard, Frank, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Williams, Gaar, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Williams, Gluyas, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Williams, Shirley R., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Williamson, Jack, Associated Editors, Inc.
Williamson, R. M., Des Moines Register-Tribune Syndicate.
Wills, Helen, United Feature Syndicate.
Wing, Hannah, International Feature Service, Inc.
Winchell, Walter, Graphic Syndicate.
Winner, United Feature Syndicate.
Winslow, Barbara, International Syndicate.
Winston, Vera, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
Woodruff, Harvey, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Woollcott, Alexander, New York World.
Worth, Winifred, Harland H. Allen Feature Service.
Wortman, New York World.
Wren, Jenny, Ledger Syndicate.
Wright, Frank, C. C. Powell Newspaper Features.
Wynn, Ed, Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Y

Young, Chic, Premier Syndicate.
Young, Lyman, National News Service and World Color Printing Company.

Z

Zere, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

ROOM 105
BELLEVUE STRATFORD HOTEL
PHILADELPHIA

Here

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

will hold forth

During the

Associated Advertising Clubs

of the World Convention

June 20 to 24

MAKE OUR HEADQUARTERS
YOUR HEADQUARTERS

Help Yourself to
Our Hospitality

—our time

—our stationery

—our stenographic service

—our information service

—our cigars

Let us meet you and greet you often!

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
1884 — The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America — 1925
SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42nd STREET AND BROADWAY

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Science Service Takes Over Current Radio—"Seckatary Hawkins" Weekly Club Page and Prize Contests Announced—Suzanne Lenglen Signs With McClure

SCIENCE SERVICE, Washington, D. C., has taken over Current Radio, a feature previously distributed by the American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn. The change becomes effective, June 7.

The feature, which explains technical angles of radio in simple language, will continue to be the editorial product of the American Radio Relay League, a national organization of radio operators and experimenters. John M. Clayton will continue to edit the service.

Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York, announced this week the "Seckatary Hawkins Weekly Club Page," to begin June 19 or June 20. The feature occupies space equivalent to a tabloid page and is designed to run in conjunction with the Hawkins weekly juvenile stories. It will include a service of local letters for individual papers and will cover arrangements for prize contests and club insignia. The page will be conducted by Robert F. Schulkers, the author of "Seckatary Hawkins." Mr. Schulkers speaks over the radio weekly from station WLW, Cincinnati.

Suzanne Lenglen, French tennis star, has signed with the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, for a series of 10 weekly tennis articles.

"Radio Rhymes" is the title of a new six-column comic strip announced this week by Continental Features, New York, It is the creation of Dan Napoli.

"Joy," a newspaper serial by Barbara Webb, is now being offered by Famous Features Syndicate, Inc., New York.

Keyes Religious News Service, Peru, Ind., is distributing a "Go-to-Church Sunday" page to newspapers. J. L. Keyes, syndicate owner, claims a list of 32 papers in Indiana alone for the feature.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moore Walker, Riverside, Ill., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marion Esther, to Barrie Payne of Chicago, Mr. Payne is author of "McDuffer," "The Jimtown Weekly" and "Otto Watt," all distributed by Associated Editors, Inc.

J. N. Darling, "Ding," cartoonist whose work is handled by the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, is one of five men elected last week to the board of trustees of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Ia.

W. L. Wardell, vice-president in charge of sales for the Famous Features Syndicate, Inc., New York, will leave June 7 on a four weeks' business trip.

"Ella Cinders," a comic distributed by Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York, is now being offered in full page form in color for Saturday or Sunday use, as well as in the daily strip.

The International Syndicate, Baltimore, has prepared a full page Fourth of July feature, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. Written by Rene Bach, it will tell the story of the making of the declaration.

Maj. Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson this week announced that the capital stock of Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc., has been increased to $200,000. He also announced completion of agreements with the Advertisers' Photo-Engraving Company, the Craft Off-Set Printing Company, and the Shaefer Stereotyping Company, all of New York City, which have merged their services into working arrangements with the Wheeler-Nicholson syndicate and have become minority stockholders.

"Sid Said" is the title of a new short daily feature now being distributed by the National News Service of Philadelphia. It embraces an editorial on advertising written by Sidney A. Silberman, president of the service.

INFERIORITY COMPLEX MAKES SALESMEN FAIL

To Cure That "Insignificant Feeling" Think of Your Superior Knowledge of Your "Product," Says Classified Man

An inferiority complex is often the hidden reason why many men fail as salesmen, Charles A. Sargent, classified manager of the Miami (Fla.) Herald believes.

"We all know the feeling that grips a salesman the minute he steps into a spacious office which is luxuriously furnished, where there is a corps of secretaries that hurry about," he told EDITOR & PUBLISHER. "Many of us can sense the feeling now by simply imagining ourselves in such surroundings.

"I have known would-be salesmen who would actually neglect business rather than approach a man in a luxurious office. The salesman who has this feeling will invent an endless string of excuses for not calling on certain prospects, such as: 'I don't suppose he will have any copy for me this morning, I will call later.' He will persuade himself and will not make the call, but still he realizes that he should have.

"The salesman who has this feeling lives in constant fear that his salesmanager and his prospect will recognize it. In spite of his best efforts to hide this feeling, it stands out like a bandaged sore thumb.

"This feeling retards the ability of a classified salesman, it blocks the channel of clear reasoning and the presentation of persuasive argument.

"There is only one thing to do, that is to bring this feeling out in the open, face it squarely and 'chase it away.'

"It is the result of a foolish type of reasoning, similar to the following: 'I am not financially able to afford the surroundings which my advertising prospect has.' 'I am not able to discuss subjects which he may be able to discuss fluently.'

"Fortunately, ability to sell classified advertising does not depend one particle on the salesman being financially equal, socially equal, or intellectually equal to the prospective advertiser.

"Ability as a classified advertising salesman increases in direct proportion to the development of confidence in yourself as a classified salesman, and not in your being socially, financially or intellectually equal to your prospect. Confidence is not founded on your desire to be confident, but is founded on a thorough understanding of classified advertising.

"In reality the man who maintains a spacious office may actually know less about classified advertising than the greasy automobile mechanic who greets you from beneath an automobile, and any one of us would feel perfectly natural talking with the mechanic.

"There is not one business man (outside of newspapers) in 5,000 who knows the fundamental difference between classified and display advertising, the advantages of allied classifications, of consistent advertising.

"You have one definite purpose in calling on a man however large or small his business may be. That is to sell classified advertising!

"The time you have spent in selling classified advertising and the knowledge of classified advertising which you have acquired has placed you in a position where you are absolutely superior to 9 percent of your prospects.

"Present your arguments clearly and concisely, don't talk just to be using words. Let each argument have only one point, just like the call on your prospect has but one aim, to sell classified advertising."

features

SINCE 1899

WEEKLY

Camera News, Fashion, Feature and Children's Pages; House Plans; Automobile Cartoon.

3-A-WEEK

Hints for the Motorist; Handicraft in the Home.

DAILY

Cross-word Puzzles, Dots and Cut-outs; Radio; Noozie; Fashion hints; 1 col. Comics; Portraits; Gillilan's Letters; News-Maps., also The Ad-route (house organ)

The International Syndicate

Baltimore, Md.

EUROPEAN PRINTING SHOWN

Exhibit of Books and Commercial Work at N. Y. Times Annex

An exhibition of recent European fine book and commercial printing opened last week in the New York Times Annex, 43 street, with a private inspection of the works by 300 members of the Clubs of Printing House Craftsmen of New York Newark and the Albany district. Henry L. Bullen, curator of the typographic museum of the American Type Founders Company, delivered an address on European fine printing.

The exhibition opened for the public on Monday, May 24, and will continue until June 5. The exhibition is being held under the auspices of the New York Club of Printing House Craftsmen.

Mankato Daily Absorbs Weekly

Col. Oliver J. Quane, publisher of the Mankato (Minn.) Evening Herald, has acquired the Ledger, a weekly, which is merged with the Herald. Col. Quane's father, J. D., was the Ledger's publisher

SHAPE IDEALS THROUGH YOUR CHURCH PAGE

Learn how at the Philadelphia Convention

To sell churches on the use of advertising, you, as a representative of their business interests, should be able to tell them what to advertise and how to do it most effectively.

Advertising employed solely to fill pews and collection plates will not do either permanently.

"Church Advertising," says the Classified Manager of the Oakland Tribune, "should suggest thought, form ideals, and guide conduct for hundreds who may never enter the church of its origin, but who become associate members of that church through the bond of the press."

You are invited to participate in the church advertising sessions at Philadelphia. They will be held on June 22nd and 23rd, as a part of the international convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs.

Church Advertising Department

ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUBS,

383 Madison Avenue

New York, N. Y.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Rayon Corporation in Trade-Mark Suit—Court Decides Soap Case—Townsend Joins Advertising Staff of Cadillac Motor Car Company

'E American Rayon Products Corporation filed suit in New York i week for an injunction in the Su-e Court against the Hamilton Gar- Company, Inc., New York, alleging ir practices in advertising dresses r the names "Tricosham" or "Trico n," to which names the corporation is exclusive right.

he complaint demands a permanent junction and also an accounting of all cts made through the use of the names ite. It also asks that the Hamilton ent Company be compelled to de- up all catalogues containing dresses rtised under these names.

Jdge Robert A. Inch in United s District Court, Brooklyn, has ated an injunction to the Andrew ens Company, manufacturers of H. Woodbury's Facial Soap, ast the Bonded Products Company, klyn, forbidding the latter from ng "William A. Woodbury's Soap," s the wrappers are clearly marked revent any confustion between the products.

he Jergens Company alleged that the endant was making and distributing for William A. Woodbury, a cousin hn H. Woodbury. It also contended it had been the first in the field to ufacture a Woodbury soap and that nvestment of more than $8,000,000 in national advertising would be rdized if the defendant were allowed ntinue to sell the William A. Wood- variety.

Jdge Inch, in his decision, refused njoin the Bonded Products Com- from continuing to manufacture soap, but required that in the fu- it plainly mark its product so that ould not be confused with the other al.

"he Court should be most careful to interfere, without proper cause, business ventures between indi-uals," the Court said, "and the right man to use his name has rarely prevented. As has been said 'ju-i paternalism should be avoided.'" he Food Products Company, Inc., . Wood, president, of Norfolk, Va., become distributors in Tidewater rginia and Eastern North Carolina Mission Distributors, Inc., a North olina corporation that handles the lifornia fruit juices bearing that name dincluding orange, lemon and grape-i An active campaign of advertising d sales throughout the territory is ned. The fruit juices are packed by California Crushed Fruit Corpora- which uses a process by which it packs the juices so they can be ped direct from the California rs to the user.

---

Eian Townsend, for the past nine al of the advertising staff of Iliffe & r Ltd., printers and publishers, of ron and Coventry, England, has e to the United States to join the rtising staff of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, Detroit. Iliffe & Sons are publishers of English technical magazines including The Autocar, The Automobile Engineer and The Motor Cycle.

The Chamber of Commerce of the Rockaways, Long Island, N. Y., is planning a $100,000 advertising campaign to promote the peninsula as a Summer and all-year resort. Thurman C. Warren and Harry Lustig are in charge of the joint membership and publicity committee.

Thomas E. Spence has been appointed general sales manager of the Coldak Corporation, manufacturers of Coldak electric refrigerators, 8 W. 40th St., New York City. Mr. Spence was formerly vice-president and general sales manager of the Electrolux Company. Plans are now being completed for an advertising campaign.

RICHARDSON REELECTED

California's Governor Again Heads State Press Association

The Governor of California, F. W. Richardson, has been reelected president of the California Press Association. Justus F. Craemer, of the Orange News, and Oren A. King, of the Jackson Ledger, were re-elected vice-president and treasurer, respectively. Louis Meyer, of the Oakville Leader, was chosen secretary.

The executive committee, as chosen, consists of F. B. Mackinder, of the Star, St. Helena; D. J. Reese, of the Free Press, Ventura; Will F. Blake, of the Advocate, Gilroy; C. O. Dunbar, of the Press-Democrat, Santa Rosa; M. F. Cochrane, of the Independent, San Rafael; W. A. Shepard, of the Herald, Auburn; J. R. Gabbert, of the Enterprise, Riverside; G. G. Radcliffe, of the Pajaronian, Watsonville; Paul W. Moore, of Facts, Redlands, and Clark F. Waite, of the Pilot, San Pedro.

Van Lear Black's Daughter Engaged

Mrs. Van Lear Black, wife of the principal owner of the Baltimore Sun, this week announced the engagement of her daughter, Jessie Gary Black, to Thomas Buchanan Blakiston. No date has been set for the wedding.

Press Club Bulletin in Roto

The May issue of the National Press Club Bulletin, issued monthly by the National Press Club, Washington, D. C., appeared in rotogravure, 24 pages, celebrating the laying of the cornerstone of the National Press building, April 8.

AD TIPS

Aubrey and Moore, 210 East Ohio street, Chicago. Now issuing additional copy on Citrus Products Co. (Blue Bird soft drink), Chicago.

George Batten Company, Inc., 383 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured account of Galey & Lord, New York, distributors of Aberfoyle cotton and rayon fabrics.

Blaine-Thompson Company, 4th National Bank Building, Cincinnati. Placing account of the Crown Fuel Saver Company, Richmond, Indiana, manufacturers "Crown" fuel saver and smoke preventer.

Thomas M. Bowers Advertising Agency, 304 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Placing the account of the Schoenhofen Company (Green River), Chicago. Osten Advertising Corporation, Chicago, formerly placed this account.

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, Chicago. Reported contemplating a newspaper campaign to stimulate development of territory in the Northwest.

Crosby Chicago, 29 Quincy street, Chicago. Will hereafter place the Gold Furniture Company, Chicago.

D'Arcy Advertising Company, St. Louis. Issuing contracts on Gardner Motor Car Company, St. Louis.

Dorrance, Sullivan & Company, 130 West 42nd street, New York City. Are making contracts for United States Shipping Board Fleet Corporation.

Erwin, Wasey and Co., 844 Rush street, Chicago. Issuing schedules on Carnation Milk Products Company, Oconomowoc, Wis. The copy is being received at some far western points from Izzard Company, Seattle, Wash.

Harry L. Fox, Ravenna, Ohio. Now handling account of the Ravenna Furnace & Heating Company, Ravenna, Ohio, manufacturers' furnaces.

J. R. Hamilton Company, 326 West Madison street, Chicago. Receiving contracts on Thompson's Malted Food Company, of Waukesha, Wis.

Kirtland-Engel Company, 646 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Sending some receiving orders to a few eastern papers on Maybelline Company, Chicago.

Kling-Gibson Company, 310 South Michigan boulevard, Chicago. Handling the extended campaign of Iron Mountain Co., Chicago (Zero Zone refrigerator).

Lord and Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Issuing renewals on the Quaker Oats Company, Chicago.

Fred A. Robbins Company, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Handling the list of newspapers to be used on Burgess Battery Company, Madison, Wis.

Rogers and Smith, 326 West Madison street, Chicago. Issuing contracts on G. E. Conkey Company (poultry food), of Cleveland, Ohio.

Rooney-Soderlund-Rooney Company, Minneapolis. Will hereafter place Luther Ford Company, Minneapolis (Mrs. Stewart's bluing), whose account was formerly placed direct.

Russell M. Seeds Company, Consolidated Building, Indianapolis. Placing account of the Pinex Company, manufacturers' "Pinex."

Charles H. Touzalin Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Sending out some copy on Stewart-Warner Company, Chicago.

Fire in Covington Virginian Plant

Fire gutted the basement of the Covington (Va.) Evening Virginian and for a time threatened the three-story plant, May 19. The newsprint stock was destroyed. Richard H. Beirne is publisher.

New Addition to Tulsa World Plant

Work will start within a few days on the four story addition to the Tulsa World building. The present structure is six stories high, and was built with the plan of building additional stories when necessary.

in Detroit—

Free Press city circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

THE DETROIT "FREE PRESS"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

For the First Three Months of 1926

THE TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE

printed 7,355,276 lines of Advertising, and thus moved up from twelfth to SIXTH place among the newspapers of the United States.

The only newspapers printing a greater volume of advertising during that period than The Tribune were the Miami Herald, the St. Petersburg Times, the Detroit News, the Chicago Tribune and the New York Times.

The Tribune covers the rich South Florida territory of 24 counties and 190 cities and towns, with a population of 713,943.

That's Why Its Advertising Volume Grows

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency, National Representatives.

13,715,779 Lines of Advertising

—were carried by The Miami Herald during the first four months of 1926—a volume which establishes for The Herald another record of world leadership in amount of advertising lineage.

The record-breaking growth of the Miami Market which this tremendous volume so clearly implies is also apparent in comparative statistics of the city's activities. For example:

	First Quarter, 1925	First Quarter, 1926
Building Permits..	$7,375,101	$10,910,411
Postal Receipts...	231,392	442,782
City Construction..	96,650	637,400
Nat'l Cash Reg. Sales	85,025	245,575
No., Telegrams... (Western Union)	1,960,714	4,449,850
Bank Clearings...	151,867,583	261,636,474
Lbs., R. R. Ton. Received	384,331,365	603,835,697
Lbs., R. R. Ton. Forwarded	38,774,693	81,151,532
Bank Deposits....	$105,032,090	$137,414,058

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

Regional Advertising
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor

An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL and PACIFIC Editions

Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request

ADVERTISING OFFICES

Boston	New York	Kansas City
Philadelphia	London	San Francisco
Chicago	Paris	Los Angeles
Cleveland	Florence	Seattle
Detroit		Portland

"Buy What You Can Use"

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK

Standard Gravure Corporation

LOUISVILLE KY

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

0 West 42nd Street New York

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Consolidation of Lord & Thomas and Thomas F. Logan, Inc. Announced—Osten Corporation Absorbed by Bowers Company—Simmons Now with Gray

ALBERT D. LASKER, chairman of the board of the Lord & Thomas advertising agency, this week announced the merger of his firm with Thomas F. Logan, Inc., New York. The merger is to become effective July 1.

The new company will be known as Lord & Thomas & Logan. Mr. Lasker will be chairman of the board and Thomas F. Logan will be president of the consolidated company. Other executive officers are to be elected from the two companies later.

In announcing the merger, Mr. Lasker said the new corporation would place an annual volume of advertising business in excess of $20,000,000. The new company will have its principal offices in New York and Chicago, with branches in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Washington and London.

Mr. Lasker announced the reasons for the merger as follows:

"The experience of American business has clearly shown that large units in production and distribution make for greater efficiency and broader service. Similar large units in professional service corporations are a necessity of modern business.

"Marketing experience has become so essential to successful advertising that the consolidation of these two strong organizations, each with an established reputation for national service, may be described as an important step in the efficiency of national distribution.

"The new corporation of Lord & Thomas & Logan, in capital, personnel and volume of business, will rank as one of the largest institutions of its kind in the world, placing an annual volume in excess of $20,000,000. It will bring together one of the oldest and one of the youngest among the leading advertising agencies. Lord & Thomas, with a record of fifty-three years of continuous operation, were pioneers in introducing printed salesmanship. Thomas F. Logan, Inc., although organized only seven years ago, has already won a notable position in the advertising field under the management of Mr. Logan, who will become president of the consolidated company."

The Thomas M. Bowers Company, Chicago, has absorbed the Osten Advertising Corporation of the same city. The Bower company will take care of billings for advertising since May 1.

H. H. Simmons, formerly with Advertisers' Individual Service, 9 S. Clinton street, Chicago, has joined Russell T. Gray, Inc., advertising agency in the People's Life Building, Chicago. The following accounts handled by Mr. Simmons have been transferred from the Advertisers' Individual Service to the Gray organization: American Creosoting Company, Louisville, Ky.; Chicago Steel Car Company, Harvey, Ill.; Grindle Fuel Equipment Company, Harvey, Ill.; Haskelite Manufacturing Company, 133 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago; Whiting Corporation, Harvey, Ill.; Massey Concrete Products Corporation, 122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago; Swenson Evaporator Company, Harvey, Ill.

Howard Hannegan has formed a new advertising agency at McKeesport, Pa., under the name of the Printing Crafts Advertising Service. This agency will specialize in campaigns for printers and manufacturers of machinery and equipment for printers.

Edward T. Slackford has joined the Buchen Company, Chicago advertising agency, in the copy and research departments. Slackford was formerly connected with the Marion Steam Shovel Company, Marion, O., as advertising manager.

Miss Ruth de Forest Lamb has joined the copy staff of the G. Lynn Sumner Company, New York advertising agency. Miss Lamb was formerly with Ruthrauf & Ryon, J. Walter Thompson Company and N. W. Ayer & Son.

R. H. Bethea has been appointed resident manager for Southern territory by the McLain-Simpers Organization, Stock Exchange Building, Philadelphia. Mr. Bethea's headquarters will be in the Chamber of Commerce Building, Greenville, S. C.

AD WOMEN ELECT

Philadelphia Group Names Mrs. Patten President for Second Term

The Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women recently reelected Mrs. Ellen S. Patten president to serve a second term. Miss Florence M. Dart, convention chairman, was elected vice-president, Mrs. B. Ewing Kempff was reelected treasurer. Miss Mary J. Denton, the year's publicity chairman, was elected recording secretary.

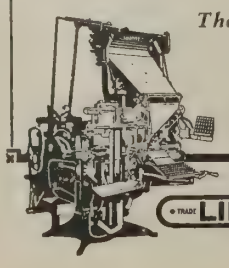
The vote for corresponding secretary was a tie, between Miss Clare V. Fey, the year's program chairman, and Miss Mabel Lux, and by Miss Lux's withdrawal, she has made it a unanimous vote in favor of Miss Fey. The remaining members of the Board are Miss Alice Baum, the year's social chairman; Miss Josephine Hunt, Miss Martha P. Minter and Miss Theresa Walls.

RADIO NAME PROTECTED

WNAC, Boston, Gets Trademark on "Jean Sargent" for Broadcasting

The granting of a trademark for use in newspaper column prints and publications for the name "Jean Sargent" to the owners of broadcasting Station WNAC marks the first successful effort of a broadcaster to protect a pen name, according to John Shepard, manager of the Shepard Stores station in Boston.

Jean Sargent was the name originally used by a writer and radio lecturer for a special feature originated at Station WNAC, and the trademarking of the name was made necessary by the alleged attempt of a middle western station to broadcast a similar feature under the same name when the original Jean Sargent became a member of the staff, it was stated.



Station WNAC is owned by the Shepard Norwell Company, the trademark patent number being 211,823.

From the Linotype Mailbag

"REAL Service"

"Just a word: I want you to know that I appreciate the service you gave me a few days ago. I ordered a part for the machine at 4 o'clock on Thursday and the piece arrived in our city Friday night. I call that 'Real' service. A man gets lots of 'kick' out of dealing with a firm that furnishes service as well as the best machine that is built."

The Paris Progress
Paris, Ark.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

DISADVANTAGES OF "CLUBBING"

"NO newspaper regarded by the public as a premium of a large pap can hope to be considered as strong and independent nor can it co mand respect. The circulation man on the small city paper must pound a pound his field continually for more circulation. He must serve his field co pletely with his paper only. If the paper is to grow with the community, must support that community only and assist to the fullest extent in keepi business at home. It cannot do this by 'clubbing' with a large city paper."—C. L. Pearson, Circulation Manager, Everett (Wash.) News.

* * *

NEW RETAILERS' AFFLICTION—COMPARATOSIS

"YOU, yourself, seldom realize when you have 'comparatosis' (unbeli able comparatives in ad copy). That is the insidious thing about And even your best customers and nearest competitors won't tell you. Son times, of course, it comes from a deep-seated conviction that it is the only thi the public is interested in. But usually—and fortunately—it is the result o temporary delusion aided and abetted by the fact that 'the others do it.' F comparatosis—use common sense."—Toledo Better Business Bureau.

* * *

THE SPORTS WRITER'S RESPONSIBILITY

"TIMES have changed. The old sports writer who spent his time in saloon and confined his efforts to writing about a few professionals gone. The successful sports writer of today is a college bred man. He wri English and devotes a large percentage of his space to amateur sports. It has been the habit of publishers in smaller cities to employ incompetent spo reporters because they believed younsters coming out of school, who like spo could be obtained for small wages and 'would do.' That is a decided mista You must realize that the sports editor of your newspaper is the man who sha the athletic careers of your boys and girls. What he writes has a greater eff upon the minds of those youngsters than you realize."—Edward W. Cochra sports editor, Kansas City Journal-Post.

* * *

"COURAGE AND HONESTY IN JOURNALISM"

"COURAGE and honesty in journalism must be there to win. You n fail for other reasons, but if these qualities are lacking your fight is before you start."—C. P. J. Mooney, editor, Memphis Commercial App

A SINGLE ADVERTISING APPROPRIATION

Will cover the two publications that reach those who control the national advertising of the United States and Great Britain.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
New York
and
ADVERTISING WORLD
London, Eng.

have entered into an agreement in respect to editorial and advertising representation in their respective fields and thereby afford a single source of information and service for those interested in international marketing and advertising.

Combination Advertising Rates for 12 Insertion Contract

Full Page .....$280.00 per insertion
Half Page ..... 145.00 per insertion
Quarter Page ..... 82.50 per insertion

You are cordially invited to communicate with EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Suite 1700 Times Building, New York, for further details of circulation, editorial policy and mechanical requirements of ADVERTISING WORLD. This office can be of great assistance to manufacturers who desire information in regard to marketing conditions of Great Britain. Publishers of leading American newspapers will also avail themselves of this opportunity to deliver their messages to the largest advertisers of Great Britain, many of whom are keenly interested in the markets of America.

Editor & Publisher
1700 Times Building
Broadway at 42d St.
New York, N. Y.

Telephones:
Bryan 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056
Cable Address: EDPUB, NEW YORK

Advertising World
14 King Street
Covent Garden, W. C. 2
London, England

Telephone: Gerrard 7615
Cable Address:
ECOPUBLISH, RAND, LONDON

CARRIERS HAVE A HARMONICA BAND

r-five harmonicas whine in unison when this newsboys' band gets into . The organization is composed of carriers for the Dayton (O.) Daily and is the only all-harmonica newsboys' band in the country. T. J. naugh, circulation manager of the News, declares. At a recent theater for 1,200 carriers given by the paper, the band led the parade to the eater and also gave several selections after the procession arrived.

TICS JOIN IN WORLD ORGANIZATION on Drama, Music and Screen im 19 Nations Meet In aris, Where Headquarters Will Stay

By Edward Everett Pidgeon

Music and Screen Critic, New York Journal of Commerce.

ws recently my privilege to attend as one of the most unusual and sng gatherings it has ever been ed fortune to participate in—the r Internationale de la Critique aque et Musicale—convened dur- first week in May in the French land to which I had the honor of he only delegate present from ri—North or South. The confer- om a mere experimental gesture, nd expanded within a few days a world-wide movement of present- rest and future importance; from r social contact to an organization rnised stability that immediately vhout hesitation set about function- wh a certainty and supreme con- cin the mutuality of its aims and nd a supreme assurance in its ccomplishments for the benefit of tge and the drama at large; a l step in journalism.

ne it was a rather remarkable co the manner of the presentation preme cordiality of the invitation ught a response so extensive that ne roll was called at the first ly no less than twenty-four dele- epresenting nineteen different na- nswered "Present." Included in nber were star drama reviewers from Japan, Haiti, Greece, Austria, Poland, and in fact all the representative countries excepting Germany alone, and the fine diplomacy of the Honorable Chairman was shown by the applause of approval which greeted his motion, on the final day of the Congres, that Germany be especially invited to participate in the convention of 1927.

The results of the Congress were successful beyond expectation, as the plans developed daily and without friction under the skilful guidance of President Paul Genisty and the eventual accomplishment was the actual formation of a permanent World's Congress of Dramatic and Musical Critics with the avowed purpose of co-operation and the expansion of its field of usefulness to every city of importance in every country represented, each country to establish its own National Bureau for the dissemination, collection and exchange of literature, data and all forms of informative material that may be of mutual benefit, with the International Headquarters and Chief Bureau of Archives to be located permanently in Paris, from where the contact will be made abroad through accredited correspondents of the foreign press at the French capital.

The effects are soon to be seen as far reaching in their influence upon the ethical and literary, as well as the entertaining and constructive, future of the stage of the world, and the credit is due in large measure to the visional inspiration of the critics of France—which in the arts is Paris.

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 5,015 Daily Average Circulation
Government Statement, Six Months March 31, 1925, 177,298 Daily. Six Ending March 31, 1926, 182,313 Increase in Daily Average Circula- 1915.
COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
H. Lederer, 910 Hearst Bldg., igo, Ill.
Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San isco, Calif.

Many a newspaper is known by the classified columns it keeps

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

THIRD ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF FEATURES

(Continued from page 3)

swain in the first love affair and after their first post-marital spat. They have remedies of Machiavellian cunning for keeping peace in the home by keeping the "in-laws" out; they know how to cure hubby of spending his nights around the hexagonal green table; they tell madame how she can get a new Spring hat without sending the budget on the rocks. Sometimes they express their advice in emphatic, though always elegant, form for the sinner who has passed the ordinary limits of error. This newspaper confessional is apparently one of the things immune to withering age and staling custom.

All of these elements of the newspaper supplement the many news services covering the general and specialized fields of human activity. The news is drawn from the entire world and is selected at a number of filing points for its availability in varying localities and public tastes. The syndicate man has no such advantage. He assembles his offering in New York, Washington, Chicago, or some other focal city and sends it forth to be printed in ready on the same day in Portland, Me., and Spokane, Wash., in New Orleans and in St. Paul, and he must shape his work to meet the requirements of each and all of his clients. It is no easy task, but it is performed every day by the syndicates which remain active and prosperous. Generally speaking, the mortality rate is not high.

Mathews Changes Address

The Chicago offices of the Julius Mathews Special Agency, Newspaper advertising representatives, have been moved to Rooms 700-701, 30 North Dearborn street.

THE TELEGRAM
now has the largest paid circulation in
CLARKSBURG, W. VA.
13,000 daily
14,000 Sunday
guaranteed.
Member Audit Bureau of Circulations
Represented Nationally by
The Devine-MacQuoid Co., Inc.
New York Philadelphia Pittsburg Chicago

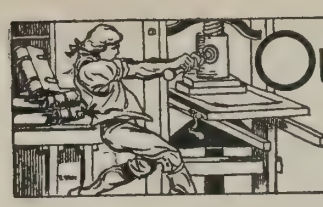
Use the
COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.
Member A. B. C.
URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

Columnist Dines His "Contribs"

The annual contributors' dinner tendered by Stoddard King to those contributing to his "Facetious Fragments" column in the Spokane Spokesman-Review was held May 14 at the Davenport hotel. About 70 attended. Ben Rice, former newspaper man, presided.

Monomelt Firm Name Changed

The Printers Manufacturing Company, makers of the Monomelt Single Melting System, have changed the firm name to The Monomelt Company. The Minneapolis factory and the Chicago sales office have been combined in a new fireproof building at 4541 Ravenswood Ave., Chicago.



Covert Heads Brooklyn News Men

Marshall H. Covert, Brooklyn Standard Union, was re-elected president of the Brooklyn Newspapermen's Club at the annual meeting held June 1.

A paper with the people
The public decides the progress of a newspaper.
The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.
Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.
With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.
Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN
NEW YORK EVENING GRAPHIC
H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration
The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Edition
Washington, D. C.
will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.
The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.
New York Office — 110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office — Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

first! in OHIO
7,474,514 Lines
Dispatch advertising record for the first four months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,092,957 lines. In 1925 the Dispatch published 21,544,376 lines exceeding second largest Ohio newspaper by 2,648,383 lines.
NET PAID CIRCULATION
CITY 55,812
SUBURBAN 26,973
COUNTRY 23,666
Total Daily Circulation.....106.451
Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

CHARLES K. HARRIS prints several stories about newspaper men now prominent as columnists in his autobiography "After the Ball" (Frank-Maurice, Inc.). One skit will do by way of illustration:

Bide Dudley, of The Evening World, came in to the office of Mr. Harris with a song entitled "I'll Never Hear You Sing Again Comin' Through the Rye." After Bide had left, the well-known publisher and author of the song-hit, "After the Ball Is Over" and many others, said to his manager:

"I am going to save a first-class man for the newspaper world. It would be too bad to lose him."

"How is that?" asked the other.

"By publishing Mr. Dudley's song."

* * *

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY will publish in the fall "Main Currents in American Journalism" by Willard Grosvenor Bleyer, Director of the Department of Journalism, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin. Professor Bleyer has written a number of books relating to journalism including "Special Feature Articles," "Newspaper Writing and Editing," and "Types of News Writing."

* * *

E. W. HOWE in the current issue of his monthly devoted to indignation and information has on his first page a column over which he puts the head "Big Man Brisbane."

* * *

NORMAN J. RADDER, whose book "Newspapers in Community Service" (McGraw-Hill Company) was recently reviewed in this department, contributes to The Epsilog—the official organ of Pi Delta Epsilon, the honorary journalism fraternity—for June an article entitled "The New Country Journalism." In this article Professor Radder, a member of the faculty at Indiana University, outlines the opportunities in rural newspaper work and notes the growing prosperity and influence of community newspapers.

This same issue of The Epsilog contains a sketch of Oswald Garrison Villard, formerly president of the New York Evening Post and now editor and owner of The Nation. The Epsilog is edited by Robert H. McNeil of Colgate University.

* * *

SOME one, presumably the editor John Farrar, chats in The Bookman for June about the change Harry Hansen has made in moving his desk from the Chicago Daily News to the New York World.

Mention is made of somewhat similar migrations made by Burton Rascoe, Stuart Sherman, Henry Sell, Percy Hammond, John V. A. Weaver, and others. Of Mr. Hansen the prophecy is made that he "like his Viking ancestors will remain indomitably himself and cherish his own view point" so far as his work on the World is concerned.

* * *

ARTHUR JUDSON BREWSTER who teaches advertising at Syracuse University will soon publish through A. W. Shaw Company of Chicago "An Introduction to Retail Advertising." Professor Brewster before he became connected with Syracuse University was Advertising Manager of L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter, Inc.

* * *

THE Atlantic and Pacific seemed to have joined hands in the production of "Principles of Publicity" (D. Appleton & Co.) by Glen C. Quiett and Ralph D. Casey. The Atlantic author is Quiett who is officially connected with Tamblyn & Brown of New York City and who was largely responsible for the tremendous amount of newspaper space obtained for the publicity of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The Pacific author is Casey who is Associate Professor of Journalism at the University of Oregon, Eugene, Ore.

Books on publicity have been somewhat frequent in recent years. The present volume, however, differs from these in that it presents its subject matter from a more detached point of view. In addition, its authors have made a sincere attempt to stress the ethics which should govern the publicity agent in his relations with the public in general and the newspaper in particular.

The authors in their preface clearly set forth that the newspaper and other informational agencies, because of the heavy burdens already carried, cannot be expected to seek out and interpret to the public every worthwhile cause. They make a clear distinction between desponsible and reliable publicity on the one hand and on the other the irresponsible and unreliable information that circulates as propaganda. They also draw a sharp distinction between the functions of publicity and those of advertising and insist that legitimate newspaper publicity is not concealed advertising. On this point the authors are very specific:

> Commercial advertising has its own definite field as an agency for selling commodities, service, or good will. Advertising is a commercial transaction by which the newspaper becomes the paid agent of the advertiser in his direct or indirect effort to obtain sales for his product, clients for his service, or good will for his institution. Because the newspaper depends for its life on paid advertising, it is unethical and downright dishonesty for commercial advertising agencies to attempt to insert in news columns material that has no value to the newspaper or its readers and that benefits only the advertiser himself. Yet in many instances this is exactly what is attempted. It is such efforts that have earned for much so-called publicity the disapproval of American newspaper publishers.

In a certain sense "Principles of Publicity" consists of two sections. In the first section the authors outline methods of informing the public through news stories, feature stories, pamphlets, house organs, exhibits, motion pictures, and news pictures. The second section is more specific and deals with the publicity for business, public schools, universities and colleges, eleemosynary institutions, churches, civic associations, etc.

To make the volume meet the requirements of the class room, the authors have added several appendices devoted to a bibliography and questions and suggestions are offered to help the person upon whom the reporter calls for news:

> When a reporter calls, know as much as possible of the story you are trying to tell.
>
> If all of the material for the news story is not in your possession, know where the remainder of it may be obtained.
>
> Don't forget the names and be sure they are accurate. Bill Jones is not sufficient. The Christian Science Monitor, for example, insists always on even the middle initial. Write it William E. Jones.
>
> Remember that in most cases you are seeking to obtain publicity for your organization and not for any salaried officer in its personnel. It is more effective if you give the president or some member of the elective board credit for a particular piece of work than to "hang the story" on a salaried employee.
>
> Be always ready to see a reporter; don't be too busy to see him; don't let him stand about cooling his heels in an outer office.
>
> If the reporter who covers your association or institution is at all capable, don't go over his head to an editor with a story.
>
> Do your complaining on a badly written story to the man who wrote it, not to his superior. If the writer of the story does not appreciate this courtesy, you may then make your complaints higher up.
>
> Study the differences between the morning and evening papers as to content, method of displaying the news, and news style.
>
> Do team work with the reporter. The friendship of a newspaperman in a valuable asset. If an individual has been friendly with newspapermen in the past, if he has given his time to provide them with information when they have asked for it, they will be willing to give him space for stories with news interest when he requires it. That does not mean that friendship for a newspaperman or a publication will cause the city editor to permit an organization an undue amount of space or to suppress stories which are unfavorable to the interests of their friend, but it does mean that the organization will have its case properly presented.
>
> Establish yourself in the good graces of the newspapers so that when they want information on what is going on in your particular field, they will naturally turn to you. Sometimes you may have to tell them that if the news is printed they must not use your name, and they will respect your wishes. At other times you may be able to give them "tips" on news that must not be printed at the moment. An individual should not violate good ethics, however, in giving out such information. Reporters will appreciate the courtesy of "tips" on news stories and will keep the information for use at such a time as will be agreeable to the person giving the information, or they may use it as the basis for other investigations if the consent of the individual giving the tip has been granted.
>
> Reporters of wide experience know that the more responsible position a man has, the more courteous and affable he is likely to be to newspapermen. No one can hope to obtain favorable publicity either for himself or the organization he represents who feels that he cannot be bothered with talking to representatives of the press, who resents their intrusion into his privacy, or who does not care to answer their questions. He rightfully earns the dislike or contempt of those covering the news.

The authors have tried in their text to produce a volume which would make it still harder for fakers and irresponsible persons to break into print. On the other hand they have aimed to be of real service to the cause of legitimate publicity. Throughout the volume they are continually seeking to interpret the newspaper to the publicity agent who is not familiar with the routine of the city room. They have sought to lighten the burdens of the city editor by suggestions on the preparation of copy, the securing of photographs, etc. Indeed, the professional reporter may well read certain pages to advantage. Possibly the managing editor after perusing the volume may see how costs in newspaper production have been lightened through the co-operation of publicity workers. It is extremely doubtful whether he knows how much he is depending upon hand-outs for the material he prints. He should be reminded, however, that this co-operation by publicity workers does not relieve him from the responsibility of research and special investigation. The trouble today with publicity is that it is being put into type without being carefully checked for the correction of errors —often unintentionally made but sometimes, I regret to say, deliberately inserted.

One feature of the book deserves special commendation. When the authors have dealt with a subject with which they are not thoroughly familiar they have gone to the expert for an opinion. Such a policy has given a distinct touch of authority to the volume. The material which has been inserted for purposes of illustration is helpful but its usefulness would have been still greater if the authors had given their reasons for their choice, since the book is prepared primarily for the novice rather than for the professional worker. Some of the credit for quoted matter should have been more specific.

But on the whole the authors have produced a well organized volume in view of the extensive field they have attempted to cover. They have had in mind the preparation of a volume that should be helpful to the worker. With considerable care they have avoided any attempt to sell to the public the services of the professional in public relations. They have kept to the theme of principles and left theories to others. But in this comment I cannot help adding that the volume would have been more valuable had it contained more quotations from the articles which EDITOR & PUBLISHER has printed on the same topic.

* * *

CLARENCE S. BRIGHAM, Librarian of the American Antiquarian Society at Worcester, Mass., prints in the current issue of Proceedings of the American Antiquarian Society a sketch of the newspapers published in Tennessee, Texas and Vermont before 1820. The sketch of the Knoxville Gazette, the first newspaper in Tennesesee, is remarkably complete.

Under the head of Texas Mr. Brigham has only one entry—the Texas Republican which was started at Nacogdoches on Aug. 14, 1819. When Thompson compiled my "History of American Journalism" I knew about this paper but was unable to determine the date of its first appearance. Mr. Brigham while admitting that Horatio Bigelow may have been the editor of the Texas Republican asserts that the name of Eli Hall appeared in the imprint. No copies of the Texas Republican, however, have been located.

For the date of the first paper in Vermont Mr. Brigham suggests December, 1780, as a date on which the Vermont Gazette and Green Mountain Post appeared in Westminister. By way of authority he quotes "The Vermont Almanac" for 1796 in which this is given as the first newspaper in Vermont to be mentioned. If that date be the correct one there must have been several other issues in weekly publications, for the date of the earliest issue that has been located is that of April 2, 1781, and is labeled Vol. II, No. 8. This earliest known issue is now in the possession of The Vermont Historical Society.

After Mr. Brigham has completed his bibliography in Proceedings of the American Antiquarian Society, it will be published in book form along with a historical introduction. Meanwhile the author will welcome additions and corrections. These should be sent to him at the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester, Mass.

* * *

INTERESTING historical data on the Negro press will be found in an article which Eugene Gordon contributes to The American Mercury for June. Mr. Gordon has been a member of the editorial staff of the Boston Post since 1918.

The first example of Negro journalism was The Freedom's Journal which was started in New York on March 16, 1827. It was followed by such other papers as Rights for All (published at New York), The National Reformer (published at Philadelphia date line), The Voice of Liberty (from Columbus, Ohio) and The Herald of Freedom (also from Ohio). Today there are over one hundred journals published in 36 states read by five million colored readers.

Mr. Gordon then chats about

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RU

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the American Type Founders Compan

BOSTON, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, RICHMOND, ATLANTA, BUFFALO, PITTSBURGH, CLEVELAND, DETROIT, CHICAGO, CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MILWAUKEE, MINNEAPOLIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, DENVER, LOS ANGELES, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, SPOKANE, WINNIPEG

dencies of the Negro press which is marked by a certain yellow- inted as a badge of progress. At- is called to the fact that there was when the ordinary colored Ameri- ghed at the suggestion that he gro newspapers. But of late a onary change has taken place. By proof Mr. Gordon reprints the g full page announcement of The Defender:

at is the demand for the Chicago De- became necessary to secure the best of distribution in New York City, ton, Baltimore and other large cities. necessary to engage the services of na- stributors. Our distributor, the Inter- News Company, of New York City, vers 6,700 newsstands in Greater New Distributors in other cities are covering stands and places of business.

he Negro newspapers—220 to be —Mr. Gordon says that 197 may ped as being little more than waste Of the remaining twenty-three he at ten while mediocre are of suffi- fluence to qualify for notice, even their editors use the paste pot and instead of printing original matter. ng the papers of what might be merit he mentions The Afro- an of Baltimore, The Defender of o, The Amsterdam News of New The Courier of Pittsburgh, The l and Guide of Norfolk, The Argus Louis, The Tribune of Philadelphia, ribune of Savannah, The Tribune shington, The Age of New York, all of Kansas City, The Whip of o, and The Bee of Chicago. About he following general comment is ze and makeup these papers greatly re- their more yellow daily contemporaries. ave, like the dailies, tiers upon tiers of ternating with black, headlines; con- tions of photographs of "society" folk, ats, footpads, pugilists, bootleggers, rs, school teachers, poets, politicians and s; comic strips, cartoons, and patent e advertisements; and women's, chil- sports, theatrical, and radio pages. In they have "race" syndicate features of ariety for every shade of taste.

* * *

column which Stoddard King nducts in the Spokane Spokesman- w is one of distinction from the int of press humor. But this para- is to call attention to his recent le, "What the Queen Said, and Fur- Facetious Fragments." These so- facetious fragments often strike a imaginative note in verse and have arkable variety in mode of treat- Mr. Stoddard's reputation as a nist is outshadowed by his fame author of that song entitled "The Long Trail."

* * *

book, "Newspapers in Community ervice," written by Norman J. Rad- ho is connected with the School of alism at the University of Indiana blished by McGraw-Hill Company ot by D. Appleton Company.

* * *

E article which opens Scribner's Magazine for June is from the pen Villam Allen White, editor of the ria (Kan.) Gazette. It tells how the high hat phalanx killed the progressive party, or—to use magazine language—it tells the story of the passing of the apostles of liberalism in the United States.

Mention is made in the opening paragraph of the editorials which Theodore Roosevelt wrote for the Kansas City Star, editorials through which Roosevelt "was feeling his way toward a platform for the party which he expected to lead." According to Mr. White, there was evidence in these editorials that Roosevelt was eager to get back to the old issues—back to Armageddon. This article ought to be read with considerable interest by editorial writers on political subjects.

GUTENBERG MUSEUM PROGRESS TOLD

Edwin E. Bartlett Says Precious Records of Early Printers Now Properly Arranged—U. S. Contribution Untouched

The past year has seen great progress in the administration of the Gutenberg Museum in Mainz, Germany, according to Edwin E. Bartlett, president of the Bartlett Orr Press and director of Linotype typography for the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, who recently returned from a visit to the Museum.

Officials of the Gutenberg Museum, Mainz, Germany, standing before the main portal of the building. They are (left to right, rear row): Herr Tolg, Karl Emil Gottelmann, Aloys Ruppel, Dr. W. Cunz (middle row) Dr. Rudolph Wolf, E. E. Bartlett (bottom row) Gustav Mori, J. W. Muller, and David Stempel.

"I visited Mainz in order to see what the Gutenberg Museum authorities had accomplished since I had last visited the institution a year ago as the bearer of a donation of 20,000 gold marks subscribed by American printers and book lovers to maintain and develop the international activities of this center for typographical research," he said. "Knowing the stress to which the city had been subjected as the after-effects of the war, I was amazed and delighted to find that by dint of intense personal efforts of directors and members, and through generous assistance of the city authorities, it has been possible in this short time to re-create an institutional work of the highest value and dignity. The precious records of the work of Gutenberg, Fust and Schöffer and their successors of the fifteenth century have been arranged in a manner that again makes the collection one of the best of its kind in the world. That indefatigable and unselfish friend of typography, David Stempel, head of the Schriftgiesserei D. Stempel of Frankfurt, has made it possible to erect a replica of a print shop of Gutenberg's period, complete with type-founding equipment, full fonts of the forty-two line bible type and the Fust and Schöffer Psalter types, and a wooden screw press built for the Museum by Frankenthal Albert & Co., whose director, Dr. Richard Ganns, is an enthusiastic supporter of the Gutenberg Society's efforts. The types are splendid examples of the typefounding art. They are not only astonishingly meticulous replicas. They are technically interesting because they were made as Gutenberg and his immediate successors are believed to have made theirs, and the Stempel type foundry produced them in exact accordance with the methods which their historical expert Gustav Mori has worked out in many years of research. With these types and on the wooden press the Museum has succeeded in producing replicas of such typographical masterpieces as the splendid Fust and Schöffer Psalterium of 1457, with its famous great B initial and other ornament, printed in red, blue and black at one impression in the same manner used in the original work.

"Another enrichment has been the establishment of a room for the permanent exhibition of modern typography, donated by the great type founding establishments of Germany as their united offering.

"By strenuous economy and hard individual work the city authorities and the museum officials have succeeded in bringing the institution to its present good condition without drawing on American contribution of 20,000 gold marks. There is already on the press an interesting volume, Das Gutenberg-Jahrbuch (The Gutenberg Year Book), which will be furnished to the members of the Gutenberg Society this month. Dr. Adolph Tronnier, chief librarian of the Mainz Stadt Bibliothek, has completed chart which illustrates how the printing art expanded through Europe in its first century.

"The society also has in course of completion about 100 lithographic plates of the splendid liturgical color printing of Erhard Ratdolt. The magnificence of these early achievements still stands without peer; and only those fortunate enough to possess the Ratdolt portfolio realize what an enrichment it will be for the whole printing world when this contemplated series can be finished."

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?

The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.

If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.

NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

Concentration

Ninety-six percent of The Sun's readers live in New York City and its suburbs.

Advertisers can reach the better-class families of the great New York market effectively and economically through the advertising columns of The New York Sun.

The Sun

280 Broadway New York

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.

The net paid average for the American was 57,503.

You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.

Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS

and

Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT

To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400

Chicago Office:
F. E. CRAWFORD
Western Manager
913 Hearst Bldg.

Detroit Office:
FRANKLIN PAYNE
Representative
1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

WE'RE ALWAYS BUSY—WHY?

Eighteen consecutive successful years of "Knowing How." Wire or write for details, references, etc.,

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

At present conducting third campaign within six years upon the WHEELING, W. VA., INTELLIGENCER.

Standardize Your Title To Perfection With Hardened Steel Newspaper Headings That Last Forever

A. J. SOSSNER
363 West Broadway
New York

LARGEST WEEKDAY CIRCULATION in the City

The Item Tribune

NEW ORLEANS

FRANK MUNSEY'S BODY BURIED IN MAINE

Was Interred May 26 in Family Plot at Lisbon Falls—Private Car Carries Executives from New York With Casket

The body of Frank A. Munsey, late publisher of the New York Sun, the New York Evening Telegram and magazines, was interred May 26, in the Munsey family plot in Lisbon Falls, Me.

Mr. Munsey died last Dec. 22 and his funeral was held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York. On the following day his body was placed in a vault in Woodlawn Cemetery, there to repose until spring.

A private car attached to the State of Maine Express carried Mr. Munsey's body and attendants from New York to Lewiston, Me., where automobiles were ready to complete the trip to Lisbon Falls. Those comprising the party from New York were:

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Dewart, Fred P. Shafer, James E. Craig, Fred A Walker, Robert H. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert T. Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Friendly, C. Howard Tate, Robert C. Ferris, E. O. Petersen, Miss Minnie Osterthal, Miss Hilda Neubert and Miss Daisy Sorensen, all of New York; Charles H. Stoddart of Chicago and Wilton J. Lambert and C. H. Pope of Washington.

NEW JERSEY PUBLISHER DIES

Chas. Hamilton Frost, Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News, Heart Disease Victim

Charles Hamilton Frost, 66, publisher of the Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News, died at his Plainfield home June 2, after a week's illness from heart disease.

Mr. Frost was born in Chicago and was graduated from Yale in 1892. In 1904 he became associated with his father, the late George H. Frost, then publisher of the Courier-News. Upon his father's death he became the publisher of the daily. He is survived by his wife and two daughters.

Canadian Agency Man Dies

W. H. Carswell, 47, manager of the Vancouver, B. C., office of McConnell, Ferguson Company, Ltd., advertising agents, London, Ont., died May 23. He was at one time Toronto representative of Montreal La Patrie, was later associated with billboard advertising and then went to Vancouver as business manager of the Sun, resigning some time ago to join McConnell, Ferguson Company.

Miami Advertising Man Killed

Joseph A. West, 32, assistant advertising manager of the Miami (Fla.) Daily Tab, was killed in an automobile accident in Miami, May 30. West, up until a few months ago, was advertising manager for the Philip Levy Company, furniture store, of Richmond, Va.

Richard A. Haughton Dead

Richard A. Haughton, 51, for the past two years state editor, Detroit Free Press, died Wednesday after illness of six weeks with acute Bright's disease. Haughton was Detroit correspondent of the New York Times, New York World and Los Angeles Times. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American war and for more than twenty years was telegraph operator on the Free Press.

Former News Man Ends Life

Charles M. Welch, 55, whose father was one of the original stockholders and vice-president of the Syracuse Herald, shot himself to death June 2, in Denver. Before he committed suicide he visited Denver newspapers, presenting them with a copy of his autobiography and a picture, and promising them a "good story." He himself had been a newspaper man and also the organizer of a printing company. Pinned to the lapel of his coat was a typewritten note which gave the cause of the suicide as inability to compete with modern industrial methods.

Troy (Pa.) Editor Dead

Frank E. Van Keuren, editor of the Troy (Pa.) Gazette and Register died suddenly June 1. He was born in Hammondsport, N. Y., in 1881 and started as a printer at the age of 17 with the Steuben (N. Y.) Courier. In 1884 he purchased the Mansfield (Pa.) Advertiser. In 1905 he become owner and editor of the Troy Gazette and Register. He was a member of the Troy Board of Education and a trustee of the State Normal School of Mansfield, Pa.

C. S. Rigsby, Cartoonist, Dies

Clarence S. Rigsby, cartoonist and illustrator, died May 25 in Seattle. Rigsby was originator of several comic strips, including "Major Ozone" and "Ah Sid, the Chinese Kid." He was a former staff artist for the New York Herald, New York World, and the Brooklyn Eagle, and a contributor to the Sam Lloyd Syndicate.

Perceval Gibbon, War Correspondent

Perceval Gibbon, writer and war correspondent, died on the Island of Guernsey on May 30. In 1917 and 1918, Mr. Gibbon was correspondent with the Italian army for the New York Times. His articles vividly portrayed the fighting along the Ionzo, the Piave, the Carso and elsewhere on the Italian front.

Obituary

M. C. Rice, 96, who founded the Westfield (N. Y.) Republican said to have been the first Republican newspaper, died recently at his home in Lawrence, Kan.

I. W. Parks, 76, who founded the Western Democrat, later known as the Western Call, and which is now the Beloit (Kan.) Daily Call, died recently.

J. Q. Converse, 81, who for 40 years had been the representative of the Columbus Ohio State Journal at Plain City, O., died a few days ago. He was a civil war veteran.

Martel B. Bryan, 58, who had been connected with the London (O.) Madison County Democrat all his life, died suddenly a few days ago.

Wilson Blue, 47, until recently telegraph editor of the Toronto Telegram, died suddenly May 27. He began his newspaper career on the Toronto Globe, then was connected in various capacities with the Winnipeg Free Press, Winnipeg Telegram, Victoria Colonist and Vancouver News-Advertiser. In 1918 he served on the staff of the Canadian Press.

John M. Hubbell, 56, former business manager of the Columbia (Mo.) Tribune, hanged himself in his room at the home of his sister, Mrs. N. H. Hickman, Columbia, Mo., May 22. Mr. Hubbell had been in poor health for several years.

Henry B. McIntyre, 71, father of O. O. McIntyre, writer of a New York column for the McNaught Syndicate, died at his home in Plattsburgh, Mo., Monday night.

Martin A. Delaney, 52, physical director and formerly "Keeping Fit" editor of the Chicago Evening American, fell dead June 1, while running for a street car.

Fred Hutchinson, pressman for the Chicago Herald and Examiner, died suddenly May 22 while standing near one of the Herald and Examiner presses.

Right to Remove Signs Challenged

The right of the Iowa State Highway Commission to remove advertising signs in its State-wide campaign has been challenged by the General Outdoor Advertising Company, which obtained a temporary injunction order last week against employees of the commission in Pottawattamie County. Harry Fitch, of the advertising company, claimed the Commission was removing signs on private property. The charge was denied by B. J. Conlon, of the Commission. The advertising agency has declared that if the injunction is not sustained the case will go to the supreme court.

Daily Building Model Home

Work has been commenced by the Staten Island Advance on a model home of the English cottage type to cost about $12,000. It is the first of three model homes to be erected by the paper this year.

MICHIGAN
and the
BOOTH NEWSPAPERS
THE LEADING NEWSPAPER IN GRAND RAPIDS—THE ONLY DAILY IN SEVEN OTHER CITIES

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd St.
New York City

J. E. LUTZ
Tower Building
Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday newspapers combined.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

have you been following the remarkable growth
of the Detroit Times

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.

It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42d St., New York City

The DES MOINES CAPITAL

Completely covers Des Moines' entire trade territory for you at a rate of 14c per line.

It is the best Advertising buy in the midwest

O'Mara & Ormsbee
Special Representatives

The DES MOINES CAPITAL
Lafayette Young
Publisher

FORMER SPHINX CLUB PRESIDENT DEAD

Preston P. Lynn, General Manager of the John Wanamaker New York Store, served as Head of Old Advertising Society

Preston P. Lynn, former president of the Sphinx Club, oldest advertising society in the country, and general manager of the John Wanamaker New York Store, died May 28, at his New York home.

Mr. Lynn was born in Danielsville, near Allentown, Pa., on Nov. 5, 1868. He was one of a large family of Pennsylvania Dutch stock. After attending the public schools of Allentown he entered the employ of John Wanamaker in Philadelphia.

He came to New York as a member of the executive staff under the late Robert C. Ogden and succeeded to the position of general manager upon the retirement of Mr. Ogden, holding it until his death.

R. F. R. Hunstman, Brooklyn Standard Union, and also active in Sphinx Club affairs was an honorary pall bearer at the funeral held in Allentown.

GIRLS' TEAM DEFEATS EDITORS

California Press Association Members Vanquished in Baseball Game

A number of California editors will never print another joke about the way a girl throws a baseball, for a team of editors was defeated 14 to 5 by the girl's baseball team of Humboldt Teachers' College at Arcata, Cal., Tues., May 18. The girls made nine runs in the first inning. The game was part of the entertainment for members of the California Press Association on their thirty-eighth annual excursion when the editors visited Arcata and Humboldt Teachers' College.

Governor Friend W. Richardson of California, president of the association, pitched the first ball. Ralph W. Bull of the Eureka Times and Fred P. Falkenberg, secretary, Arcata Chamber of Commerce, formerly a big league pitcher, umpired.

Newspaper men who played on the team defeated by the girls were:

J. E. Olmsted, Petaluma Argus; W. A. Shepard, Auburn Herald; Paul G. Jasper, Fortuna Beacon; M. R. Henry, Livermore-Herald; Paul W. Richardson, Berkeley Gazette; H. W. Amphlett, San Mateo Times; W. S. Clawson, Exeter Sun; George G. Radcliff, Watsonville Pajaronian; F. D. McPherson, Santa Cruz Sentinel; G. Lansing Hurd, Santa Rosa Republican; W. L. Murphy, Sonoma Index-Tribune; E. C. Stowe, Woodland Mail.

First British A.A.C.W. Delegate Here

The honor of being the first delegate to arrive in this country from England to attend the 22nd annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World must go to Sinclair Wood, who reached New York from London this week. Mr. Wood is director of Advertising & Publicity Limited of London. He plans to visit several cities in this country before going to Philadelphia.

There are 40 newsprint mills in the United States, with a total capacity of 5,506 tons daily.

COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS

International News Service

"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"

63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

FLASHES

And when she reads about the publicity that Miss Joyce Hawley has received and is receiving for her static immersion one wonders whether a telltale tear does not course down the cheek of Miss Gertrude Ederle.—F. P. A. in New York World.

Ten office boys went on strike in the Illinois Central headquarters at Chicago. How can science tell, we wonder, whether an office boy is on strike or on duty?—The New Yorker.

Prohibition is so young yet that there is still some doubt about the social standing of the bootleg rich.—Toledo Blade.

The need of the times is a vehicle you can ride down-town and then fold up and carry into the office.—Newcastle (Ind.) Courier.

Optimism is what you have when you have almost everything else.—New York Telegram.

At last America has trimmed Norway for the pole vaulting championship.—St. Louis Star.

We're gittin' too much service an' not enough o' what we buy fer our money these days.—Kin Hubbard.

African giants jump seven feet high. What couldn't they do with a little training at busy intersections!—Baltimore Sun.

We understand that a prominent woman author began writing "movie" scenarios when she was twelve years old. After witnessing many movies we had come to the conclusion that most of them were written by people even younger than that.—New York Herald Tribune.

BOISE DAILY SOLD

Capital-News Purchased by Mrs. Scripps, B. H. Canfield and Associates

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

BOISE, Idaho, June 2.—The Boise Capital News, evening, morning and Sunday paper, has been sold by E. H. Dewey and W. C. Dewey of Nampa, to the Western Scripps newspapers. The purchase was made by Leroy Sanders of Pasadena, Cal., in behalf of Mrs. Josephine Scripps.

The new corporation named its officers as follows: Leroy Sanders, president; H. A. Lawson, vice-president; Mrs. Josephine Scripps, treasurer; and R. E. Webster, secretary.

The new management announced that H. A. Lawson would continue as managing editor, and John W. Veatch as business manager. Plans are being made for a new plant as well as equipment improvements.

The Capital News was established in 1902 by R. S. Sheridan. It was acquired by the Deweys three years ago.

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.
PHILADELPHIA

Producers of . . .

SPARTAN TYPE METAL
Since 1866

LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE
COMBINATION

Stocks in Principal Cities

SUIT FOR $2,000,000 IS DISMISSED IN COURT

Judge Erlanger Throws Out Libel Complaint of Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce Against New York Graphic, for Beauty Show Probe

Justice Erlanger in New York Supreme Court June 3, dismissed the complaint of the Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce for $2,000,000 libel damages, against the New York Evening Graphic, growing out of the Macfadden tabloid's exposé of the 1925 bathing beauty pageant.

The Graphic in its exposé charged that the winner of the pageant was named by pre-arrangement. The Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce filed its libel suit Nov. 27, last year, alleging the reputation of its city had been damaged and that visitors would stay away from there and not spend their money there because of the Graphic's articles.

Attorney Schultz for the Graphic argued that the Chamber of Commerce, being a non-profit organization, legally could not sue for libel.

Secondly, he asserted, nothing libellous had been printed anyway. His third point was that the Pageant Committee had a perfect right to sell out to motion picture or theatrical interests if it wished. His fourth contention was that the exhibition was public and was therefore open to fair comment and criticism.

Alexander Visits Chicago

E. M. Alexander, vice-president of the New York American and director of nation advertising of the Chicago Herald and Examiner and New York American was in Chicago the week of May 23. He presided at a meeting of the national advertising staff during his visit.

The Bible continues to be the world's best seller, even tho no effort is made to suppress it.—Wichita Falls Record-News.

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market

For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

creating Impression!

nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

J. B. Woodward
110 E. 42d St.
New York

Woodward & Kelly
360 N. Mich. Ave.
Chicago

FIFTY YEARS A DRAMATIC CRITIC

J. S. Metcalfe, Wall Street Journal, Honored by "The First Nighters"

James S. Metcalfe, critic of the Wall Street Journal, was guest of honor at a luncheon given May 21, by "The First Nighters," an organization of dramatic critics and editors of New York and Brooklyn newspapers. Mr. Metcalfe has been a reviewer of plays for almost 50 years.

Among those who attended the luncheon were:

Alexander Woollcott, New York World; Gilbert W. Gabriel and Stephen Rathbun, New York Sun; John Anderson, New York Evening Post; E. W. Osborn and Bide Dudley, New York Evening World; Burns Mantle, New York Daily News; and Arthur Pollock, Brooklyn Eagle.

There Are No Other Newspapers Covering South Jersey Completely

From the Standpoint of the National Advertiser

CAMDEN COURIER
The MORNING POST

60,000 Circulation
Combination Rate

National Representatives:
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

DOMINANT!
in Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News
ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall

America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest
Growing Newspaper

To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS

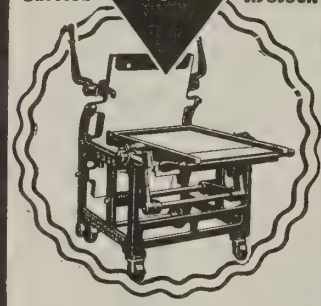
The only paper in St. Petersburg, Florida, whose application has been accepted by Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

Peoria
The Try-Out City
THE PEORIA
JOURNAL Transcript
Puts Tryouts Over!
CHAS. H. EDDY CO.
New York - Chicago - Boston

Supplies—Equipment

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money



Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

The Monomelt Co.
4509-19 Ravenswood Ave.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Rebuilt GOSS & HOE PRESS BARGAINS

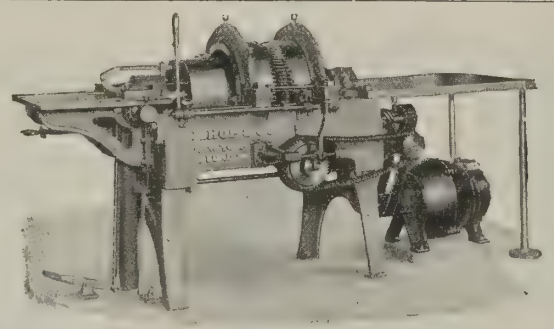
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO – NEW YORK – LONDON

USED NEWSPAPER PRESSES

Scott 16, 24 and 32-Page Presses

GOSS 24 and 28-page presses good for black or color work, also Goss Sextuple.



HOE Pony Quadruple, Quadruple, Sextuple, Sextuple color Press, Octuple and Double Sextuple Presses.

DUPLEX Metropolitan Quadruple stereotype presses—print up to 32 pages.

Available For Early Delivery

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
Main Office & Factory.....Plainfield, N. J.
New York Office..Brokaw Bldg., 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office.....Monadnock Block

Hoe Automatic Curved Plate Trimming and Shaving Machine

A Machine that will trim, tail-cut and shave five or six Stereo Plates a minute efficiently and economically. Arranged with Motor Drive connected by a Silent Chain.

R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand St., New York City
7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL. | also at DUNELLEN, N. J. | 7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

ALWAYS IN DEMAND

Newspapers provide a market for Equipment and Supplies that demands constant touch between the Manufacturers and the Buyers. Not always is it possible to have a salesman on the spot, but always available is a copy of

Editor & Publisher

If it carries your message you are well represented

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
2 Times — .35 per line
3 Times — .30 per line

ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insertions. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE.

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want more business, communicate with the International Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 1004, 1841 Broadway, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Evening Paper that I can recommend—Location, Ohio; field exclusive; equipment modern; circulation 6,500; gross receipts over $100,000; present net earning over $15,000, can easily be increased by change in management; price $140,000, half cash. J. B. Shale, Times Building, New York.

Two Important Newspapers, located respectively in Illinois and Texas, are available for purchase in a private way on a basis of capitalizing profits at 15%, involving from $300,000 to $500,000 on each property. Please give financial references. The H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill.

PRESS CONTROL C-H
"Safest System in the World"

For large and small plants

Cutler-Hammer Controllers for presses of every size and for every type of motor-driven machine.

Address all communications:
The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Manufacturers of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

CUTLER-HAMMER

Modern Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—A real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

Brokers

Omar D. Gray, who sold a quarter of a million dollars' worth of newspaper properties last year and who is the only man in the world who makes a specialty of consolidating newspaper plants in the same city and who has been very successful in this work, visiting all sections of the United States in this line of endeavor, writes us from Sturgeon, Missouri, as follows:

"I have been so busy meeting newspaper men in conventions in Iowa, Missouri and Illinois and shaping up newspaper deals that I have had to neglect preparing my ads. I have three nice deals just ready to close and I hope to close at least two of them before I go with Dean Walter Williams to Jackson, Mo., June 5-6, to be with the Southeast Missouri editors and then motor on down to Jackson, Miss., to be with the Mississippi editors in convention. Dean Williams and I will stop at approximately fifty newspaper offices enroute to these two conventions.

"I have newspaper offices listed in forty-four states. Most of them are priced right and if you want to buy a newspaper plant, write and tell me how much money you have to pay down, and about what you want and I will try to find just the office that suits you.

"I have a small weekly in Indiana which can be purchased for a very little money down because the owner was compelled on account of ill health to leave that state.

"I have two wonderful weekly newspaper propositions in Missouri which can be purchased for about $15,000 down—balance on easy terms.

"I have a money making daily in North Dakota which together with building is priced at $160,000. Another good daily in this same state with building for $65,000—half cash.

"Can sell half interest in Illinois daily for $5,000—half cash or the whole plant for $10,000—half cash.

"I have a morning daily paper making money in Oregon with building for $100,000—$40,000 cash.

"I have two newspaper plants in Oklahoma owned by the same man, one is a daily priced at $23,000 with only $7,500 down; the other a weekly priced at $20,000, reasonable payment down. Large job business.

"I have an Oklahoma weekly netting $4,000 which $2,000 down will buy—balance on good terms.

"I have a daily in Alabama clearing $1,000 per month and a weekly in Texas clearing equally as much which should sell quickly.

"I have a number of good newspapers listed for sale in Arkansas, one in a city of 3,500, clearing $5,500 per year, which can be bought for $43,500 cash and terms on balance.

"You can pay $2,500 down and get $1,000 credit on an Oklahoma weekly.

"Good Nebraska weekly which can be bought for $4,000 down.

"Missouri Catholic weekly making a lot of money and can be bought right.

"$50,000 buys a Florida daily. $50,000 buys a Republican afternoon daily in city of 25,000 with a wonderful press and equipment and a chance to make plenty of money. $25,000 cash will handle.

"Two afternoon Republican dailies in a state capitol of 20,000 people. Can consolidate and make wonderful field. It will take $40,000 cash to handle, balance on easy terms.

"I can sell you for $20,000 down a $40,000 newspaper proposition in Ohio which is clearing better than $20,000 a year. The man who owns it has not had a day's vacation in years and he must let loose. No better proposition on this earth in the newspaper game.

"Fine proposition near St. Louis—running four papers with good job patronage. Takes very little money to handle.

"Will sell a half interest or all in Iowa weekly which is making good money.

"Clayton T. Rand, president of the Mississippi Press Association, has just written me asking if I will deliver an address at the June meeting of the association in Jackson, Miss., on "The Advantages That Come With Newspaper Consolidations." And I have written him today I will do this. I like to kill newspapers. I commit newspaper murder regularly about every sixty days. I am working on seven newspaper consolidations right now. I am rendering real service to the communities and to newspaper men when I succeed in my work. I get calls to go all over the United States. If you want my services better write quickly because I am dated up pretty well until the first of August and I am going to Europe early in September, 1926, to tour with the Press Congress of the World and I will not be back before some time in November. I have been working hard and it is about time to play a little.

"On May 30 after I had written and mailed the lines above I received a letter from a client in Paris, France, asking me to help him select and purchase a good weekly or daily paper in California. I want to list at once a dozen California newspapers which are for sale. Kindly give full information in first letter.

"$2,500 cash will put you in full control of a good weekly in Oklahoma, balance easy terms."

Interest For Sale

Interest in Daily for sale; in exclusive field; carrying position of manager. Applicant should have ten thousand dollars. Address A-542, Editor & Publisher.

Partner Wanted—For live Iowa daily newspaper in town of 8,000. Must have $15,000. This is a good opportunity for an ambitious and experienced young man. Address A-531, care of Editor & Publisher.

Employment—Equipment—Services

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Newspapers For Sale

nall Afternoon Daily for sale in fast growing astern Carolina town. Only daily in five unties. Unlimited opportunities. A-553, ditor & Publisher.

ewspaper and Job Printing Plant for sale at al bargain; desirable location New York State. rice $3,000, half cash. A-550, Editor & Pubsher.

CIRCULATION

Premiums

remiums of every description. Your Publisher kes no risk. C. R. Bailey, Hoboken, N. J. ormerly New York. Estab. 1888.

Promotion

rculation—When quick, additional circulation verage becomes necessary, remember that our enty years in this one line of endeavor is ur proof against experimenting. Write or re Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell ock, Cincinnati, Ohio.

rculation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Cene Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesanship Club Campaigns.

rculation Promotion—Get our quotations on nner ware for premium use. Plans, assistnce and canvassers outfits gratis; also excelnt material for R. F. D. promotion. The lbright China Co., 104 W. 5th street, Palyra, N. J.

EDITORIAL

Syndicate Features

ansas City Kansan and Lorain, Ohio, Journal, e the new customers this week. Write for mples of a live, alert, up-to-date service, to he Graphic Syndicate, 25 City Hall Place, ew York.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

dvertising Salesman and Copy Writer wanted leading semi-weekly newspaper, forty inutes from Pennsylvania station. Excellent portunity. A-526, Editor & Publisher.

dvertising Solicitor wanted immediately for stest growing daily in Westchester County, ew York. Must be go-getter. Write, stating perience, salary expected and when available. 545, Editor & Publisher.

ssistant City Editor, morning newspaper ew England city of 100,000. Capable of ndling telegraph. A-552, Editor & Publisher.

rculation Manager—Central States evening ily in city of 15,000. Able to install A. B. , build city circulation personally. Write full tails, age, experience, salary and how soon uld report. A-532, Editor & Publisher.

ty Circulation Manager for morning newsper in highly competitive field. Unusual portunity for able, energetic circulation man th ability. Must be used to hard competition d be able to make a success in city work. ve information as to experience, newspapers which applicant has been employed and in at capacity; salary expected, age, and when n accept position. A good opportunity for a ungster to make an established future with a od newspaper. A-535, Editor & Publisher.

oreman in Composing Room wanted by morng newspaper in a Texas city. Must be a st class make up man and able to work n. References required. Address A-527, litor & Publisher.

ewspaper Advertising Man who knows how get business himself and can direct work of ner salespeople. For such a man who can rnish satisfactory reference and who can make od, a position as manager of Western Branch fice of Syndicate will soon be open. Tell all out yourself first letter. All replies conential. Salary to start $3,000 and bonus. 524, Editor & Publisher.

o Display Salesmen wanted; one for genal accounts and one specializing in realty deopment. Must be able to make lay-outs and ate and hold new accounts for progressive ly in fastest growing section of Michigan. ecutive experience valuable. Write immedily giving salary now receiving; experience, mples of work, references and when available. dress Leader-Press Co., Mt. Clemons, Mich.

A Circulation or Advertising Service can fiction without changing your present staff.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Printing Plant Manager Wanted—An opportunity for a man of sterling character and proven ability as Production Manager in one of the oldest printing businesses in the South. The plant is splendidly equipped and has regular customers, which supply a large part of its work, but the business is in a position to expand under proper conditions and in a very marked degree. There is an opening for a trained executive, familiar with modern practices, to develop twice the business that is now being done and this is the reason for this advertisement. The reputation of the company as to honor, integrity and fair dealing is second to none in the country. In its selection of a man of the type required, character will be considered first. Address with all essential particulars as to fitness, including age of applicant. A-537, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Salesman desires connection where result-producing effort will win advancement. General newspaper experience. A-529, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager of 12 years' experience wishes to connect with wide-awake newspaper as advertising or business manager. Have worked on Philadelphia and Washington papers. Am a real business getter. Not afraid of hard work or long hours. Married. Age 32. Could be available some time in June. If you are interested in securing the services of a man with real ability. Address B-999, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—87% increase in earnings; 16,077 ads gained; 56% increase in rate; 60% more contracts signed, all in 4 years as advertising manager on last paper, morning and Sunday, in city of 300,000. Facts and figures to prove past accomplishments. Congenially employed but lack of activity in other departments forces me to look for connection with live, wide awake organization. Prefer evening and Sunday paper. A-533, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Desires place on Southwestern paper. Prefer Oklahoma. Will go elsewhere. Young, aggressive, experienced copy and layout man. Knows national and merchandising field. Good personality. Splendid references. Married. Available June 15th. A-536, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor, with executive experience, wants to connect with newspaper where there is a chance to build special advertising. All-around newspaper man. A-1 references. A-548, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist: Young artist with five years' experience in art departments on newspapers in the East desires new connections with paper in fair sized town. Will go anywhere as long as there is an opportunity to make a name for himself. Samples of work on request. Courtney Dunkel, care Baltimore News, Baltimore, Maryland.

Circulation Manager—If I were your circulation manager

—I'd need no prodding, for I'd travel every possible avenue for development.

—Your competitor would rarely if ever get the jump on anything old or new in sane circulation promotion ideas or methods, and when he did I wouldn't sleep well until it was paid back double.

—I wouldn't merely buy circulation. I'd build it and build it as solidly, quickly and economically as it could be built.

—I'd constantly look for leaks in the department and plug them.

—I'd turn savings effected by elimination of waste and lost motion into circulation by diverting the savings to promotion.

—I would, above all, view things always from your angle, and would conduct myself and the department in such a manner that nothing but credit could be reflected to your own judgment in engaging me.

If you are a publisher in a city of 100,000 or more, and believe that a top-notcher at $6,500 is a better investment than a mediocre man at $4,000, and you are looking for the former, I am sure it will pay you to investigate if you are in the market for a circulation manager. Twenty-one of my 33 years have been spent in and around the circulation department of newspapers. My record of clean accomplishment in twelve years of circulation management qualifies me as a safe investment for any publisher. I am employed at present, but contemplate an immediate change. You can address me in absolute confidence for further information. A-554, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, successful, is seeking new connection. Experience from ground up, always up, and never a failure. No floater. In present position. six years. A-540, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager—Mr. Publisher, can you use exceptionally good circulation man with clean record, proven ability as producer, with maintenance at low cost. A circulation business man with thorough knowledge of circulation work. References: Present and past employers. If interested, wire or write Ivan C. Moore, 1314 State & City Bank Building, Richmond, Virginia.

City or Managing Editor with twenty years' experience, available June 20th because of sale. A news executive with successful record. Best of recommendations. A-543, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Circulation Man—Where results count. Thoroughly familiar with boy and men methods and all phases of circulation promotion. Will take charge of carriers, suburban or district. Live wire, can produce the goods. Thrive on difficult tasks and opportunity. References exchanged. A-541, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial, Desk Work or Copy Reading, wanted by experienced newspaper man who knows all angles of newspaper making. New York or vicinity. Prefer magazine or book work. A-522, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Man of 16 years' experience in reportorial, desk and editorial work wants position as editor or editorial writer east of Mississippi. Is 40, democrat, married; has two college degrees and legal training; now associate editor leading daily in city of over 100,000. Could make change in four or six months. A-534, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Department Man—Thoroughly experienced editorial department executive, who has held posts as city, telegraph and news editor and head of universal copy desk. A No. 1 on make-up. Thirty-six, married. Employed, but can leave on reasonable notice. A-551, Editor & Publisher.

Field Representative—Widely experienced, energetic man wishes to join publisher's staff as confidential research man or field secretary. Has original plans for this work. Twenty years connection with publishing, writing, advertising, promotional work, newsprint paper. Executive capacity, but available for subordinate connection to demonstrate qualities. Has published own small magazine for several years. Holds substantial public position; confident public speaker; has addressed scores of varied gatherings. Served in U. S. Army and Navy, holding executive rank. Widely traveled, matured; seasoned. Highest type commercial and personal references. (Ability as amanuensis.) Right man to relieve overburdened general manager of many problems. Wishes to engage exclusively with magazine or newspaper publishing enterprises. A-544, Editor & Publisher.

General Manager—Some Newspaper Publisher in a city of 250,000 or more, needs a new General Manager. If you are that Publisher or Owner you can now get the man you want. He has brains, youth (33 years old) experience, ability and personality. A wire or letter addressed to A-539, Editor & Publisher, will bring him for an interview.

Managing Editor, with tried and successful record, voluntarily seeks change for best of reasons. Strong executive, good organizer, knows news and can handle men. Experience touches metropolitan and smaller field. No failures in record of 15 years constant employment. College man, 39, with no bad habits. Aggressive, yet safe, and strong editorial-writer. Minimum salary $65. Details gladly supplied. A-519, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor or News Editor—Must make change because of wife's health. 35 years old with record of uncommon achievements in daily field. Desires city under 100,000 where there is opportunity to build downtrodden paper. 15 years' experience. Address A-528, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Fourteen years on largest metropolitan dailies, thoroughly competent if given co-operation. A-549, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent, technical and practical. Experience covering a number of years as supervising erector for R. Hoe & Co. Any size daily considered. E. J. Preston, 1495 Newton street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Mechanical Superintendent or foreman desires position. Capable executive and organizer. Familiar with all mechanical requirements. Well recommended. Afternoon paper preferred. Interview at your convenience. East preferred. Address A-509, Editor & Publisher.

News Executive position on small city afternoon daily desired by college graduate with six years' experience on telegraph and city desks with papers of 12,000 to 35,000. A-538, Editor & Publisher.

Office Manager, now connected with a New York suburban newspaper, will be available about July first. Has been in charge of business management. A-546, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter:—Experienced, specialties sports and features, desires position near New York. Excellent references. A-547, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Reporter and Proofreader—Young man, 28 years of age, University graduate, with two years' experience desires position with live newspaper. Available June 20. References. D. H. Taylor, 297 Hancock Ave., Athens, Georgia.

Superintendent of Mechanical Department desires position. Best of references. Employed at present but wife's health demands change of climate. A-512, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Cox Duplex eight page perfecting press for sale; with motor and 16 chases, type-setting machines and complete equipment for small daily. Also some job printing equipment. For sale in whole or in part. This plant was lately in operation. Can be seen by appointment. Low price for quick sale. P. O. Box 1005, Fall River, Mass.

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE

Florida bi-weekly newspaper with job plant. City has 12,000 population, county seat. Circulation, 3,000; advertising rate, 50 cents an inch. Weekly revenue, $500 for newspaper. Job plant does $15,000 annually. Price for both, $25,000. Terms to suit.

PALMER,
De WITT & PALMER
Newspaper Properties
350 Madison Ave., NEW YORK

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

EDITORIAL AND FEATURE WRITER, with over three years' experience on large city daily, is seeking new connection. Ready to go anywhere for right position. "Unusually bright; well educated; great student; will make extraordinary writer." Age 26; college graduate. Mention our No. 5340-B.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Publishers!

Secure your Executives through the Classified Department of

Editor & Publisher

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

HABERDASHERS, men's clothiers, hatters and gift stores should be excellent prospects for cooperative local ads just before the 20th of June. This date has been reserved for Fathers' Day this year and haberdashers are preparing to take advantage of it, saying it with neckties.—C. M. L.

"Greater Milwaukee" was the title of a full page co-operative advertisement that appeared in the Milwaukee Journal recently. The ad asked "Do you know Milwaukee?" Then followed a list of many of the industries that Milwaukee led in or is near the top in. A short story on the progress of Milwaukee was contained in the advertisement. Then in another column were the names of some of the leading industries in the city who had made the advertisement possible. Such an advertisement boosts the city and is possible in an industrial community.—Wilbur Polson, Milwaukee.

Here's a novelty that can be varied to suit local conditions. An Indiana paper had the following box on page one:

"TEN ITEMS AND THEY SAVE YOU $50

"In this issue, are advertised a number of savings for readers. Just ten of these, selected at random will save you $50 over the regular cost. These items have been numbered—one in each advertisement—for your convenience to show the point. Hunt them out for it will be well worth your time."

Then in each of ten advertisements, one particular item was picked out and given a consecutive number. The stunt gave a contest flavor to the regular advertising and at the same time drew the readers attention to all of the advertisements.—B. A. T.

Where in a radius of 50 miles of your city can all-night automobile service be obtained? Such information would be mighty valuable to those of your readers who go away on week-end trips and who get into trouble coming home. Run a half page or page of ads of concerns in the fifty mile radius giving all night auto service.—F. H. Williams.

Reduction in the number of heads written by copy readers and which went to the composing room with too many units to a line, was accomplished by one newspaper by the posting daily of the original copy on all such heads, with the actual amount of time wasted by the compositor and the copy reader on the heads. The amount of lost time made a real impression and since the plan was first inaugurated, wonderful results have been accomplished.—B. A. T.

Now is the time to play for big classified copy on the sale of used cars. Used car companies welcome the opportunity to tie up with a good sales campaign. Front-page boxed cut and story calling attention to bargains listed is good sidelight. Land the first big ad and the others follow.—C. W. Myers.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

PREPARE a blank with spaces for the essential facts regarding weddings, such as time, place, minister, bridegroom and attendants, bride and attendants, parents of both, with perhaps a few other facts. Supply all your ministers with pads of the blanks. Ask them to fill them in for each wedding and then send or telephone them. If they fill in the blank and then 'phone they will be more apt to get in the essential facts. This will furnish a basis for such further coverage as the importance of the parties warrants. —Guy M. Chase.

What is the income of the professional beggar? Failing to get accurate information by interview a reporter on a Northwestern paper bought dark glasses, pencils and shoe strings and posed as a blind beggar.

The "blind man" peeked every time a coin was dropped in his cup and was thus able to determine the relative generosity of men and women. The material gathered by the experience and a cut of the reporter garbed as a beggar made an interesting feature lay out.—E. J. Fitzharris.

In June many young hopefuls are let loose upon the world. Where do all the college graduates go and what becomes of them? Do all the technical grads go into technical work? What happens to the girl graduates, do they all get married? Here is a live and timely feature subject that is sure to be not only interesting but amusing as well.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston.

The St. Louis Times catches and holds the interest of women readers with a daily feature under a two-column art head, "What St. Louis Women Are Doing." Feminine civic, community and club activities form the basis of the content. Society news is excluded to a separate department.—C. W. Myers.

What are some of the plans devised by insurance men in your city to assist clients who pay instalments of only a few cents a week? Many local family heads carry insurance as low as $100 and have difficulty in scraping together the payments. A good story may be obtained regarding the trials of collectors who tramp many blocks to receive ten cents a week. What about car-fare?—F. D. Van Luven.

There is a code of etiquette often violated by the average business house, public building superintendent and householder who uses the American flag in a variety of ways on July 4 as well as other national holidays. Why not run information prior to Independence Day on the correct method of using the flag? The A. G. O. office of the War Department at Washington, D. C., can supply the necessary text to describe in a box the proper use of the flag for your local folk.—C. M. L.

A new feature of the Hartsdale (N. Y.) Herald that seems to supply a local need is a department "I Should Like to Know," wherein questions of fact, as to local government or officials, local historical events, local individuals or any other perplexing matters of local import asked by residents are answered by authorities.—G. Harris Danzberger.

The Ironton (O.) News heads a first-page column of editorial comment "Station NEWS—The Editor Broadcasting." This is additional, of course, to regular editorial matter.—C. W. Myers, Dayton (O.) News.

The Montreal Daily Star and La Patrie, English and French evening papers of that city have started a daily feature entitled "Learn French" in the English paper and "Learn English" in the French paper. It is prepared by the chief city librarian and in the English paper gives each day a few sentences in English with the French translation and the pronunciation of French words to suit English ears. The French daily handles the feature vice versa. The papers point out that the lessons offer an opportunity to earn increased salaries and to help in any present occupation, particularly where both languages are mutually recognized.—F. D. H., Montr Star.

George W. Hedden, Buffalo fire ch says the character of fires has chan within the past few years. Forr causes have been removed by increa vigilance and improved methods, greater use of gasoline, fuel oil and ot inflammables has created new risks wh are responsible for many serious fi What has been the experience of y fire chief? A warning from him n prevent serious conflagrations.—E. V.

In connection with the weather fc cast printed in the "ear" each day, Toledo Blade also runs two additio lines telling which was the coldest which was the warmest city in Uni States the preceding day. The inforr tion is obtained from the daily weat table furnished by the Toledo weat station. This is a feature which the p lic talks about.—Max Hahn.

THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Mutual Tower
MEMPHIS, TENN.
CREATORS OF LOCAL DISPLAY FROM A NEW SOURCE
Our Business Review and many other feature pages now running in more than 80 leading American and Canadian newspapers. Write or wire for our representative.

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

RADIO PROGRAMS
NEWS NOTES
FEATURES
Used and Praised by More than 200 Newspapers
Send for samples and prices
AUDIO SERVICE
326 West Madison St.
Chicago

The Morning Telegraph
Is the giant influence on the Turf, in Society, Music, Theatre, Motion Picture and Finance, having the largest circulation of any Daily in the United States at a ten-cent Price.
Circulated in every State in the Union and the principal capitals of Europe. An exclusive market for its advertisers.
The Morning Telegraph
50th St. & 8th Ave., N. Y. City

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION
Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.
Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

INDUSTRY now rivals cotton as KING of the SOUTH!

Cotton is still the big industry in the South, but other industries will soon rival cotton as King.

The low cost of manufacturing steel products, because of the abundance of coal, iron ore and limestone in Alabama, is attracting Northern business men with capital and vision.

Already every type of industrial enterprise is producing goods in the South and its workers have never experienced such prosperity.

Get in on the fertile market. Reach the better class of workers through the Daily papers listed below.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
ALABAMA
*Mobile News-Item (E)	11,993	.05	.05
*Mobile Register (M)	20,427	.08	.08
*Mobile Register (S)	32,096	.10	.10
FLORIDA
†Daytona Beach News (ES)	5,731	.04	.04
*Florida Times-Union (M) 49,903 (S)	59,239	.12(S.15)	.12(S.15)
*Lakeland Ledger (E)	5,173	.03	.03
*Miami Herald (M)	48,108	.11	.11
*Miami Herald (S)	60,006	.12	.12
*Orlando Reporter-Star (E)	8,502	.06	.06
*Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	10,655	.06	.06
*Pensacola News and Journal (E&M)	9,805	.06	.06
†St. Petersburg Independent (E)	11,917	.055	.055
Tampa Telegraph (M) 12,850 (S)	25,280	.06	.07
*Tampa Times (E)	23,325	.08	.08
†Tampa Tribune (M) 34,841 (S)	53,762	.09(.118)	.09(.118)
*West Palm Beach Post (M)	12,243	.06	.06
GEORGIA
*Augusta Herald (E)	14,246	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald (S)	14,547	.05	.05
*Macon Telegraph (M)	24,035	.08	.08
*Macon Telegraph (S)	24,439	.08	.08
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,015. (S)	22,204	.06(.078)	.06(.078)
KENTUCKY
*The Lexington Leader (E)	19,640	.06	.06
*The Lexington Leader (S)	19,531	.06	.06
Paducah Sun (E)	9,255	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Greensboro Daily News (M)	27,485	.08	.07
†Greensboro Daily News (S)	31,505	.09	.08
†Raleigh News and Observer (M)	33,515	.08	.08
†Raleigh News and Observer (S)	36,318	.09	.09
†Winston-Salem Journal (M)	13,702	.05	.05
†Winston-Salem Journal (S)	13,720	.05	.05
*Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	18,259	.07	.07
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia State (M)	23,663	.07	.07
Columbia State (S)	24,838	.07	.07
Greenville News (M)	21,704	.075	.07
*Spartanburg Journal (E)	4,613	.05	.05
*Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,860 (S)	9,856
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times (M)	30,203	.10	.10
Chattanooga Times (S)	30,230	.10	.10
*Memphis Commercial Appeal (M)	100,934	.18	.18
*Memphis Commercial Appeal (S)	129,219	.21	.21
*Nashville Banner (E)	54,519	.11	.11
*Nashville Banner (S)	56,007	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
*Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	14,313	.05	.05
*Danville Register (Sunday)	9,065
*Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,968	.05	.05
*Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,413
*Roanoke Times & World News (M&E)	25,772	.08	.08
*Roanoke Times (S)	16,076	.07	.07
*Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,855	.035	.035

* A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
 A. B. C. Statement, September 30, 1925.
† Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

WORKS NOT WORDS

NOT mere volumes of words has placed a few successful newspapers in the twenty-million linage class, or others in the group printing more than ten million lines annually.

Not mere volume of words has won the place for Consolidated Press writers in those successful papers.

You will find C. P. A. writers in the dominating papers of all the way from ten-thousand circulation to a half-million daily.

You will find these distinctive dispatches in papers whose copy desks winnow C. P. A. from a grist of hundreds of thousands of words from half a dozen wires.

You will find them in complete and successful newspapers in which C. P. A. supplements a single spot news wire.

Like the papers they serve, they are selected; the writers selected from their professional competitors; their terse and authoritative dispatches selected from the mass of copy that pours over the desks.

By their works they are known: authoritative, distinctive, interpretative dispatches, essential to the complete newspaper, and for only one newspaper in each city.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Third Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Bulletin Building	19 Rue d'Antin

THIS ISSUE:—COMPLETE REPORT OF CIRCULATION MANAGERS' CONVENTION

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1926

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 3 NEW YORK, JUNE 12, 1926 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

A Renewed Vote of Confidence

In the cabinet form of government in operation in many of the leading nations of the world, the prime minister, as the head of the government, continues in office only as long as he retains the confidence of a majority in the popular branch of the parliament.

and by a Still Greater Majority

YEAR after year the department stores of Chicago have placed the preponderance of their advertising in The Daily News—and in the first four months of 1926 they have placed a still greater proportion in The Chicago Daily News.

This is, and should be, of particular significance to other advertisers at this time. It is a renewed vote of confidence and by a still greater majority from that group of advertisers who are the shrewdest appraisers of every factor that enters into the cost—and the returns—of newspaper advertising in Chicago.

Total Department Store Advertising Lineage in Chicago Daily Newspapers

	First Four Months of 1926	First Four Months of 1925	Comparison Gain—Loss
The Daily News	2,428,633	2,214,829	213,804 Gain
Second paper	909,665	1,065,411	155,746 Loss
Third paper	704,964	668,636	36,328 Gain
Fourth paper	488,491	565,760	77,269 Loss
Fifth paper	325,698	292,709	32,989 Gain
Sixth paper	224,370	232,271	7,901 Loss

A detailed analysis of the department store advertising situation in Chicago, showing the lineage used by each store in each newspaper, will be sent upon request.

There is no safer guide for advertisers than to "Follow the Department Stores." They know the returns from a given expenditure in each of the newspaper advertising mediums of a city, and in Chicago show their "confidence" by concentrating in

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

SCOTT "Multi-Unit" FLOOR FED OCTUPLE PRESS

INDEPENDENT ADJUSTMENT

An Important Feature of Every Scott Folder

The folding blade of a Scott Folder, driven by chrome nickel steel gears, can be adjusted regardless of the cut. The folder can be set to fold square under any and all conditions and at any given speed.

The blade motion is transmitted through plain spur gearing. There are no internal gears or other complicated parts to cause trouble.

The folding rollers can be widely separated without pulling the gears out of mesh, thus facilitating the handling of high speed production.

Scott Folders are built to the same and undeviating standard as Scott Presses—"One Quality—The Best."

Scott

"Multi-Unit" and "Straight-Unit" Presses

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office & Factory - Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
New York Office - - - - - 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office - - - 1441 Monadnock Block
Cable Address: WALTSCOTT NEW YORK

A thousand swing into action

¶ Twice a day on weekdays—once on Sundays—there are 93 square miles of Baltimore to be covered.

¶ When the signal comes (and that signal is the first run of the first city editions) a thousand men swing into action.

¶ To every corner of the city and the suburbs they carry the Sunpapers. But they do not stop on the corners! The Sunpapers these Sun Carriers take out are delivered right at the doors of regular Sunpaper subscribers.

¶ Street sales are another story—an important one, too! But the thing we want to impress on you now is that a force of over one thousand men is required to make deliveries of the Sunpapers to the homes of Baltimore.

¶ When your advertisement appears in the columns of the Sunpapers, this flying column of a thousand comes under your command—detailed to carry your message to the homes you want to reach in Baltimore.

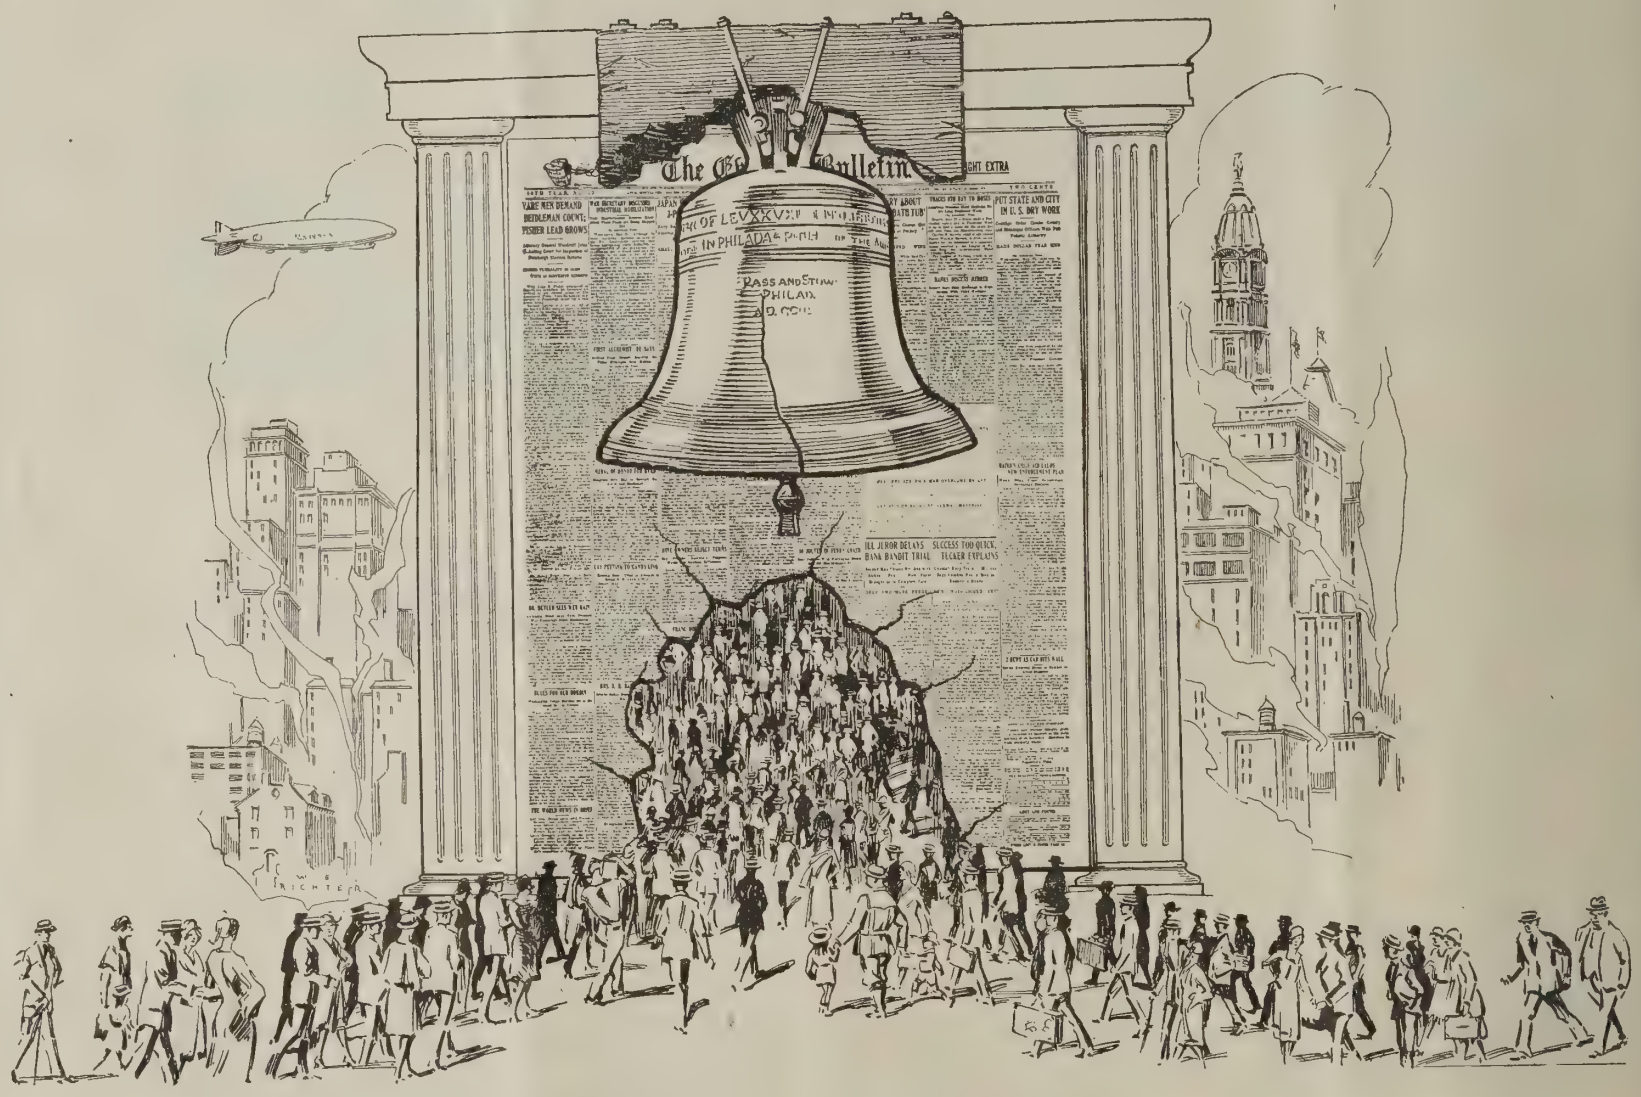
May Average Net Paid Circulation

Daily (M. & E.) . . 252,330
Sunday 192,051

A Gain of 7,468 Daily and 6,526 Sunday Over May, 1925

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg.,
110 E. 42d St., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago



Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"—They Say "SUNpaper"

The Door to Philadelphia
Is through
The Evening Bulletin

HERE is your chance to analyze a great newspaper's circulation at first hand. When you come to the Advertising Convention you will see that The Bulletin is the door to the Philadelphia market.
In homes where you are entertained—wherever you go—you will notice that "In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin."

Philadelphia's city and suburban population exceeds 3,300,000.
A copy of The Evening Bulletin reaches practically every family in Philadelphia, Camden and Suburbs daily.

The Evening Bulletin.
PHILADELPHIA

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St. at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 59 NEW YORK, JUNE 12, 1926 No. 3

Billions the Tax Collector Doesn't Touch Can Buy Nationally Advertised Goods

Fallacy of Coincidence Between Circulation Figures and Income Tax Roster Exposed by Bureau of Advertising Analysis of Market Cultivation Through Daily Papers

This clear and masterly exposition of the elasticity, range and penetrative quality of newspaper advertising is taken from a book to be issued next week by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The book was written by William A. Thomson, director of the bureau. Extensive statistics supplement the chapter quoted on this page, several pages being credited to EDITOR & PUBLISHER International Year Book. A survey of the Canadian market by Arthur Partridge, manager and secretary of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association, is also included.

"MARKET CULTIVATION" has become a standardized phrase in national selling.

WILLIAM A. THOMSON

It marks a comparatively recent realization that it pays to sell merchandise where and when people want it—and have the money to buy it.

Changes in national advertising methods have come with this newer objective in distribution. The sales manager who searches the continent for good markets, works with the advertising man who seeks the best means of "covering" these markets.

Those who sell advertising, quick to grasp the needs of the hour, turn their energies toward compilations that prove "market coverage" for their several mediums.

Economists encourage careful market study as a means of combating higher selling costs. Secretary Hoover gave weight and impetus to the idea by declaring to the National Distribution Conference that one notable cause of economic waste was expenditure of "effort and money in advertising and sales promotion without adequate information on which to base" the effort.

Experience with competition constantly spurs the national advertiser to intensify his search for "logical markets."

Advertising, therefore, like selling, goes on a specific rather than a general mission today. Its job is to sell the goods where the goods are offered for sale.

It may be argued that many advertisers still use advertising for "general results" to "impress the trade," to "influence the dealer." Yet this advertising usually is made to represent a very definite consumer objective. It may appear to be merely a gesture for the retailer's benefit, a "flash" to arrest his interest in a product he is asked to stock. Yet it is interpreted to him in figures purporting to show its influence upon portions of his trade—his own customers. Sometimes he is induced to "tie in" with it in his own advertising.

A few years ago there began much discussion of the "trend toward newspapers" in national advertising. This trend has gone hand-in-hand with the movement in merchandising toward market cultivation. One after another, national advertisers have admitted the soundness of basing sales activity upon market analysis and have called upon newspaper advertisements to sell their goods in the sections chosen for their operations.

Whatever differences of opinion may exist among national advertisers concerning mediums, the value of newspaper advertising is universally recognized. Whether the advertiser buys newspaper advertising or urges his dealers to buy it, he sees in it the almost indispensable medium in the modern program of market cultivation.

In 1925, approximately $220,000,000 was invested by national advertisers in newspaper campaigns.

Important as newspaper advertising has been in the development of this modern idea in selling, it is becoming even a greater factor as the study of markets progresses and as distributors learn more about buying habits and buying power.

A new army of purchasers is abroad in the land. Old indices showing the ability to buy are constantly being revised. Great groups of the population, classed in the past as non-purchasers of articles once considered luxuries or semi-luxuries, are now absorbing impressive quantities of this merchandise.

Now more than ever it pays the advertiser to reach newspaper readers because—

The vast majority of all who buy is included in the millions who read a newspaper every day, and because

The localized character of newspaper circulation permits market cultivation (a) in the sections where sales resistance is least (b) at the time when the market is able to absorb the product.

There are many ramifications of this situation which emphasize the unique character of the newspaper as a modern advertising medium. It may be interesting to discuss some of these in detail.

It is safe to assume that the people who pay income taxes also read newspapers. But it is dangerous to proceed on the theory that only this portion of the newspaper reading public does all the important buying.

Economists generally agree that the income tax payer was never a true index to the buying power of the population. And yet, a great deal of advertising has been sold on the suggestion that the circulation offered represented "an income-tax-paying clientele." As a matter of fact, there is more than a suspicion that the income tax payer as an index to buying power was largely the invention of advertising solicitors who saw a numerical similarity between the circulation of their publications and the number of income tax payers in certain localities.

An early awakening to the "income tax index" fallacy was the fact that there were over twice as many automobile owners as there were income tax payers. The possession of an automobile in itself suggested a purchasing power that could not well be overlooked.

Perhaps a more specific revelation came through studies of states and market groups. Some of these studies showed that certain states listed as poor markets according to the number of income tax payers stood very high in average individual earning power. Furthermore, it was clearly demonstrated that the buying power of the family with less income than the taxable minimum depended somewhat upon where that family lived. This was particularly true of rural communities in which any attempt to judge purchasing power by the number of tax payers resulted in a very inaccurate picture of true conditions.

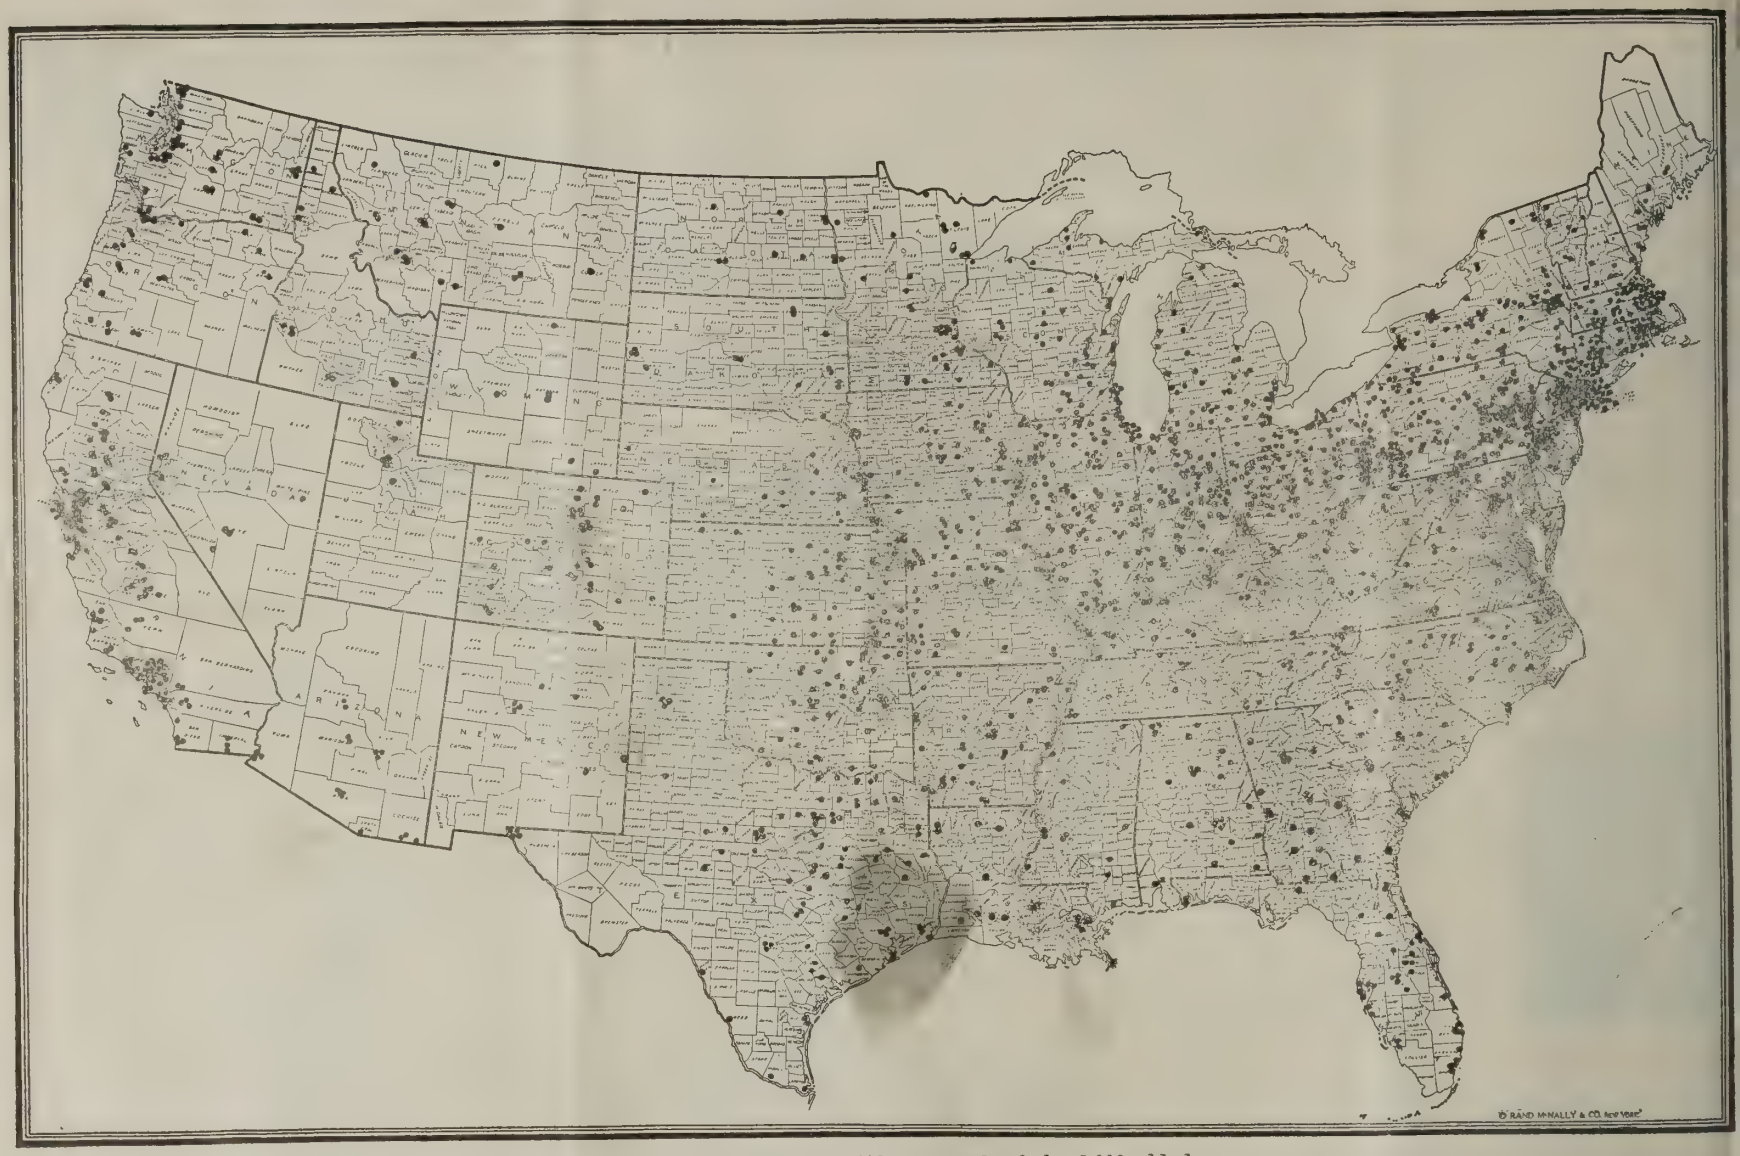
It is obvious that the farmer's dollar of income may well go farther than that of the city dweller, whose expenditure for things which the farmer gets for little or nothing adds to his overhead and reduces his budget for fluctuating expenditures. Also it is difficult for the average farmer properly to compute his income. With approximately 48 per cent of the people living in the rural districts, an index to buying power which does not clearly reckon with this element of the population cannot be worth very much. And in passing, let us remember that the farmer, like the city dweller, is a newspaper reader.

With the new income tax law in effect, which exempts individuals with $1,500 incomes and families with $3,500 incomes the number of income tax payers promises to be reduced by about 2,500,000 or about one-third of the previous total. This still further discounts the income tax report as a buying index.

Returns based upon 1923 income tax payments showed that the estimated total income of tax payers was something over $24,000,000,000, while the estimated total income of individuals, tax-payers and non-tax-payers, was approximately $70,000,000,000.

A consideration of these figures in the light of the above mentioned facts has turned the attention of market analysts to

MAY ADVERTISING REACHED RECORD TOTAL



MAY advertising in Greater New York newspapers totaled 16,324,002 agate lines, a gain of 1,484,650 lines, of 10 per cent over the same month in 1925. All records for the month were broken by the grand total and by the linage of seven papers. Losses were shown by six of the 15 papers listed. Comparative tables follow.

Pages 1926	Pages 1925		Percentage of total space	1926	1925	Gain	Loss
1,432	1,436	American	7.6	1,246,514	1,305,710	.....	59,196
1,720	1,440	Herald Tribune	10.8	1,755,726	1,420,874	334,852	.....
2,208	1,870	Times	17.2	2,804,854	2,468,638	336,216	.....
1,532	1,342	World	10.6	1,741,064	1,517,238	223,826	.....
844	832	*Mirror (Tabloid)	1.8	297,460	342,240	.....	44,780
1,428	1,212	News (Tabloid)	4.1	671,102	560,910	110,192	.....
1,144	1,222	*Evening Graphic	2.0	328,988	†286,218	42,770	.....
1,178	1,220	*Evening Journal	8.0	1,300,282	1,306,756	.....	6,474
804	888	*Evening Post	2.6	417,030	439,756	.....	22,726
818	726	*Evening World	5.2	840,992	758,388	82,604	.....
1,102	906	*Sun	8.5	1,379,052	1,224.2/4	154,778	.....
606	586	*Telegram	3.1	510,600	614,762	.....	104,162
1,362	1,282	Brooklyn Eagle	11.2	1,834,446	1,613,980	220,466	.....
740	608	Brooklyn Times	4.0	655,606	425,146	230,460	.....
510	598	Standard Union	3.3	540,286	554,462	.....	14,176
17,428	16,168	Totals		16,324,002	14,839,352	1,484,650 Net Gain	.....

* No Sunday edition.
† Sunday Graphic discontinued September 1, 1925; 146,790 lines for 5 Sundays included.

	1926	1925	1924	1923	1922	1921	1920
American	1,246,514	1,305,710	1,373,016	1,098,586	953,808	976,780	1,046,262
Herald	.....	.....	.....	1,020,026	1,002.640	1,172,520	1,214,588
Herald Tribune	1,755,726	1,420,874	1,155,880	879,172	768,392	863,320	1,005,858
Times	2,804,854	2,468,638	2,327,628	2,261,944	2,162,080	2,092,816	2,315,637
World	1,741,064	1,517,238	1,509,218	1,659,338	1,459,432	1,355,588	1,748,420
Mirror (Tab.)	297,460	342,240	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
News (Tab.)	671,102	560,910	520,318	369,148	283,848	225,780	146,922
Evening Graphic	328,988	286,218	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Evening Journal	1,300,282	1,306,756	1,326,084	1,255,888	1,092,622	972,914	857,792
Evening Mail	.....	.....	†.....	539,638	540.384	526,602	608,468
Evening Post	417,030	439,756	381,770	394,472	347,628	507,784	539,344
Evening World	840,992	758,388	672,730	765,230	808,762	766,590	919,444
Globe	.....	.....	††.....	782,358	642,466	572,700	725,218
Sun	1,379,052	1,224,274	1,176,648	966,206	945,362	758,274	748,400
Telegram	510,600	614,762	815,722	642,230	672,700	632,960	769,612
Brooklyn Eagle	1,834,446	1,613,980	1,656,552	1,639,608	1,450,720	1,336,286	1,334,474
Brooklyn Times	655,606	425,146	379,998	358,436	314,752	291,874	295,894
Standard Union	540,286	554,462	642,554	713,394	706,818	595,898	783,090
Totals	16,324,002	14,839,352	13,938,118	15,345,674	14,152,412	13,648,686	15,059,423

†† Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923; name changed to Sun March 10, 1924.
† Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924; name changed to Telegram May 18, 1925.

Location and number of daily newspapers in the United States—each of the 2,000-odd dots represents a newspaper.

the wage earner. Merchandising study is more and more directed toward this all-inclusive group which takes in not only the artisan and the clerk, but the executive who draws a salary.

The vastly improved condition of the wage earner since the war, the steady increase in wages paid, brought with it the creation of a new class of buyers who had the desire to enter certain fields of purchasing and the ability to gratify that desire.

In this connection consider for a moment a few significant figures from the booklet "Installment Buying" by the Farmers Loan & Trust Company.

In 1920 there were 20,915,612 savings bank depositors. In 1925 this number had increased to 43 850,127—more than one-third of the entire population. The total amount of life insurance in force in 1920 was $35,091.538,279 as against an estimated $72,000,000,000 in 1925. The total wages and salaries paid by all branches of industry in the continental United States in 1918 amounted to about $32,-076.000,000 as against $40,000,000,000 in 1925.

It is estimated that in the past ten years the number of persons holding stock in the United States has been increased by 3,500,000 and the number of persons holding bonds by 2,500,000, so that today it is believed more than 15,-000,000 persons own securities.

It is said that 7,000,000 families live in homes which they own free of encumbrances, while 4,000,000 are purchasing homes on which they still carry mortgages. The building and loan associations are credited with assets of $5,-000,000,000.

Out of the improved position of the wage earner has grown one of the most important factors in modern merchandising—installment buying. Whether or not installment buying as practised today represents a sound economic condition for all products need not be discussed here. The fact remains that it is a condition which must be reckoned with by the manufacturers and sellers in an ever-increasing number of fields.

It is estimated that 17 per cent of all merchandise sold at retail is now sold under the installment system. But this general percentage only remotely suggests the enormous sales on credit in certain lines of industry.

*The following table shows the sale of products during 1924 in eight important industries, including necessities, semi-necessities, and luxuries, together with the estimated percentage of sales made under the installment plan:

	Retail Value	Sold on Installment	Per centage Installment
Automobiles.	$2,910,082,505	$2,182,561,878	75
Wash'g mach.	88,000,000	66,000,000	75
Vac. cleaners.	69,000,000	44,850,000	65
Phonographs.	70,000,000	56,000,000	80
Furniture...	.....	765,000,000†	..
Pianos.....	100,000,000	40,000,000	40
Jewelry.....	400,000,000	100,000,000	25
Radio.....	300,000,000	39,000,000	13
	$3,937,082,505	$3,293,411,878

*"Installment Buying"—The Farmer's Loan & Trust Company.
†Estimated.

Automobile sales in 1925 amounted to $3 750,000,000, as compared with sales of $2,791,000,000 in 1920. Just what percentage of the 1925 sales were made on the installment plan is not determined as this book is printed but it is believed that more than 75% were so disposed of.

Newspaper advertising has played an important part in building up the enormous consumer sales in all these lines. This is particularly true of the automobile industry. The past two years have seen a concentration of advertising appropriations by the leading manufacturers in newspaper advertising, so that today the bulk of all money invested in motor car advertising goes to daily and Sunday editions. And it is doubly significant to note that this policy has been adopted by the makers of the highest priced cars, as well as those who produce the inexpensive lines.

The policy of the General Motors Company is interesting in this connection. This vast enterprise, which turns out motor cars to meet every class and income, has steadily increased its investment in newspaper advertising because the newspaper advertisement fits its policy of market investigation and cultivation and drives for sales timed to meet the market's ability to absorb cars. The importance it places upon newspaper advertising is perhaps best illustrated by the following figures, which show the amount spent in advertising some General Motors lines in the newspapers during 1925:

†Chevrolet	$1,500,000
Buick	900,000
Oldsmobile	600,000
Cadillac	500,000
General Motors (Institutional)...	300,000
	$3,800,000

†Includes dealers' co-operating advertising.

A very large increase in newspaper advertising appropriations has also been noticeable among manufacturers of vacuum cleaners and washing machines. Manufacturers in these lines have relied upon careful market analyses for the development of a volume of sales and are using newspaper advertising extensively to cover the markets they selected.

The Maytag Company, which is estimated to have spent $1,000,000 in newspapers in 1925, has this to say on the subject:

"One of the greatest values we have found in newspaper advertising, as far as the sale of washing machines is concerned, is in the fact that we can control the distribution of our national circulation to those areas where we have a dominant distribution of machines. Newspaper advertising also is very flexible, making it possible for us to cope with certain situations requiring more or less than the average amount of pressure and special attention.

"The first factor that has been especially valuable is our ability in newspaper advertising to localize all of the newspapers coming in to a certain section or town by listing at the bottom the local dealer's name as the dealer for that vicinity.

"In some papers the list of our dealers' names at the bottom takes up almost as much space as the ad itself. This shows the prospective purchaser whom the nearest dealer is, in addition to carrying the impression that it is a well represented and widely distributed product."

Among the successful radio manufacturers, market analysis goes hand in hand with newspaper advertising. The wise radio maker has searched not only for markets able to absorb his product, but for localities in which his set gives the best service.

It was inevitable in this newest of industries that a few companies should make rather costly mistakes in trying to "nationalize" their goods without regard to sectional conditions. They "advertised to the map," apparently ignoring local factors governing "reception" and broadcasting, as well as market potentiality. They anticipated sales by overproduction and the results have been seen in many cities in the "bargain offers" of radio sets announced by department stores in the newspapers.

But the leaders in the radio industry are building substantially. In this connection a significant statement by the Stromberg-Carlson Company, with special reference to its use of newspaper advertising, will prove interesting:

"One marked advantage which newspapers seem to have over general magazines is that newspaper advertising seems to have a stronger appeal to the dealer than other forms of advertising. This is obvious, considering that a dealer always is willing to co-operate with you on a newspaper advertising campaign, whereas there is little opportunity of getting co-operation on a general magazine campaign. Some advertisers have ob-

(Continued on page 44)

CLAGUE CHAMPIONS "NEWSIES" BEFORE I. C. M. A.

Constant Turn-Over of Boys Is Hurting Newspapers, A. B. C. Director Asserts—Charles Payne, Indianapolis Star, New President—A. N. P. A. Offers Aid—Clubbing Resolutions Tabled

AN earnest plea for better treatment of the American newsboy was made this week by Stanley Clague, managing director of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, addressing the 28th annual convention of the International Circulation Managers' Association in Philadelphia.

Charles M. Payne, circulation manager of the Indianapolis Star, was elected president to succeed E. R. Hatton of the Detroit Free Press. Harold Hough, circulation manager of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, was advanced from second vice-president to first vice-president, in accordance with the association's tradition. Mr. Hough is in line for the presidency a year from now.

A spirited contest ensured for the second vice-presidency between two Pennsylvanians. J. M. Annenberg, circulation director of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers forged to the front on the fifth ballot ahead of Royal W. Weiler, Allentown Call.

Atlanta won the convention's approval for the 1927 meeting, the invitation being presented by John T. Toler, Atlanta Constitution and John D. Simmons, Atlanta Journal. Memphis also invited the I. C. M. A. for next year.

"The constant turn-over of boys is hurting the newspapers seriously," Mr. Clague asserted. "And you all know the reason for this turn-over—the treatment the carriers are receiving in uneconomic efforts to force the sale of papers.

"Subordinates to the circulation managers are chiefly at fault, I admit. But you are directly responsible. You know what is going on. And you should put a stop to it."

Mr. Clague said he had noted himself and had received repeated reports of "padding" the carrier orders. Boys are being made to take out more copies than they can sell and are being refused returns, he claimed.

"Some circulation managers are so zealous to increase their papers' circulations that they slip in two, three, four, five or many more extra copies a day into the bundles of their carriers," he continued. "The boys can't sell them all, but must pay for them. This isn't doing you any good, the paper any good, or the boys any good."

The largest attendance in the association's history, nearly 300, filled the Crystal room of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, where important circulation problems were discussed during three days of morning and afternoon sessions. The annual banquet was held June 9, with Mayor Kendrick, Cyrus H. K. Curtis, D. B. G. Rose, President Hatton and Sidney Long, Wichita Eagle, speakers.

Mr. Curtis traced the history of the Saturday Evening Post since its establishment nearly 200 years ago by Benjamin Franklin. He gained control in June, 1897, paying $1,000, when the circulation was around 2,000.

The chief essential of a newspaper, Mr. Curtis said, was its news. And to be of any value it must be accurate.

Wednesday was a busy day on the convention floor.

What looked at first like a fight against magazine clubbing offers fizzled out after a half-hour discussion. Two resolutions on the subject, submitted by John Schmid, Indianapolis News, were killed. One was moved tabled, and the second lost by viva voce vote.

L. B. Palmer, manager of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, made a sweeping offer of service to the circulation managers. He told them about the expansion program of the A. N. P. A., and asked the association to suggest ways in which the growing organization might be helpful.

President Hatton appointed a committee, headed by Royal Weiler of the Long Live the King! E. R. Hatton, retiring president, greets his successor, Charles Payne of Indianapolis Star, who advances from First Vice-Presidency.

Allentown Morning Call, and consisting of Mr. Payne, Indianapolis Star; Harold Hough, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, John M. Schmid, Indianapolis News and Sidney Long, Wichita Eagle, to meet with Mr. Palmer to see if there might be any definite help the A. N. P. A. might provide other than that which they had already received.

Mr. Palmer also told the circulators about the fight being made for the reduction of second class rates, and also discussed the present newsprint situation.

"Paper mills have vastly increased their newsprint capacities," Mr. Palmer said, "but newspaper circulations are growing so rapidly, and more pages are being added, that consumption is keeping up with the supply.

"The increase in consumption of newsprint amounts to 13 per cent, while the production has increased 14 per cent."

While he said there was no danger of any shortage, he urged the circulation managers to guard against wasting their newsprint supplies.

The resolutions regarding clubbing offers, which were last, follow:

"WHEREAS, the Audit Bureau of Circulations does not now require a publisher member to declare the prices received from subscribers for his individual publication when sold with one or more other publications in any clubbing offer by mail; and

"WHEREAS, it is the sense of the members of the I. C. M. A. that the price received from subscribers by the publisher for his individual publication—when sold with one or more other publications by mail in any clubbing offer be declared in A. B. C. statements;

"THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the I. C. M. A. in convention assembled at Philadelphia, June, 1926, recommends to the Audit Bureau of Circulations that some adequate rule be adopted to accomplish the purpose and effect of the following resolution:

"1. That, as to his statements to the A. B. C., it shall be made obligatory upon the publisher:

"(a) To declare the range of the amounts paid by subscribers, for his individual publication when sold with one or more other publications in any club or combination for one total amount which is less than the sum of the regular yearly prices published in the publications themselves, or is less than the sum of the pro rata rates for odd terms:

"(b) To continue to declare as he now does, the range of the total amounts paid by such readers for such clubs or combinations of two or more publications.

"2. That these requirements shall be made obligatory upon publisher members in all divisions of the A. B. C.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED That this resolution be made a matter of record in the minutes of this organization and copies be sent to the Audit Bureau of Circulations, Chicago."

The second was:

"WHEREAS, the Audit Bureau of Circulations now classifies various articles of merchandise used in the promotion of newspaper circulation as premiums, and places clubbing offers used in like manner, in a different classification, and

"WHEREAS, the International Circulation Managers Association believes that both 'merchandise' and 'clubbing offers' when used to induce non-readers to subscribe should be classified as premiums by the Audit Bureau of Circulation.

"THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the International Circulation Managers Association in convention assembled at Philadelphia, June, 1926, recommend to the Audit Bureau of Circulation that it classify all clubbing offers, made up of publications other than daily newspapers and when offered as inducements to increase or maintain its circulation of newspapers, as premiums:

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that this resolution be made a matter of record on the minutes of this organization and copies be sent to the Audit Bureau of Circulations, Chicago."

"For example," Mr. Schmid declared, explaining the first resolution, "if I sell my paper at $5 a year and use four magazines in a clubbing offer, paying $1 each for a year's subscription to the magazines, whose regular price is $9, but in combination are put out at $6, I will show a cut of 33 1/3 per cent. It is unfair to me, I think, to have space-buyers believe that I am cutting my rate, when I am not. The A. B. C. report at present does not make this plain. The resolution is offered as a protection to the newspaper publisher himself. Without it the space buyer will think the newspape price has been cut, when as a matter of fact the onus is on the magazines. No newspaper publisher wants the space-buyer to think he is taking a cut in his subscription price, when he is getting the 100 per cent rate."

Mr. Clague and Mr. Chandler of the Bureau took active part in the subsequent discussion. Mr. Clague plainly showed he was against passage of the resolution, although he said he was glad at all times to receive recommendations from the circulators.

Mr. Schmid said he himself was neither for or against the resolutions. When O. O. Scattergood, New York Evening Graphic, rose and declared he believed the circulation managers were overstepping their province, and going into a publisher's problem, both were quickly disposed of.

The convention got under way at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, with Mr. Hatton presiding. A record-breaking attendance of 187 for a first session was announced.

J. M. Annenberg, circulation director of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, presented the association president with a gavel made from the wood of the old State House, where the Declaration of Independence was signed. It was the gift of Mayor Kendrick to I. C. M. A., he explained. The Mayor was unable to attend and make the presentation in person, as had been expected. He was represented by Dr. Thomas W. Davis, City Statistician, who welcomed the delegates.

J. A. Mathews, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, responded, informing Dr. Davis of the history of the association, and telling him that in 1910 an I. C. M. A. convention had been held in Philadelphia.

On the motion of Sidney Long, Wichita Eagle, telegrams were sent to three past presidents, regretting their unavoidable absence.

The president's address was postponed from the morning until the afternoon session, and then Mr. Hatton spoke in tabloid style, in order to permit completion of the delayed program.

Thanking his subordinate officials for the co-operation during the year, he expressed disappointment that the membership of the association had not increased according to expectations. He said he was still hoping to see I. C. M. A. reach the 1,000 mark, and declared he would retire as "general and work hard in the ranks of the privates to interest more circulation men in the association."

J. J. Lynch, Cleveland Press, at this session moved that the date of the annual convention be set for later in the month, after school is over for the year, in order that wives and children might accompany delegates. This matter was referred to the board of directors for consideration.

New members elected to the association at this convention included:

E. B. Aberle, Calgary (Alta.) Albertan.
George L. Adams, Seattle Times.
E. F. Armstrong, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times.
Robert E. Ashley, Lima (Ohio) Morning Star.
Paul M. Black, Tampa (Fla.) Globe.
Dan Brown, Chicago American.
Clyde Burgess, Chattanooga Times.
John T. Calkins, Elmira (N. Y.) Star-Gazette.
J. N. Chevrier, Montreal La Patrie.
Abe Cohen, El Paso (Tex.) Herald and Times.
F. M. Coker, Jr., Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.
Roy E. Coker, Clearwater (Fla.) Herald.
William T. Corbin, Greensboro (N. C.) News.
Ralph B. Corn, Asheville (N. C.) Times.
O. L. Cross, Oklahoma City News.
Edward C. Davis, Beaumont (Tex.) Enterprise-Journal.
W. P. Dyer, Houston Press.
Jack Estes, H. L. Beck, Pittsburgh Post.
Joseph A. Finster, Cleveland Press.
Charles H. Gaston, Canton (Ohio) News.
Edward G. Gay, Tucson (Ariz.) Star.
William Giesman, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times.
F. Goldschmid, Memphis Commercial-Appeal.
John F. Greene, Cleveland Plain Dealer.
W. H. Greene, Tampa (Fla.) Tribune.
James E. Hennessy, Fall River (Mass.) Herald.

(Continued on page 36)

SAY TABLOIDS ARE STILL BUT "VOICES CRYING IN CIRCULATION WILDERNESS"

Standard Size Paper Circulators Sit in Haughty Silence While Tiny Gabriels Trumpet Their Doom—Experience of Louisville Herald-Post

TABLOID Gabriels trumpeted loudly at the I. C. M. A. Philadelphia meet this week. And for the most part silence greeted their blasts.

H. W. Stodghill

One man, H. W. Stodghill, Louisville Herald-Post, stood up bravely for the standard-sized paper. He alone refused to permit the tiny Gabriels with their shiny new circulations to trumpet his doom. His paper, he said, jumped with much ballyhoo into the tabloid class, and then, after losing many, many readers, jumped back to blanket size to win them back again.

"Make ye the way! Make ye the way!" cried the tabloid men like new voices crying in the wilderness. "The tabloid is the new newspaper, the newspaper of today, the newspaper of the future—the standard sized paper is doomed."

Three "tabloidiers," like Dumas' men, thrust "straight to the heart." Two others were inclined to believe that after all the standard sized papers were not "doomed." The tabloids were simply developing new readers hitherto untouched by the old-fashioned press.

James Sullivan, New York Daily News; O. O. Scattergood, New York Evening Graphic; and Robert S. Weir, Buffalo Courier.

Those discounting doom were: Joseph Rowett, Washington News, and Nathan Sherry, Baltimore Post.

"The million circulation of the News is the only necessary answer to the question: 'what is the newspaper of the future?' was the contention of Sullivan in a paper read by M. W. Halmbacher, of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman and Times. Mr. Sullivan was unable to attend.

"They are like airplanes compared with the big gunboat standard newspapers," Mr. Scattergood said.

"Not long ago men were saying man will never fly; but man has flown. When the early automobiles sped along at eight miles an hour the old cry was 'Get a horse.' Now when tabloids are mentioned, you standard size circulators sing that song: 'It Aint Going to Rain No More.'

"Why, it's only begun to sprinkle tabloids."

Mr. Scattergood said he thought tabloidism's success lay chiefly in the small size and its condensation of news features.

"Tabloids are the airplanes of journalism," he concluded, "with enough speed now to carry them to even greater heights."

Rowett said the Washington Post and the Baltimore Post were the first tabloids to feature news over pictures or sex appeal, and have been successful.

Weir, Buffalo Courier, in a paper read, said that a year ago he was not sure that tabloids would succeed in small towns as they had in the larger centers.

"But I have found that they have remarkable sale even in country towns," he said.

Stodghill read the announcement published in the Louisville Herald Times when it changed into a tabloid from standard size Nov. 1, 1925.

This announcement was in effect that the tabloid was as different than the standard size paper as an automobile was from the old-fashioned stage coach.

"Lincoln's Gettysburg speech was a tabloid," the Herald-Post contended. "It will live forever. Long speeches are out of date, so are the long articles."

The Herald-Post lost circulation as a tabloid, and on June 1, 1926, reverted to standard size without saying a word about it, Mr. Stodghill concluded.

TABLOID EDITION DROPPED

Louisville Herald-Post Returns to Standard Size on All Issues

Without previous announcement or subsequent mention in news or editorial columns the Louisville Herald-Post last week discontinued its morning tabloid edition and returned to standard size. Circulation of the morning edition after returning to the old form, showed an immediate increase in street sales of several thousands daily, it was stated.

The reasons for the change back to standard size, according to an authoritative source, were that neither readers nor advertisers in Louisville liked the tabloid, and that Louisville was "too conservative" to welcome the new form and that awkward situations were encountered in carrying advertising over from the standard evening edition to the morning tabloid. Immediately after abandoning the tabloid size the Herald-Post added a night "Bull Dog" edition.

THE EARLY BIRDS

Entertained at a Party by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Annenberg

Early arrivals at the annual convention of the International Circulation Managers Association in Philadelphia were guests at a dinner party June 6, given by J. M. Annenberg, circulation director of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, Inc., and Mrs. Annenberg.

Those attending included: Charles Payne, Indianapolis Star, and association vice-president; Mr. and Mrs. A. Newman, New York Evening Post; Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Hammond, Boston Transcript; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dowling, Cleveland Press and Pittsburgh Press; and Bert Pfaff, Indianapolis Star.

RETURN TO RAILROADS PREDICTED BY HIXON

Syracuse Post-Standard Circulator Sees United Effort Ending Excessive Rates by Carriers—Urges Careful Following of Postal Fight

W. C. Hixon, circulation manager of the Syracuse Post-Standard, and chairman of the Railway Mail and Postage Committee of the International Circulation Managers Association, this week predicted a lowering of the railroad rate and a return of the newspaper transportation business to the carriers.

He pointed out how the increased railroad rates had caused Philadelphia newspapers to employ trucks and busses to transport their bundles, in this way operating at a lower cost than entailed by railroad transportation.

But he was confident, he said, that the railroads would eventually lower their charges.

Mr. Hixson in concluding his report urged the circulation managers to follow carefully the reports of the publishers postal and railroad rate committees as published in Editor & Publisher.

LEADERS OF THE CIRCULATION WORLD AT PHILADELPHIA

Top Row—1925-1926 officers were (left to right) Clarence Eyster, Peoria Star, Secretary-Treasurer; E. R. Hatton, Detroit Free Press, Preside Charles Payne, Indianapolis Star, First Vice-President; Harold Hough, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Second Vice-President.

Second Row—I. C. M. A. Philadelphia committee included (left to right) J. J. Abbott, Record; W. C. Cotton, Inquirer; J. M. Annenberg, Cur Martin Newspapers; C. L. Stretch, Bulletin; John A. Young, Inquirer.

Third Row—Past Presidents of I. C. M. A. (left to right) J. N. Chevrier, Montreal La Patrie; J. M. Schmid, Indianapolis News; J. J. Lyn Cleveland Press; E. R. Hatton, Detroit Free Press; W. L. Argue, Toronto Star; J. D. Simmons, Atlanta Journal; Sidney D. Long, Wichita Ea

Fourth Row—Chairmen of Convention Committees (front rank, left to right) T. J. Dowling, Cleveland Press and Pittsburgh Press; J. A. Mathe St. Paul Pioneer Press; J. M. Annenberg, Curtis-Martin Newspapers; rear rank, left to right, J. C. Montgomery, Detroit News; Walter Rau Cincinnati Post; John M. Schmid, Indianapolis News; W. C. Hixon, Syracuse Post Standard; C. O. Reville, Baltimore Sun; Alfred Zimmern New York World.

Bottom Row—I. C. M. A. directors (left to right) Ted Booth, Grand Rapids Press; John T. Toler, Atlanta Constitution; George M. McTagg Toronto Mail & Empire; James A. Mathews, St. Paul Pioneer Press; Wiley B. Baker, Knoxville Sentinel; H. W. Stodghill, Louisville Cour Journal; Vattier Snyder, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

POST OFFICE OFFICIAL PRAISES U. S. PRESS

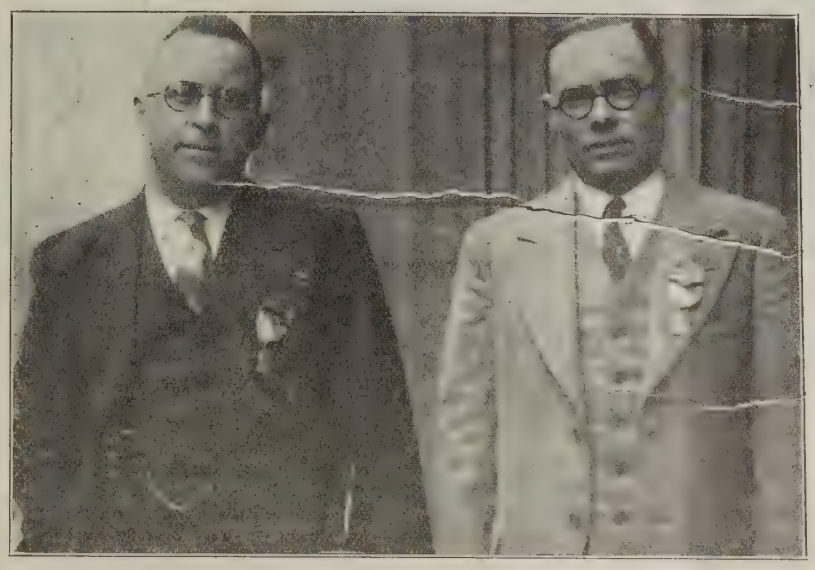
Robert S. Regar, Third Assistant Postmaster General, Notes Many Improvements in Newspaper Field During Last 20 Years—Explains Postal Requirements

TRIBUTE to the American press was paid this week by Robert S. Regar, Third Assistant Postmaster General, addressing delegates to the 28th annual meeting of the International Circulation Managers Association in Philadelphia.

Mr. Regar was introduced by Tom Dowling, circulation director of the Cleveland Press and Pittsburgh Press.

"There are no words of praise too high for the earnest, high-purposed newspapers and periodicals," Mr. Regar said. "They have done and are doing a great work for the general uplift of the nation. They constantly battle for the right, defend the weak, champion reforms, promote intelligence and inspire patriotism.

"Writers acclaim the last twenty-five years as the most wonderful and epoch-making quarter century in history. Much credit is due the newspapers and other publications of the country for the important part they have taken in bringing about this unusual development and progress.



"I have just referred to the progress and development of the last twenty-five years. The press has more than kept the pace in this respect and it is gratifying to note the changes for the better in the publishing field. There has been a noteworthy improvement in the practices and ethics of journalism. This is true not only with respect to the contents of publications generally, both in their reading text and their advertisements, but their methods of circulation and other business practices are on a much higher plane. In portraying the news of the day and disseminating information concerning the multifarious activities of mankind, there is a notable effort to stick to the truth and to curb these tendencies to sensationalism which caused serious concern twenty-five years ago.

"The write-up or free publicity feature is also being greatly curtailed, and many other changes for the better are noted in the editorial and advertising departments generally.

"At the same time there has been considerable improvement in the methods of obtaining and maintaining circulations. Twenty years ago it was a common practice of many publishers to distribute as many sample copies as subscribers' copies; in fact, the postal laws and regulations specifically authorized this. Even with this liberal provision as to the circulation of sample copies, some publishers paid little or no attention to the matter of obtaining paid subscribers, but circulated their publications almost entirely free. As you know, the law governing the mailing of sample copies at the publishers' second-class pound rates of postage now permits the acceptance at these rates of but 10 per cent of the weight of the mailings to subscribers. Nevertheless, this has been found ample for the legitimate needs of publishers, and as a matter of fact many publishers do not mail any sample copies at all, while others distribute merely a fraction of the number they are entitled to mail at the pound rates.

"This is illustrated by the figures showing the weight of the mailings of second-class matter during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, during which year the mailings as sample copies at the pound rates aggregated only 6,313,956 pounds out of total mailings of 1,417,491,573 pounds, the sample copies, therefore being less than one-half of one per cent of the total mailings. Similarly, there has been a considerable curtailment of the use of premiums. In days gone by premiums were very largely depended upon to promote circulation. Although their use has not been eliminated, the flagrant abuses formerly incident to the practice of giving premiums to induce subscriptions have been practically done away with.

"All of this has served to elevate the publishing industry as a business, placing it on a more substantial and honored basis than ever before and resulting in continued healthy increase in circulation and influence, as indicated by the fact that the total mailings amounting to 663,107,128 pounds for the fiscal year 1905 have grown to the amazing total of 1,417,491,573 pounds for the fiscal year 1925.

Bruce N. Walker, Johnstown (Pa.) Tribune and J. T. Calkins, Elmira (N.Y.) Star-Gazette.

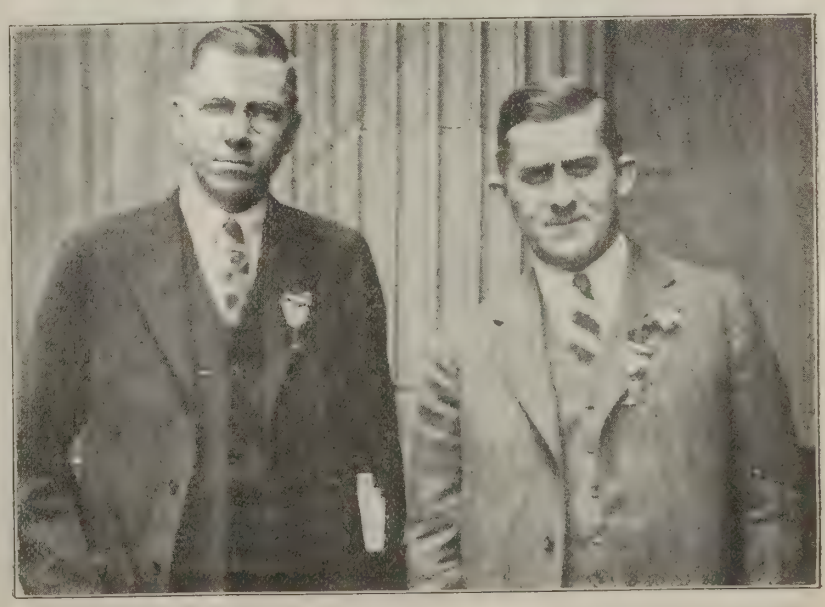
"Today the unprecedented volume of newspapers and periodicals sent through the mails is due very largely to the fact that their circulation is based upon the merits of the publications. As I have already indicated, publishers are coming more and more to realize this. As experience gradually discloses that a successful paper must be made good enough to sell on its merits and that it requires no artificial stimulant or dope to secure and retain a satisfactory class of readers, publishers are as a result discontinuing those practices.

"I take it that you want to hear about those requirements of the postal laws and regulations governing second-class matter which have a bearing on these features. Introductory to the more or less technical phases of some of the points involved along this line, it may be well to state in a general way the principal provisions of the law insofar as circulation is concerned under which the second-class mailing privilege is accorded to publications. These are that a publication shall have a 'legitimate list of subscribers' and shall not be 'designed primarily for advertising purposes, or for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates.'

"As to the prohibition of the statute against free circulation and circulation at nominal rates, I may say that a publisher is free to fix the subscription price for his publication. having fixed the price it is expected that he will receive substantially that price. When subscriptions are received at less than 50 per cent of the regular or basic price they are regarded as at a nominal rate. A publisher may, of course, have different prices for different classes of subscribers according to the manner in which they are served, that is, whether by the publishers' own carriers, by mail, or otherwise.

"A publisher is likewise at liberty to have more than one price for mail subscribers, as, for example, for subscribers residing in the farther zones where the graduated zone rates of postage on the advertising portion of his publication make the cost of distribution greater than in the nearby zones. In such cases the regular or basic price, which, of course, should be shown in the publication, must ordinarily be considered to be the one charged for mail subscriptions within the territory naturally served by the publication and to which its circulation is, in the main, confined. To illustrate, let us assume that a daily newspaper within the urban and suburban territory which it naturally serves and the publisher desires to make a lower price for persons in such territory residing on rural routes. Under these conditions $6.00 constitutes the regular annual subscription price, that is, the basic price to which, in considering the effect of reductions in price, must be applied the provisions of section 400 of the Postal Laws and Regulations, which prescribes that subscriptions obtained at a reduction to the subscriber of more than 50 per cent of the regular advertised annual price are at a nominal rate and therefore in contravention of the law governing second-class matter. Consequently, in such case, a price of $3.00 a year for rural route subscriptions would be all right. Anything less than $3.00 would, in such case, be a nominal rate.



"Although, as I have just stated, a publisher may have several subscription prices and he is at liberty to make certain reductions therein, the basic price is the one to be taken into consideration in determining whether subscriptions obtained at less than such price are in harmony with the requirements of the law. It will be seen, therefore, that when subscriptions are taken within the basic price territory, or elsewhere, at a price, whether regularly advertised or in connection with a special offer or subscriptions campaign, which is less than 50 per cent of the basic price, they are at a 'nominal rate' and consequently are not in harmony with the law governing second-class matter.

"Of course, it is not expected that a publisher will reduce this basic price with the view of increasing the circulation of his publication by conducting a subscription campaign during which the subscriptions will be solicited at a further reduction in such newly established basic price, and after the campaign is over or before the expiration of the subscriptions obtained in the campaign, restore the basic subscription price.

"I wish to say here that in matters of this kind it is the practice and policy of the Department to be as liberal and helpful to publishers as is consistent with the law. In pursuance of this policy, when it is found that a publisher, in entire good faith, enters into an arrangement for obtaining subscriptions which is not in harmony with the postal laws and regulations governing second-class matter, and he shows that it is his purpose to conform thereto by promptly discontinuing such arrangement upon learning that it is the practice to be helpful to the publisher by co-operating with him along correctional lines, rather than to pursue harsh measures.

"Before concluding, I want to call attention to some features in connection with the distribution of publications the observance of which would be helpful to both publishers and the postal service.

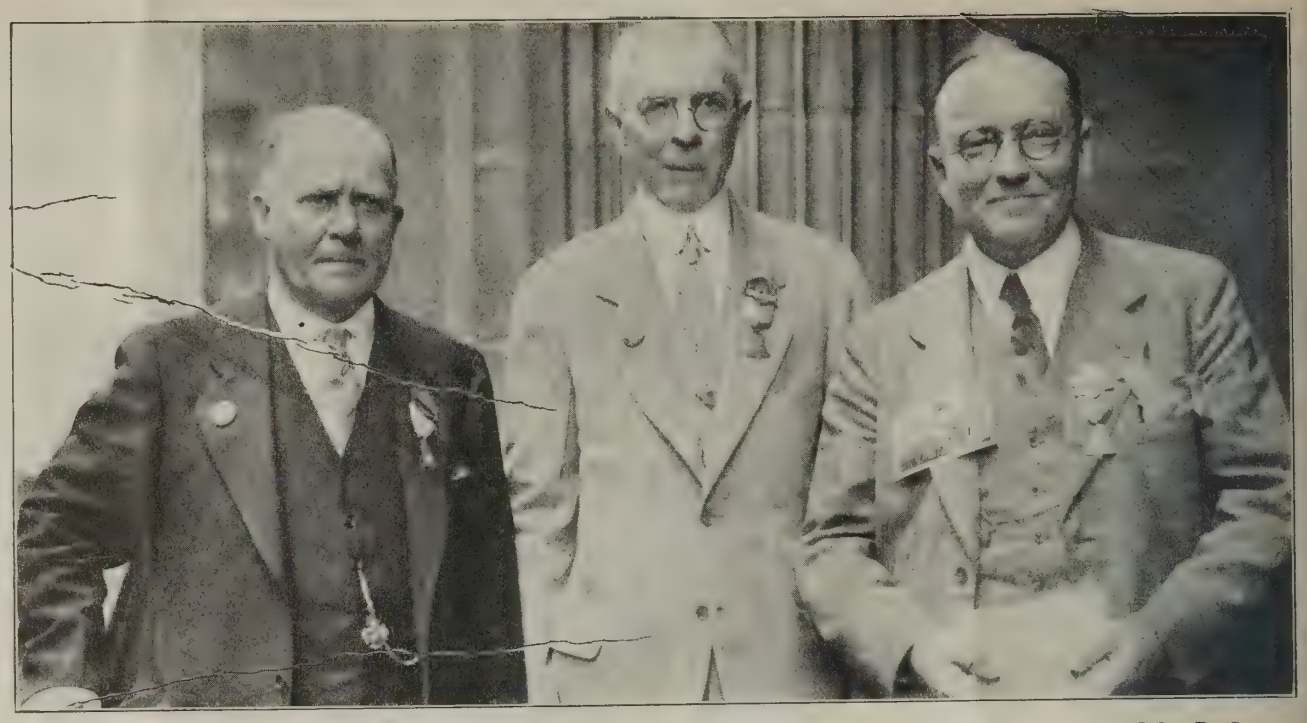
"Among these is the addressing of the copies. Some difficulty is experienced in the postal service because of the poor address labels borne by copies of some publications. It will, of course, be realized that when address labels are poorly written or printed, not only is delivery of the copies retarded but in many cases the copies can not be delivered at all, thus resulting in complaints from subscribers as to the non-receipt of the copies. All such cases coming to attention are taken up with the publishers, but there is room for a material improvement along this line."

"They call 'em Sunpapers." Left to right: C. O. Reville, circulation manager, and Frank K. Wilson, city circulation manager, Baltimore Sun.

HOW SPORTING PAGE ADDS CIRCULATION

E. W. Cochrane, Sports Editor, Kansas City Journal Post, Tells of Two Experiments Which Sold Papers—Bowling Edition and Baseball

How the sporting page could best be used to add circulation was told recently by E. W. Cochrane, sports editor of the Kansas City Journal Post. He was addressing members of the Inland Daily Press Association. He said in part:



"On the Journal-Post we have tried two experiments the past year that should be of interest to every publisher of a city newspaper because of the success of each. The first was a distinct innovation—a bowling edition. Last fall we found that we needed something after baseball season closed to keep up circulation of the pink editions sold out on the streets. I conceived the idea of publishing on each Saturday afternoon—the afternoon when street sales were lightest, two pages of bowling news, the first and second pages of the pink extra.

"We did not spend one cent to gather the news for it. We made a bargain with the owners of bowling alleys that if they would furnish the news we would devote the space, but stipulated that the news must be written and edited by an experienced newspaper man, not a man employed by us, but working under my direction. They were delighted to do that.

We got out a splendid bowling edition. In Kansas City there are 12,000 league bowlers. On the first Saturday we published that edition the street sales were boosted 1,400 copies. Each week it increased. That means that it put the Post in the hands of thousands of people every Saturday who had not been buying it on the streets. The circulation department immediately solicited every bowler in town, getting the names from the registers of the leagues, and added a large number of them to the regular subscription lists. We believe it was one of the best circulation builders and promotion stunts we have tried.

"This year we decided to try to increase the circulation of the sports extras in the regular baseball season. We added another page, making the first and second page of the pink exclusively sports, also running the regular sports page, making a total of three or four every day.

We used live news on these pages, made possible by having five news services in the office. The pages are well illustrated. The first week our street sales increased about 1,200 daily and steadily has increased."

"We want you to come down to Georgia"—was the greeting from this trio from Atlanta. Left to right: John D. Simmons, Atlanta Journal, John T. Toler, Atlanta Constitution; and Fred Houser, Atlanta convention bureau.

FEATURE PROMOTION IS TOPIC OF I. C. M. A.

Bands, Reprints, and Other Stunts Used to Tell Public About "Flapper" Features — Impossible to "Circus" News Is Opinion

Circulation imagination runs wild thinking up ways to promote flapper serials, but it is impossible to "circus" news, according to speakers at the I. C. M. A. convention.

Walter Rauck, Cincinnati Post, told of using clowns, balloons, and bands to "cash in" on features. Following him, J. N. Eisenlord, Chicago Daily News, related experiences he had had promoting serial stories when he was circulation manager of the Chicago American.

"In picking features it is wise to look for those that have the widest appeal. Judge the value of syndicate offerings on the popularity of the song-hit the 'Prisoner's Song,' and 'Abie's Irish Rose'" he said.

Mentioning well known syndicated serials of the jazz type, Mr. Eisenlord called them "stories of today." At one time there was a period of two weeks between the running of two different serials he said, and circulation dropped 18,000. When the second was resumed, however, this drop was built up again and held. He said he considered distributing reprints of serial stories bringing the installments up-to-date was a very efficient promotion venture.

An effective box placed at the end of serial installments, Mr. Eisenlord declared read: "How do you like it? You do like it? Well, tell your friends."

The St. Louis Times in promoting one serial engaged a band to march up the main streets followed by a girl dressed as a bride in a limousine.

Robert Dyer, Columbus Citizen, said it was impossible to "circus" news.

"We've tried it in big murder cases, and it didn't help at all," he said. "The 'extra' is the only possible way to promote news."

Mrs. Annenberg Hostess

The women were well taken care of by Mrs. J. N. Annenberg, wife of the circulation director of the Curtis-Martin newspapers, Inc. A boat ride on the Delaware, furnished by the Mayor, a bus trip to Valley Forge, and a bridge tournament at the Manufacturers' Club were among features of the entertainment program. Dancing followed the annual banquet.

REGULATING BUS RATES EASY, SAYS SCHMID

Indianapolis News Business Head Tells How He Gained Co-operation of Public Service Commission for Standard Charge

Bus rates are easily regulated, John M. Schmid, circulation manager of the Indianapolis News, said he has learned, and he passed on his knowledge to other circulation managers at the annual I. C. M. A. convention in Philadelphia this week.

"We were having considerable trouble with our bus rates in Indiana," he told delegates, June 8, during discussion of mail and baggage rates presided over by W. C. Hixon, Syracuse Post Standard. "The bus companies were charging anywhere from 50 cents a hundred pounds, to a maximum of $4 a hundred pounds.

"We waited a year, and then we went before the public service commission to ask for a rate corresponding with that in force on interurban lines.

"The result came much more easily and more quickly than we expected. We were granted our request—a standard rate of 50 cents per cwt. for transportation of newspapers by busses, regardless of distance. I am confident that if circulation men in other states are troubled by execessive omnibus rates they will obtain relief in the same manner just as easily."

Mr. Schmid said the bus lines used by the News traveled distances averaging 75 miles. If transfers to other busses were necessary, a second charge of 50 cents had to be paid. He did not, however, object to this extra charge, stating that the mail rate was $2.27 per cwt., and that a bundle of newspapers would have to be sent over a route requiring the services of four busses before this sum would be reached.

Last January the Indiana legislature passed a law requiring all bus lines to adopt the standard rate, Mr. Schmid said.

Newspapers keep track of the tonnage transported by busses and settle with the different carrier companies every month.

Carolina's Triumvirate (left to right): H. L. Strickland, Charlotte Observer; W. L. T. Cooper, Charleston Evening Post; J. R. Marks, Asheville Citizen.

Planning Breakfast for N.E.A. Group

Liberal, Kan., will entertain the National Editorial Association special train for California, where the annual meeting will be held late in June. The Liberal Chamber of Commerce will provide breakfast for the 250 editors on their arrival the morning of June 26.

CIRCULATION MEN FAVOR WELFARE WORK AMONG CARRIER NEWS BOYS

Walter Hoots, Quincy (Ill.) Herald-Whig Presents Results of Questionnaire Answered by 200 Circulators—Fifty Per Cent Co-operate with Y. M. C. A.

RESULTS of a questionnaire announced this week at the International Circulation Managers Convention in Philadelphia showed that the majority of 200 circulators favored welfare work among carrier boys. The questionnaire was sent out by Walter Hoots, Quincy (Ill.) Herald-Whig, who reported the returns June 8.

Mr. Hoots, in making the report, as chairman of the welfare committee of the association, declared his own opinion was summed up by the reply to the questionnaire sent in by Oliver King, Phoenix (Ariz.) Republican, and by an editorial appearing recently in EDITOR & PUBLISHER entitled "The Kid at the Back Door."

Answering the question: "What Do You Think of Newsboy and Carrier Boy welfare work?" Mr. King replied:

"A circulation manager should conduct himself in such a way that it will reflect credit to himself and to his institution. To be as honest with the carrier or the newsboy as he expects the newsboy to be with him. To surround the working conditions and environment of the carriers and newsboys with clean and wholesome influence. Give the carriers and newsboys only such entertainment, etc., as is clean, refined, and that will tend to build up character of the highest type. Employ only such men to work with your carriers and newsboys who are wholeheartedly in sympathy with and who will efficiently carry out your views on the subject."

The EDITOR & PUBLISHER editorial follows:

"THERE'S a kid coming day by day to the back door of your newspaper office. A canvas bag is slung over his back and in his pocket is a book which contains a list of your newspaper's best assets—satisfied subscribers. When winter winds nip the ears, when March rains flood the streets, when midsummer sun scorches the pavement, the kid comes each morning or evening to your back door for his bundle of papers.

"The last house on his route looks far away, when other kids are beckoning from the swimming hole. It is a tedious business when added to the tedium of five or six hours in school. But the kid is faithful. His type furnishes one of the finest examples of American business integrity and thrift. The boy may be the ambitious son of well-to-do parents, or his newspaper route may be the slender thread supporting a widowed or neglected mother. The earnings may be for the savings bank or for the day's bread and the youngster may be the product of good or bad home environment, but by loyal, patient service he wins our hearts.

"Some conspicuous instances exist of newspaper managements that have genuine appreciation of the carrier and soundly, with affection like that of a parent, minister to his needs and set standards that shall be the guides of his life. Not only do such publishers perform wholesome social service, but sensibly attend to their own business.

"Every publisher should be conscious of the kid who calls regularly at his back door. He is not a match to be lit and thrown away, another to be found and used when needed. He is an individual, earning a right to considerate treatment and participation in the achievements of the newspaper. It is a crime against future and business folly to put a crowd of sensitive youngsters under the command of a man who does not understand by nature or is merely an exploiter of a child's willingness or a parent's necessity. Select the man to manage carrier boys with as much pains as you would a managing editor, somewhat for his knowledge and somewhat for the example he will set for his subordinates!

However liberal may be the pay of the kid who comes to serve your paper each morning or evening his just due includes recognition as a member of the staff. Do not slight the kid!"

Thirty per cent of the papers replying to the questionnaire have organized carrier associations which meet twice a week, weekly, twice a month, and monthly. Practically all of these carrier associations combine pep and entertainment with sales and inspirational talks, and other interest arousing activities.

Nearly fifty per cent of the newspapers give regular shows and parties for their carrier boys and think it a good investment. Among the high spots in the boy welfare work accomplished during the past year were inspirational talks by prominent business men in the organization of a band; the organization of a basket ball league; camping parties; gymnasium classes; athletic programs and hikes; the teaching of thrift in the home; a savings club; carrier boy and parent banquet; the payment of sick benefits to carriers; the employment of orphans when possible; active co-operation with the Boy Scouts and the out of school gymnasiums. Surely out of this mass of suggestions every member can get a new idea for use with his carrier boys.

The welfare committee found that 75 per cent of the I. C. M. A. members collect for their papers weekly; 15 per cent collect monthly, and that about 10 per cent collect daily.

Approximately 25 per cent require cash deposits, while something over 50 per cent do not require a deposit. About 10 per cent require a bond.

"A very interesting fact to this committee," Mr. Hoots said, "is the names of the newspapers who are systematically using the columns of their newspaper to sell their carrier organization to the public. I have no doubt but that many members of this association will want to correspond with some of the papers listed below, in order to follow in their footsteps, and make the public appreciate more fully the service given by their carrier organization:

"The Baltimore Sun; the Hollywood Citizen; the San Pedro News; the Danville (Ill.) Commercial News; the El Paso Herald and Times; the Oklahoma Publishing Company, Oklahoma City; the Fond du Lac Reporter; the Mansfield (O.) Journal; the Port Huron (Mich.) Times-Herald; the Kitchener (Ont.) Daily Record; the Halifax Herald and Evening Mail; the Sacramento Union; the Long Beach (Cal.) Press-Telegraph; the Redlands (Cal.) Daily Press; the Santa Monica Outlook; the Chicago American, and Pottsville (Pa.) Evening Republican."

Left to right: Vattier Snyder, Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph, and Alfred Zimmerman, special representative of the New York World, charter member and former vice president of the Association.

CURTIS MAGAZINES SPEND A MILLION ANNUALLY IN NEWSPAPER SPACE

"And We Never Ask for Free Publicity" M. E. Douglas Tells Circulators at I.C.M.A. Meet—Describes Saturday Evening Post's Carrier System

MAGAZINES published by the Curtis Publishing Company, the Saturday Evening Post, the Ladies Home Journal, and the Country Gentlemen have spent between $500,000 and $1,000,000 annually for the last six years in newspaper advertising, M. E. Douglas, circulation manager of those publications, told members of the I.C.M.A. at their annual convention in Philadelphia, June 8.

"And we never have and never will ask for free publicity," he declared.

For the first four months of 1926, Mr. Douglas disclosed, these magazines have spent $360,000 in the newspapers. He described the daily press as an important medium for the promotion of magazines.

"We do not ask the newspapers to assist us in merchandising our product," he said. "We don't ask for free notices. And we will not ask the newspapers to assist us in distribution of our copies."

Mr. Douglas described for the newspaper circulators the distribution system employed by the Saturday Evening Post and the other Curtis magazines.

He strongly endorsed welfare work among carrier boys, and said that his organization considered it of practical benefit to the magazines. He told of the organization known as the Curtis League of Salesmen, headed by a former teacher and Better Business Bureau secretary.

The League, he explained, was made up of five ranks:—junior, senior, expert, master, and graduate master. To join the League, a boy must be in school, and must be obtaining good marks in his class work. Teachers send in school reports to the head of the League in Philadelphia. A junior must serve one year before he is entitled to be a senior; two years to become a master; and three years to become a graduate master. For graduate masters, the Curtis Publishing Company has pledged itself to loan amounts up to $1,500 to assist them in going to college.

The publishing company also pays Y. M. C. A. dues for League members, opens a bank account for those in the expert class, and guarantees employment to graduate masters.

"Today the League numbers 10,000 members," Mr. Douglas said, "each member selling an average of 44 Saturday Evening Post's weekly and 32 Ladies Home Journals, monthly."

Mr. Douglas maintained that quality and quantity in circulation are more desirable than quantity alone.

"To have quality in advertising," he said, "the publishers' circulation methods must be adapted to the need of the advertising constituency. The conception that one consumer's dollar is as good as another, however true it may be in merchandising generally, is not true in our merchandising."

WHAT SOME CIRCULATORS THINK ABOUT CARRIER WELFARE

CIRCULATION managers expressed themselves as follows about welfare work among carrier and newsboys:

John Schmid, Indianapolis News:—"Give the carrier boys a business training. Help them find employment when they leave you. Treat them kindly when sick and see that they are never in need."

J. B. Taylor, Kitchener (Ont.) Daily Record:—"Welfare work is good, beneficial, and practical."

Harry V. Wheat, Lexington (Ky.) Herald:—"By intelligent use of welfare work the efficiency of the organization is bettered."

J. N. Eisenlord, Chicago Daily News:—"Welfare work helps greatly in maintaining the interest of the boys."

H. J. Smith, Waterbury (Conn.) Republican:—"We believe in direct personal touch with our boys, keeping as far away from the boss idea as possible."

C. J. Toot, Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald:—"Call it promotion work as it really is, and it is very profitable. It is pure bunk to describe it as welfare work."

FRENCH A. A. C. W. DELEGATES GREETED BY N. Y. CITY AND AD CLUB CHIEFS

Busy Program Arranged for Dr. Marcel Knecht, Representing, with Renier of Havas, the French Press—Serious Mission Emphasized

NEW YORK CITY and its advertising and publishing fraternity this week greeted the French delegates to the Associated Advertising Clubs' convention on their arrival aboard the "Paris" Wednesday afternoon. President C. C. Green of the Advertising Club of New York and Paul Meyer of the club boarded the liner at Quarantine, while the general reception committee escorted the ship up the bay on the muncipal steamer "Macom," the police band playing national and popular tunes.

Words of welcome were uttered on the pier by Jesse H. Neal, secretary-treasurer of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, representing President C. K. Woodbridge; President Green of the Advertising Club of New York, and H. H. Charles, chairman of the general program committee of the Philadelphia convention.

Dr. Marcel Knecht responded for the French representatives, who included Leon Renier, Jr., (with Dr. Knecht the representative of the press of France); Adrian Muller, Gilles Duroulet, André Kaminker, and Henri Dumay, Jr.

Dr. Knecht declared that he had come on a serious mission and that he felt that one of the short cuts to more complete and perfect understanding between nations was intercourse, and that the more frequent the meeting of minds and personalities, the more mutually sympathetic would be the resulting attitude. He regretted that France had not been represented at the A. A. C. W. meeting in Houston last year, and stated that he and Mr. Renier of the Agence Havas, as the chosen representatives of the French press, came in the expectation they would be able to have fellowship with the leaders of the press of America and those in the forward ranks of advertising. He felt that out of this intercourse much good would come in an international way.

Dr. Knecht has accepted the invitation of the New York City Publishers' Association to speak at the luncheon tendered in his honor at the New York Athletic Club at 1:00 o'clock on Monday, June 14, and also the invitation of Frank T. Carroll, president of the National Association of Newspaper Executives, to address that department of the A. A. C. W. at the meeting in Philadelphia on Monday, June 21.

Dr. Knecht, Mr. Renier, and the other associates of the French delegation were received by Mayor James J. Walker, of New York in the City Hall at noon on Thursday, when a scroll was presented to Dr. Knecht by the Mayor as the representative of the French newspapers.

In turn, Dr. Knecht decorated the Mayor with a medal that had been struck off in his honor, but had not been completed at the time of Mrs. Walker's visit to Paris with the Hotel Association delegates.

Dr. Knecht made the principal speech at the dinner given in his honor by the Advertising Club of New York Thursday evening at which Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, was toastmaster.

Dr. Knecht's address at the luncheon at the Advertising Club, at noon on Wednesday, June 16, will be broadcast by WEAF.

He is on the General Sessions Programme of the Associated Clubs, as well as on the International Day Programme, at which Dr. Julius Kline, of the Department of Commerce, will preside.

FALL RIVER PAPERS TO MERGE

Herald and News, Purchased by C. F. Kelly, to Combine June 14

The Fall River Herald and News, separate evening six-day papers purchased last week by C. F. Kelly, head of the Kelly-Smith Company, special representatives, New York, will be merged with the issue of Monday, June 14, Mr. Kelly announced this week.

The last issue of the News will appear Saturday of this week. The combined paper will be known as the Herald and News, and will be printed from the Herald plant.

Frank Almy, publisher of the News before his sale of the paper to Mr. Kelly, has joined the Fall River Globe organization.

Sale of the newspaper properties last week was effected by Palmer, Dewitt & Palmer, newspaper brokers, New York.

FRENCH A. A. C. W. DELEGATES ARRIVE IN U. S.

Left to right: Front row:—Adrian M. Muller, Henri Dumay, Andre Kaminker, and back row, left to right: Charles C. Green, President of the Advertising Club of New York; Marcel Knecht, Paul Meyer, Leon M. Renier, Jr., and Gilles Duroulet, advertising and newspapermen of France, as they appeared on their arrival on the S.S. Paris, Wednesday.

RICH SUCCEEDS PERRIN ON HERALD TRIBUNE

Financial Department Man Named City Editor Following Latter's Resignation to Join St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Dwight Perrin, city editor of the New York Herald Tribune, resigned this week to join the St. Louis Post-Dispatch under contract as an editorial executive. He will take up his new duties July 5.

ENDICOTT G. RICH

Endicott G. Rich, veteran New York newspaperman, and a member of the financial staff of the Herald Tribune, was named to succeed Perrin by A. R. Holcombe, managing editor. No successor to Rich in the financial department has been appointed.

With his resignation Perrin terminates three years' service with the Herald Tribune as city editor, and more than 1 years' service on New York newspapers to return to the city where he first started newspaper work as a cub reporter, on the St. Louis Times.

After working on the Times for tw years, and spending a year as city edito of the Reno (Nev.) Gazette, Perrin cam to New York in 1912 and joined the staf of the New York Evening World unde Charles Chapin. He met on the Worl staff at that time Endicott G. Rich then a rewrite man, who now succeeds Perrin on the Herald Tribune.

DWIGHT PERRIN

After later service on the New York Morning Telegraph, and a period as vice-president of a moving picture concern, Perrin joined the old Tribune as a reporter. He was promoted to the Sunday staff, and later was named nigh city editor. In March of 1923 he becam city editor. In 1924, six weeks befor the New York Herald and the Tribun were merged, he joined the Herald a news editor, returning to the Heral Tribune in his old job of city edito after the consolidation.

Perrin's acceptance of the Post-Di patch offer followed negotiations whic had been underway for several weeks, was stated.

Endicott G. Rich, new Herald Tribur executive, is 43 years old, and bega newspaper work as a cub reporter on th New York Morning World in 1904 whi still attending Columbia University, fro which he was graduated in 1905. All o his newspaper experience has been o New York newspapers. Leaving th World in 1906 he joined the Washingto bureau of the New York Times. In 19(he was recalled to the New York offi to join the rewrite staff. In 1912 he le the Times to join the Evening World.

He returned to the Times in 1914, r maining until December of 1925, when h joined the Herald Tribune. For si years of that period he was on the sta of the Annalist, published by the Ne York Times Company.

Fowler Named Promotion Manager

Gene Fowler for eight years with th New York American and Daily Mirro has been placed in charge of the promo tion department of the King Feature Syndicate. Before joining the syndica he was managing editor of the America

ANNENBERG RESIGNS FROM HEARST PAPERS

President of New York Mirror and Member of Executive Council—In Hearst Service Since 1900—Plans European Trip

Moses L. Annenberg, who has been associated with the Hearst newspaper and magazine interests since 1900, has announced his resignation as president of the New York Daily Mirror and member of the Hearst executive council. Mr. Annenberg came to New York in 1921 to take over the position of circulation director of the Hearst Publications; prior to that he had been publisher of the Milwaukee Wisconsin News and for the past year he has been directing the activities of the New York Daily Mirror.

Moses L. Annenberg

Mr. Annenberg is resigning in order that he may take a long needed rest. He plans a trip to Europe with his family July 7, and they are sailing on the Olympic for a three months' stay. On his return he will devote his entire time and attention to his own extensive interests.

YOUNG DANE IN U. S. TO STUDY NEWSPAPERS

Tage Henius, Son of Publisher of Copenhagen Berlingske Tidende, Attended I.C.M.A. Convention—Surprised at Frank Discussion

Tage Henius, son of the publisher of the Copenhagen Berlingske Tidende, attended the I. C. M. A. convention, representing his father's newspapers. Henius is in this country to study American newspaper methods. He is 21 years old.

At present he is associated with the New York World, going through many of the departments. Since arriving in this country a year ago last March he has found much to interest him.

But the I. C. M. A. convention particularly was an eye-opener for him.

"I never thought that such frank discussion of circulation matters was possible," he declared. "There is no similar organization in Denmark, but I wish there was."

Henius expects to work later on newspapers in Detroit, Washington and Chicago, before returning to Copenhagen. Before coming to this country he had experience in every department in his father's paper from errand boy up. On his return, he is to be appointed assistant publisher of the Berlingske Tidende.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

June 16-17—New York State Publishers' Assn., summer meeting, Ithaca, N. Y.
June 16-17—New York State Press Assn., summer meeting, Ithaca, N. Y.
June 18-19—Associated Dailies of New York, summer meeting, Ithaca, N. Y.
June 18-19—Oregon State Editorial Assn., annual session, Prineville, Ore.
June 19-24—Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, 22nd annual convention, Philadelphia, Pa.
June 19-26—American Golf Assn. of Advertising Interests, Spring tournament, Cooperstown, N. Y.
June 24-26—Kentucky Press Assn., mid-summer meeting, Pineville, Ky.
June 26-28—New Jersey Press Assn., summer outing, Lake Minnewaska.
June 28-29—Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Assn., convention, State College, Pa.
June 20-July 1—National Editorial Assn., 41st annual convention, Los Angeles, Cal.
July 2-4—Amateur Press Assn., meeting, Philadelphia.
July 5-8—Twelfth District, A. A. C. W., meeting, San Francisco.
July 6-8—Southern Newspaper Publishers Assn., annual meeting, Asheville, N. C.

NO MORE STRIKES PACT SIGNED BY PRINTERS

National Agreement Reached in England Eliminating Danger of Another Sudden Stoppage of Work

(Special to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

Employers and workmen in the British printing industry have signed a national agreement that aims at preventing lightning strikes or sudden stoppages in the future.

On the occasion of the recent general strike the men left work without giving the fortnight's notice called for under the last national agreement, and the consequent disorganization of business was forcibly brought home to the men when the strike was called off for it was not then possible for the same number of men to be re-engaged.

Representatives of the British Federation of Master Printers and the Newspaper Society (provincial newspaper publishers) signed the agreement on the employers' side, with the Printing and Kindred Trades Federation for the printing trade unions.

Briefly the terms of the new agreement are:

That all previous agreements shall remain in force; that there shall be no more lightning strikes or sudden stoppages and no interference by the unions with the contents of any newspaper printed or published by the employers; no chapel meetings during working hours; no interference with apprentices, works or departmental managers during disputes; no stoppage of work in consequence of a dispute in or out of the trade without first exhausting all possibilities of the Joint Industrial Council concilation machinery; with no interference by the unions with the conduct of businesses or the rights of the management to engage, employ, promote or discharge union members.

The post-strike agreement is made without prejudice to the legal rights of either side, and its strict observance is to be regarded as a matter of honor affecting individual employers and workmen.

ORATORICAL WINNER PICKED

Herbert Wenig of Hollywood First in Contest Backed by Dailies

Vice-President Dawes and Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, were principal speakers at the finals of the Third National Oratorical Contest, held in Washington, D. C., June 4.

The winner of the contest, which was sponsored by 20 daily newspapers in various parts of the country, was Herbert Wenig, of Hollywood, Cal. Miss Myrtle Posey of Washington was runner-up, while Helen Bylond of New York, finished third.

The contest was promoted among school children, and this year it is said 2,000,000 took part.

Newspapers sponsoring the contest this year were: New York Times; Pittsburgh Sun; Los Angeles Times; Chicago Daily News; Indianapolis News; Philadelphia Bulletin; Washington Star; Atlanta Constitution; Birmingham Age-Herald; Des Moines Capital; Montgomery Journal; Mobile News-Item; Kansas City Star; Mobile Register; Louisville Courier-Journal and Times; Oklahoma City Oklahoman; Chattanooga Times; Seattle Times; Rochester Democrat & Chronicle; Hartford Courant.

RENAUD NEW MANAGING EDITOR OF N. Y. POST

Herald Tribune Executive Joining Mason, His Former Chief on Curtis Daily—Bond Returns to Ledger

Ralph E. Renaud, in charge of the Sunday edition of the New York Herald Tribune, tendered his resignation Thursday of this week to join the New York Evening Post, July 1, as managing editor.

He was appointed to his new position by Julian Mason, former Herald Tribune managing editor, who resigned recently to become editor of the Post. Merritt C. Bond, Post managing editor since Cyrus H. K. Curtis purchased the paper early in 1924, will return to the Philadelphia Public Ledger in an executive capacity. No successor to Renaud has been named on the Herald Tribune.

Previous to Mr. Mason's resignation, Renaud was assistant managing editor of the Herald Tribune. In the change which followed he was placed in charge of the Sunday edition and coordinate with the managing editor.

Renaud was born in Washington, D. C. In 1899, while still in high school he worked in the Washington bureau of the New York Tribune. He attended Leland Stanford University in California, where he was editor of the Chapparal, undergraduate humorous magazine, and the college annual. Upon being graduated he joined the San Francisco Examiner staff as a reporter. He remained on San Francisco dailies for nine years becoming dramatic critic on the Bulletin and also on the Chronicle.

After the San Francisco earthquake he came east, and 1912 found him on the staff of the New York Globe. Some time later he became a free lance. He wrote short stories and plays, one of which "Behave Yourself" had a lengthy New York run. In 1916, he joined the New York Tribune. In 1922 he was night managing editor of the New York Herald. He returned to the Tribune before the Herald-Tribune merger in 1924.

Daily Gives $25,000 to School

The Atlanta (Ga.) Journal, John S. Cohen, publisher, recently made a gift of $25,000 to the State College of Agriculture, Athens, toward a fund to be used in promoting a national egg-laying contest, and to educate Georgia farmers in poultry raising. It is believed by college officials that returns from poultry will more than offset the farmers' annual losses from the boll weevil.

CAMPBELL MAKES PEACE WITH CANADIAN PRESS

Withdraws Suit and Printed Charges Against Service, Woods, and Imrie—Is Elected to Membership

TORONTO, Ont., June 10.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Canadian Press the application of Charles E. Campbell on behalf of Edmonton (Alta.) Bulletin for an evening paper membership in that city was granted unanimously. The president, J. H. Woods, presided, other directors present being E. H. Macklin, honorary president, John Scott, first vice-president, E. J. Archibald, W. J. Wilkinson, W. B. Preston, A. R. Ford and W. J. Taylor.

The Bulletin today published the following statement signed by Mr. Campbell:

"On Dec. 3, last, in a publisher's statement in the Edmonton Bulletin and subsequently in an action for damages in the Supreme Court of Alberta, I made certain charges against the Canadian Press, J. H. Woods, of the Calgary Herald and John M. Imrie of the Edmonton Journal.

"These charges were made in good faith on information which I believed to be true but which I have since found was incorrect.

"With reference to the Canadian Press, I have settled my difference with that organization and have applied for membership in it. I have found on further enquiry that the directors of the Canadian Press, in dealing with my application for a morning news service last fall, exercised their functions according to their by-laws and are desirous of facilitating newspaper publication in Edmonton to the fullest extent within these by-laws.

"It has been shown to my satisfaction that the Edmonton Journal and Mr. Imrie personally did not oppose but actually supported my application; also that such conditions as were proposed by Mr. Woods as president of the Canadian Press were suggested in good faith. They were in fact such as to be subsequently approved by the directors of the Canadian Press, as proper under the circumstances, covering an interim news service in advance of consideration of an application for membership. That part of my statement of claim alleging conditions proposed was based in part on memory and I have since found was incorrect in certain respects. None of the conditions suggested had any relation whatever to trades unions or agreement with same.

"I desire therefore to make a complete retraction of the charges made in December last and have instructed my solicitors to withdraw the legal action then taken against the Canadian Press, Mr. Woods and Mr. Imrie."

Mamaroneck Weekly Sold

Raymond Bill, representing publishing interests of New York, who last week purchased the Mamaroneck (N. Y.) Paragraph from Clara S. Rice, has since resold this property to the Mamaroneck-Larchmont Publishing Company, publisher of the Mamaroneck Daily Times and the Larchmont Times. For the past year the Paragraph has been operated by Henry T. Price under a lease arrangement with Mrs. Rice, who inherited it from her late husband. Officers of the Mamaroneck-Larchmont Publishing Company are: George Forbes, president; T. Harold Forbes, vice-president; Francis Hunter, secretary-treasurer.

Receiver for Mishawaka Enterprise

Phil L. Nicar has been appointed receiver of the Mishawaka (Ind.) Enterprise by Judge Lewis W. Hammond in superior court following an argument in that court, during which the defendant company sought to have the motion for receivership ruled out. The present officers of the firm, Stanley Stone, president; James H. Cloetingh, vice-president and treasurer, and Benjamin L. Taylor, secretary, took office Feb. 1.

TEXAS COURT UPHOLDS RIGHT TO COMMENT

Cattleman Connected by San Antonio Papers With Liquor Violation Who Won in Lower Courts, Loses in Highest Tribunal

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

AUSTIN, Tex., June 9.—"One of the most helpful means of cultivating a loyal observance and aiding in the enforcement of law is the recognized right of the press to publish a reasonable and fair criticism of crime. It is a public service and makes for order," the supreme court of Texas, Wednesday, declared, in a far-reaching decision of the Texas libel laws, reversing the $15,000 judgment in favor of Claude A. Keeran, wealthy cattle man against the San Antonio Express Publishing Company, and a similar judgment against the San Antonia Light Publishing Company and rendering judgment in favor of the newspapers.

The judgments were given by the trial court and affirmed by the Civil Appeals Court based on a suit brought following the publication of articles concerning an alleged widespread liquor conspiracy and reciting that charges had been filed against Keeran.

"The right of a citizen to have his good name protected from libelous publication is indeed a valuable one," the court said, "and not to be lightly disregarded. But the upholding of the law is likewise sacred and the right of newspapers to make reasonable and fair comment and criticism upon matters of public concern for general information is at all times to be protected and never denied."

The Supreme Court opinion, which is understood to go farther than any previous ruling of the Appellate Courts in defending the zone of privilege of newspaper articles, said:

"There is no doubt but the articles constitute libel per se and the judgment therefore warranted, unless it can be said the truth of the statements therein contained has been shown or that such publications are within qualifiedly privileged matters. We do not think the judgment is supported by the evidence. We think, with respect to the defendant in error they are true, and therefore this constitutes a complete defense to the action. This does not imply that defendant in error was guilty technically of the offense or offenses charged to him directly or by implication, but rather that the discovery, investigation and charges made by the officers in connection with the matter as alleged in the articles are true, at least substantially true.

"The proceedings were official proceedings authorized by law and in the administration of the law and any newspaper had the right to publish a fair, true and impartial account of such proceedings. The public is greatly interested in the observance upon the one hand and the enforcement upon the other of all laws, especially the prohibition laws, which affect so directly the public morals. The statute permits reasonable and fair comment criticism as to such matters, published for general information.

"To permit comment or criticism of a proceeding or act is necessarily to allow reasonable and fair latitude. It necessarily carries with it permission to draw from the facts any reasonable and fair inference or conclusion.

"It is too late to quibble over the wisdom of our prohibition laws; all good people irrespective of their views as to their original wisdom respect them for the law's sake. The Court of Civil Appeals has in a measure palliated the defendant in error's offense by referring to it in some of its parts as homely hospitality, but hospitality to one's friends ceases where hospitality to law and society begins.

"There is no more sacred right of government or duty of a citizen than the observance of law of the helpful means of cultivating a loyal observance, and aiding in the enforcement thereof is the recognized right of the press to publish a reasonable and fair criticism of crime. It is a public service and makes for order."

NEWSPAPER MEN INVADE CANADIAN WILDS

Not a group of lumberjacks, but New York newspaper men on a two weeks' fishing trip at Lake Archambault, in the Laurentian Mountains, Canada. They are, from left to right: Frederick F. Van de Water, Curtis Publishing Company, Denis T. Lynch, reporter, New York Herald Tribune; Frederick B. Edwards, reporter, New York American; Robert B. Peck, reporter, Herald Tribune; Clare Briggs, cartoonist, Herald Tribune; and Herbert Westen, reporter New York American. The other member of the party, Dwight S. Perrin, formerly city editor of the Herald Tribune, took the picture.

LIBEL RETRIAL ORDERED

Texas Appeals Court Holds Damages by Wrong Caption Not Proven

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

AUSTIN, Tex., June 9.—In the hurry of modern daily newspaper production errors are frequent, particularly those of switching heads on news stories or captions on pictures, and readers are no longer surprised to find such an error in print. The Third Civil Appeals Court of Texas pointed out that such an obvious mistake does not necessarily result in injury to a person whose picture or name is joined with story or caption.

The court reversed the $7,500 judgment awarded by the trial court in favor of Mrs. Gertrude Isensee of Hays County against the Express Publishing Company of San Antonio, publishers of the San Antonio Evening News, and ordered the case retried. The opinion said:

"The proof falls short of establishing all the elements of damage alleged and yet the jury was directed to look to the petition and not to the evidence."

Mrs. Isensee's picture according to the suit was printed under a caption, "Held in Death and Over a story Relative to A Beauty Specialist in Los Angeles, Mme. Electra Lynn."

In the necessary haste and volume of detail required to issue the editions of large daily newspapers, mistakes in the placing and arrangement of type forms, captions or pictures are not infrequent, the court's opinion said.

GIRL WINS LIBEL VERDICT

Court of Appeals Upholds $4,000 Award Against New York Daily News

The New York Court of Appeals in Albany, June 8, affirmed the Appelate Division, Second Department, in upholding a verdict of the Kings County Supreme Court of $4,000 in favor of Catherine Broderick against the News Syndicate Company, publisher of the New York Daily News, as damages for an alleged libel.

The alleged libel was in the use of a photograph of Miss Broderick, taken as a high school graduate, which was printed under the name of Mrs. Rose Heller in the issue of the News of Nov. 19, 1920. The story was to the effect that Mrs. Heller had been granted an annulment of her marriage and at the trial had testified her husband had represented himself to be a hat manufacturer and later admitted himself to be a pickpocket.

The question raised on the appeal by counsel for the News was that reversible error was committed by the trial justice in admitting evidence of the mental suffering caused by Miss Broderick by what members of her family said to her regarding the incident.

DIVORCE NOTICES $12

Papers of 70's Charged for Copy That Often Makes Page 1 Today

Instead of playing up divorce news on the front page, editors in 1872 charged $12 to print a divorce notice. This information is disclosed by a copy of the Bloomington (Ind.) Weekly Democrat of April 6, 1872, which was found when an old house in Bloomington was torn down recently.

Advertising rates were $80 a year for one column, $40 for a half column, and $7.50 for a quarter column for six months.

Linotype Operates While Plant Moves

A linotype machine in the office of the Wallingford (Conn.) Times, weekly, was kept in operation while the building in which it was located was moved four feet last week. A flexible hose was connected to the gas supply line so that the flame under the metal pot would not be extinguished. A worker climbed to the roof of the building and gradually let out the hose while the building was being moved. Morris Levitt, linotype operator, continued his work without interruption.

Canadian Paper Exports

Canada exported in April, 1926, 112,828 tons of newsprint valued at $7,374,021, as compared with 93,882 tons valued at $6,654,303 in April, 1925. For the first four months of the year exports totalled 540,963 tons, valued at $35,689,797, as against 446,804 tons valued at $31,676,848 in the same period of 1925. Pulpwood exports were, however, smaller than in 1925, being 433,615 cords, valued at $3,966,043 as compared with 539,861 cords, valued at $5,040,315 in the first four months of 1925.

New Chicago Special Agency

Inland Newspapers, Inc., a new firm of special representatives has been formed at Chicago with Arthur W. Cooley, formerly vice-president and general manager of Carpenter & Co., special representatives, Chicago, as president. The Waukegan (Ill.) News has appointed Inland Newspapers, Inc., its representative.

New Weekly in Milltown, N. J.

The Milltown (N. J.) Review, weekly, was scheduled to make its first appearance Friday, June 11. Daniel Crabiel is head of the publishing organization.

COURT DENIES PRESS AIDS CRIME'S SPREAD

Judge Vause of Brooklyn Takes Issue With Grand Jury Report Blaming Newspapers—Says Publicity Helps Police

Bernard W. Vause, County Judge in Kings County, New York, last week took issue with the Grand Jury which submitted a report to him criticizing the newspapers as one of the "outstanding causes" for the increase in crime because of their presentation of stories about "super-criminals."

"I think the truth is just the reverse of this conclusion," Judge Vause said. "Certainly the cases of Whittemore and Chapman are not in point, for the latter, as the newspaper reports showed, paid dearly for his criminal career and the other is about to pay.

"I can think of no case where newspaper publicity has encouraged crime and very often the newspapers give valuable aid in capturing criminals. I have in mind one specific instance where a young man who had kidnaped a child sent her back home when he noted that every detail of his offense was being reported in the newspapers and followed with interest by the public.

"This man admitted to me that the publicity given to the crime made him pause in what he was attempting to do and to restore the child to her parents. There are countless other cases where newspapers, through printing pictures of criminals and arousing public interest in the search for them, have been responsible for their capture, to a large extent." The report of the Grand Jury referred to the increasing amount of crime among the younger generation, and said that "one of the outstanding causes seems to be that the headlines of our newspapers seem to make heroes of some of those so-called super criminals such as Whittemore and Chapman."

The jurors expressed the opinion that "if the public press would not lay such great stress on their activities, the younger generation would not be led and encouraged to emulate their apparent brilliant achievements."

In commenting on the Grand Jury's opinion, Judge Vause said he knew of nothing brought to the attention of that body to lead to such a presentment.

$15,000 Fire in S. F. Press Club

Loss estimated at $15,000 resulted from a fire in the dining room of the San Francisco Press Club, June 2, which destroyed paintings, art treasures and writings belonging to members.

LIBEL STINGS IN SNAKE-LIKE INSINUATIONS

Judge Edwards in Oklahoma Supreme Court Scores Hypocritical and Sarcastic Word Pictures in Affirming Plaintiff's Judgment in Damage Suit Between Two Editors—Reverses Former Court Rule

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

Sitting in Oklahoma Supreme Court recently, Judge Thomas A. Edwards handed down a decision in a libel case that forms a striking lesson for all newspaper men in the use of words.

The whole case is so pertinent and comprehensive, that it is submitted in full in this the 14th article obtained by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, stripping the libel law of legal verbiage.

SARCASM is a delicate instrument, requiring the deft scalpel touch of a surgeon, when used by a writing man. No ordinary reporter or editor would dare don the white gown of a doctor and enter an operating room, lest deadly germs follow to kill him as well as the patient. Libel is the deadly bacillus in the science of news reporting. Libel threatens the man who makes clumsy use of sarcasm or sordid innuendo.

A successful dealer in sarcasm must be a genius. If he is not born to the use of this purple form of expression, he had best leave it entirely alone.

The direct charge is dangerous enough. At least it is manly. It is the slant-lipped whispers, the winks, the shrugs, the nose-holdings, the hissing insinuations in word pictures, that, passing as sarcasm, have double-poison in their stings. Abused by one lacking the skill of a Voltaire, they become ugly, twisting, cowardly snakes, writhing across the printed page. Double-poison lies in them because they strike both the clumsy stinger and the victim stung.

Judge Thomas A. Edwards, sitting in Oklahoma Supreme Court, not long ago recognized this truism in a decision affirming the $10,000 judgment of a trial court in favor of the plaintiff in a libel action brought by Andrew C. Martz, editor of the Okeen (Okla.) Record against T. J. Lewis, editor of the Okeen (Okla.) Leader, both weekly newspapers.

Judge Edwards reversed a former ruling of the court to strike a blow at "a sordid, hypocritical, sarcastic insinuation."

"To say that one may injure another through insinuation or inference without being held accountable is to license the assassins of good names to do more effective indirectly without risk, that which he could not do directly," he declared in his decision.

Mr. Martz and Mr. Lewis were beating the keys of their editorial typewriters in a good old-fashioned newspaper fight. Personal journalism had come back to life in Okeen.

Mr. Lewis one day made use of the scalpel of sarcasm. Its result, in the form of an adverse libel judgment, followed. Mr. Lewis had compared his record as a private citizen during the war with the military record of the plaintiff. Here is the instrument he used, the editorial he wrote considered libellous by the court:

"The Okeen Record, the 'germ' of literature and logic, last week in attempting to make a reply in defense of the American Legion, of which he boasts he is a member (however, by the act of compulsory army service only), takes a direct slap at the editor of the Leader.

"He tells the folks through the columns of his paper that he is a member of the American Legion and proud of it, and a little further down states that the editor and owner of the Leader is about the same age as he, intimating that the editor of this paper should have been in Uncle Sam's service during the world's war.

"The first thing we wish to call your attention to, Mr. Martz, is the fact that had Uncle Sam come and demanded our services, such as he did yours, we too could have boasted of a few months' service in a training camp, far away from the sound of the enemy's guns.

"Secondly, the editor of the Leader made no attempt to keep out of the service. Long before the draft bill was passed we conversed with an army recruiting officer at Fairview. He was very frank in his assertions, and in practically these words said: 'I have no d—— time to take up with men who have families, we are after a bunch of these yellow-backed single guys who should be here now volunteering.'

"Later on, Martz, the draft bill was passed. In that bill was a proviso that married men would be the last called to the colors. It caused the marriage license clerk to work overtime, the ministers were doing a land-office business. But you remember it was discovered that the men who were married after the declaration of war would be called the same as a single man, thus causing many to leave their war brides and enter into the service with their more patriotic companions.

"The editor of the Leader was not guilty of any of these acts. We were married several years before the opening of the World's War. Our boy was quite a lad when the draft law came into effect, hence, not like some others, we were not hiding behind the folds of a woman's garments. We made answer to our questionnaire the same as you, all that was required of any American citizen.

"We made no attempt to evade the draft, and had it been our lot to be called we would have done our bit, expecting nothing in return. When we came back we would have also considered one comrade as good as another, whether he was rich or poor, the same feeling would have existed here as did in the front line trenches, for we are not much on 'society lines' as we have never yet found a man so low that we would not clasp his hand in friendship, nor a man so high up in this life that we considered him better than we were.

"There should be a little distinction, however, between the boys who fought 'over there' and the ones who just entered a training camp To our opinion the man who served best should be given preference in the selection of your officers for the American Legion post. The Okeen Post, we believe, would have made a better showing had such men as Floyd Fullbright, Ira Towns, John Adams, Bill Marcoux and others, who faced the enemy over there—really did some fighting, and who did not belong to the commissary department or the mule drivers' brigade.

"You speak of being engaged in a more necessary occupation. We were both, practically speaking, in the same line of industry—both printers. The Leader editor managing a newspaper. Did you attempt to volunteer? Was there anything at any time to prevent you from offering your services? Is it not a fact that your constant aim was to some way, somehow, to get by, and that you were among those who stayed out of the game as long as possible?

"We respect the uniform you wore, you are worthy of some consideration for wearing it, but when it comes down to real patriotism, real Americanism, we consider, we will stand the acid test along with some of those whom Uncle Sam said 'come, I want you,' and would have never served under any other consideration.

"Yes, Mr. Editor of the Okeen Record, you should be proud of your membership in the American Legion Post, to the extent of $15 per month during Trades Day season. That ought to swell you up with pride. . . ."

When the subsequent libel action brought by Mr. Martz against Mr. Lewis went into appeal, the defendant editor based his defense on a former ruling of the court to the effect that it is not libellous per se to charge a person of having done that which he might legally and properly have done.

Judge Edwards reversed this ruling in a decision, which, because it forms a striking lesson to all newspaper men in the use of words, is herewith reproduced virtually in full. The court said:

"As to whether the article is libellous per se, we must consider in our determination only the thought, idea, impression or opinion conveyed to the reader by the publication, everything appearing in the article, be it inference, insinuation, irony, ridicule, sarcasm, the friendly or unfriendly tone, its arrangement, form and style. The court for such purpose becomes the lay person to whom it is addressed and in arriving at the meaning everything appearing in or from the article which unaided by extrinsic facts or circumstances has a natural tendency to change, color or formulate its meaning must be considered. Conversely, if the aid of innuendo is necessary to make the meaning defamatory it is not libellous per se. Innuendo as here used is strictly in its legal application as an averment of the meaning of alleged libellous words.

"If the article, when so considered, engenders in the mind of the reader a conclusion, impression or opinion of the plaintiff that is defamatory and as such tends to expose plaintiff to public hatred, contempt, obloquy or tend to deprive him of public confidence or lower him in the opinion of men whose standard of opinion the court can properly recognize, or tend to induce them to entertain an ill opinion of him, it is libelous per se.

"The publication cannot be measured by its effect when subjected to the critical analysis of a trained legal mind, it must be measured by its natural and probable effect upon the mind of the average lay reader. The fact that the thought conveyed is by way of insinuation or inference of false acts or facts is immaterial, for to say that one may injure another through insinuation or inference without being held accountable is to license the assassin of good names to do more effective indirectly without risk that which he could not do directly. . . .

"The purpose of written words is to convey the thought of the author. The tone of written words is subject to as many variations as the tone of spoken words. The use of a given word or phrase often makes the stroke that of the feather adorning the reputation of a man; the use of another may make the stroke that of a hammer, destroying the reputation of a man. Words quite innouous on their face may, by reason of their peculiar setting and relation with other words be cruel, slanderous and vicious.

"The articles here unmistakably portrays that the tone and the mental viewpoint of the author to be unfriendly and contemptuous of the plaintiff. The author compares his record as a private citizen during the war with the military record of plaintiff. Every statement, fact, inference and insinuation in the article refers to the author or to the plaintiff. The plaintiff is repeatedly charged with deliberately avoiding war service as long as was humanly possible. It states the author did not volunteer because a recruiting officer advised him that married men were not wanted, but that it was 'these yellow back single guys that were wanted,' clearly referring and applying such epithet to the plaintiff. It states that many desperately sought to evade the draft and heartlessly entered into hasty and convenient marriages to aid them therein, but that such avenue of escape was in vain. The author, it boastingly says, was guilty of none of these things. He did not hide behind the folds of a woman's garment. It states that the plaintiff, in spite of all, finally had to go, but that after going he purposely managed to get into the Commissary Department to insure his personal safety. The article makes the pointed inquiry:

" 'Is it not a fact that your constant aim was to someway, somehow, to get by, and that you were among those who stayed out of the game as long as possible?'

"The publication concludes by charging that plaintiff belonged to the American Legion for the selfish purpose of making $15 per month out of it and that he ought for that to be swelled with pride. This last, we think rather a sordid, hypocritical, sarcastic insinuation that was intended to picture the plaintiff as an arch hypocrite at the head of a patriotic organization. This thought is made more clear by the reference that deserving members of the Post who had actual service should be placed at the head of the Post instead of the plaintiff. The article naturally conveyed these thoughts and was intended to, and did, have the effect to expose plaintiff to public hatred, contempt, scorn and shame, to deprive him of public confidence and lower him in the estimation of men.

"We pass the facts proven by the record wherein it is shown that plaintiff volunteered five months before the draft, that he did not marry until after the war, that he served honorably in a combat division, and was sincere in his membership in the patriotic organization, the American

(Continued on page 20)

POLITICAL WRITER GOES ABROAD

M. E. Hennessy, political writer of the Boston Globe and Mrs. Hennessy photographed on the S.S. Baltic when they sailed for abroad recently

ADVERTISERS FIGHTING SUMMER SLUMP WITH NEWSPAPER SPACE

It's "Foolhardy" to Cease Advertising and Lose Momentum Says Agency Man—Slump "Imagination" Says Colgate Co.—California Group Continuing Copy

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

WHEN the temperature is registering 100 degrees in the shade, collars are wilting, and many people are vacationing, must sales take a sharp downward drop?

Many manufacturers, who formerly took the "summer slump" as a matter of course, now have found that by special summer sales and advertising activities they can keep their sales line on their chart moving along reasonably steadily. A changed attitude is evident in many quarters.

Excellent specimens of vacation advertising with coupon to give direct results.

Instead of suspending or cutting down newspaper advertising during June, July and August, a number of far-sighted manufacturers are keeping liberal schedules moving constantly all summer and having their salesmen merchandise aggressively to the trade. "We sell our securities the year round," comments Frank LeRoy Blanchard, director of the advertising department of Henry L. Doherty & Co., New York City. "Our salesmen do not stop work simply because of the summer slump or vacation period. We believe it is possible to keep sales volume up to a relatively high degree through the use of intelligent and forceful newspaper advertising. In other words, there is no let-down in the activities of our securities department.

"In the oil division, a greater proportion of our advertising appropriation is spent during the summer months, almost exclusively in the newspapers and a few regional farm papers. We adapt our advertising to the season, the amount of copy in our securities advertising being the same from one season to the other."

"There has been a great change in the attitude of manufacturers toward what was hitherto known as the "summer slump." Busy brains have been at work to devise ways and means for lessening it. From what I can learn, advertising has materially helped over this period in the year's business. A number of manufacturers have found that their sales have held on remarkably well right on through July and even August.

Of course, it cannot be expected that business will be at as high a peak even through the vacation period as in the colder months. No amount of advertising will change the habits of the American people in buying except in a few lines. Advertising, however, can and does stimulate sales even during the vacation period.

To start advertising in the spring and drop it just when it is gathering momentum is foolhardy in the opinion of Thomas E. Basham, president of the Thomas E. Basham Company advertising agency of Louisville, Ky., who states:

"Some of our largest clients and those of other agencies we happen to know about are going to run straight through this summer regardless of the so-called 'summer slump' season.

"Successful advertisers are fast learning what a foolhardy thing it is to run a campaign for the spring of the year and drop it in the opening of the summer just about when it was gaining momentum, and start it up again in the fall with the same results.

"Some advertisers have been cutting down their copy, with a view to running continuously through the year rather than larger units for a short period."

Colgate & Co., one of the country's largest users of space in newspapers and magazines, has come to this conclusion:

"In general we would say that the 'summer slump' is largely a matter of imagination and is more apt to be caused by the fact that an article is seasonal in use than by the possible lighter consumer buying during the summer months.

"In the case of our staple products, such as Rapid Shave Cream and Ribbon Dental Cream, there is little variance in sales during the year. In the case of talcs and face powders, however, our summer sales are considerably ahead of the sales during the rest of the year, while the sales of perfumes and novelty extracts are greater at the Christmas season than at any other time of year.

"The so-called summer slump in our opinion is very frequently due to the fact that the items involved are those which have a wide use at other seasons of the year and, consequently, a wider sale."

Several mail order firms have found it policy to "resume speed" with heavy copy starting in August. The Pelman Institute of America is one advertiser which last year spent a sizable amount then.

Special summer contests for stimulating dealers and salesmen to accomplish definite tasks are being operated by many manufacturers as one method to keep sales active.

The Pepsodent Company, maker of Pepsodent Tooth Paste, will conduct a test this summer to see what can be done in newspapers. All of the company's copy is keyed with a coupon calling for a free sample. Harlow P. Roberts, the company's advertising manager, reports:

"As a rule, we have not used newspapers during the summer months, as we do not find them desirable. Our advertising during this period is only in magazines. During the balance of the year, we use both newspapers and magazines Test campaigns run during the summer have not proven very satisfactory.

"We are trying another test this summer and hope for better results."

Marcus Conlan, advertising manager of Waitt & Bond, Inc., Blackstone and Totem Cigars, Newark, N. J., points out:

"Our newspaper advertising is not seasonal, but is carried throughout the year. Sales of cigars do not slump in the summer; on the contrary, the summer months are best in the cigar business as outdoor activities conduce to smoking."

The fish industry each year experiences a marked slump in demand on the part of the consumer while Lent is the peak. Yet fish affords the wholesaler more margin of profit on certain popular items in the summer and makes an ideal summer food. The dog-day slump, like Friday as fish day, could be overcome by aggressive methods, in the opinion of Capt. Frederick William Wallace, one of the leaders of the industry.

A live merchant on the western coast is keeping up his sales of radio by featuring it for camp and vacation use and playing up a portable outfit at a popular price.

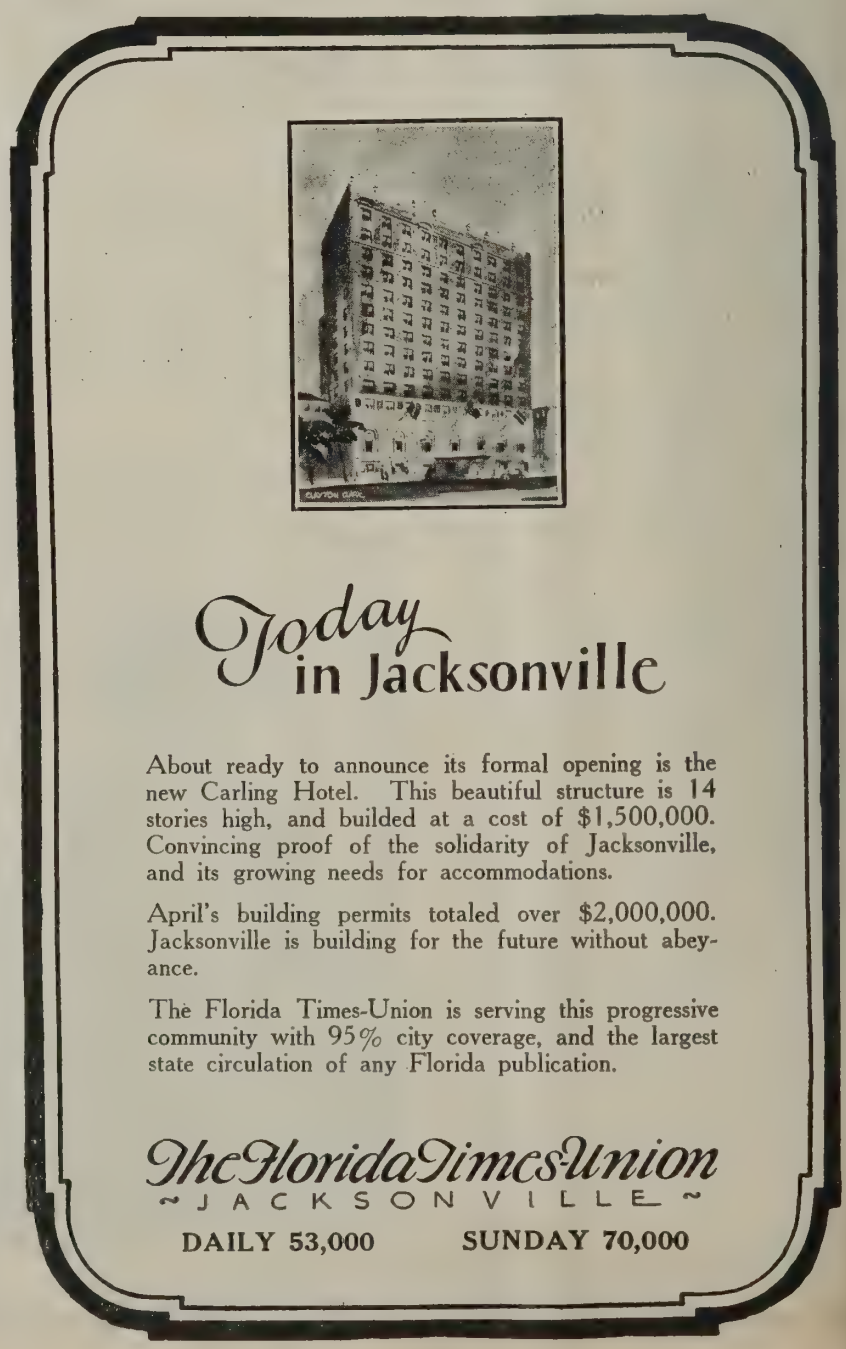
EDITOR & PUBLISHER already has related how Hollywood, Fla., quickly built a summer business in what had been purely a winter resort through newspaper advertising.

Even more remarkable is the achieve- of the All-Year Club of Southern California, which in five years has completely changed business conditions for its section by advertising largely in newspapers, which has made assets of liabilities.

Previously, the public had looked favorably on California as a place to go in cold weather, but too hot a climate for warm weather visits. This prejudice has been countered with copy which meets it frankly and constructively.

"Yes, summer is a California season, too," says the heading of a current advertisement, 15 inches by three columns. The subhead continues: "Light overcoats are worn every evening. The sun shines every day. For 50 years the average mean temperature in summertime has been 69 degrees."

The copy then cites the many different forms of fun people may enjoy, urges a visit to all points on the Pacific coast, explains special rates prevail May 15 to October 31 and closes with a coupon for a 47-page book on vacations.



Other advertisements explain further that even if the temperature drops a bit lower occasionally, it is not felt because of the very low humidity. The copy is very suggestive to any advertiser who wants to make a summer appeal.

C. G. Milham, executive secretary of the All-Year Club, has this to say about what has been done:

"Los Angeles and all Southern California formerly suffered from the so-called summer slump. Now, the months of June, July, August and September are practically as active here in a business way as are the other months of the year. This has resulted chiefly, we are told, through the advertising activities of the All-Year Club.

"It is not too much to say that in the last five years our advertising has absolutely changed the business cycle. As one case in point, until our advertising called the attention of the world to our attractive summers, the peak of real estate activity as shown in the records of the County Clerk was reached in March every year. Now, without any diminution in March, there now is a greater peak in October, representing the business accruing from those brought here in the summer. Generally speaking, we will have in California this summer at least two visitors for every one in 1921.

"Since 1921 inclusive, the All-Year Club has spent approximately $700,000 in newspaper advertising. It most assuredly has been good business."

METRO-AREA

The metropolitan district of New York—the country's greatest and richest buying market—concentrates within its boundaries a population of 9,500,000 people, representing over 2,000,000 families. In this metro-area The New York Times holds a commanding position.

This territory offers to all manufacturers of products consumed or used in the home, clothing or other articles for personal wear, automobiles and accessories, sports goods, building material, real estate and investments, their best field for expansion.

AVERAGE NET PAID CIRCULATION OF NEW YORK MORNING NEWSPAPERS FOR THE SIX MONTHS ENDED MARCH 31, 1926

	City & Suburban Week-day	Total Week-day	City & Suburban Daily & Sunday	Total Daily & Sunday
The New York Times.....	285,949	356,471	296,605	392,695
The World	261,064	287,694	295,020	329,860
New York Herald-Tribune..	233,074	285,800	234,524	294,327
New York American.....	204,092	225,081	281,866	347,771

With a net paid circulation larger than that of any other New York morning newspaper of standard size, The New York Times is the leader among all New York newspapers in volume of advertising. In five months of this year The Times published 12,845,318 agate lines of advertising, an excess of 4,767,434 lines over the second New York newspaper and a gain of 1,323,984 lines over The Times record for the corresponding period of last year. This volume was attained despite The Times censorship which excludes thousands of lines weekly.

The New York Times exerts a constructive influence in the homes of its readers. Intelligent, discriminating and progressive, they constitute a large part of the thinking public. In quality of circulation, in the confidence of its readers, in purchasing power, in production of satisfactory results, The Times is not excelled by any other newspaper in the world.

The average net paid daily and Sunday circulation of The New York Times for the month of May exceeded 400,000 copies.

FOUR GROUPS FOR GENEVA CONFERENCE AGENCIES TO MEET IN JULY

Delay in Preliminary Plans Laid to Lord Burnham's Opposition, Based on Fear of Propaganda and Dictation by Employees

DEFINITE steps are at last being taken during the Fortieth Session of the League Council (week beginning June 7) for the holding of the International Press Conference, proposed by Senor Yanez of Chile at the September Assembly, after a series of delays and seemingly unexplainable setbacks. The Council, which is under the presidency of Osten Unden, Swedish foreign minister who has a reputation for "putting things over" or "messing things up," will authorize the Secretariat to send out a series of invitations to individuals representing at least three of the groups interested in the conference—the press associations, the working journalists and the Government press bureaus. Whether the publishers will be invited to participate in the preliminaries remains to be seen.

The real reason for the delay of several months in getting the preparatory work under way can be attributed to a single man, Lord Burnham, proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph, president of the Empire Press Association and the Newspaper Proprietors' Association of Great Britain.

For some months Lord Burnham's hostility to the proposed conference has not been concealed and it was in hopes that he would be won over—and with him the British publishers, inasmuch as he is the most powerful figure in English journalism since Lord Northcliffe—that the League consented to delays. Even now these delays may vitally affect the pourparlers since several agencies whose interest was at first great have lost considerable enthusiasm.

So far as can be ascertained, Lord Burnham obtained the mistaken idea that the conference was designed to put across some kind or other of propaganda, and secondly might become an instrument whereby "working journalists" as correspondents, reporters, editors and others are known, might make demands for additional advantages from the publishers.

Lord Burnham, it is known, not only refused to take part in the Yanez scheme but used his influence with British publishers and the government to "sabotage" the proposal. Believing his opposition was based upon a misunderstanding League envoys went to London and sought to "convert" him.

At the March Council, the British representative, Foreign Minister Sir Austen Chamberlain, it is known, was "instructed" to block any further progress or bring the program into conformity with the views of Lord Burnham. Overburdened with anxieties as a result of the council seat fight and hitch in Germany's admission, and subsequently with the American Court Reservations and other matters, the British Foreign Secretary completely forgot the Press Conference and the question went over until the present session.

While Lord Burnham's opposition has not yet been removed, League officials and other interested parties will take advantage of his presence in Geneva the second week in June, when he will preside over the second section of the International Labor Bureau Conference, to discuss the matter with him and Sir Austen. It is regarded as certain that Lord Burnham will be convinced of the desirability of British publishers participating.

In case agreement is reached, the Council will suggest that the Secretariat send invitations immediately to representatives of the four groups, as proposed in M. Vandervelde's original report. The press association delegates probably will be called together first, perhaps in July. Two will be invited from each country, the Associated Press and United Press from the United States; Reuters and Exchange Telegraph from Great Britain; Havas and Agence Radio from France; Stefani and another agency from Italy; Agence Americana from Brazil; Tass or the old Rosta from Russia, and so on.

After the press association delegates have met the Government press bureau group will assemble and finally the working journalists and publishers' groups. The advisability of calling all groups together at once is questioned because of the diversity of interests.

The press conference proper probably will be held in 1927.

OCHS GIVEN HONORARY DEGREE

N. Y. Times Publisher Made Doctor of Letters by New York University

Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters at the annual commencement of New York University, June 9.

The publisher was escorted to the rostrum to receive his degree by Prof. James Melvin Lee, Director of the School of Journalism of the University.

In conferring the honor on Mr. Ochs, Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown said:

"Adolph Simon Ochs, man of power in the world of Journalism, who have won your power by sheer ability, ideals, and industry, and who make use of your power, not only to the end of extraordinary achievement in journalism, but in the fostering of cognate undertakings for the spread of knowledge and information, honored citizen of America, and of the crowning city of America, the City of New York, as Chancellor of New York University I welcome you to the degree of Doctor of Letters with all of the rights and privileges thereunto appertaining, in evidence whereof you will receive this diploma and the insignia appropriate to this degree."

PERKINS DISCUSSES CLASSIFIED

Chicago Herald-Examiner Executive Addresses Tulsa Realtors

C. L. Perkins, classified advertising manager of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, discussed the problem of when and how to use classified advertising before the advertising conference of the national convention of Real Estate Boards at Tulsa, Okla.

Mr. Perkins, formerly president of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers and now editor of the Classified Journal, emphasized the need for real estate men to choose sufficient means to reach every potential buyer. He warned against spasmodic classified advertising.

"Truth in advertising is not a moral question—it is a business proposition," Mr. Perkins said.

Foreign Paper Plans Special Issues

The New York Japanese Times, published semi-weekly by Shozo Midzutani in the Japanese language, will run a series of special issues from June 22 to July 4, celebrating the 15th anniversary of the founding of the paper and carrying historical articles in connection with the Sesquicentennial Exposition in Philadelphia. In August the paper will publish in Japanese a Greater New York Guide for Japanese residents. Y. Fuwa is managing editor.

Oklahoma Plans Ad Campaign

Oklahomans, Inc., representing the non-profit division of the Oklahoma State Chamber of Commerce for advertising Oklahoma nationally, has selected state officers, local and county officers and made plans for a membership campaign. Leading newspaper and business men are sponsoring the plan which includes an extensive campaign of national advertising to begin about Nov. 1. The campaign to raise funds and to interest Oklahomans is now under way. N. R. Graham, Tulsa, is state president.

N. Y. JOURNAL OPENS NEW BRONX PLANT

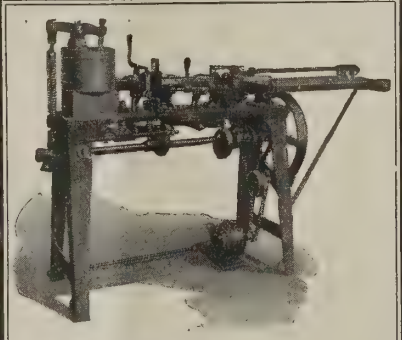
Luncheon to 500 Business Men Celebrates Opening of Two-Story Structure—New Press and Equipment Installed

The New York Evening Journal, June 12, began publication of the Harlem and Bronx Journal in its new Bronx plant, located at One Hundred and Forty-ninth street and Mott avenue.

The plant, two stories high, covers an area of 13,000 square feet and is built on a foundation laid to carry ten stories. The building contains a press room, with capacity of 36,000 papers an hour, circulation department, editorial department, and advertising department.

In celebration of the opening of the plant, a luncheon was given to 500 of the leading business men, public officials and prominent citizens of the Bronx, at the Concourse Plaza, 166th street and the Grand Concourse.

Speakers were Arthur Brisbane, Mayor James J. Walker, Borough President Henry Bruckner and John M. Haffen.



Preceding the luncheon an inspection was made of the new plant. The press room has a new latest model giant, super-speed balcony Hoe Press. It is composed of six units and can print up to 64 pages.

For "Immortals" of Dixie

Harry Stillwell Edwards, Georgia author and newspaper man, and special feature writer for the Atlanta Georgian, has announced that he will organize the Southern Institute of Arts and Letters at Luremont, N. C., to perpetuate and individualize the art, music and literature of the south. Ten representative Southern men and women will be selected to organize the institute.

Bands Compete for Daily's Trophy

Eighteen high school R. O. T. C. bands competed June 5 in the annual contest for trophies offered by the Chicago Daily News. First place was won for the third consecutive time by the band of Lindblom high school.

The Elrod—
For Big Production

SMALL in size but big in production, the Elrod will tuck away into a corner of your composing room and produce as great a quantity of leads, slugs and plain rules as you can use.

So efficient is this machine that it requires no expert operator and yet its material is of so high a quality that it will stand up under even the severest of press and stereotyping conditions.

You can produce all your own spacing material at but little more than the cost of slug metal—let us tell you how.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Ave., Chicago
San Francisco—New York
Atlanta—Boston

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

Quality Faces
for Last Minute Copy

JUST before press time—last minute copy going thru—it's a matter of seconds. Anything goes—battered faces—second-choice type from almost empty cases—no wonder advertisers object—no wonder the paper shows need of the Ludlow.

There's no such thing as a battered face by this modern system. The last ad is as good as the first, and best of all—the deliberate speed with which the Ludlow produces typefaces on sluglines makes the old method slow by comparison.

No matter how revolutionary the Ludlow may seem before it is installed—once in a newspaper plant it is there to stay—there can be no substitute for Ludlow speed and Ludlow quality.

Of course, Ludlow speed plus Ludlow quality is the reason why newspaper plants the world over, in increasing numbers, are equipping their plants with this system.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago
San Francisco: 5 Third Street
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
Boston: 261 Franklin Street
New York: 63 Park Row

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

AN INTERESTING PARALLEL

The circulation of two San Francisco evening newspapers for the six months period ending March 31, 1926

	San Francisco NEWS	San Francisco Bulletin
City Circulation - -	58,248	37,402
City and Suburban -	66,793	53,391
Total Circulation - -	67,985	63,985
Minimum rate - - -	15c	16c

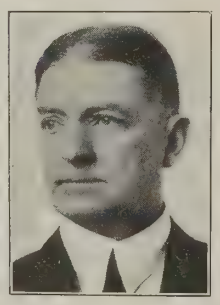
SAN FRANCISCO NEWS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

HOUSEWARMING IN NEW $300,000 PLANT OF DANVILLE COMMERCIAL-NEWS

Morning Contemporary Congratulates Paper and Harrison and Parrett, Its Owners, on Their Successful Quarter Century



Facade of New Building of Danville Commercial-News

THE new $150,000 home of the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News was opened to the public June 5. The new home with its white Bedford stone front houses nearly $140,000 worth of machinery and equipment, the entire plant being valued at nearly $300,000 exclusive of the value of the 23,000 circulation and the good will built up through a quarter of a century of service to the public by the publishers, John H. Harrison and W. J. Parrett.

W. J. Parrett

John H. Harrison

The Commercial-News represents the consolidation in 1903 of the Commercial, founded in 1866, and the News, established in 1872. John H. Harrison bought the Commercial in December, 1897, and the News in 1903, consolidating the two. Six months after the purchase of the Commercial Mr. Parrett became associated with Mr. Harrison and has been with him ever since, at the present time being business manager and part owner.

The morning of the public opening, the Danville Morning Press, only competitor of the Commercial-News, came out with the following congratulatory message on the first page:

"Congratulations

"The Morning Press congratulates the Commercial-News upon the completion of its new home, which the public is invited to visit and inspect today. It does so because its competitor is entitled to felicitations and also because this newspaper in the not far distant future hopes to be engaged in a similar enterprise.

"John H. Harrison and Will J. Parrett deserve the success they have attained. They worked hard, patiently and perseveringly when the going was not so easy for them as it is today and we are glad to see prosperity attend their efforts."

The building, two stories and a full basement, fronts on West North street, a half block from the main business thoroughfare and the heart of downtown.

The private office of Mr. Parrett opens off the lobby, through an ante room in which his private secretary holds forth. The classified advertising department and the business office also open off the lobby, from opposite sides, instant communication between the classified advertising department and the cashier's cage being had by pneumatic tubes. The corridor off the lobby runs back to the display advertising department, a suite consisting of a private office for the manager and a larger room for the staff.

The hall leads on back to the private office of the circulation manager, mailing room and quarters for carrier boys. A belt conveyor brings the papers from the press room in the basement.

A broad stairway leads to the basement, where the pressroom, the stereotyping department and the stock room are located. Rest rooms and lavatories for employes are on the first floor.

The first and second floors are connected by another broad stairway and also by an electric automatic elevator, which also runs to the basement.

On the second floor is found the private office of Mr. Harrison, which, like the office of Mr. Parrett, is fitted with a chenille taupe rug, heavy draperies at the windows, walnut flat top desks, lounging chairs and davenports, fireplaces and artistic lighting fixtures. They are corner rooms with large windows practically covering one side and a large window on the other.

The editorial department is across the hall from Mr. Harrison's office. This is a large, well lighted and well ventilated room, with new metal desks, with batt ship linoleum tops, with three large dra ers on one side and a disappearing ty writer shelf on the other.

There are ten of these desks and a la exchange table in this department, wh is also equipped with five telephones, a metal filing cases.

Rubber-tiled flooring is found in t and all other departments, with the ception of the composing room, where special wood block flooring has been la

Pneumatic tubes shoot the copy from editorial department to the composi room and also carry proofs between composing room and the proof room the second floor.

The composing room, at the rear of second floor, equipped with the lat machinery and all metal cases, with w dows filling two sides, houses eleven ty setting machines and the molding roo

Additional space at the rear of present building has been bought by publishers for future expansion.

With the completion of the new hon several changes have been made in t personnel of the editorial staff. Geor R. Tilton, managing editor, is now ch editorial writer and assistant to the edit

H. C. Gibson, former city editor, is n managing editor, and R. H. Frankeberg for several years police reporter, has be made city editor.

TO GET RESULTS
YOU MUST HAVE A SYSTEM
UPON WHICH YOU CAN DEPEND
AT ALL TIMES

Our COMPLETE checking service handles the entire detail work of supplying "checking proofs" to every agency and advertiser promptly—and—efficiently.

WE DO IT ALL

from a few complete copies.

The Advertising
CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK

The Telephone at the Centennial

ONE hundred years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the infant telephone was first exhibited at the Philadelphia Exposition.

Since the dawn of civilization, mankind had sought some means of communicating over distances which unaided human speech could not bridge. Drums, signal fires, swift runners, the pony express, and finally the electric telegraph were means to get the message through. It remained for the telephone to convey a speaker's words and tones over thousands of miles.

"My God, it talks!" exclaimed the Emperor of Brazil before a group of scientists at the Philadelphia Exposition, as he heard and understood the voice of Alexander Graham Bell, demonstrating the new invention.

Today, after a brief half-century, the telephone lines of the Bell System have become the nerves of the nation. The telephone connects citizen with citizen, city with city, state with state for the peace and prosperity of all.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

BELL SYSTEM

IN ITS SEMI-CENTENNIAL YEAR THE BELL SYSTEM LOOKS FORWARD TO CONTINUED PROGRESS IN TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION

The Washington Dispatches of DAVID LAWRENCE

THE dispatches of David Lawrence, famous political writer, appear daily in The New York Sun.

Mr. Lawrence has a world-wide reputation as a keen observer and an accurate interpreter of national and international political events.

His dispatches are noted for their accuracy and their impartiality. He not only relates events as they take place but interprets them as well—explaining the causes and forecasting the results.

Mr. Lawrence writes with the authority that comes with years of experience as a political writer and an intimate acquaintanceship with most of the political leaders in this country and abroad. He covered the peace conference in Paris and accompanied Woodrow Wilson to Italy and Great Britain.

The addition of David Lawrence's Washington dispatches to the already famous political news columns of The Sun makes this newspaper unsurpassed for reliable, unbiased, timely information about political events in Washington and the other principal capitals of the world.

Read David Lawrence's Washington dispatches for authoritative news of the political events of the day.

EVERY DAY IN

The Sun

280 Broadway New York

BOSTON Old South Building
WASHINGTON, D. C. Munsey Building
CHICAGO 208 So. La Salle St.
SAN FRANCISCO First National Bank Building
LOS ANGELES Van Nuys Building
PARIS 49 Avenue de l'Opera
LONDON 40-43 Fleet St.

SAVANNAH NEWS OPENS NEW PLANT

The Savannah Morning News plant, showing new four-story modern addition at the right

THE Savannah Morning News formally opened the new four-story addition to its plant recently with a special edition chronicling the history of the newspaper from the days of its founding to 1850.

In the pressroom in the basement a new Hoe press has been installed.

The first floor of the addition contains the business offices. On the second floor on the south side of the building are the editorial offices and city room, library and telegraph rooms. Also on this floor is the Morning News Town Hall, designed for use of the public and various local organizations. The composing room is on the third floor. Shower baths have been provided here for employees. A space has been reserved for an engraving department to be installed in the future. The fourth floor has not been put in, although there is ample space provision.

W. R. Neal is editor of the News and F. G. Bell, proprietor and general manager.

URGE TIMBER TAX REVISION

Wisconsin Legislature Hears Lumber Men Predict Evil from Present Rates

A great step towards the conservation of forest lands and towards the assurance of timber in future years for paper mills can be taken by the legislature through a revision of the method of taxing timber areas, the Wisconsin legislative interim committee on taxation was told at a hearing held in Wausau, Wis., recently.

Forest lands are now being assessed for more than they are worth in Wisconsin, several representatives of lumber companies told the committee. W. A. Holt, of an Oconto (Wis.) lumber concern, declared:

"Unless there is a definite assurance that distribution of taxation will be equalized so that the amount of taxes assessed each year does not become so burdensome that owners of timber tracts cannot afford to conserve them for future cuttings, they are going to realize upon their holdings as soon as possible and the country as a whole will be the loser through removal of the timber."

Orlando Club Elects Carl Hunt

Carl Hunt has resigned as executive vice-president of the Orlando (Fla.) Chamber of Commerce to enter business in Orlando. Mr. Hunt, who before going to Florida had been general manager of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World for several years, was elected president of the Orlando and Orange County Advertising Club last week. Byron W. Orr was elected secretary-treasurer, and other officers named were: First vice-president, Harry Burns second vice-president, Lee Trimble; directors, Blaine McGrath, Sidney Ives, III; Karl Lehman, Adolphine Hein, A. J. Hanna.

LIBEL STINGS IN SNAKE-LIKE INSINUATIONS

(Continued from page 13)

Legion, for such facts only go to show the vicious depravity that prompted the attack and could be considered only in determining the amount of damages.

"The charge of being a groom to a 'war bride' for the purpose of a 'slacker'—is to say that he designedly prostituted the most sacred relation known to man; that failing in the true object of his matrimonial venture, he sought and secured a sinecure in a non-combat arm of the service. The reader is forced to conclude that plaintiff is not only without chivalry toward women, but a panicky, fear-stricken, skulking, unprincipled coward, devoid of honor and principle and without feeling or courage for his country's sake. Finally it is charged that having escaped with his contemptible body and soul he is an arch hypocrite, a posing sunshine patriot, and is using the honor and privilege of being the head of the ex-service men's patriotic organization for mercenary purposes. Such being the thought conveyed to us by the article, we say the same tended to lower the plaintiff in the estimation of all honorable men and women.

"This court held a publication to be libelous that accused one of trying to interfere and prevent the success of a county fair, couched in such terms as to picture the plaintiff as being a man devoid of public spirit.

"The article complained of herein far more bitterly makes the same charge, and, in addition, charged the plaintiff with being devoid of every patriotic impulse, and with using his undeserved standing and office in the American Legion for selfish, mercenary purposes.

"No one may doubt the loathing contempt the author held for Martz, and through his article he gave vent to his spleen, expressing himself in defamatory, scurrilous terms.

"This government, through its courts, owes its patriotic sons a duty to protect them from such slander, traducing defamers, who would, by their cynical lies, destroy patriotism, and take that from a man which neither he nor the courts could return—honor and reputation. We feel that a court would be recreant in its governmental duty not to stay the hand of one who would so crucify patriotism.

"The plaintiff has come into court seeking redress for an attack that could have been the moving cause of a tragedy; for this he is to be commended. He has pursued the orderly way to settle individual wrongs as well as the adopted manner of settling wrongs between his country and others. His injury is in a measure the injury of the public; it should be redressed, and those who vilify the honorable service record of a soldier should be warned that they do so at their peril."

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

We opened 1926 with the greatest newspaper campaign ever conducted, and secured over $300,000 in prepaid subscriptions for The Cleveland Plain Dealer. We can attain similar success for you!

THOUSANDS OF NEW, PREPAID, BONA-FIDE HOME-DELIVERED SUBSCRIBERS SECURED IN TEN WEEKS' TIME

HOLLISTER'S
Circulation Organization

Wire or Write us at 717-718 Commercial Exchange Bldg.. LOS ANGELES

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

6½ pt. Ionic No. 5

COMBINES

The word count of 6 point and the legibility of 8 point

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They had been curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass-production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail"; Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
Brooklyn, New York
SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO
Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

In 1925 Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico Produced

$3,000,000,000

In Agriculture, Live Stock, Minerals and Lumber---

The Great Empire of the Southwest Is Literally Spending

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

This Organization Can Help You, Your Salesman, Your Distributor, and Your Sales

We can help you because we know this market from top to bottom, and we know how to get results from money spent for advertising.

COVERAGE

We represent 325 Weekly Newspapers in these three states. A complete coverage with no duplicate circulations.

MARKET INFORMATION

Complete Market Information of this Territory and the only source of Market Conditions in smaller towns. All this is yours for the asking.

MERCHANDISING ASSISTANCE

Merchandising help that is second even to no metropolitan daily newspapers because of personal acquaintance between publisher and merchant, and because of the effectiveness of the manner in which it is handled from the executive offices at Dallas. In fact, you'd be surprised at just how really effective it is.

CHECKING and BILLING

A complete organization does the billing and checking, you can with one transaction deal with from one to 325 and more Weekly Newspapers. Thus the cost of handling a campaign in the Southwest is materially lowered and the effectiveness of the campaign is materially raised.

Here's a new angle on how to get this business:

Merchandising and sales plans that work in other markets, often times do not succeed in Texas-Oklahoma and New Mexico—HERE'S WHY:—

This is a vast territory, bigger than anything you ever thought of, and while Southwesterners read Daily Newspapers, Magazines and other publications, just as other people do in more thickly populated markets.

Their thoughts, their actions and their buying habits are influenced by their

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS

BECAUSE IN THOUSANDS AND MORE OF CASES the Weekly Newspaper is the only newspaper to which they subscribe—and these people have money to spend, they're prosperous, in fact, they are wealthy people.

The Weekly Newspaper is the only advertising medium with absolutely no waste or lost circulation, it is the only medium that is absolutely 100 per cent purely local, and it is an advertising medium where the publisher and the editor know the majority of their subscribers.

THE WEEKLY PAPER PAYS FROM THE START

Because in These States Rural and Small Town Life Predominate. The communities, villages and smaller size towns in the Southwest, for the most part are situated a great distance apart. This is the reason community interest is so strong. It is necessary for each community to entertain itself. There are but few and very few instances in the Great Southwest where you can jump in your car, drive a few miles and see the great white way. What you do is jump in your car (and in many cases it sold for over $1,200.00) drive a long distance and arrive at the main street of some village or town. Now then, what is it that keeps up this wonderful community interest, what is it that furnishes the life of the small town, what is it that keeps everybody posted, and upon what does the interest of the small town center?

IT IS THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPER!

Maybe your sales in America's most fertile, most receptive and practically untouched market, are not just as you would wish them to be—then let us show you how at a small advertising expense they can be greatly increased, and we mean sure enough increased.

Others Find It Highly Profitable

A letter to our Dallas office will bring you some very interesting figures and we can show you where there are more sales with less sales resistance.

THE H. L. GRABLE CO.

"National Advertising Representatives of Weekly Newspapers"

TEXAS—OKLAHOMA—NEW MEXICO

NEW YORK
25 East 26th St.
Phone Ashland 9127

PHILADELPHIA
Widener Bldg.
Phone Rittenhouse 9698

CHICAGO
123 West Madison
Phone Central 3021

DALLAS, TEXAS
606 Mercantile Bank Building

PALMER AND C. F. HART ON N. Y. PROGRAM

A. N. P. A. Expansion and Mechanical Ideas Up for Discussion—Press Association to Combine Institute and Business Meeting

L. B. Palmer, manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, will outline the expansion plans of the A. N. P. A. and discuss other matters of general interest to publishers at the annual meeting of the New York State Publishers Association at Ithaca, June 17. Charles F. Hart, mechanical superintendant of the New York Times, is also on the publishers' program. At the dinner the previous evening addresses will be made by President Livingston Farrand of Cornell University and Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press.

A newspaper conference will be held in connection with the summer meeting of the New York Press Association, also at Ithaca on June 17, 18 and 19. This association is made up of the weekly papers of the state, and it will combine a newspaper institute and some business transactions with its regular summer outing. The program begins with a get-together dinner at Willard Straight Hall, after which there will be an evening of entertainment provided by the University.

The business session will take place on Friday, June 18 and the afternoon of that day will be given up to an automobile tour, and at 6:30 that evening the annual banquet will take place.

On Saturday, June 19, there will be an executive breakfast of the active members of the New York Press Association and after that an exhibit and analysis of the weekly papers of New York State by Bristow Adams, in charge of journalism courses at Cornell. This meeting is not only the annual gathering of the press association, but it is the first of a series of newspaper conferences scheduled to be held at Cornell University each year, taking the place of the annual February institute which has been a feature of Farmers' Week for the past seven years.

HONORARY DEGREE FOR "DING"

Noted Cartoonist Given LL.D. by Drake University, Des Moines

Ranked as "a person of outstanding attainment," J. N. Darling, cartoonist for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at the commencement exercises of Drake University, Des Moines, Ia., on June 8.

"Since it is the duty of universities not only to train scholars but to recognize and to promote cultural attainment, it is our honor to thus recognize Mr. Darling's achievements," said Dr. Herbert Martin, of the Drake faculty in presenting Mr. Darling his honor. Praise for his writings, his place in cultural circles and his refreshing philosophy of life were detailed by Dr. Martin, who characterized Mr. Darling's optimism and gentle humor in both his drawings and writing as unique.

Willard Straight Hall at Cornell University, where New York publishers will meet

PAPER COMPANY ISSUES BONDS

Fort William, Ont., Firm Raising $3,500,000 for Expansion Plans

Bonds totalling $3,500,000, representing additional financing for the Fort William Paper Company, Ltd., Fort William, Ont., were offered in New York this week by Peabody, Houghteling & Co., Inc. The bonds were first mortgage 6 per cent sinking fund gold bonds, Series A.

The proceeds will be used to retire the outstanding 7 per cent serial gold bonds, to complete additions to the plant at Fort William and to purchase $1,000,000 6 per cent collateral trust notes of the Fort William Power Company, Ltd., which are to be additional security for the bonds. The bonds were offered at 98½ and interest, to yield about 6.13 per cent.

McCutcheon Heads Zoological Society

John T. McCutcheon, cartoonist of the Chicago Tribune, is president of the Chicago Zoological society, which plans a zoological park in the Chicago forest preserve, to be ultimately developed into one of the largest zoos in the world.

N. C. Press Committee Meets

The committee of the North Carolina Press Association appointed to act in the matter of retaining a full time field secretary for the organization met at Charlotte this week to prepare a report which is to be submitted to the Association at its meeting in July. Members of the committee present were: J. D. Bivins, of Albemarle; W. C. Dowd, Jr., of Charlotte, and L. M. Hollowell, of Hendersonville.

RETAILERS CAN DRAW NATIONAL LINAGE

W. P. Milligan Would Enlist Their Aid for Newspapers Through Co-operative New England Campaign —Present Typical Ad

A co-operative advertising campaign by New England daily newspapers addressed to retail merchants asking them to demand advertising aid from national advertisers whose goods they carry, was urged at the recent meeting of the New England Daily Newspaper Association by Wendell P. Milligan, treasurer of the South Norwalk (Conn.) Evening Sentinel.

The following was presented by Mr. Milligan as a typical piece of copy:

AN OPEN LETTER TO RETAILERS
INSIST THE MANUFACTURER ADVERTISE

When you buy nationally advertised merchandise, do you INSIST on getting every possible co-operation from the manufacturer?

INSIST through the salesman that your local newspaper receive advertising to create local sales. Often the manufacturer will do this when asked for by the retailer.

Your jobber is the connecting link in most cases between you and the manufacturer. When his representative calls to see you, INSIST through him that the product he is selling be advertised in your local newspaper,—preferably over your name.

In this way you are getting the manufacturer with national distribution to pay for some part of your advertising,—with your name on it.

Such advertising is far more effective than general magazine advertising without the retailer's name.

The results are direct,—bringing the public to your door instead of making the public hunt for your door. You wouldn't think of publishing your own advertisement without your name and address.

Therefore, INSIST that your jobber and his salesmen co-operate with you in placing advertising in your newspaper, preferably over your name.

"We are all selling the theory of advertising, but do we do enough direct advertising in this instance addressed to the retailer to help our own business?," he asked.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the American Type Founders Company

BOSTON	RICHMOND	DETROIT	MINNEAPOLIS	SAN FRANCISCO
NEW YORK	ATLANTA	CHICAGO	KANSAS CITY	PORTLAND
PHILADELPHIA	BUFFALO	CINCINNATI	DES MOINES	SPOKANE
BALTIMORE	PITTSBURGH	ST. LOUIS	DENVER	WINNIPEG
	CLEVELAND	MILWAUKEE	LOS ANGELES

A SINGLE ADVERTISING APPROPRIATION

Will cover the two publications that reach those who control the national advertising of the United States and Great Britain.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
New York
and
ADVERTISING WORLD
London, Eng.

have entered into an agreement in respect to editorial and advertising representation in their respective fields and thereby afford a single source of information and service for those interested in international marketing and advertising.

Combination Advertising Rates for 12 Insertion Contract

Full Page .....$280.00 per insertion
Half Page ..... 145.00 per insertion
Quarter Page ..... 82.50 per insertion

You are cordially invited to communicate with EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Suite 1700 Times Building, New York, for further details of circulation, editorial policy and mechanical requirements of ADVERTISING WORLD. This office can be of great assistance to manufacturers who desire information in regard to marketing conditions of Great Britain. Publishers of leading American newspapers will also avail themselves of this opportunity to deliver their messages to the largest advertisers of Great Britain, many of whom are keenly interested in the markets of America.

Editor & Publisher
1700 Times Building
Broadway at 42d St.
New York, N. Y.

Telephones:
Bryan: 3052 - 3053 - 3054 - 3055 - 3056
able Address: EDPUB, NEW YORK

Advertising World
14 King Street
Covent Garden, W. C. 2
London, England

Telephone: Gerrard 7615
Cable Address:
ECOPUBLISH, RAND, LONDON

THE LINOTYPE LINE

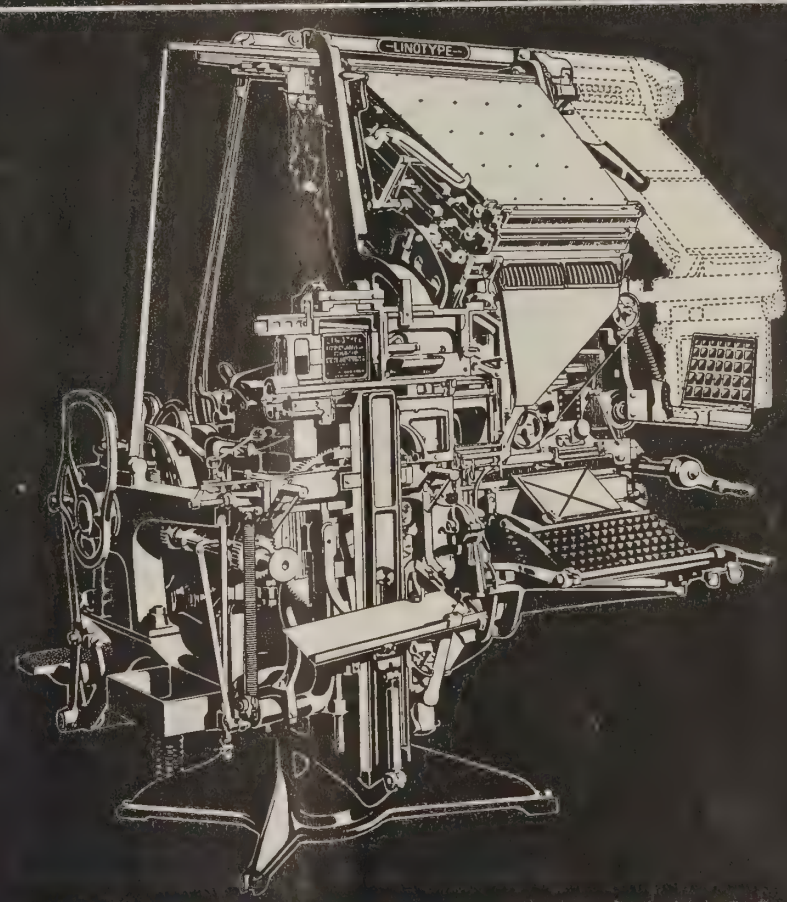
There are two types of Linotypes, either of which can be equipped with various combinations of interchangeable magazines to give you the machine you need.

MULTIPLE DISTRIBUTION

TWO MAIN MAGAZINES

Model 25

WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE



Model 26

WITH TWO AUXILIARY MAGAZINES

CONTINUOUS COMPOSITION

Matrices from all magazines can be mixed in the same line

SINGLE DISTRIBUTION

ONE, TWO OR THREE MAIN MAGAZINES

Model 8

WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Model 14

WITH AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Also built as Display Linotypes

Model 21

WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Model 22

WITH AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

SINGLE OR MULTIPLE DISTRIBUTION

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

One, two or three main magazines
With or without auxiliary magazine
30 or 42 picas maximum measure

Mergenthaler Linotype Company

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

S20.26.6-F

COMPOSED ON THE LINOTYPE IN THE CLOISTER WIDE AND CLOISTER BOLD SERIES, DISPLAY IN NARCISS

BIGGEST PICTURE

The American War Zone in France, a

1918

Street in Varennes

A complete picture story of American battle scenes in France, with a direct appeal to every newspaper reader.

Pictures 1918 and same spot eight years after in complete battle sequence or localized, showing views in areas over which troops from your locality fought.

ACME NEWSPICTURES, Inc

FEATURE IN HISTORY

American Soldiers Knew It and As It Is Today

1926

Same Street Eight Years After

A big picture smash available during the period of battle anniversaries.

For daily and Sunday release.

All pictures in sets—1918 and eight years after.

First releases mid-July.

WIRE FOR RESERVATIONS

461 Eighth Avenue, New York

PAPERS THAT HAVE ORDERED TO DATE

New York Herald-Tribune
Boston Globe
Philadelphia Ledger
Columbus, O., Dispatch
Syracuse, N. Y., Herald
Baltimore Sun
Buffalo Express
Providence Journal
Indianapolis Star
Worcester, Mass., Telegram

All other territory open

EDITORIAL

CREDIT BUYING

ACCORDING to Alfred Reeves, general manager of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce, "credit buying lowers prices." He makes the general statement and supports it by giving statistics concerning the automobile industry.

In the case of the motor car it may cost $80 in interest charges to buy a car on the time payment basis, but Mr. Reeves shows that this easy payment plan has had the effect of increasing the volume of sales to such an extent that manufacturers have been able to reduce prices and he gives the round figure $200 as representing such reduction. On this basis the saving to the consumer would be $120, while still enjoying the partial payment privilege.

In automobile selling the standard terms are one-third down and twelve monthly payments and Mr. Reeves notes that less than one-fifth of one per cent of such purchases have defaulted for any reason, a testimonial both to the integrity and prosperity of the American people.

Mr. Reeves applies, we think mistakenly, this principle to credit buying of articles of high unit value in general, specifically mentioning pianos and homes. He contends that the average individual cannot possess such articles of high unit value except through financing and says the average consumer is merely adopting recognized business standards. Credit, he declares, must be based on the character of the buyer, capacity to pay and capital of the buyer.

Mr. Reeves gives to mass production all the credit for lowered sales prices in automobiles. This might be questioned on a number of obvious scores. But granting that in the case of automobile mass production manufacturing costs have been reduced to a point where interest charges have been more than absorbed, still we do not believe that a general application of the principle is justified or that such propaganda is a wholesome influence in American life. Certainly Mr. Reeves' references to credit buying of homes give an unsound conclusion. Mass production has not lowered the cost of building material, labor or land.

In scores of departments of trade the statistics show that credit buying lies as a dead weight upon the consuming public. One of the most profoundly grave economic questions of the hour in America is the fact that seventeen per cent of our retail wares are being sold on the installment basis, with staggering aggregate banking cost. This business is totaling more than five billions of dollars annually. Material America is today blessed by the gods and the skies seem clear for a continuation of prosperity, but that this huge load of credit has dynamite in it in the event of a sudden depression requires no economist to foresee. It is well for Mr. Reeves to set public opinion right as regards credit buying in the automobile industry of today, without reference to possible conditions to come, but we do not agree with him that the principle is economic per se or generally applicable.

Next week—EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S annual A. A. C. W. convention number, which we hope will reflect some of the brilliance of this great international gathering at the shrine of American press freedom.

JAPANESE RADIO BLOCKADE

THE Japanese Government is standing in the way of cheap press rates to and from the Far East. It refuses to accept the proposal of the American Radio Corporation whereby press wordage cost would drop from 27 cents to 10 cents, in Japan-American traffic, and materially lower the rates to China where trans-Pacific cabling now mounts to 42 cents a word.

Why any enlightened government will stand in the way of easy exchange of press information in this day and age is beyond understanding. News is the flag of progress through the sound principle of understanding. A free exchange of information across the Pacific would untie a thousand perplexing knots that the diplomats have failed to loosen.

Osaka Mainichi, an influential journal, is attacking the problem of high tolls in Japan and American newspapers are taking up the subject. Our State Department is committed to the principle of cheaper press rates. But Japan continues to stand as a blockade. In the interest of international good will and all its blessings this question deserves agitation.

A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children: and the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.—Proverbs, XIII; 22.

THREE VALUATION FACTORS

THE other day when some newspaper men were discussing the value of newspaper properties, one of them mentioned a ruling which he said had been delivered by a British Judge early in the present century. The court had held, he said, that a newspaper's value was determined by these three factors, in the order named:

Field, Physical Assets and Management.

No reference to this decision appears in the early files of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, nor was it known to several lawyers whose books were consulted. It is to be hoped that the story of its judicial origin is not apocryphal, for an exposition of the judge's reasoning which led to the above conclusions would be highly interesting in these days when newspaper properties are being bought and sold almost like real estate.

The goodwill element that American appraisers stress so highly is apparently included in all three of the factors cited above. The wealth of given territory is easily determined and its ability to support a given number of competent newspapers is not beyond finding by careful analysis. In the field element we suppose should be included the franchises or special privileges of news-gathering and reception the publication holds or may acquire. Valuation of physical assets is simple accountancy. The third element apparently applies to the ability of the publication to gain its due reward from the advantages of the first two, in other words to create good will.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER would be pleased to hear from any of its readers who have more complete information on this decision or know by what court and when it was rendered.

Only a few years ago the bed-room scene on the stage was attacked as vigorously as is the bath tub in the current revue; time wears down such opposition and what depth of vulgarity the future holds is any man's guess.

BOLL WEEVIL INDUSTRY

WE are indebted to the Better Business Bureau of New York for interesting information concerning the startling increase in so-called business men's "leagues," or "associations," every one of them depending upon newspaper publicity for their existence. Each is promoted by some schemer who is interested in soliciting "members" or "subscribers" and usually such enterprises are backed by the use of the name of some former public official or other person of influence.

The chief objective is to sell memberships and garner profits from advertisements in periodical publications, cooked up for the occasion. Of course, each such organization has a "code of ethics" and travels under the banner of civic service reform or business uplift.

The woods are full of them and the methods of the promoters in pulling in the "suckers" are devious. Investigation of their charters reveals their questionable methods.

These organizations prey on the news and also the advertising columns of newspapers and are a dead weight upon local advertisers who fall for the guff of their publication space sellers. The mill is by no means confined to New York; it grinds a national grist amounting to millions of wasted dollars. Before giving honors to an organization bearing these earmarks investigate its charter and find out if it is a profit-making scheme for a few boll weevils.

THE CIRCULATORS MEET

CIRCULATORS, in the largest number in the history of their organization, met this week at Philadelphia to discuss the inside problems of newspaper technique. They are a notoriously inarticulate faction of the craft, but when they do "speak out in meeting" they say something of vital interest to every department of the industry.

One of the interesting incidents of the week's meeting was the revelation that eighty per cent of the circulators in attendance had started their newspaper careers as newsboys.

On other pages will be found full details of the convention discussion, meriting thorough reading. Publishers will be particularly struck by the amazing advancement of distribution efficiency in the trading areas of numerous states by means of the motor truck and bus line. The farmer's wife now receives her morning and evening newspaper on almost even terms with her city sister. Thus she becomes a city and town, instead of mail-order, trader.

Stanley Clague, managing director of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, administered to certain circulators a rebuke for "padded carrier orders," vigorously denouncing a newspaper that attempted to force circulation showings by compelling a newsboy to draw more non-returnable papers than he could dispose of. He truly said that such practice is harmful to the boys and the newspaper as well.

Naturally the boys have it in their power ultimately to defeat such practices and therefore such padding cannot be very extensive, but we know that it does exist in instances and is a particularly offensive abuse. Such "circulation" is soon found out and there is nothing gained, while much may be lost.

The convention revealed that the circulators are on the right side of many questions in the industry and are the same old valiant crew of hustlers that have carried a major share of responsibility. The city newspaper's distribution is one of the transport marvels of the age. Threatened by intensifying street traffic, embarrassed by large volume of pages creating bundles of huge size, buffeted by the fiercest competition known in trade, still the circulators continue to find the channels to quick delivery to the reading public.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER congratulates the I. C. M. A. on its choice of officers and its interesting and instructive convention. It is a body that sits at the right hand of the father of the newspaper family.

Banker Cheney foresees mass production of materials in such vast volume that the world cannot absorb them and pictures civilization buried beneath a haystack of machine-made goods, but only a fraction of the world's population possesses more than the necessities of life.

VITAL LOCAL NEWSPAPER

THE publisher of the Doylestown (Pa.) Daily Intelligencer wants the world to know that EDITOR & PUBLISHER was not referring to his paper in its recent rather caustic comment on the modern tendency of editors of many papers in smaller cities to neglect their local fields. He has sent to us a copy of his paper for Friday, June 4, which is complete proof that our shoe does not fit. His paper is a model that publishers in larger cities might well study.

Of 26 items on page one, 17 are of sound local interest, one of them illustrated by a three-column halftone. The telegraph news, which appeared light on that day, was cut to its essentials.

Turning inside the readers found 18 columns of local news and features, including two local editorials. In four columns of type on page seven personal mention was made of hundreds of citizens of the Doylestown trading area.

When the Intelligencer asks a reader to go to all the trouble of turning a page to follow a jumped story it says it with flowers. "Please turn to page ——." Throughout it is a clean, vital, local paper, evidently produced by men of heart as well as mind.

Hundreds of oblique, greedy eyes watch newspaper columns for slips which may give shyster lawyers an opportunity to tell juries their doves were soiled by printer's ink.

PERSONAL

W. Y. MORGAN, editor of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News-Herald, was renamed by Governor Ben S. Paulen, of Kansas, to the state board of regents for a term of four years. Mr. Morgan is chairman of the board. Charles M. Harger, Abilene (Kan.) Reflector editor and publisher was alse renamed to the board for a term of four years.

Col. H. L. Opie, managing editor and proprietor of the Staunton (Va.) News-Leader and Evening Leader, who suffered a severe breakdown several months ago, is rapidly regaining his health, and is gradually resuming his business activities.

George F. Booth, publisher and editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette, was honored by the employees of the City Parks and Recreation Commission recently when he retired after 15 years' service as chairman. The employees waited on him in a body at his office in the newspaper plant with a gold watch and chain. Mrs. Booth was presented with a basket of roses.

Earl J. Hadley, one of the owners of the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, and Mrs. Hadley are parents of a son born June 1. Mr. Hadley, before entering the syndicate field in 1921, was assistant managing editor of the New York Globe and previously the city editor of the Evening Sun.

Rolla Clymer, editor of the Eldorado (Kan.) Daily Times, and Mrs. Clymer, are parents of a daughter, Catherine.

Frank Appleby, publisher of the La Grande (Ore.) Observer, visited his brother Paul Appleby and his brother-in-law C. C. Clifton, associate editor and political writer of the Des Moines Register in Des Moines last week.

Hammond Fowler, editor of the Rockwood (Tenn.) Times was the principal speaker at Confederate Memorial Day exercises in Knoxville. Mr. Fowler recently won the "Know Tennessee" oratorical contest conducted by Tennessee newspapers.

Dan R. Anthony, Jr., editor and publisher of the Leavenworth (Kan.) Times, and the senior congressman from Kansas, has filed to become a candidate for congress from the First Kansas district at the August primaries.

Mrs. Henry J. Allen, wife of Henry J. Allen, editor of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon and their daughter Miss Henrietta, who have been touring Europe and the Near East, are expected home the last of June.

Roy G. Watson, former owner and publisher of the Houston Post, Houston, Texas, and his mother, Mrs. N. M. Watson of Asheville, N. C., spent last week in Tacoma, Wash. Following Mr. Watson's sale of the Post, three years ago, he and Mrs. Watson started on a world tour. While in Tacoma, the Watsons visited Frank S. Roberts, copy editor of the Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, who was formerly associated with Mr. Watson in Houston.

Victor H. Hanson, publisher of the Birmingham News was named honorary publisher of the Gold and Black, student newspaper of Birmingham-Southern College, by the vote of the student body on June 3.

Santford Martin, editor of the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, was recently elected alumni orator of Wake Forest College for the 1927 Commencement.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

ALFRED G. WILLIAMS, for many years a circulation manager on Hearst newspapers in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago and New York, has been appointed circulation manager of the San Francisco Call, succeeding John E. Gray, who died recently.

Robert Graham, formerly with the Vanderbilt newspapers, has been appointed manager of the financial advertising section of the Buffalo (N. Y.) Courier.

Charles Fessler, formerly with the Canton (O.) Daily News, is now a member of the advertising staff of the Buffalo Star.

J. V. Hollett, circulation manager of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune for the past six years has resigned on account of the poor health of Mrs. Hollett. They are taking an automobile trip of about 6,000 miles through Yellowstone Park, Washington, Oregon and California. R. N. Orlopp, who has been with the Indianapolis News, has been named circulation manager.

Jos. K. Hughes has resigned from the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser as circulation manager to join the Columbia (S. C.) Record in the same position. He was formerly with the Tuscaloosa (Ala.) News, Charleston (S. C.) American and the Pensacola (Fla.) News and Journal in circulation posts.

Boyd E. King, of Knoxville, is now business manager of the Elizabethton (Tenn.) Star. That new paper is successor to the Elizabethton Carter County Banner. Frank H. Lovette is editor and owner.

Ralph A. Webber, of the Thomas W. Briggs Company, of Memphis, Tenn., who two months ago left New York to do special advertising work on the Allentown (Pa.) Chronicle & News is now in Chicago and Alton, Ill.

Walter Hoots, circulation manager, Quincy (Ill.) Whig-Journal, has resigned to become promotion manager for the Baltimore (Md.) News and American.

James M. Kirkham, assistant general manager of the Salt Lake City Deseret News, has returned from a trip to Chicago where he made arrangements for the purchase of additional machinery and equipment for the new home of the News on Richards street, adjoining its present building.

Ralph Young has joined the advertising staff of the Leesburgh (O.) Citizen, of which C. E. Sturm is editor and publisher.

Philip F. Metz, secretary of the Buffalo Times, has been elected a director of the Main Street Association of Buffalo.

F. B. Kennedy, formerly circulation manager, Sandusky Register, has been placed in charge of suburban and country circulation on the Dayton (O) Journal and Herald.

Emerson Barr, for the past four years in the advertising department of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, has resigned to join the Motor News.

Carroll Shaffer, manager of the Chicago Evening Post, accompanied by his wife, has returned from an extended trip to California and Japan. They were away about five months.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

TO the newspaper fraternity of Canada he is known as "Buck." In "Who's Who" you will find him listed as the Honorable William Asbury Buchanan, member of the Canadian Senate for Southern Alberta. Senator Buchanan, who was advised of his appointment to the Canadian upper house at Ottawa last summer while he was playing—and winning a tournament match of golf at the Lethbridge, Alta., Country Club course, learned his journalism and politics in Ontario and practised them with success in Western Canada.

W. A. Buchanan

Leaving the east in 1905 he established the Lethbridge (Alta.) Weekly Herald in the heart of the Canadian hard wheat belt. Two years later he made the Herald a daily.

He started newspaper work on the Peterborough Review in 1893, was later made city editor of the Toronto Telegram, then managing editor of the St. Thomas Journal. His favorite recreations are politics and golf, particularly the latter.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

MARC A. ROSE, managing editor of the Buffalo Evening News, will give the address at the graduation exercises of Dunkirk High School.

H. C. Gibson, city editor, Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News, has been named managing editor, succeeding George R. Tilton, who becomes chief editorial writer and assistant to the editor. R. H. Frankeberger, police reporter, becomes city editor.

Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of the New York World, sailed for a vacation abroad last Saturday on the liner France.

Roland Kilbon, American correspondent for the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune, accompanied by Mrs. Kilbon, leaves Friday, June 18 on the Tuscania for a six weeks' visit to the Paris office. Roscoe Ashworth, city editor of the Paris Herald, has come to this country to take Kilbon's place during his absence.

A. I. Harris, former reporter on Minneapolis papers, has joined the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.

(Continued on next page)

DURING the first week in June the following newspapers signed yearly contracts for the Central Press Association's complete general illustrated service:

*Birmingham News
Reno, Nev., State Journal
Chico, Calif., Record
Great Falls, Mont., Tribune
*Williamsport, Pa., Sun
Bremerton, Wash., News-Searchlight
*Portland, Me., Press-Herald
*Watertown, N. Y., Standard
Albany Sunday Telegram
St. Joseph, Mich., Herald-Press
Wichita Falls, Tex., Record-News
East Liverpool, O., Review-Tribune
San Mateo, Calif., Times
Frankfort, Ky., State Journal

*Indicates papers that also use the Central Press daily picture page.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNitt, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNitt, Editor and Manager

"Nothing Succeeds Like Success"

Lakes to Gulf
Atlantic to Pacific
Across the States Between

Papers Have Found a Proven Puller in Frank Beck's Comic Strip

GAS BUGGIES
or
HEM AND AMY

To indicate wide geographical distribution a few of the papers:

Portland, Maine, Express
Boston, Mass., Traveler
Hartford, Conn., Times
Buffalo, N. Y., Enquirer
Rochester, N. Y., Times-Union
Elmira, N. Y., Star-Gazette
Providence, R. I., News
New York, N. Y., Telegram
Philadelphia, Penna., Record
Pittsburgh, Penna., Sun
Hamilton, O., Journal
Louisville, Ky., Post
Danville, Ill., Commercial News
Racine, Wis., Journal-News
Davenport, Iowa, Daily Times
St. Paul, Minn., News
Phoenix, Arizona, Gazette
Boise, Idaho, Capital News
Butte, Montana, Daily Post
Everett, Wash., Herald
Tacoma, Wash., News-Tribune
Oakland, Calif., Post-Enquirer
Los Angeles, Calif., News
San Diego, Calif., Independent

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 27)

G. Edward Pendray, reporter for the New York Herald Tribune sails June 12 on the Leviathan for a two months' tour of Europe.

Herman J. Smith, Des Moines, Ia., junior in the college of liberal arts, University of Iowa, has been named director of the news bureau of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register. He succeeds Charlton G. Laird, who has resigned to head a new department of journalism at Drake University, Des Moines.

Len Schneider, telegraph editor of the Tulsa (Okla.) World, has returned from San Antonio where he took his annual training camp work at Fort Sam Houston. Schneider is a war veteran.

William B. Ruggles, former sports editor and columnist of the Dallas News, has resigned as executive secretary of the University of Texas Ex-Students' Association to return to the editorial department of the News.

R. P. Harriss, in charge of the correspondence bureau, Dyke University, will join the staff of the Norfolk-Virginian Pilot. A. A. Wilkinson will succeed him.

Dan Kidney, formerly with the Milwaukee Journal and Racine (Wis.) Journal-Call, is now police reporter on the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News.

E. H. Jolly, of the advertising staff, Des Moines Register has joined the editorial staff of the Des Moines Evening Tribune as police reporter. Cliff Millen, former police reporter, is now covering state house for the Tribune.

A. H. Van Brocklin, formerly a Watertown, N. Y., newspaperman has joined the staff of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

Nathan Altrowitz has joined the Sunday department of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Tribune.

Miss Cora R. Jones, editor of the "Eve Up-to-Date" column of the New Orlears Times-Picayune, visited New York this week on vacation.

Frank Phelan, of the editorial staff, Worcester Telegram has resigned to make a two months' automobile tour across the country.

Chanler Chapman, of the city staff, Springfield (Mass.) Evening Union, and Mrs. Chapman are parents of a son.

Raymond A. Fitzpatrick who covers the night beat on the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram is ill.

Dr. Anders Schon, Swedish news editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, who was correspondent with Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden when the latter arrived in New York, is ill at his home.

Cyrus A. Tunnell, city editor of the Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune, has been made secretary of the Blackwell Chamber of Commerce.

Warren A. Fogerty, assistant city editor, Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, has left to take up the practice of law with the Boston Legal Aid Society, having successfully passed the bar examinations.

Dennis J. Naylon, of Pittsfield, Mass., managing editor of the Berkshire Evening Eagle, who last week was elected president of the Eastern Baseball League, has relinquished his newspaper duties for the summer in order to devote all his time to baseball.

Charles E. Parker, former Boston sports writer now with the New York World, is author of "The Whipper Snapper" published recently. The book is drawn from Parker's experience as a sports writer.

Warren A. Carberg of the Worcester Telegram is spending a two weeks' vacation cruising with Fred Hunt, former member of the Telegram staff.

Carter Field, New York Herald Tribune Washington correspondent, spent several days in the New York office last week.

George L. Watkins, a member of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune staff was recently sworn in as city water commissioner of Tulsa.

Edward Breen, reporter on the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram was injured June 7 when he was struck by an automobile while on his way home.

H. LeB. Bercovici, sometime ago on the editorial staff of the Fourth Estate, and afterwards engaged in newspaper and motion picture work in New York City, has rejoined the editorial staff of that paper.

Blanche Gouffaut is the new women's page editor on the Dayton (O.) Daily News.

Norman MacDonald, night city editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union and Mrs. McDonald are parents of a daughter, Joan.

Dudley W. Birdsell, reporter on the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press has been named city clerk.

Mallory McDonald, former state capital correspondent for various Texas papers and more recently on the reportorial staff of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, has resigned to become public relations director of the Missouri Pacific Railway, at St. Louis.

Ralph Woodward, Jr., city hall reporter, Springfield (Mass.) Union, and Mrs. Woodward are parents of a son.

M. Jay Racusin, of the New York Herald Tribune, left June 5 for a months' tour of the West.

Larry Farnsworth, of the New York Daily News copy desk, has returned from a six-months' trip to Europe.

Everett Ewing, former Norfolk newspaper man and more recently editor of the Wilmington (N. C.) News-Dispatch, has returned to Norfolk as state editor of the Norfolk-Virginian-Pilot.

William L. Oliver, for nearly three years day city editor of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, recently was placed, at his request, in the newly-created post of Sunday editor of the Virginian-Pilot.

Olin E. Hinkle, Plainsville, Tex., a graduate of the school of journalism, University of Missouri, has joined the Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune-Times.

WITH THE SPECIALS

GEORGE S. WIERS, formerly with the Chicago office of Gilman, Nicoll & Ruthman, has joined the staff of J. E. Middleton, Chicago manager of M. C. Mobensen & Co., Inc., representing Pacific Coast daily newspapers.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

RICHARD MURRAY, from Buffalo Times, to copy desk, Buffalo Courier.

Jack Laing, from sport staff, Buffalo Evening News, to sports, Buffalo Courier.

E. A. Moreno, from reporter, San Antonio Light, to McAllen (Tex.) Morning Telegram staff.

John A. Jones, from associate editor, Steubenville (O.) Press, to copy desk, Philadelphia Bulletin.

Richards Gardner, from copy desk, Tulsa World, to Sunday editor. Miss Faith Hieronimus, former Sunday editor, becomes feature writer.

George Douthit, from San Antonio Light sports department, to San Antonio Evening News.

Clarence Hill, from Coffeyville (Kan.) Morning News, to staff, Coffeyville Journal as telegraph editor.

MARRIED

MISS ISABELLE FRANCES NORTH, society editor of the Winchester (Va.) Evening Star, to Paul L. Miller, May 29, in Washington, D. C.

James Treneman, of the advertising department, Ottumwa (Ia.) Courier, to Miss Grace Dyke of Iowa City, June 2.

Merrill O. Calame, assistant director of advertising, Elgin (Ill.) Courier-News, to Miss Vera E. Mattson of Orangeville, Ill., in Elgin, May 29.

Lyman W. Wallace, formerly of the press department, Keokuk (Ia.) Gate City, later with the Chicago Tribune and now with the New York Evening Post, to Miss Betty Florence Trimble of Belmont, Ia., June 3.

William Sharpe, managing editor of the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, to Miss Sallie Herring, of Goldsboro, N. C., in Raleigh.

Miss Carroll Brown, feature writer and illustrator on the Cincinnati Enquirer staff, to Count Jozef A. Orlosky, portrait painter.

P. W. Dixon, editor, Okmulgee Record, to Miss Aileen Berry, member of Irene Summerly Players.

Robert E. Cochran, editor of the Williamson (W. Va.) Daily News, to Miss Martha Hanes, Ottawa, Kan., at the home of the bride.

Jack Hull, editor of the Clovis (N. M.) Journal, to Miss Lyndell Chastin, May 28.

Paul Gray of the San Francisco Chronicle staff to Miss Estella St. George Buttrum at Santa Rosa, June 2.

John Webb Cannon, of the city news satff, Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, to Miss Carrie Norman of Cameron, N. C., June 5.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

BATES RANEY, of the New York staff of the Associated Press sailed Wednesday for London where he will join the London staff of the A. P. Before joining the New York office several months ago, he worked for the Oklahoma City Oklahoman and Times and various other Oklahoma papers.

E. T. Conkle, superintendent of bureaus of the United Press, New York, is ill at his home in Yonkers, N. Y.

Consolidated Press service will be inaugurated by the Tulsa World Aug. 1.

Columbia (S. C.) State on June 1 inaugurated the printer service of the Associated Press.

Lester G. Posvar, state editor for Kansas for the Associated Press at Topeka has been named correspondent at Topeka succeeding Roderick M. Grant.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

MANITO (Ill.) EXPRESS, weekly, has been sold by Charles O. Shoop to F. D. Ferguson of Kewanee, Ill.

E. G. Chapman and Arch Martin of the Jackson (O.) Herald, have acquired the one-third interest of their late partner, Volney H. Benton, who died a few weeks ago.

Pilger (Neb.) Herald has been sold by C. C. Charles, its publisher the last two years, to A. W. Ballenzer, who has been advertising manager of the York (Neb.) Republican.

Corbin (Ky.) Times-Tribune, weekly, has been purchased by Arthur Morris, Dr. Tilman Ramsey and Herndon J. Evans, from Mrs. Richard G. Williams, of Covington. It has been operated by Mrs. Williams since the death of Judge Richard G. Williams.

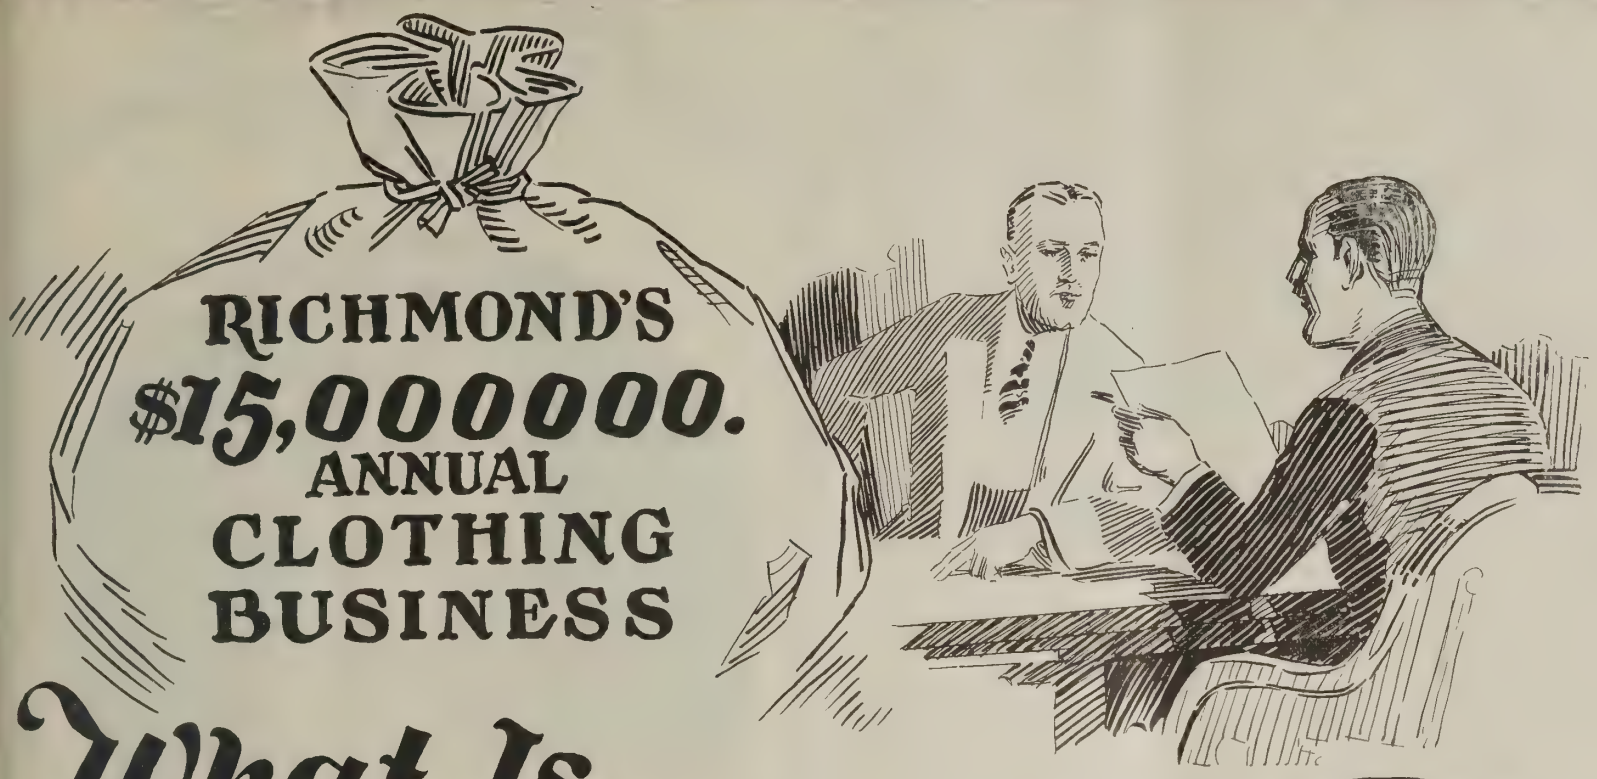
SPECIAL EDITIONS

STAMFORD (Conn.) ADVOCATE, 108-page Exposition of Progress Number, May 28.

Minneapolis (Minn.) Journal, annual outing edition, Sunday, May 23.

SHAPE IDEALS THROUGH YOUR CHURCH PAGE

Learn how at the Philadelphia Convention



To sell churches on the use of advertising, you, as a representative of their business interests, should be able to tell them what to advertise and how to do it most effectively.

Advertising employed solely to fill pews and collection plates will not do either permanently.

"Church Advertising," says the Classified Manager of the Oakland Tribune, "should suggest thought, form ideals, and guide conduct for hundreds who may never enter the church of its origin, but who become associate members of that church through the bond of the press."

You are invited to participate in the church advertising sessions at Philadelphia. They will be held on June 22nd and 23rd, as a part of the international convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs.

Church Advertising Department
ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUBS,
383 Madison Avenue
New York, N. Y.

RICHMOND'S $15,000000. ANNUAL CLOTHING BUSINESS

What Is Your Share?

Richmond, Va., is a center to which many people throughout Virginia and the neighboring states make regular visits for the purpose of purchasing clothes.

Richmond has some of the most outstanding department and clothing stores in the United States, on which thousands of people depend for all their clothing purchases.

But Richmonders alone purchase over $12,000,000 worth of clothing in Richmond every year. Add to this the uncomputed purchases in Richmond of those people who come from a distance, and Richmond's annual clothing sales amount to about $15,000,000 annually.

And this annual clothing purchasing power is steady. It is not way up one year and way down the next. It shows a gradual, healthy increase from year to year.

The reason for this is that Richmond itself is a steady, non-fluctuating market, composed of citizens who are regularly and continuously employed in lucrative occupations. The industries of Richmond are so diverse that great depression is rarely, if ever, experienced. And, too, Richmond has the second lowest living rate of any city in the United States—which allows more money for spending on luxuries.

National Representatives

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Marbridge Bldg., New York City. Waterman Bldg., Boston, Mass. Atlantic Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.

J. B. KEOUGH, Atlanta, Ga.

RICHMOND HAS

20 Department Stores selling clothing of all kinds.

56 Clothing Stores.

12 Millinery Stores.

30 Shoe Stores.

In addition to these retail outlets Richmond has several large wholesale houses distributing shoes, millinery, dry goods and clothing.

Richmond Is A Steady Permanent Non-Fluctuating Market

If you have anything to sell—Tell Richmond about it in

The Richmond NEWS LEADER

Covers Richmond Like a Roof

"ON NEWS LEADER SQUARE"

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

QUINCY (Mass.) PATRIOT-LEDGER has purchased a Ludlow Typograph and Elrod caster.

Eugene (Ore.) Register is now being printed on its new Duplex Tubular press.

Recent installations of Ludlow equipment include the Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald, San Francisco (Cal.) Bulletin, Vineland (N. J.) Journal, Miami Beach (Fla.) Life, Waukegan (Ill.) Daily News, Charleston (W. Va.) Daily Gazette, Philadelphia News.

Celebrating its seventh anniversary recently, the Conway (Kan.) News, J. B. Parker, editor and publisher, announced the installation of a new press.

SCHOOLS

A DEPARTMENT of journalism for Lincoln Memorial University, at Harrogate, near Knoxville, Tenn., is to be in charge of Harry Harrison Kroll, B. S., M. A., instructor of rural Journalism at Peabody College, Nashville.

ASSOCIATIONS

NINETEENTH annual convention of the OREGON STATE EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION will be held at Prineville, June 18-19.

ADVERTISING CLUB OF SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., recently elected Albert D. Stetson, resident manager of the West Coast Theater, president. The club has started a series of breakfast meetings as an innovation.

TENTH DISTRICT, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, will hold its annual convention in Beaumont, Tex., Oct. 25-26.

Summer meeting of the SOUTH DAKOTA PRESS ASSOCIATION is to be held at Brookings, Aug. 12 and 13.

WOMAN'S PRESS CLUB OF PITTSBURGH at their annual meeting June 7, re-elected Mrs. Edith Taylor Thomson, president.

William J. Blake was recently elected president of the BOSTON MAILERS' UNION No. 1.

Mid-summer session of the NORTHEAST MISSOURI PRESS ASSOCIATION will be held July 30 in Monroe City, officers of the district organization announced this week.

SPRINGFIELD (ILL.) TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION last week elected officers as follows: L. A. Freeman, president; Henry Bloomer, vice-president; Robert A. B. Edie, financial secretary; E. B. Kepner, treasurer; W. L. Crowder, recording secretary.

Ray Stewart, Topeka newspaperman, won the championship of the KANSAS EDITORIAL GOLF ASSOCIATION at the annual spring tournament held recently in Topeka. He defeated H. C. Mohler, editor of the state board of agriculture publications, one up on the 19th hole.

JUNIOR ADVERTISING CLUB OF ST. LOUIS has elected the following officers: William J. Lepp, Jr., president; John M. Lamoureux, first vice-president; Meyer E. Sacks, second vice-president; Lee Adler, third vice-president; Martin Mullen, secretary, and Ewald Hencke, treasurer.

E. Sears McCumber has been given the contract to direct the three year publicity program of the ERIE (Pa.) CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, a fund of $60,000 having been raised for the purpose. McCumber is associated with the H. K. McCann Agency.

Members of the ADVERTISING CLUB OF CINCINNATI which recently changed its name from that of the Cincinnati Advertisers Club, held installation of officers June 3 at the Cincinnati Zoo, combining the event with an outing and picnic. H. Clay Rouster, general sales manager of the Streitmann Biscuit Company, is the new president.

SPOKANE (WASH.) AD CLUB has elected the following officers: Claude E. Starling, first vice-president; Mrs. Emelie H. Burcham, second vice-president; Paul L. Scott, treasurer; Joseph Baily, F. M. CeRiemer, Charles J. Kelly, Frank J. Zeorlin, new members of the executive board. The president will be elected by the entire executive board at a later date.

Outing of Northwestern Pennsylvania newspaper men at Conneaut Lake, Pa., June 5-6-7 was attended by several hundred publishers, editors, and their families, as guests of H. O. Holcomb, owner of the Park. At the annual election of officers, the following were elected; President, J. W. Borland, Oil City; vice-president, Capt. H. S. Phillips; secretary-treasurer; M. E. Barton, Conneaut Lake Breeze.

CHARLOTTE TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION No. 338, has elected Claude Albea president.

Kenner Joining Ft. Scott Daily

Fred Kenner, for ten years connected with the Atchison (Kan.) Globe has resigned, effective July 1, to become editor of the Fort Scott (Kan.) Monitor-Tribune.

ADDRESS WANTED

James Bennett Gordon, former publicity manager, National Republican Committee, Washington, D. C.

AD TIPS

Advertising Industries, Inc., Ellicott square, Buffalo. Placing the following new accounts: Henry Card & Company, Fredonia, N. Y., mfrs. "Grape Ola" Grape Juice Concentrate and Empire Food Products Co., Buffalo, N. Y., mfrs. "Tom Thumb" Jams & Jellies.

George Batten Company, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for the Pompeian Company, Cleveland.

Brandt Advertising Company, 431 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, will start some new copy on Curtiss Candy Co. (Babe Ruth Candy Bar), Chicago, about June 3.

D'Arcy Advertising Company, Missouri State Life Bldg., St. Louis. Will continue to handle the account of the Coca Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., although Frank Presbrey Co., New York, has been given about six foreign newspapers in which to place special copy which he had prepared.

Donovan-Armstrong, 1211 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Now handling account of the American Nokol Company, Chicago, manufacturers "nokol" oil burners.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., 250 Park avenue, New York. Placing account of the Forhan Company, New York.

Erwin, Wasey and Co., 844 Rush street, Chicago. Sending out page copy to a small list of papers on McGown Laboratories (Maison De Beaute) Chicago.

Walter Haehnle Co., Cincinnati. Issuing page copy on Burger Bros. Malt Co., Cincinnati (Buckeye Malt), to a list of newspapers in scattered territory.

Henri, Hurst & McDonald, 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Now handling account of the Nachman Springfield Company, Chicago, manufacturers "Nachman" spring units.

Hicks Advertising Agency, 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Now handling accounts of the International Millinery Company and the Style Dress Company.

Kohorn Advertising Company, Cleveland. Is sending out schedule on Klinker Mfg. Co. (Peggy Page Toilet Articles), Cleveland, to a small list of newspapers in scattered territory.

Wilson H. Lee Advertising Service, 6 Church street, New Haven, Conn. Is placing the following new accounts: William Schollborn Co., New Haven, mfrs. "Bernard" Fliers and O. F. Mossberg & Sons, New Haven, mfrs. Rifles and Pistols.

McLain-Simpers Organization, Stock Exchange Building, Philadelphia. Has secured the accounts of the United States Asbestos Co., Manheim, Pa., manufacturers of Brake Linings, Clutch Facings and Asbestos Products.

Mumm-Romer-Jaycox Co., Columbus, Ohio. Is adding some southern towns on the account of John Swisher Co. (King Edward Cigar), Newark, O.

Pratt & Florea, Inc., 277 Broadway, New York. Are placing advertising for Riviera Amusement Park in northern New Jersey newspapers.

William H. Rankin Company, 435 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Is trying out a campaign on Harlequin Golf Balls, Games Balls Co., Tribune Tower, Chicago, in a few metropolitan newspapers in the east.

Richardson-Briggs Co., Payne avenue and 21st street, Cleveland, is handling a special campaign on American Stove Co., Lorain, O., in some Florida towns.

Roche and Weston, 310 S. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Will place the account of Studebaker Motor Co., South Bend, Ind., formerly handled by Lord and Thomas.

Stack Advertising Agency, 29 East Madison street, Chicago. Will use a list of papers in Standard Oil Co. of Indiana territory for advertising of Ethyl Gas.

Williams and Cunningham, 6 North Michigan blvd., Chicago. Sending out copy on Kenton Baking Powder Co., Cincinnati, to some southern towns.

J. O. Young Co., Kansas City, Mo. Sending out schedules on Barbo and Orlex to a large list of newspapers.

Imperial METAL

Large and Small
—IMPERIAL Serves Them All

YOUR newspaper may be housed in a magnificent masterpiece of modern architectural beauty or in a modest two-story building. It may have a circulation of hundreds of thousands or serve a weekly circulation of only a few thousand. But, whatever the size of your plant or the amount of your circulation, the Imperial Plus Metal Plan is ideal for caring for your type metal.

This adaptability of the Plus Plan is the result of many years of effort to produce pure, perfectly-balanced type metal and a plan that would keep that metal in balance, thereby adding many years of working life to the metal. To accomplish Imperial Metal and the Plus Plan we have devoted the effort of years to the study and manufacture of just one product—type metals!

That Imperial has been successful in its efforts is proven by the thousands of large and small publications that have made the Plus Plan standard practice.

Please remember that the Plus Plan is not new or untried. Its reliability and economy have been proven by leading newspapers over a period of many years. Names given upon request.

IMPERIAL TYPE METAL CO.

Manufacturing the following metals:

LINOTYPE MONOTYPE INTERTYPE STEREOTYPE
ELROD LUDLOW LINOGRAPH THOMPSON

Philadelphia Cleveland New York Chicago

You may deal with these 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers as with one publication. Uniform marketing help through the "Iowa Plan."

IOWA Bank Deposits Increase Ten Million—January to April!

The deposits in Iowa banks under State supervision increased $9,400,000 from Jan. 1 to official call on April 12th, according to information from the State Department of Banking.

In this period there were just 88 banking days.

At the same time, Bills Payable and Rediscount items decreased about three and one-half millions.

Though exact National bank figures are not yet available, it is certain they will make the total increase in deposits at least ten million dollars.

And yet, while Iowa made these gains, other sections of the country showed considerable decrease in deposits!

This Iowa market is always dependable. Year after year these people are buying all of life's necessities and most of the luxuries.

The quickest and most effective way to reach this market is through the Iowa daily newspapers—the favorite reading material of Iowa people.

The 28 leading dailies comprising this association cover the state thoroughly. Uniform cooperation is given by all, in helping you secure proper distribution with jobbers and dealers.

Full information upon request.

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

"Ella Cinders" Film Showing—Sorenson Going Abroad for P. & A.—Chicago Tribune Handling Ederle Swim—McNitt Leaving for Europe—MacDonald of N. E. A. Joins MacLean

NEWSPAPER movie reviewers this week had a chance to comment upon a comic strip character portrayed in the "Ella Cinders" film by Colleen Moore. In

Colleen Moore as "Ella Cinders"

Buffalo, N. Y., it is reported, all local attendance records have been broken by the exhibiting theatre. The strip on which the film is based is drawn by Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb and is being syndicated by the Metropolitan Newspaper Service.

Arthur A. Sorenson, news editor of Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc., sailed for Europe June 2 on the Berengaria to cover Gertrude Ederle's attempt to swim the English Channel, and to temporarily relieve M. H. Wallenstein, European director of P. & A., who is on his vacation. Sorenson will be abroad about two months. While in Europe, he will visit P. & A.5s offices in London, Paris and Berlin.

Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate has obtained the exclusive right to signed stories by Gertrude Ederle during her forthcoming attempt to swim the English channel. Miss Ederle's by-line started appearing this week over dispatches wirelessed from aboard ship en route over seas.

Fred Ferguson, general manager of NEA Service, Inc., is spending two weeks in Cleveland.

"Why I Resigned From The 400" is the title of a series of ten articles, written by Park Benjamin for the International Feature Service of New York City.

Mrs. Eva Fay, well known in vaudeville for 20 years with an act purporting to "answers questions past, present and future," has prepared an entertainment feature for the National Newspaper Service, Chicago.

V. V. McNitt, president of McNaught Syndicate, Inc., New York, with his family will sail June 21, for a two months' pleasure trip to Europe.

W. Aird MacDonald, recently in charge of the art and photographic department of NEA Service's plant at San Francisco, has joined Eugene MacLean's newspaper feature organization, San Francisco. MacDonald will have charge of the photographic and layout work on the MacLean newspaper fiction serials.

Claire Pomeroy has written a new serial "Free Love" for the National Newspaper Service, of Chicago.

The Ledger Syndicate has obtained second serial rights to the "Gray Phantom," by Herman Landon.

Mark Hellenger, of the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, is the first syndicate writer to set down the life story of Joyce Hawley, the "Bathtub Queen." He has accomplished it in a series of four articles. Hellenger writes the column "About Broadway."

Rube Goldberg, cartoonist for the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., with his family is leaving June 21, for California.

Helen Keller, who writes a daily inspirational column "Into the Light" for Famous Features Syndicate, left New York, June 11 for a visit to her sister in Montgomery, Ala. She was accompanied South by Leslie Fulenwider, president of Famous Features Syndicate, and her teacher, Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy.

"The Magic Eye" by John Goodwin, arranged for serial publication in newspapers, is now handled by King Features Syndicate of New York.

After more than 20 years' continuous connection with the Cincinnati Enquirer, Robert Franc Schulkers, creator of the "Seckatary Hawkins" stories, syndicated by the Metropolitan Newspaper Service has resigned to attend to his personal affairs. He has established an office in the Provident Bank building, Cincinnati. Mr. Schulkers is publishing his new edition of the Seckatary Hawkins book.

Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia, is offering interviews with prize fight champions in a series of 54 articles under the heading "The Biggest Moment of My Biggest Fight."

Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of George Washington University, is writing a daily editorial for newspapers through King Features Syndicate.

CORRECTIONS IN SYNDICATE LIST

SEVERAL features in the annual directory published last week were attributed through errors of classification and typography to organizations other than those which handle them, and users of the directory should make the following revisions:

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Cartoons (d) (2-3)	Bruce Bairnsfather	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Highlights of History (d) (6)	J. Carroll Mansfield	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Jolly Jingles (d) (4-6)	Graham Hunter	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Just Humans (d) (2-3)	Gene Carr	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Lady Bountiful (w) (fp)	Gene Carr	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Once Upon a Time (d) (6)	W. J. Enright	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
School Days (d-w) (3) (fp) (c)	Clare V. Dwiggins	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Uncle Wiggily's Adventures (dw) (4) (fp) (c)	Howard R. Garis and Lang Campbell	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Tennis (d) (w) (½)	Suzanne Lenglen	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Burgess Bedtime Stories (d) (½)	Thornton Burgess	New York Herald Tribune Syndicate
Buffalo Bill Life and Adventures	Julia Cody Goodman	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.

Insert on Page 54 under "Feature and Picture Syndicates of the United States:

Metropolitan Newspaper Service..150 Nassau st., New York.. Max Elser, Jr.....

Florida People Can Afford Luxuries

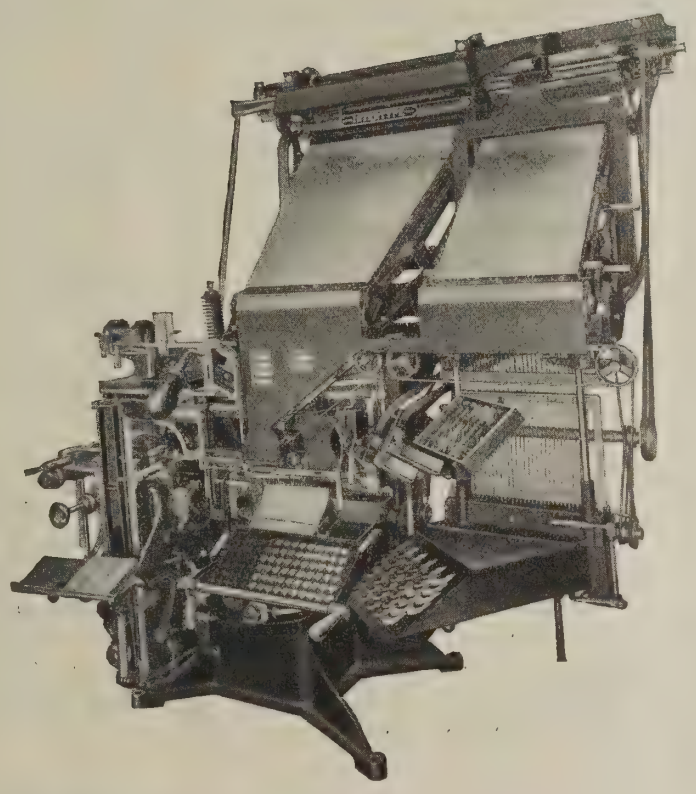
It is natural that Florida, as the winter playground of America, has attracted a class of people whose wealth is above the average. Moreover, Florida's leadership in banning state income and inheritance taxes has also resulted in people of wealth coming to this state.

Florida is characterized by a willingness to spend freely for anything it needs and wants. During 1925, for instance, this state spent nearly a half-billion dollars on the construction of new buildings, not counting the cost of furnishings and equipment. It spends millions annually for new roads and railroads. In 1925 Florida led the country in the increase in its federal tax returns. Its people dress well, live well, spend well, and yet the bank deposits of Florida more than doubled during the past year.

Here, indeed, is a state where your advertising dollar can yield a rich harvest. For test campaigns, for selling summer goods in winter, or for general year-round selling, it will pay to make Florida an important part of your advertising campaign.



For complete and economical coverage of the Florida market, use the Associated Dailies.

ASSOCIATED DAILIES of Florida

510 Clark Bldg. Jacksonville, Florida

Bradenton News
Clearwater Sun
Daytona Beach Journal
Daytona Beach News
Deland Daily News
Eustis Lake Region
Ft. Lauderdale News
Ft. Myers Press
Ft. Myers Tropical News
Ft. Pierce News-Tribune
Ft. Pierce Record
Gainesville News
Gainesville Sun
Jacksonville Florida Times-Union
Jacksonville Journal
Key West Citizen
Kissimmee Gazette
Lakeland Ledger
Lakeland Star-Telegram
Lake Worth Leader
Melbourne Journal
Miami Daily News
Miami Herald
Miami Illustrated Daily Tab
Miami Tribune
New Smyrna News
Ocala Central Florida Times
Orlando Morning Sentinel
Orlando Reporter-Star
Palatka News
Palm Beach Daily News
Palm Beach Post
Palm Beach Times
Pensacola Journal
Pensacola News
Plant City Courier
St. Augustine Record
St. Petersburg Independent
St. Petersburg News
St. Petersburg Times
Sanford Herald
Sarasota Herald
Sarasota Times
Stuart Daily News
Tampa Times
Tampa Tribune
Winter Haven Chief

"Saving one hour out of each eight" with the Intertype "Mixer"

Now Ready for Prompt Delivery

The demand for Intertype "Mixers" has until now made it impossible for the Intertype Factories to make prompt deliveries, but facilities for increased production have been completed and prompt delivery can now be guaranteed.

Now that Intertype "Mixers" have been in daily use for several months, enthusiastic comments about them are beginning to come in. Here is one:

"It is hard for me to tell you what we think of the wonderful performance of the Intertype 'Mixer' here in the office of The Star. The machine ran Thursday night with only one stop (the distributor). It repeated the performance Friday night, and at the present time (12:30 Sunday morning) we have not had a single stop, and it has been in operation since three o'clock Saturday afternoon. We figure that we are saving one hour out of each eight with this machine, as compared with the regular type two-magazine machine we have been using —and we are producing thirty-three and one-third per cent more heads on the 'Mixer'."—S. Kelly, Indianapolis Star Composing Room.

That letter just about tells the whole story. Fewer stops, because there is less mechanism; (there is only one distributor box for all four magazines). Time saved, because the machine is built for practical operating conditions. Instant changes from one face to another. No waiting for the distributor. More production, because this "Mixer" is built for speed as well as wide range of work.

Literature about this remarkable machine, with close-up pictures of its special features, interesting specimens of composition, magazine layouts, etc., will be sent on request. If you wish to see our local sales representative, please so state.

Standardized
INTERTYPE
TRADE MARK

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

1440-A BROADWAY, at 40th Street, NEW YORK

CHICAGO MEMPHIS SAN FRANCISCO BOSTON LOS ANGELES TORONTO LONDON

INTERTYPE CORPORATION
1440-A Broadway at 40th St.
New York

Please send literature about the Standardized Intertype "Mixer"

Name .....

Address .....

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Ransier Joins Randall Company as Production Manager—Joyce Named Manager of Riach Corporation—Ingham Joins Lesan Agency as Vice-President

FRANK F. RANSIER has joined the staff of the Fred M. Randall Company, Detroit, and has been appointed production manager. Ransier has been with the Wolverine Engraving Company of that city for the past eight years. R. D. Hughes has also been added to the copy staff of the same agency. Mr. Hughes was formerly publication editor of the Chrysler Sales Corporation and the Packard Motor Car Company. Prior to this he was connected with the advertising department of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

Arthur Joyce, former city editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, has been appointed manager of the J. A. Riach Advertising Corporation, of Miami, Fla.

V. C. Houser of the Barnes-Crosby Company, and John Ring, Jr., president of the John Ring, Jr., Advertising Company, are chairmen of the advertising committee of the Greater St. Louis Industrial Exposition, which will spend $100,000 in advertising the exposition, which will be held in Forest Park Sept. 4 to 19.

John A. Cleary, formerly advertising manager for the Cadillac Motor Company, has been named head of the Dorland Advertising Agency in Miami. Before going into advertising work, Cleary was a reporter on several Philadelphia newspapers, including the Public Ledger and Inquirer.

Henry J. Meyn has joined Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, Inc., Milwaukee advertising agency, as director of research and market analysis. Meyn was formerly with Arthur A. Anderson Company, business engineers, Milwaukee.

Nat C. Wildman, formerly vice-president of the Deatel Advertising Service, Baltimore, and for the past five years president of the Wildman Advertising his interests in that organization to join with James H. Rothschild.

A new company has been formed under the name of James H. Rothschild and Associates, Inc., with Rothschild as president and Wildman as vice-president and general manager. Offices of the new association will be maintained at 33 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Jesse Josephs of the Jesse Josephs Advertising Company, Cincinnati, last week completed an ornate stone front building on Reading Road which the agency will occupy.

E. L. Ludwig is the new space buyer for Yost, Gratiot & Co., St. Louis, Mo. L. A. Gratiot is no longer connected with the company

George E. Ingham has joined the H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, Inc., as vice-president, in charge of the Chicago office, which is located at 37 W. Jackson Blvd. Mr. Ingham was formerly with the Caples Company, agency, 225 E. Erie street, Chicago.

Miss Margaret Stevens has joined the copy department of Erwin, Wasey & Co., Chicago advertising agency. She was formerly connected with Henri, Hurst & McDonald of the same city.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

APPLYING SCIENCE TO BUSINESS

"IN the past few years there has been a rapidly increasing recognition of the necessity of scientific analysis of business problems—of substituting for hope and hunch, facts and reasoning based on facts. The growing volume of business data currently made available, the more frequent discussion of problems of business management, of forecasting and budgeting, of policies and methods of operating and financial control, are manifestations of this. It has become generally accepted that, as Herbert Hoover once said, 'A digger for facts will outstrip a guessing genius.' "—F. Leslie Hayford, Economic Statistician, General Motors Corporation.

* * *

HEADLINE WRITERS CAN FORM OPINION

"IN the molding of public opinion through newspapers editorial writers are forced into second place by headline writers who have the power to convey any impression of a story they desire. It is vitally important that the man on the desk tell the whole story in a few brief words. But the headline must convey the correct interpretation of what the story is all about. Should the writer be opposed to an act of Congress he can by his headline prejudice his readers against the act even before they read the story or his headline can be so worded that the same story will be acclaimed as a progressive movement—according to the view of the editor or the policy of the paper."—Hubert F. Lee, Advertising Manager, Blease's Weekly and Anderson (S. C.) Independent-Tribune.

* * *

HOW TO GET READER CONFIDENCE

"TO gain reader confidence it is of first importance to keep faith with the readers—to print the truth about all things in which the readers have a wholesome right to be interested. That sounds simple, but it very frequently brings a newspaper into a clash with an advertising patron who feels that the wind should be tempered to suit his special case. The newspaper that colors its news to please special interests is betraying its readers and it is difficult indeed to conceal that betrayal. The result is sure to be a weakening of the offending publisher's hold on his readers and that means a loss in dollars and cents to him, for his main merchantable product is that very confidence he is thus diluting. The newspaper publisher who would get and hold business should not lose sight of the fact that he cannot put the matter of news selection on a personal basis without jeopardizing his most important asset."—Marvin Creager, Managing Editor, Milwaukee Journal.

They find Editor & Publisher's Space Buyers' Guide "PRICELESS"

McJUNKIN ADVERTISING AGENCY
5 SOUTH WABASH AVE.
CHICAGO

May 25, 1926.

Editor & Publisher
42nd St. & Broadway,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Your Space Buyers' Guide is a bible to the advertising fraternity, particularly to those having to do with selecting markets for advertising. The data you have included regarding the characteristics of towns and cities throughout the country are priceless. We have eight or ten copies of this book in our office for the use of various plan men working on various accounts.

Very truly yours,

McJUNKIN ADVERTISING COMPANY
F. B. AVERY
Manager, Space Department

FBA--MF

Equally priceless is the Space Buyers' Guide to the farsighted daily newspaper publisher as a medium for his message to space buyers in hundreds of Advertising Agencies and National Advertisers at the very moment they are looking up in the Guide the facts about his city and its trading area with a view to reaching the very market his paper covers.

YET IT DOESN'T COST A LOT TO PLACE THAT MESSAGE THERE

Let us tell you about it.
No obligations.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
1700 Times Building, New York, N. Y.

This Market easily available!

Through the home town papers of the prosperous cities of Pennsylvania one of America's greatest markets is available to you.

The readers of these papers receive their earning power through the steel mills, coal mines, textile plants and other industries that are kept busy all the year filling the wants of every state in the Union.

No national campaign should overlook this splendid market

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	31,400	.10	.10
Allentown Call .....(S)	22,349	.10	.10
††Beaver Falls Tribune.....(E)	6,553	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times.....(E)	13,272	.06	.06
††Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,673	.04	.04
Chester Times .....(E)	18,295	.06	.06
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,783	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	5,928	.02	.02
††Easton Express .....(E)	25,652	.08	.08
Erie Times .....(E)	28,596	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review...(EM)	14,883	.05	.05
††Hazleton Plain Speaker.....(E) / ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel..(M)	19,852	.07	.06
Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,307	.0285	.0285

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	8,588	.04	.04
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(EM)	15,857	.08	.07
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,230	.13	.12
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,236	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	5,224	.03	.03
*Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	18,136	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News .....(E)	11,860	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	26,204	.06	.06
††Williamsport Sun .....(E) / †Gazette & Bulletin.....(M)	28,000	.09	.09
††York Dispatch .....(E)	19,632	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, Sept. 30, 1925.
A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

CLAGUE CHAMPIONS "NEWSIE" BEFORE I. C. M. A.

(Continued from page 5)

L. W. Hurt, Royal Oak (Mich.) Tribune.
F. W. Idler, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Daily News.
Ernest H. Jekel, Kingston (N. C.) Free Press.
L. O. Johnson, Vernon (Tex.) Record.
R. P. Jones, Daytona Beach (Fla.) News.
Myrtle Keene, Casper (Wyo.) Tribune.
J. W. Kenney, Detroit Times.
Jacob Killian, Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer.
Max Kreps, Philadelphia Gazette-Democrat.
John McIntosh, Indianapolis Star.
Daniel J. McSweeney, Brooklyn Times.
Ingwald Malwick, Duluth News-Tribune.
J. B. T. Martin, Spokane (Wash.) Chronicle
Willard D. Miller, Washington Post.
Abram Newman, New York Evening Post.
C. R. Nuttall, Calcutta (India) Englishman.
Harry Pearce, Pittsburgh Sun.
C. G. Phares, Springfield (Ohio) Daily News.
B. V. Rafferty, Wheeling (W. Va.) News.
L. L. Ricketts, Des Moines Capital.
Charles M. Ruley, Miami (Fla.) News.
John Shanahan, Chicago Daily News.
Bert C. Smith, Stratford (Ont.) Beacon-Herald.
J. Lloyd Smith, Lima (Ohio) Gazette.
Neil C. Snyder, South Bend (Ind.) Tribune.
Dr. F. A. Stanger, Bridgeton (N. J.) News.
Paul W. Stiles, Piqua (Ohio) Call.
W. J. Stoughton, Daytona Beach (Fla.) Journal.
C. L. Stretch, Philadelphia Bulletin.
Fred J. Tangney, Fall River (Mass.) Globe.
Louis Trupin, Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal-American.
Harry V. Wheat, Lexington (Ky.) Herald.
William E. White, Memphis Press.
V. P. Willett, Akron Times-Press.
J. G. Williams, Bethlehem (Pa.) Globe-Times.
J. E. Wingle, Champaign (Ill.) News-Gazette.
J. Ernest Wren, Lima (Ohio) Gazette.
John L. Young, Philadelphia Inquirer.

Making committee reports at the first session were: Mr. Annenberg, Curtis-Martin Newspapers, chairman entertainment; Thomas Dowling, circulation director, Cleveland Press and Pittsburgh Press, program; D. G. B. Rose, Louisville, by-laws; W. C. Hixson, Syracuse Post Standard, railway and postal affairs; Walter Rauck, Cincinnati Post, auditing; J. M. Schmid, Indianapolis News, Audit Bureau; J. N. Eisenlord, Chicago Daily News, transportation; Charles O. Reville, Baltimore Sun, publicity; Walter Hoots, Quincy Whig Journal, newsboy welfare; Royal Weiler, Allentown (Pa.) Call, publishers' association; Clarence Eyster, Peoria Star, general welfare and necrology.

Those present were:

J. J. Abbott, Philadelphia Record.
A. V. Ambrose, Trenton (N. J.) Times.
J. M. Annenberg, Curtis Martin Newspapers, Philadelphia.
William L. Argue, Toronto Star.
T. V. Armstrong, Ottawa (Ont.), Journal.
Joe Atz.
Joseph M. Aylward, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.
Wiley B. Baker, Knoxville Sentinel.
J. L. Barksdale, Jr., Miami (Fla.) Herald.
Charles B. Bayless, Camden Courier and Morning Post.
Murray C. Beck, Lancaster (Pa.) New Era.
H. S. Blake, Capper Publications, Topeka, Kan.
Charles H. Blasser, York (Pa.) Dispatch.
C. C. Bower, Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.
Alfred A. Brandon, Long Island City Star.
M. H. Brandon, Albany Knickerbocker Press.
Frank Brosnan, New York Evening World.
D. H. Brown, Chicago American.
Charles T. Buck, Scranton (Pa.) Republican.
John T. Calkins, Elmira (N. Y.) Star-Gazette.
F. R. Campbell, Frankford (N. D.) Herald.
M. G. Charles, Philadelphia Pennsylvania Farmer.
J. N. Chevrier, Montreal La Patrie.
Will X. Coley, Raleigh (N. C.) News & Observer.
Fred I. Cook, Scranton, Pa.
C. G. Ccoke, Ann Arbor (Mich.) Times-News.
W. L. Cooper, Charleston (S. C.) Post.
William T. Corbin, Greensboro (N. C.) News.
R. F. Corcoran, Lima (Ohio) News.
Ralph B. Corn, Asheville (N. C.) Times.
William G. Cotton, Philadelphia Inquirer.
C. W. Crum, Lexington (Ky.) Leader.
E. J. Cullen, Scranton Times.
Harry W. Cullis, Chester (Pa.) Times.
E. S. Dobson, Brooklyn Times.
E. D. Dolhenty, Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette.
E. F. Doran, Columbus Citizen.
Thomas J. Dowling, Cleveland Press.
Robert O. Dyer, Columbus Citizen.
W. P. Dyer, Houston Press.
Frank W. Easton, Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.
T. Edson, Rockville Centre (N. Y.) Nassau Review.
John Eisenlord, Chicago News.
William Elder, Toronto Telegram.
O. E. Ellis, Erie Dispatch-Herald.
George Erb, Jr., Buffalo News.
Jack Estes, Dallas News.
Clarence Eyster, Peoria Star.
James L. Farley, Philadelphia.
M. F. Fickinger, Easton (Pa.) Express.
G. W. Finbed, Boston Christian Science Monitor.
A. C. Finley, Atlantic City Press-Union.
John Foley, Mt. Carmel (Pa.) Item.
Louis F. Gautier, New York Morning Telegraph.
Jacob Ginsburg, Louis Weinstock, New York City.
Robert C. Gohl, Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph.

Left to right: L. P. Rutherford, Wilmington Every Evening, and E. S. Dobson, Brooklyn Times, veterans of I. C. M. A.

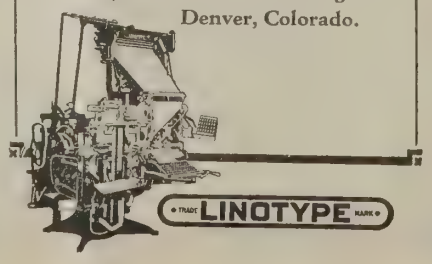
F. M. Grim, Jacksonville (Fla.) Journal.
Karl T. Hall, Toledo Blade.
M. W. Halmbacher, Oklahoma City Oklahoman.
L. M. Hammond, Boston Transcript.
Arch Harris, Dallas Times-Herald.
H. I. Heffley, Lebanon (Pa.) News-Times.
W. H. Herrington, St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
F. M. Hetrick, Altoona Mirror.
W. J. Hill, Chicago.
A. J. Hilliker, Calgary (Alta.) Herald.
L. J. Hoffman, St. Louis Star.
C. R. Hudson, Winnipeg Tribune.
George H. Hunter, Duluth Herald.
E. H. Jekel, Kinston (N. C.) Free Press.
Edward C. Johnson, Holden, Mass.
H. E. Johnson, Chattanooga News.
T. J. Kavanaugh, Dayton News.
J. P. Kienzle, Springfield Illinois State Journal.
J. J. Killian, Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer.
L. H. Kimball, Jackson (Mich.) Citizen-Patriot.
H. G. Kimber, Toronto Globe.
John J. Kirk, Cleveland Plain Dealer.
H. C. Kloecker, Cincinnati Enquirer.
John H. J. Kuntz, Lancaster (Pa.) Intelligencer.
Hilda Larson, Tarentum (Pa.) Valley News.
Lewis LaVern, Ithaca (N. Y.) Journal-News.
L. Lippincott, Atlantic City Press-Union.
J. M. Litsch, Bethlehem (Pa.) Globe-Times.
J. J. Lynch, Cleveland Press.
S. T. MacDonald, Hutchinson (Kan.) News & Herald.
Robert B. McClean, Consolidated Press Assn.
J. A. McDonald, Saginaw (Mich.) News-Courier.
James McKernan, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin.
C. M. McTaggart, Toronto Mail & Empire.
I. Malwick, Duluth News-Tribune.
J. R. Marks, Asheville Citizen.
J. A. Mathews, St. Paul Pioneer Press & Dispatch.
M. F. Mergen, Madison (Wis.) State Journal.
A. R. Michener, Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph.
W. Miller, Washington Post.
J. C. Montgomery, Detroit News.
James J. Morrisey, Joliet (Ill.) Herald-News.
Abram Newman, New York Evening Post.
John W. Nolan, Springfield (Mass.) Union.
C. D. O'Rourke.
Charles Payne, Indianapolis Star.
Harry Pearce, Pittsburgh Sun.
Horan Powell, Nashville Banner.
A. H. Pruett, Charleston (W. Va.) Gazette.
B. V. Rafferty, Wheeling (W. Va.) News.
B. W. Reasoner, Terre Haute Star.
Charles O. Reville, Baltimore Sun.
George Reynolds, New Bedford, Mass.
L. L. Ricketts, Des Moines Capital.
George A. Rohn, Cleveland Ohio Farmer.
D. B. G. Rose, Louisville, Ky.
Fred O. Rouse, Bay City (Mich.) Times-Tribune.
J. C. Rowett, Washington News.
L. P. Rutherford, Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening.
O. O. Scattergood, New York Evening Graphic.
J. M. Schmid, Indianapolis News.
J. W. Schuler, Union City (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch.
S. B. Scull, New Haven (Conn.) Register.
E. A. Shearer, Detroit Michigan Farmer.
John D. Simmons, Atlanta Journal.
C. L. Sink, Zanesville (Ohio) Times-Recorder.
Harold H. Sloan, Worcester (Mass.) Post.
Vattier Snyder, Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.
John Spencer, Newark (Ohio) Advocate.
George W. Stabler, Williamsport (Pa.) Grit.
Paul W. Stiles, Piqua (Ohio) Call.
H. W. Stodghill, Louisville Courier-Journal.
Howard C. Story, president Poor Richard Cl Philadelphia.
C. L. Stretch, Philadelphia Bulletin.
H. L. Strickland, Charlotte (N. C.) Observe
C. F. Stout, Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News.
H. B. Stowe, Wheeling (W. Va.) Register.
J. F. Sweeney, Winnipeg (Man.) Free Press.
D. W. Tanner, Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch.
Joseph Taylor, Kitchener (Ont.) Record.
R. W. Taylor, Flint (Mich.) Journal.
George Therrieri, Buffalo News.
John T. Toler, Atlanta Constitution.
M. D. Treble, Buffalo Times.
Louis Trupin, Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal-American.
B. H. Walker, Johnstown (Pa.) Tribune.
C. T. Walker, Philadelphia Bulletin.
J. T. Webb, Jr., Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.
Royal W. Weiler, Allentown (Pa.) Call.
E. C. White,, Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.
V. P. Willett, Akron Times-Press.
J. G. Williams, Bethlehem (Pa.) Globe-Tim
C. S. Wilson, Columbus, Ohio, State Jour and Columbus Dispatch.
W. P. Wilson, Washington (Pa.) Observer Reporter.
William L. Wright, Washington Post.
John L. Young, Philadelphia Inquirer.
Alfred Zimmerman, New York World.
W. S. Zimmerman, Pottsville (Pa.) Republic

From the Linotype Mailbag



"Ship air mail"

"We wish to compliment and thank you for the exceptional service on our order of the 17th.

"We are running our four Linotypes day and night. On Saturday forenoon one machine broke down; Saturday afternoon we wired you 'Ship air mail, one dynamic thermometer operating coil for serial number twenty-nine hundred and four,' and on Monday morning at 9 o'clock the part was received and 10 o'clock the machine was running.

"Wonderful service. Thank you."

Bradford-Robinson Printing Co.
Denver, Colorado.

Special N. E. A. Invitation Editio

Twenty-thousand copies of the 84-pa "Invitational Edition" of the Southe California Editor, official organ of t Southern California Editorial Associatio have been printed and mailed to virtual every newspaper editor and publisher the United States, extending an invitati to attend the National Editorial Associ tion convention, to be held in Los A geles, June 30-July 2.

To Advertise East Colorado

Organized for the purpose of adve tising Eastern Colorado to attract inve tors, homeseekers and tourists, Easte Coloradans, Inc., a nonprofit corporatic was formed recently with R. L. Johns of Holyoke, Colo.; C. C. Bennett Denver, and P. O. Wells of Colora Springs, Colo., as incorporators. Office elected were R. L. Johnson, presiden Will D. Keene, of Pueblo, first vice-pres dent; L. R. Scott of Idalia, second vic president; H. M. Harms of Sterling, se retary and C. C. Bennett, treasurer.

Editor & Publisher
Suite 1700
Times Building
New York
N. Y.

Preserve your copies of
Editor & Publisher

The special articles, compilations and analyses EDITOR & PUBLISHER is giving you right along are too valuable not to be kept in a permanent, get-at-able form.

We have on hand a limited number of attractive, neat, strongly fashioned made out of a good quality of imitation leather, with the name and trademark of the paper embossed in gold.

BINDERS

A set of two binders, each holding 26 issues, costs but $5, postpaid.

Order your set before they are all gone

Memphis made a bid for next year's I. C. M. A. convention. Left to right: F. Goldschmid, city circulation manager, and W. A. Alexander, country circulation manager, Memphis Commercial Appeal.

DAILIES REPORT WIDENING OF SALES MARKET INTO RURAL FIELDS BY AUTO

Farmers Being Brought Into City's Circle by Rural Motor Delivery, Circulators Say at Annual Convention— Country Subscriber Costs $10, But Worth It

REVOLUTIONARY changes are in progress in the newspaper field.

Newspaper circulations aided by the motor-truck are spreading out in ever-widening circles miles and miles away from the city publication offices into the homes of farmers, who, once big mail order customers, are now motoring into the towns to trade in local stores.

This was brought out in discussion June 8 before the International Circulation Managers' Convention in Philadelphia. The discussion was led by R. W. Taylor, Flint (Mich.) Journal.

"Because of the rural automobile delivery services being installed by newspapers throughout the country, papers reach subscribers in outlying districts within a few hours of publication," Mr. Taylor said.

"With this fast delivery service local department stores are able to compete with mail order houses that have realized the business of the farmers for some years."

Mr. Taylor asserted, however, that rural automobile delivery offers more advantages to evening than to morning newspapers. Edition times are changing.

"The evening papers are now able to deliver a home edition on the day of publication, and it reaches the farmer at the time when his work is done and he has time to read.

"I have found that the wives of farmers are especially interested in receiving the morning newspaper at 6 a. m. This permits the farmer's wife to note sales to be held in the city, and gives her sufficient time to arrive at the stores."

"The motor service not only keeps down cost, but makes the circulation departments absolutely independent of railway and bus schedules. This method gives the subscribers a better delivery service, is a great advertisement for the newspaper, and is a real builder of circulation, all of which benefits the advertiser.

John Schmid, Indianapolis News, said his paper now had 68 rural routes. Old pre-date editions that formerly used to be sent out via R. F. D., are being discontinued, because more complete newspapers now reach the outlying districts by fast motor trucks.

The average rural delivery costs $1,200 a year, Mr. Schmid declared. The average R. F. D. man gets $2,400 a year.

Frank Miller, Washington Post, estimated it cost $10 a year to keep a rural reader, but it was well worth the price.

Others who talked on this subject were Ted Booth, Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press, and John T. Toler, Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

When I.C.M.A. delegates left for their homes, with them went miniature liberty bells, gifts of the Philadelphia committee.

CROWN PRINCE VISITS N. Y. NEWSPAPER

Heir to Sweden's Throne Sees Herald Tribune in the Making— Runs Linotype and Makes Matrix

Gustavus Adolphus, Crown Prince of Sweden, accompanied by Crown Princess Louise and the royal entourage, visited the plant of the New York Herald Tribune the night of June 8. The party was directed through the plant by Ogden Reid, publisher of the Herald Tribune and Mrs. Reid; Arthur S. Draper, assistant editor; Everett Kallgren, make-up editor; Grafton Wilcox, assistant managing editor; Henley Hill, night editor, and Porter Caruthers, assistant business manager.

The Herald Tribune was also visited by the Prince of Wales on his last visit to the U. S. The Crown Prince of Sweden sat down to a linotype machine and under guidance of Isaiah Bardsley, superintendent of the composing room, set up one line of type—GUSTAF ADOLF.

The Prince also made a matrix of a completely-set newspaper page on the roller.

The royal visitors began their inspection by becoming acquainted with the night desk and copy desks in the city room, where pages of copy about them have been handled daily since they arrived in America. Escorted by Mr. Reid, the Crown Prince showed particular interest in the telegraph room.

After a flashlight photograph of the group had been taken in the city room the party went to the composing room on the fourth floor and other pictures were taken, including one of Gustavus Adolphus at the linotype.

Post-Intelligencer Using Promotion Ads

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer is running a series of 13 full page promotion advertisements telling its merits as a newspaper. Special features of the paper are taken up in the various pieces of copy. The series is elaborately prepared from a stylistic standpoint, the body type being Caslon bold, with hand-lettered signature. Wide decorative borders of scroll-like conventionalized foliage add to the attractiveness of the pages.

WASH TUBBS II
© NEA

Says:

"I've got it. There's one certain way of eliminating the wet mat pasting and steam-table nuisances, and that is, by using the Certified Cold process."

Yes! Certified Dry Mats do eliminate the drudgery from the stereotype department; they improve working conditions in the foundry and show a profit to the publisher.

And all of this is accomplished without sacrificing good printing.

As a matter of fact, with Certifieds, printing of type matter is every bit as good as with wet mats and reproduction of half-tones is even better.

Witness the work of the New York Times, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Detroit Times and several hundred others.

Also, the services of the NEA Service, Inc., and Central Press Association, both known for the high character of their half-tone work.

You can accomplish just as much with Certifieds. Why not get the facts—there's no obligation on your part.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue
NEW YORK

for wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility— use CERTIFIEDS

Made in the U.S.A.

Our Customers Write Our Ads

BOONE, IOWA NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Says—

"We have seen many presses run, but none with the ease and dispatch of our DUPLEX TUBULAR PRESS."

DUPLEX PRESSES
FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

WE'RE ALWAYS BUSY—WHY?

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS
Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get It Quickly
Get It Right

Conducted on THE KENDALL PLAN

We would like to know more of your circulation building methods and charges Without obligation to us you may submit details, terms etc

Our last Campaign was run——

Name of paper——City——

By——Title——State——

Should we use a Campaign we would want it to start about——

Eighteen consecutive successful years of "Knowing How." Wire or write for details, references, etc.,

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

At present conducting third campaign within six years upon the WHEELING, W. VA., INTELLIGENCER.

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.

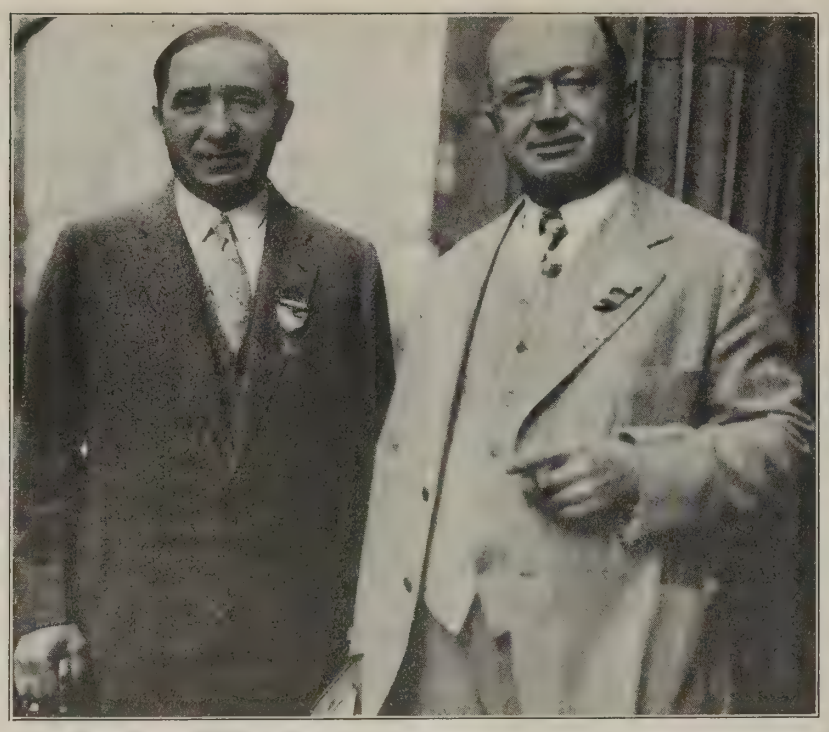
The net paid average for the American was 57,503.

You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.

Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS
and
Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT
To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies



The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American
are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400

Chicago Office:
F. E. CRAWFORD
Western Manager
913 Hearst Bldg.

Detroit Office:
FRANKLIN PAYNE
Representative
1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

A team of big boys from Gotham—Louis Weinstock, Metropolitan Newspaper Association, and James A. McKernan, Morning Newspaper Association. They supervise the trucking of circulations by the millions over New York streets.

WHEN CIRCULATORS GET TOGETHER

MOTOR trucks are important topics of conversation between delegates at this year's I. C. M. A. convention in Philadelphia.

J. M. Annenberg, chairman of the local reception committee boasts 153 delivery trucks now to distribute the Philadelphia Public Ledger, the Evening Public Ledger, and the Sun. The longest run made is from Philadelphia to Cape May, N. J.

This is Mr. Annenberg's second convention in two weeks. He is a Shriner, and was chairman of the local publicity committee, maintaining one of those famous Post-Volstead hotel rooms for the relief of visiting and local news men.

Charles Payne, Indianapolis Star, and first vice-president of the association, has one of a fleet of trucks making a 210 mile round trip daily. The Star doesn't own its trucks, but rents them.

The cost for the 210 mile run, Mr. Payne said, was $1.27 a pound daily and 57 cents a pound on Sundays.

The Star's chief means of keeping circulation figures up is by continual contests among carrier boys and division managers, according to Mr. Payne. This Indianapolis newspaper maintains 14 city divisions. In a contest ended recently all but two divisions of the 14 showed gains. Two hundred dollars were offered in prizes to the division managers with small weekly prizes for the carriers.

Mr. Payne came east with Bert Pfaff, one of his assistants on the Star. It was their first visit to New York City. They took in the Woolworth Tower and Coney Island, but both of them balked at a proposal to visit a New York newspaper plant.

"New York circulation problems are not our problems," Mr. Payne explained.

"You're right they're not," agreed Abe Newman, New York Evening Post. And Mr. Newman ought to know. When he was knee high to a newsstand, he began selling papers in New York's east side. He was known as Gotham's youngest newsy then. Later, while with the New York Daily News, he organized the Morning Newspaper Association's independent delivery system.

"Circulation is a funny thing," mused Tom Dowling, circulation director of the Cleveland Press and the Pittsburgh Press. "It will go ahead like a greased pig, and then, all of a sudden, will drop as though the bottom had been pulled out of it."

Dowling is doing a little "greased pig" act himself at present, slipping the 150 miles between Cleveland and Pittsburgh about every other day.

Mr. and Mrs. Dowling stowed their Peerless car aboard a boat at Cleveland, crossed Lake Ontario to Buffalo, and motored the 581 miles to Philadelphia.

All the way from Texas came these cowpunchers to the convention: E. C. White, Houston Chronicle; Harold Hough, Ft. Worth Star-Telegram, and Arch Harris, Dallas Times-Herald.

White won a laugh from delegates when he told them that in Texas busses were "running all over the roads and over everybody else"; and when he said Texans were dense enough already, but that the Chambers of Commerce were already predicting that the population would be denser."

News is a newspaper's basic commodity and should be the basis of most of a paper's promotion, J. N. Eisenlord, Chicago Daily News, contended.

A local news feature which recently has been added to the Daily News, he said, is called "Here and There About Town." A reporter is being sent to different sections of the city daily to cover them, just as country reporters cover their towns for the local paper. It hasn't been running long enough yet to determine whether or not it was a circulation booster.

A good point was scored by Nathan Sherry, Baltimore Post, on the question of gaining and holding reader confidence:

"When you call an edition complete, be sure it is complete; don't release it with only half the sports covered," was his argument.

The Post has a "green edition" that always waits for final racing and baseball results. It never is put on the street until everything is covered. And the reader confidence thereby established, Mr. Sherry believes, has been a decided benefit to his tabloid.

"This 'green edition' sometimes doesn't come out until six or seven o'clock," he said. "One night the press broke down and we didn't get out until nine. Despite the delay we sold just as many copies as usual. Readers know our paper was complete."

Best simile heard at I. C. M. A.: "As unimportant as a scratch on a ten-year-old Ford." Credit Royal L. Weiler, Allentown (Pa.) Call, who delivered the most humorous convention report, judging by delegate laughter.

Automatic slot boxes for selling newspapers were praised as efficient circulation boosters for "weak editions and weak corners" by Joseph Rowett, Washington (D. C.) News. The News has installed these silent salesmen on many street corners and in front of many small office buildings in the Capital, he said. Profits obtained from them go to the men handling the territory. About 9,000 to 1 copies are sold daily by this metho

C. R. Murray, president of the Pareil Machine Company, makers o Halverson Stuffing Machine, found a way to get delegates to come up t room to see his exhibit without lating the Volstead Act. He boug couple of hundred canes. No, weren't hollow, nor did they contain juice of the forbidden fruit. strangely enough, the word about canes spread much faster than the l ball breath. In about half an every delegate was carrying one.

Here's a record. D. G. B. Rose, L ville, has been to every I. C. M convention since the association wa ganized 28 years ago. He got a hand when the fact was announced the platform. William Argue, To Star, wins second place. He's beer tending conventions without a miss quarter of a century exactly.

Leading All Other Daily Newspapers in the Albany Area

1st in Paid Advertising Lineage

Circulation With Complete Coverage

The Times-Union
Albany, N. Y.

"SKIPPY"
By PERCY CROSBY

The best juvenile comic strip. Combines great humor, excellent drawing and emphatic adult appeal.

A feature you can't afford to miss

JOHNSON FEATURES, Inc.
1819 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Among The Newspapers Publishin
Constance Talmadge's Flapper Series

Chicago Journal
Detroit News
Toledo Blade
Omaha Bee
Peoria Star Journal
Philadelphia Sun
Buffalo Times
Louisville Courier J'l
Oakland Post Enquirer
Memphis News Scimitar
Newark Jersey Transcript

Why Not Join This List of Paper
Wire for Terms and Territory

COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICA
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK

Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief
Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President an General Manager

CLASSIFIED MANAGER

One capable of organizing and handling classified department on fast growing newspaper in southwest. Unlimited possibilities for the right man. Address Box A-567, c/o EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

No dull Summer IN Los Angeles!

Keep your schedules active - in June, July, and August!

Los Angeles Examiner

THE TELEGRAM

now has the largest paid circulation in

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.

13,000 daily
14,000 Sunday
guaranteed.

Member Audit Bureau of Circulations

Represented Nationally by
The Devine-MacQuoid Co., Inc.
New York Philadelphia Pittsburg Chicago

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS' ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with com petent circulation men o capacity and ability capabl to take entire charge of you department or to fill impor tant posts in the department

Address the Secretary Treasurer please, Mr. Clar ence Eyster, care Sta Building, Peoria, Ill.

STEEP GOING TO CHINA FOR HERALD TRIBUNE

Writer of "Chinese Fantastics" Named Permanent Far East Correspondent—Covered Chinese Civil War Last Year

Thomas Steep, author of "Chinese Fantastics," has been appointed by the New York Herald Tribune as its permanent correspondent in the Far East. As a preliminary to his mission in Asia, Mr. Steep, with Mrs. Steep, will accompany Carmi A. Thompson, who will visit the Philippines as the personal representative of President Coolidge. Later Mr. Steep will travel in Japan and eventually make his headquarters in Peking with authority to travel in the Far East wherever news develops.

THOMAS STEEP

Resident for almost a year in Peking, Mr. Steep in 1922 covered the Civil war in China fought outside the walls of the Chinese capital between the armies of Wu Pei-fu and Chang Tso-lin. At that time he was acting temporarily as correspondent for the Associated Press in the absence of Walter C. Whiffen, regular correspondent. As a result of his observations Mr. Steep on returning to New York wrote "Chinese Fantastics," a book on odd and amusing phases of Chinese life.

Steep was born in Cincinnati and while a cub reporter saw a man in a show window who professed to be walking around the world, dressed only in wrapping paper. He induced his newspaper to send him on a walking and reporting trip through Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama. At Atlanta, Joel Chandler Harris advised him to go to Cuba, where the insurrection against Spain was arousing interest.

Engaged by a newspaper syndicate to join the Cuban forces, Steep in 1897 campaigned six months with the rebel leader, Calixto Garcia.

When the United States declared war against Spain, Steep, then 19, went to Cuba a second time. He landed at Santiago from a dispatch boat before the arrival of the American troops. He was the youngest of the correspondents, who included Richard Harding Davis, Stephen Crane and John Fox, Jr.

In 1906 Steep went to Russia to "cover" the revolution that followed Russia's defeat in the Russo-Japanese war. He next worked in London on the Daily Mail. When Madero started his revolution against the Diaz regime he went to Mexico, where he remained during the subsequent revolts of Villa and Carranza.

Prospects of internal changes in China lured him to Peking in 1922.

Stonier Heads Coast Ad Club

Harold J. Stonier, executive secretary of the University of Southern California, and for ten years director of the Los ANGELES ADVERTISING CLUB, has been elected president of the club. Other officers elected are Carl A. Bundy, first vice-president; J. G. Jeffery, second vice-president and Arthur Lee, secretary-treasurer. Directors elected are: Fred T. Hagelberg, E. J. LaFon and Ross Welch. Mr. Stonier was chosen to address the International Advertising Club convention in Philadelphia on June 22.

Dietz Joins Intertype Staff

August Dietz, head of the House of Dietz, of Richmond, Va., has been added to the personnel of the Intertype staff of designers, in the capacity of typographic counselor. Dietz for several years has been considered one of the foremost printers and type designers.

Convicted of Giving False News

Charged with having given false information to a newspaper, Collins Moses, a 15 year old Indian, was sent to the New York State correction school after a hearing in Children's court at Batavia, N. Y. The youth telephoned a report to the newspaper telling of his marriage to a young woman of the Tonawanda Indian reservation. The report was found to be untrue.

30 Sermons to Open A. A. C. W. Meet

Sermons in 30 churches on Sunday, June 20, by clergymen visiting the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World will be one of the features arranged by the Committee on Churches of the Poor Richard Club Convention Committee. William J. Eldridge is chairman of the Committee.

Foreign Writers Coming to U. S.

Newspapermen from all parts of Europe are coming to Chicago for the twenty-eighth international Eucharistic Congress, to be held June 20 to 24. It is expected that 500 newspapermen from outside Chicago will cover the great Catholic gathering for their papers. Belgium, Italy, Germany and France will be among the foreign nations represented in the press box.

Women's Ad Club Changes Name

The Woman's Advertising Club of Los Angeles has changed its name to the Advertising Association of Los Angeles, and has made a number of changes in its constitution and by-laws. Gertrude C. Maynard is president, and Gladys Harvey Knight, secretary.

Sues After Slip on Hotel Floor

Francis J. Powers, assistant sports editor of the Cleveland News, filed suit at Columbus, O., against the Hotel Deshler of Columbus for $5,000 damages. Mr. Powers asserts that he was injured when he fell on a slippery floor in the hotel on Oct. 24, 1925.

Chicago Specials Plan Golf Meet

The Newspaper Representatives' Association of Chicago will hold its annual golf tournament June 17, at the Wilmette Golf Club. John McConnell, president of the association, is a director of the club.

Prints 56-Page Roto Section

The San Antonio Express recently issued a special rotogravure section of 56 pages, tabloid size, depicting Southwest Texas development, celebrating its 61st anniversary.

McCormick Joins Knoxville Sentinel

R. E. McCormick has been made news editor of the Knoxville Sentinel, succeeding W. G. Cayce, resigned. McCormick was formerly managing editor of the Birmingham Age-Herald.

Monitor Issues British Supplement

The Christian Science Monitor on June 1, issued a special 42-page British Industrial Supplement. A special message from Premier Stanley Baldwin opened the British section.

Garland Joins Baltimore Post

Robert Garland, dramatic critic of the Baltimore American for many years, on June 14 will join the staff of the Baltimore Post, Scripps-Howard newspaper.

Arizona Paper Starts New Plant

The Coconino (Ariz.) Sun, Col. Fred Breen, publisher, has commenced the construction of a $25,000 building to house the newspaper.

Oakfield (N. Y.) Independent Resumes

Publication of the Oakfield (N. Y.) Independent was to be resumed by June 9, by a new editor, C. B. Blakley. The newspaper is a weekly.

Automobile registration is your measure of advertising value!

Indiana stands high in automobile registration and increases each year faster than any other state its size.

Practically every home has a car and that is the best measure of buying power.

The people of Indiana can well afford automobiles. They are steady, industrious Americans who spend money carefully, but they have it to spend.

Reach this group of substantial citizens through the daily papers.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican .....(E)	4,912	.03
††Connersville News-Examiner .....(E)	4,681	.025
††Decatur Democrat .....(E)	3,215	.025
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette .....(M)	35,247	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette .....(S)	28,468	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel .....(E)	43,365	.10
Gary Evening Post-Tribune .....(E)	15,514	.06
Huntington Press .....(M&S)	4,079	.025
††Indianapolis News .....(E)	128,341	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier (M) 7,878 (E) 13,583	21,461	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus .....(E)	6,726	.04
Marion Chronicle .....(E)	9,364	.04
†Shelbyville Democrat .....(E)	4,012	.025
South Bend News-Times.. (M) 9,751 (E) 16,603	26,354	.07
South Bend News-Times.....(S)	24,500	.07
South Bend Tribune..(S) 21,431. ..(E)	22,254	.06
††Terre Haute Tribune.....(E&S)	23,442	.06

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

JOSEPH D. MILNE

Former Editor and Part Owner, Fall River News, Dies at 70

Joseph D. Milne, 70, who had been connected with the Fall River Evening News as editor and part owner for approximately 50 years until its sale last week to C. F. Kelly, head of the Kelly-Smith Company, newspaper representatives, New York, died at his home in Fall River, June 8.

He was born in Fall River, Oct. 1, 1845. As a boy he was a carrier for the News, and during school and college vacations worked on the paper. Upon being graduated from Brown University in 1877, he became successively city and managing editor. His father, John C. Milne was one of the founders of the News, which started as a weekly in 1845, and became a daily in 1859. The paper was a father and son concern until the father's retirement in 1913, when Joseph came into half ownership. The other partner was Frank S. Almy.

Joseph Milne was formerly president of the Citizens Savings Bank, a director of the Osborn Mills, Fall River, a director of the Fall River Historical Society and a member of the New England Newspaper Alliance. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Georgie A. Milne, a daughter, Mrs. Roland H. Ballou of Providence, and a son, John C. Milne, New York.

JOHN D. SPRECKELS

Coast Capitalist and Newspaper Owner Dies in San Diego

John D. Spreckels, capitalist with many interests in San Diego and San Francisco, and owner of the San Diego Union and Tribune died in San Diego, June 9. He was at one time owner of the San Francisco Call.

His enterprises included the Western Sugar Refining Company, the Spreckels Sugar Company, the Pajaro Valley and San Diego Electric Railway Companies, the San Diego and Arizona Railway, and banking houses and hotels.

Mr. Spreckels undertook many enterprises intended primarily for public benefit.

Among his benefactions was the financing of a wing of the Mercy Hospital in San Diego that cost more than a quarter of a million dollars. He was also one of those who made possible the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915 and contributed to it an outdoor organ, on which concerts are still given daily.

Music and yachting were Mr. Spreckels' hobbies. He was born in Charleston, S. C., on Aug. 16, 1853, and educated at Oakland College, California, and at the Polytechnic School in Hannover, Germany. He was a son of the late Claus Spreckels, who branched out of the grocery business to lay the foundation for the Spreckels fortune in the sugar industry. The father became a power on the West coast as a pioneer in the sugar trade in California and the Hawaiian Islands.

P. & A. PHOTOGRAPHER KILLED

His Car Turned Turtle Crushing Him and Injuring Others

George A. Phillips, 26, Los Angeles staff photographer for Pacific & Atlantic Photos, was killed, and three other persons injured, in an automobile last week. Phillips was driving a party of aviators and news photographers back to Los Angeles from an assignment in Pasadena, when his car turned over three times and rolled into a ditch. Phillips got out of the wrecked car, walked around it, and then collapsed. He was rushed to Pasadena hospital, where he died. His chest was crushed.

Miss Dele Tack, stenographer for P. &. A. photos, sustained cuts and bruises. Harry Steiger, manager of the Los Angeles P. and A. office, was the only member of the party unmarked by the crash.

Edmund Wisnewski

Edmund Wisnewski, 67, for six years manager of the Public Utility Department of the G. M. Gest & Co., electrical contractors, New York, died at his home in Cincinnati, June 7.

Mr. Wisnewski's first job was that of a clerk in the business department of the Cincinnati Enquirer. He later became business manager of the Enquirer.

PIONEER PRESSMAN DEAD

Terence Gavin of Boston Helped Print Bull Run Extra

Terence Gavin, pioneer Boston pressman and for more than 50 years employed in that trade, and the printer who gave Boston news of the first battle of Bull Run in the first Sunday edition of the Boston Herald, died last week at his home in Medford, Mass., aged 88. He retired from active work in 1909.

During the Civil war days it was necessary to post a guard over the Boston Herald pressroom on Sundays to keep out inebriated idlers, a watchman being chosen from among the printers. On the critical Saturday night when the news of the Union rout at Bull Run reached Boston, Gavin was on watch over the pressroom. Early Sunday morning he was startled by a vicious rattling of the grill work outside the pressroom, and upon investigating found Managing Editor Bailey with news of the battle. Gavin was dispatched to roundup some printers to get out an extra. Going into Newspaper Row he soon recruited two compositors and two pressmen, of the Herald staff. Gavin supervised the men as they worked through the early morning hours of Sunday. They printed a four-page edition on the old hand-feed Bullock press. Gavin fed the upper right sheet. At 10 o'clock Sunday morning the paper was out on the street giving Bostonians news of the battle.

J. ROWLAND MIX

Head of Advertising Agency Dies at 70 Years After Brief Illness

J. Rowland Mix, head of the J. Rowland Mix Advertising Agency, New York, died Monday after a short illness at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. H. Blight, 38 Ridgeview avenue, White Plains, N. Y.

Mr. Mix was born 70 years ago in Atwater, O., and was educated in private schools in Wilton, Conn. Formerly he made his home in Orange, N. J., but for the last 25 years had lived in New York. For many years he was business manager of Scribner's Magazine. He was a member of the Lotos Club, St. Andrew's Golf Club and of Hope Lodge F. and A. M.

Martin J. Walsh Dead

Martin J. Walsh, fifty, financial reporter, for more than twenty years engaged in newspaper work in New York died June 4, following a stroke of apoplexy. He came to New York from Albany in 1905 and began work for the New York City News Association. Five years later he was assigned to "cover" Wall Street and the financial district for the news association. In July, 1918, he resigned to go with the New York News Bureau. He was especially well informed on the petroleum industry and was at the head of the petroleum news department of the bureau at the time of his death.

Obituary

T. M. PRYCE, 22, son of W. M. Pryce, managing editor of the Orlando (Fla.) Morning Sentinel, died at Albuquerque, N. M., May 31.

EDWARD B. PATRICK, 61, former publisher of the El Campo (Tex.) Record-News, died recently at El Campo.

THOMAS MOGAN who had worked in the composing room of the Boston Herald-Traveler for the past 25 years died recently on his way to work.

FREDERICK P. RHELL, 46, news writer on labor subjects, died at his home in Brookline, Mass., after a short illness. Rhell was at one time labor editor on the old Boston (Mass.) Record.

J. C. JONES, 65, newspaper broker, died recently at his home in Dallas. He formerly was in the newspaper business at Sulphur Springs and at Eagle Pass, Tex. Four daughters and two sons survive him.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD, 70, formerly an editorial writer on New York dailies, died at his home in Worcester, Mass., last week.

ALFRED PHINNEY, long connected with the mechanical staff, Boston Transcript, died recently at his home in Boston.

LEWIS MCLAUGHLIN, 62, editor and publisher for 40 years, died in Stafford Springs, Conn., June 4. He was editor and owner of the Stafford Press, weekly, until two years ago, when he resigned as editor to become business manager.

JAMES A. HENDERSON, 55, a member of the reference room staff, Boston (Mass.) Herald-Traveler, for the past 11 years, died suddenly at the home of his brother-in-law at Wells Beach, Me., last week.

HENRY J. HOLMES, 74, who died May 26, in Long Beach, Cal., was a retired newspaper publisher of Glenwood Springs, Colo., and resided there until six months ago.

WILLIAM T. CUTSHALL, 83, former editor and owner of the Leetonia (Ohio) Reporter, died at East Liverpool, Ohio, June 2. His widow and one daughter survive.

JAMES A. LANE, '66, former Urbana, Ill., newspaperman and for many years in Chicago and with downstate publications, died suddenly May 30, in Urbana. He was best known for his connection with the Urbana Courier and Rossville Press.

JAMES B. MILLER, veteran Salt Lake City newspaperman and for several years past music and dramatic critic for the Tribune, died in Salt Lake City.

Use the
COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.
Member A. B. C.
URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

How to Get More Circulation
1. Make a good newspaper.
2. Sell it in a business-like manner.
An old formula, but still the best. With my staff of clean, aggressive salesmen I can get you all the circulation you want and with a good product which I can also help you make, you will hold the new business.
No contests, no tricks—just selling.
Let me show you what I have done for other papers and what I can do for you. Write or wire.
F. J. Marks Circulation Service
2524 E. 73d Street, Cleveland, O.

587 NATIONAL ACCOUNTS
out of a total of 607
—selected The Miami Herald as the medium through which to cover the Miami Trading Zone, during the first quarter of 1926.
334 National Accounts
—appeared exclusively in The Herald.
The twenty accounts not in The Herald were mostly business refused for ethical reasons.

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.
PHILADELPHIA
Producers of
SPARTAN TYPE METAL
Since 1866
LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE
COMBINATION
Stocks in Principal Cities

We shall be pleased to see any newspaper man during the Philadelphia Convention and to talk over with him his classified advertising problems
THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

creating Impression!
nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.
The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it
J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, 360 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Paint and Varnish Manufacturers Spent $2,500,000 for Advertising in 1925—Life Savers Records 16 Per Cent Increase in Net Income—New Brunswick to Advertise

PAINT and varnish manufacturers of the United States spent more than $2,500,000 in various forms of advertising during 1925, according to a report submitted by L. W. Batten, Jr., of the F. J. Ross Company, New York, at the annual Paint and Varnish Advertising Managers' Conference held in Philadelphia Tuesday of this week.

Five classes of advertisers listed by Mr. Batten were: those firms which devote to advertising a sum of less than $10,000, those spending between $10,000 and $25,000, those spending between $25,000 and $50,000, those spending between $50,000 and $100,000, and the final group of those whose advertising runs over $100,000 for the year.

How the various classes of advertisers spent their budgets was shown by Mr. Batten in the following table:

PAINT & VARNISH ADVERTISING EXPENDITURE—1925

Classification	General Average	Less Than $10,000	$10,000 to $25,000	$25,000 to $50,000	$50,000 to $100,000	Over $100,000
General advertising	20	7	6	11	35	40
Newspaper advertising	16	13	20	22	6	18
Outdoor advertising	4	7	4	4	2	1
Sales and advertising helps	35	41	41	40	35	20
Direct mail	18	28	21	13	19	10
Advertising to painters and dealers	6	4	6	9	1	11
Miscellaneous	1	..	2	1	2	..
Total	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%

The data was compiled by the questionnaire method.

Life Savers, Inc., of Port Chester, N. Y., which has been a large newspaper advertiser, recently reported a 16 per cent net gain in income for the first quarter of 1926, as compared with 1925. The net income for this period of 1926 was $300,698 as against $258,000 for 1925. The company will spend about $1,500,000 this year on advertising and sales development, it was stated.

Percy O'Gorman, assistant advertising manager of the Durham-Duplex Razor Company, Jersey City, N. J., has been appointed advertising manager.

A new monthly record was established by the National Cash Register Company, Dayton, when sales of $4,500,000 were recorded in May.

Littleford Brothers, Cincinnati, plate and sheet steel construction, have appointed A. G. Schuette advertising manager, succeeding Herman H. Streitman, resigned.

The New Brunswick Tourist Association, St. John, N. B., has announced it will shortly start an advertising campaign in United States newspapers. A. McKim, Ltd., Montreal advertising agency will direct the account.

Duesenberg Motor Company, Indianapolis, has appointed Douglas Andrews sales manager.

FOUR REGIONAL A. P. MEETS

New York, Michigan, New England and Pennsylvania Groups to Convene

Four regional Associated Press meetings are scheduled for the latter part of this month.

The New York members of the A. P. will meet at Ithaca the night of June 16, coincident with the convention of the New York State Publishers' Association, which holds sessions, June 16-17. Kent Cooper, general manager, will be a speaker.

The Michigan group, of which James Gray, editor of the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram is chairman, will meet at Adrian, June 19-20. Members will be guests of Stuart H. Perry, publisher of the Telegram, and A. P. director.

The New England group will convene at the Copley Plaza, Boston, June 25, to elect officers and name a New England member to the Eastern Advisory Board of the A. P.

Pennsylvania A. P. members have set June 28, as the tentative date for their meeting at State College, Pa.

Yost Given Honorary Degree

Casper Yost, editor of the editorial page, St. Louis Globe Democrat, was given an honorary LL.D. degree by Lincoln Memorial University at commencement exercises held at Harrogate, Tenn., near Knoxville. Mr. Yost delivered an address at the institution on "The Heritage of the Mountains." John Hays Hammond, noted mining engineer, conferred degrees and diplomas.

McEvoy to Cover Magee Trial

W. J. McEvoy, of the Washington bureau of the United Press, has left Washington for Las Vegas, N. M., to cover the trial of Carl Magee, editor of the Albuquerque State Tribune, charged with manslaughter. The trial is scheduled to start June 14.

FLASHES

The wages of sin is death, plus whatever the story will bring.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

The modern home is supplied with everything except the family.—Buffalo Post.

The insurrection in Poland means added eyestrain for the poor proofreaders.—J. R. Wolf in Milwaukee Journal.

A specialist is one who has his patients trained to become ill only in his office hours. A general practitioner is likely to be called off the golf course at any time.—Kansas City Star.

The Texas family averages 4.9 persons, and Papa knows who that nine-tenths is.—Dallas News.

Dress runs to latitude rather than longitude.—Wall street Journal.

The average man's life is now divided between worry over two tubes, radio and inner.—New York American.

Professor Hrdlicka is going on a scientific search expedition in Alaska. Here's hoping he finds his missing vowel.—Boston Transcript.

Well; when people were more easily shocked they were also more easily fooled.—Edmonton Bulletin.

The town of Teller needn't feel so bad about the publicity it didn't get. What was the name of that Montana town that staged the big fight a few years ago?—F. P. A. in New York World.

You never know just what a nation is fighting for until it wins and you observe what it takes.—New York Telegram.

ROOM 105
BELLEVUE STRATFORD HOTEL
PHILADELPHIA

Here

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

will hold forth

During the

Associated Advertising Clubs

of the World Convention

June 20 to 24

MAKE OUR HEADQUARTERS
YOUR HEADQUARTERS

Help Yourself to
Our Hospitality

—our time

—our stationery

—our stenographic service

—our information service

—our cigars

Let us meet you and greet you often!

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
1884 The Oldest Published and Advertising Journal in America 1926
SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY

NEARLY 100 OCEAN LINERS RECEIVING WORLD NEWS DAILY VIA RADIO

17 Atlantic Passenger Lines Being Served by Chicago Tribune Through N. Y. Correspondent—27 Ships Printing Daily Papers—Headlines and Make-up Radioed

ALMOST 100 ocean passenger ships in the trans-atlantic service are now being served with world and domestic news by the Chicago Tribune, it was announced in New York this week by Perley Boone, who is editor of the Chicago Tribune Ocean Times in addition to being the eastern editorial correspondent of the Chicago paper and American representative of its Paris edition.

In disclosing the extent of ocean news Mr. Boone sa.d:

"This development in the dissemination of news has been occurring quietly for the last three years, and has now reached the proportions of a large international service.

"The particular aim of the Chicago Tribune in supplying news to ships was to provide American news for American travelers, but the growth of the service to embrace a number of steamship lines flying foreign flags has enlarged the scope of the enterprise. The nightly news report for ships, therefore, is now being made up to contain an impartial digest of the world's news, together with concise stories on American domestic, political and governmental happenings, sporting news, and New York stock market prices.

"Originally, the Chicago Tribune sent its news summary only to ships of the United States Lines, but now 17 Atlantic companies are subscribers, along with two private yacht owners, W. K. Vanderbilt and Richard Howe.

"While the ocean news service has been growing, the Chicago Tribune has also been extending its publication of miniature newspapers on ships in the Atlantic service. Some three years ago a paper was printed and distributed on the United States Lines, but last year the White Star, Red Star, Royal Mail, and Atlantic Transport were taken into the enterprise with the result that the Chicago Tribune Ocean Times is served daily to passengers on 27 ocean liners during their voyages to and from Europe. A total of 65 other ships are subscribers to the news service, and use it in getting out their own newspapers for their passengers.

"One interesting feature of the ocean news dispatch as radioed nightly through a traffic arrangement with the Radio Corporation of America, is found in the fact that pre-prepared headlines are sent out as well as the text of various news items.

"The New York correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who edits this service, selects four or five leading news stories of the night, 'makes up' an imaginary page 1, and radios the stories in the order of their importance, accompanied by display headlines.

"The radio operators on ships receive the news according to a standard formula and turn it over to the printers aboard ship. The type is then set—some of the ships have linotype machines and others set by hand—and the wireless news is then printed on blank pages left in predated newspapers of 8 to 20 pages. through this system, the printer aboard ship is given his news dispatch already edited and 'made up,' and when the passenger gets his paper at breakfast or lunch he has a complete, although miniature, metropolitan newspaper, edited on land, wirelessed out to sea, and with the wireless news section printed at sea.

"Through this dual enterprise, the Chicago Tribune is furnishing both news and a newspaper to passengers on five steamship lines, and is supplying news to ships of a dozen additional lines. The ships which get the newspaper are supplied with typical American reading and advertising matter, cartoons, pictures and features, prepared and printed in advance in addition to the wireless news fresh each day. The lines now being served with the Chicago Tribune Ocean Times follow:

"White Star Line, Red Star Line, United States Line, Royal Mail Line, Atlantic Transport, Cunard Line, French Line, United American Lines, Anchor Line, Norwegian American Lines, Swedish American Line, North German Lloyd, Pacific Steam Navigation Company, Furness Bermuda Line, Lloyd Sa-Baudo Line, Navigazione Generale Italiana Line, Lamport & Holt.

"The Radio Corporation of America, in transmitting the news to ships at sea, uses 200 kilowatt power and sends on 13,500 wave length through WRQ at Marion, Mass. W. A. Winterbottom, traffic manager of the Radio Corporation, has directed the development and improvement of the transmission. Static and other interference is overcome, so that no traveler on the Atlantic ocean need now be without his morning newspaper and his summary of the worlds news."

Two Tulsa Reporters Honored

George L. Watkins and William N. Randolph, reporters for the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, were recently inducted into important official positions. Watkins, Federal building man, was elected city water commissioner, while Randolph, courthouse man, was appointed a judge of the common pleas court by Governor Trapp of Oklahoma.

Randolph is a law school graduate and has been assistant county and assistant city attorney. He joined the Tribune six years ago to study city affairs before continuing in law.

A. A. C. W. Program Broadcast

All the details of the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, to be held in Philadelphia June 19-24, 1926, have been broadcast from radio station WLIT, Lit Brothers, Philadelphia, in a series of talks which started May 12.

News Staff Broadcasts Radio Program

Employes of the Birmingham Age-Herald broadcast their own radio program on the night of June 2, from the Age-Herald's broadcasting station WBRC. Motion pictures of the various members of the News staff "doing their stuff" were made and were used at one of the local theaters, giving the public an opportunity to see the entertainers in action. The program included musical numbers and stories by members of the staff.

N. C. DAILY TO BUILD NEW 4-STORY PLANT

Winston-Salem Journal Building to Be of Colonial Design — New Octuple Press to Be Installed

What is said to be the largest single order for a printing press ever placed by a newspaper in the Carolinas, was that given last week by the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal to Walter Scott & Co., of Plainfield, N. J., for an Octuple press of the modern unit type. The press will be installed about the first of January in a new building to be erected on the site recently acquired by Owen Moon, publisher.

Plans and specifications for the new building are now being completed by Harold Macklin, local architect; with Lockwood & Greene of Charlotte and New York, associates; Ruebsam & Stevens of Washington, structural engineers; and Wiley and Wilson of Lynchburg, Va., mechanical engineers.

The building will be of Colonial design, in harmony with the Colonial architecture of Salem and the early buildings of the old Moravian settlement. The front elevation will have something of the style and character of the famous Congress Hall of Philadelphia and over the main entrance will be reproduced in smaller size the beautiful Palladian window from the south side of Independence Hall.

Plans call for a four-story building of brick and fire-proof construction with a 90 foot front and a depth of 75 feet. Provision has been made for future expansion to a depth of 200 feet as conditions require.

The plot of ground purchased some months ago by Mr. Moon for the Journal building embraces the property at the corner of Fourth and Marshall street with an ell extension through to Spruce street. The new Journal building will be erected on Marshall street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, important east and west thoroughfares of the city.

It is expected that work will be started on the new building within the next few weeks and that it will be completed for occupancy shortly after the first of the year.

The Winston-Salem Journal was acquired by Mr. Moon last summer. The paper carries Associated Press service.

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN

NEW YORK EVENING GRAPHIC

H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO — CLINE SYSTEM — QUALITY MARK SERVICE PLUS — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by

Cincinnati Enquirer

Cincinnati, Ohio

Ask them about it.

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

Regional Advertising
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor

An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL and PACIFIC Editions

Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request

ADVERTISING OFFICES

Boston	New York	Kansas City
Philadelphia	London	San Francisco
Chicago	Paris	Los Angeles
Cleveland	Florence	Seattle
Detroit		Portland

"Buy What You Can Use"

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42nd Street New York

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

DOMINANT!
in Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News

ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall

America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest
Growing Newspaper

To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS

The only paper in St. Petersburg, Florida, whose application has been accepted by Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?

The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.

If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.

NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Offers Aid to Editors

To Editor & Publisher:

Please accept our sincere appreciation of the story on the Koch Cancer Foundation. It is excellently presented, and will be of great service to the newspapers of the country. We will, of course, be glad to send our material to you from time to time.

In these times when free publicity is being exploited to the utmost, both by good and evil causes, it is well for the newspapers to have a guide in separating the true from the false in medical matters. The headquarters office of the American Medical Association will be glad at any time to answer telegrams from any newspaper as to authenticity of publicity in medical matters.

Morris Fishbein,
Editor, The Journal of the American Medical Association,
535 North Dearborn St., Chicago.

Alleged Cancer "Cures"

To Editor & Publisher: You must have received many letters of congratulations on your article, in the issue of May 29th, on the subject of "cures" for cancer, and I would like to add my few words of praise for the work you are doing.

It is not easy for the average man to realize how eagerly the victims of this disease grasp at every straw that floats before them and their mental despair is such that they fall easy victims to exploiters.

The newspaper industry should be very grateful to you for your stand in this matter and it is to be hoped that both the editorial and business sides of newspapers throughout Canada and the United States will take immediate steps to cooperate.

A. L. Dawe,
Canadian Export Paper Company, Ltd.

Denies Polish Story

To Editor & Publisher:

I read with great interest the article entitled "Beating the News Censor at His Own Game" in the May 29 issue of the Editor & Publisher. The trouble with the article is that most of the correspondents have not been beating the news concerning foreign affairs in the various countries of Europe. For example:

You cite the case of Wilbur Forrest, correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, who is alleged to have beaten the Polish censors with a dispatch from Warsaw, via Berlin. Mr. Forrest not only has beaten the Polish censors, but he has beaten the American readers, by sending an absolutely false account concerning the affairs in Poland. The alleged facts in Mr. Forrest's dispatch are to-day known to have been nothing more than an inspired propaganda against Poland by the enemies of Poland and deliberately false. Presenting false news is not "beating" anybody except the readers. Anyone could have manufactured such a correspondence without troubling himself with a trip to Berlin to accomplish it. It could have been done in New York just as well. Watching the affairs in the countries of Europe, I note that the greater percentage of special dispatches "gotten up somehow" are equally as untruthful. To the editors of the foreign papers here most of this exclusive "stuff" from Europe is largely "bunk."

J. C. Ruszkiewicz,
Buffalo (N. Y.) Polish Everybody's Daily.

Not a Sectarian Paper

Cranston, R. I.

To Editor & Publisher: In the current issue of Editor & Publisher there appears a news item headed "Comstock Leases Cranston News." Knowing that you want the facts, I am taking this opportunity as owner of the Cranston News to correct a misstatement which we know is so easy to creep in to any publication.

On the walls of my office I have a picture of the late President Harding, under which is printed "The Star Office Creed." I have added to the last paragraph, "Employees of the Cranston News are expected to follow the advice given by President Harding to the employees of the Marion Star." Before leasing the News we had a little difference of opinion between one of the editorial writers and the publisher's office, concerning some of the paragraphs contained in the Creed. Perhaps the removal of one of these men from our staff led him to circulate the story that the News "has been a sectarian paper."

Since its establishment in 1922, the News has been independent both politically and in a religious sense. Being a home paper, and this city having twenty churches of various denominations in it, we have encouraged the publication of church news. No particular denomination has been favored above another. All have been given an equal opportunity. When told to "Treat all religious matters reverently" as ordered by President Harding for his men on the Star, one of our men became a little unruly. The issue at stake contained a Christian Science lecture. Newspapers all over the country occasionally print these lectures. The Morning Telegraph of New York City prints them many times during the year, and yet no one would call the Morning Telegraph a sectarian publication.

In the lease which Mr. Martin and I have signed there is a clause which continues the same non-partisan independent policies which the News has pursued since I established it.

Regarding my travels, your article is somewhat at fault. My trip to the West will be as an official to the N. E. A. Convention in Los Angeles, held the first of next month. Next winter, if all goes well, I hope to motor to Florida, where as Vice-President for Rhode Island for the International Press Foundation I hope to be helpful in furthering the plans of this rather visionary project, so that Rhode Island will be in the forefront when practical steps are taken for the building of Press City.

I would appreciate very much if you could print a correction in a coming issue of Editor & Publisher.

Jonathan F. Comstock.

Japanese Trade Papers

To Editor & Publisher:

I have enjoyed reading your short but very interesting article in your journal of the recent issue about Japanese Journal for Newspapermen.

However, I fear, it is somewhat misleading. By that I do not mean you misled your readers purposely. I surmise, rather, you were misled by someone and it reflected in the article.

The plain fact is that there are a number of journals for newspapermen in Japan, and most of them have a history back of them.

The Journal I am connected with is called "Shimbun No Nippon," and in the fifth year of its existence. We publish a monthly magazine and daily report in the form of leaflet dealing with journalism and advertising, and we are enjoying the firm confidence of our subscribers and general public.

Of course, we do not care if "Journal of Scientific Journalism" claims to be the first and only publication of its kind in Japan. But it may hurt the reputation of your valuable and esteemed journal unless the truth is told.

So far as the publication of the Journal by Mr. Hideo Ono is concerned, it is correct. But it is not the first and only publication of its kind in Japan. However, we do welcome the infant and wish Mr. Ono's success as much as or perhaps more than anyone else.

The Shimbun No Nippon Sha,
K. Obara.
Chief Editor.

PRESS AGENTS ELECT

Walter K. Hill Made President of Theatrical Organization

Walter K. Hill was elected president of the Theatrical Press Representatives of America at a recent meeting held at the Burlesque Club, New York. He succeeds Wells Hawks.

Charles Emerson Cook and May Dowling were elected vice presidents. Other officers chosen were George A. Kingsbury, traveling vice president; Harry J. Riddings, Chicago, vice president; Mark Wilson, Philadelphia, vice president; John W. Luce, Boston, vice president; Bert Lang, Canada, vice president; Helen Hoerle, recording secretary; Francis E. Reid, corresponding secretary, and S. M. Weller, treasurer.

The following were elected members of the Board of Governors: S. I. Connor, Willard D. Coxey, Campbell Casad, Dixie Hines, Willard Holcomb, Beulah Livingston, John L. Peltret and A. P. Waxman.

The organization has three hundred and fifty members.

Finnish Paper Suspends

The North Star, a Finnish four-times-a-week newspaper, which has been published in Fitchburg, Mass., since 1901, has suspended publication. Arrangements have been made to merge the businesses of the North Star Publishing Company and the Finnish Socialistic Publishing Company, with offices at 48 Wallace avenue. The latter publishes a daily, Raivaaja, and a monthly.

ALABAMANS ELECT STANLEY

Greenville Advocate Publisher Named President at Auburn

F. Webb Stanley, of the Greenville (Ala.) Advocate, was elected president of the Alabama Press Association at the closing session of the annual meeting, Friday, June 5, in Auburn. Stanley's father, Gen. J. B. Stanley, was president of the association twenty-five years ago.

R. B. Vail, of the Baldwin Times, was elected vice-president; Horace Hall, of the Dothan Eagle, secretary-treasurer; P. O. Davis, Auburn publications, reporter; John C. Williams, Talladega Daily Home, historian; Mrs. C. W. Thomas, of Citronelle Call, poet; Forney G. Stephens, Southern Democrat, Cneonta, editor of the editors' own journal, Alapressa, and N. C. Cady, of the Western Newspaper Union, business manager of the latter.

Talladega was selected as the place for the 1927 session.

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.

It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42d St., New York City

in Detroit—

Free Press city circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

THE DETROIT "FREE PRESS"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

MICHIGAN
and the
BOOTH NEWSPAPERS

THE LEADING NEWSPAPER IN GRAND RAPIDS—THE ONLY DAILY IN SEVEN OTHER CITIES

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN, 50 East 42nd St., New York City
J. E. LUTZ, Tower Building, Chicago, Ill.

EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 5,015 Daily Average Circulation

Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending March 31, 1925, 177,298 Daily. Six Months Ending March 31, 1926, 182,313 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 5,015.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
John H. Lederer, 910 Hearst Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration

The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.

will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 Daily World — Evening World readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

The DES MOINES CAPITAL

Completely covers Des Moines' entire trade territory for you at a rate of 14c per line.

It is the best Advertising buy in the midwest

O'Mara & Ormsbee
Special Representatives

The DES MOINES CAPITAL
Lafayette Young
Publisher

NEW TRADE COMMISSION DIVISION TO HANDLE AD MISREPRESENTATION

Complaints of Misleading Terms and Labels to Be Considered by New Trade Practice Conference Which Will Seek to Eliminate Unfair Practices

By BART CAMPBELL

(Washington Correspondent, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

OF special interest to advertisers and advertising agencies is the reorganization the Federal Trade Commission has begun of its method of procedure in dealing with business, trade or other concerns against which allegations of unfair or unlawful practices are registered.

Following up new steps taken by it to eliminate the use of misleading advertising matter, brands or labels, and corporate or trade names, the Commission has just established a new division to be known as the Division of Trade Practice Conference.

The new division will take over the trade conference work which has heretofore been scattered among several divisions. A number of successful conferences have been held in the creamery, furniture, knit goods, typewriter, oil, jewelry, music, book, printing and cotton industries. A pamphlet covering these conferences is being issued for general distribution.

The Commission's statement follows:

"These conferences, which are get-together meetings, may be called by the Commission upon its own initiative or by a representative group in any industry. The Commission has found that it not infrequently happens, particularly in highly competitive lines of business, that unfair methods of competition once started have spread rapidly and become generally practiced, and that a situation of this kind can be best handled by a conference rather than by proceeding against individual concerns.

"The trade practice conference procedure provides an expeditious and economical means of eliminating such unfair methods which may prevail in an industry since the industry, under the direction of the Commission assembles and there defines, and on a given date voluntarily and simultaneously abandons the use of such method, thereby putting all competitors on an equal footing. This method also saves the cost of many trials; induces moral support and actual assistance from the industry in the enforcement of the rules adopted; and accomplishes at a minimum of cost and time, one of the chief purposes for which the Commission was created. This extension of the methods of handling trade practices is in accordance with the new policies adopted by the majority of the Commission to adjust and correct trade practices by conferences and agreements rather than by formal complaints wherever it can be done and the interest of the public protected. It is the opinion of the majority that by these methods more cases can be handled more expeditiously and economically rather than by formal complaints in all cases.

"When a trade practice conference is decided upon, a preliminary inquiry is made, the result of which serves as a basis for determination by the Director whether the practices or methods used are unfair to competitors or are against the public interest, and whether the interest of the public is best served by proceeding against individual offenders or by calling a trade practice conference. The Commission is then advised through this division as to the facts and the law, accompanied by a recommendation as to action to be taken with reference thereto. If the Commission determines on a trade practice conference, the industry is assembled at a place and time specified, and when the industry has adopted its rules a full report of the Conference, showing those present, the portion of the total industry which they represent, and other essential data is presented to the Commission by the Division of Trade Practice Conferences and if adopted or sanctioned by the Commission, the action of the industry becomes the rule of business conduct for the industry on the subject covered.

"The findings by an industry condemning a given business practice is available to the Commission for use as evidence in any proceeding directed to an individual member of the industry who fails or refuses to abide by the rules of conduct laid down by the industry, and who indulges in practices condemned by the industry and by the Commission as unfair. The new division will also furnish a means whereby an agreement once entered into may be kept in effect and better attention given to violations."

Continuing its new policy of releasing for publication from time to time statements of rulings where the practice complained of and found to be unlawful has been discontinued by stipulation and without the issuance of formal complaint, the Commission has just made public two additional stipulations involving the use of misleading advertising matter, misleading brands or labels, and misleading corporate or trade names.

One concerned a firm engaged in the business of printing stationery products by special process simulating engraved printing. The firm in their advertisements designated the process as "engraved without plates" and "relief engraving."

The respondents agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "engraved" or "engraving" either independently or in conjunction each with the other, or in connection or conjunction with the word "relief" in defining or describing their products.

The second firm, a corporation engaged in the sale of hosiery, used the words "linen-silk" in advertisements, when no linen was contained in the products, as well as the word "fashioned" when the hosiery was not fashioned by the trade method.

The firm agreed to cease using these terms in selling its products.

BILLIONS THE TAX COLLECTOR DOESN'T TOUCH

(Continued from page 4)

tained dealer co-operation in connection with their general magazine advertising by paying part of the space which their dealers use in newspapers. The Stromberg-Carlson Company, although it has had a tremendous amount of dealer advertising co-operation, has not paid any part of its dealers' advertising expenses.

"As an organization the Stromberg-Carlson Company is very much pleased with its newspaper advertising experience. The newspaper men in various parts of the country have come forward and co-operated in a most energetic manner with our salesmen. Such co-operation has been a wonderful help to us in carrying out our advertising program."

Advertisers who have reckoned with these new buying conditions understand fully the advantages referred to above of the "timeliness" and the elasticity of newspaper advertising. Not only is it advisable today in national merchandising to find the right markets, but it is equally important to reach these markets at the time when people can buy. The increased buying power of the wage earner is obvious, but it must also be borne in mind that his ability to buy products outside of necessities depends upon the health of the industry that employs him.

During an industrial depression in any section, clothing is worn longer, cheaper foods are eaten, the buying of comforts and semi-luxuries is postponed and many economies are practiced. In such circumstances markets that might otherwise attract the advertiser are avoided pending a resumption of normal conditions. Professor Berridge makes this significant comment in his essay, "An Index of the Incomes of Factory Workers in the United States" (published by A. W. Shaw Co.).

"The fact that a period of 'falling market' witnesses slow sales in many lines of consumer goods is due not so much to the psychological fact that many consumers are desirous of awaiting still more favorable terms before purchasing, as to the physical fact that they are very much less able to purchase at such a time owing to severe curtailment of income through unemployment and part time employment, accentuated presently by cuts in wage rates."

There are few periods, however, when all industries and all sections are depressed and so the manufacturer whose advertising program is elastic cultivates the "good ground" and keeps out of unpromising fields. He does not "advertise to the map." He advertises to the market through the medium that best covers the market—the newspaper.

Only One Paper Really Covers Akron District!

National advertisers should bear in mind that the economical way of reaching the great Akron district, rubber center of the world, is through the one DOMINANT newspaper in this district, the

Akron Beacon Journal

Leading Other Northern Ohio Newspapers by Many Thousands in Circulation in this District—Second in Ohio of Six Day Evening Newspapers in 1925 Linage.

DAILY AVERAGE CIRCULATION FOR SIX MONTHS
51,973—GAIN of 4,647 OVER PREVIOUS SIX MONTHS

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

There Are No Other Newspapers Covering South Jersey Completely
From the Standpoint of the National Advertiser
CAMDEN COURIER
The MORNING POST
60,000 Circulation
Combination Rate
National Representatives:
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

features SINCE 1899
WEEKLY
Camera News, Fashion, Feature and Children's Pages; House Plans; Automobile Cartoon.
3-A-WEEK
Hints for the Motorist; Handicraft in the Home.
DAILY
Cross-word Puzzles, Dots and Cut-outs; Radio; Noozie; Fashion hints; 1 col. Comics; Portraits; Gillilan's Letters; News-Maps, also The Ad-route (house organ).
The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market
For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.
NEW YORK JOURNAL
America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

For the First Three Months of 1926
THE TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE
printed 7,355,276 lines of Advertising, and thus moved up from twelfth to SIXTH place among the newspapers of the United States.
The only newspapers printing a greater volume of advertising during that period than The Tribune were the Miami Herald, the St. Petersburg Times, the Detroit News, the Chicago Tribune and the New York Times.
The Tribune covers the rich South Florida territory of 24 counties and 190 cities and towns, with a population of 713,943.
That's Why Its Advertising Volume Grows
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency,
National Representatives.

first! in OHIO
9,561,237 Lines
Dispatch advertising record for the first five months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,378,109 lines. In 1925 the Dispatch published 21,544,376 lines, exceeding second largest Ohio newspaper by 2,648,383 lines.
NET PAID CIRCULATION
CITY 55,812
SUBURBAN 26,973
COUNTRY 23,666
Total Daily Circulation....106,451
Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

FROM the Chicago Daily News comes "World Chancelleries" by Edward Price Bell, Dean of the foreign staff of that paper. The introduction is contributed by Calvin Coolidge. The dedication is to Victor Fremont Lawson, "Builder, Owner, and Editor-in-Chief of the Chicago Daily News, whose understanding and sympathy transcended religious, national, ethnic, and geographic boundaries."

The book is for the most part a collection of interviews of such famous occidental and oriental statesmen as Judge Wilhelm Marx, Post-War Chancellor of Germany; Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, Raymond Poincaré, the former president of France and great post-war Premier; Ramsay MacDonald, former Premier of Great Britain; Edgar Addison Bancroft, late American Ambassador to Japan; Premier Takaki Kato of Japan, Foreign Minister Baron K. Shidehara of Japan, Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Philippine Senate; Governor-General Leonard Wood, Dr. Tang Shao-Yi, China's former Minister for Foreign Affairs and Prime Minister; and last but not least to use a trite expression, Calvin Coolidge.

Mr. Bell himself furnishes an excellent explanatory article which tells of the genesis and purpose of the remarkable symposium found in his volume.

Not often does the President of the United States review a book—even for such a great newspaper as the Chicago Daily News. But his introduction is really a critical comment of the contents. Such big topics as are discussed in this volume need a big reviewer. Let "Cal" do it through quotations:

> In these carefully wrought statements of sentiment and opinions we have, I conceive, a peculiarly suggestive and important achievement in the field of international conciliation.
>
> It is the distinctive virtue of these discussions, in my view, that they tend to give us such an international mind. One feels their earnestness, their sympathetic quality, their sincerity. One is moved by their eloquence. Almost every major principles and problem of civilized life fall within their range, and their outlook consistently is that of the common interests of mankind. If racial susceptibilities and nationalistic standpoints are urged with vividness and candor, they thus are urged, as I read them, only in the hope that the world, by gaining fuller knowledge of its parts, may be less ignorant of itself as a whole.

A press tradition at Washington reminds one that the President is not to be interviewed. How Bell turned the trick may be seen by those who turn to page 81 and the pages that immediately follow. Opposite page 89 is a facsimile letter from the "official spokesman" of the White House that puts an O. K. on the interview.

Newspaper critics bemoan the passing of the campaign in present day journalism. It would be interesting to have these critics mention some campaign that surpasses in achievement or renders a greater service to the public than printing such interviews as are found in this volume.

DR. JUAN JOSE TABLADA of the editorial staff of El Universal of Mexico City opens The Journalism Bulletin for June with an article on newspaper ethics. This feature has added interest because it presents a subject from a Spanish-American point of view. James C. Latimer, field secretary of the Press Congress of the World, outlines the plans for the aproaching congress to be held in Geneva and Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 14-18. Willard Grosvenor Bleyer of the University of Wisconsin tells about the press in international relations. John O. Simmons who heads the Department of Journalism at Syracuse University points out the benefits of a course or two in journalism for college students who may after graduation enter other fields.

* * *

THE Macmillan Company will bring out very soon "The Duffer's Handbook of Golf" by Grantland Rice who in addition to his newspaper work edits the American Golfer. It will be illustrated with some 75 odd cartoons by Clare Briggs of the New York Herald Tribune. The work that Briggs has done on that newspaper in painting the portraits of Dufferdom and in portraying the soul of golf as it is played by the millions makes him a good running mate for Grantland in the production of an all-around golf book that promises to be different.

* * *

REPORTERS who want a helpful book on style should not overlook "Narrative, Structure and Style" (D. Appleton Company) by Theodore Goodman. This volume should be especially helpful to reporters who want to break into the short story game.

* * *

NEWSPAPER men who attended the first Pan American Congress held in Washington in April will be glad to know that the addresses by John L. Merrill, president of the All American Cables, Inc., and by Severo Mallet-Prevost, president of the Pan American Society of the United States, have been published in pamphlet form. A copy may be obtained upon application to John L. Merrill, 89 Broad street, New York City.

* * *

WHEN the first number of the Japanese sister of EDITOR & PUBLISHER appeared it was mentioned in this department. The second number has just reached my desk. The title of the publication translated into English is Journal for the Scientific Study of Journalism. It is edited by H. Ono of Tokyo, Japan.

The second issue contains articles dealing with the common interest in news, the professional education of the journalist, the success of the illustrated daily paper, the American Sunday newspaper the American local paper, and the anti-fascistic newspaper in Paris. P. S.—The articles are in Japanese.

* * *

IN the June issue of The Little Times—the house organ of the New York Times—may be found an interesting story about the drama in covering Polar news.

The June issue prints the following announcement about the seventy-fifth anniversary number to be issued on Sept. 19:

> A special rotogravure tabloid section of industrial and historical interest commemorating the 75th anniversary of the New York Times will be published as a part of the Sunday edition of the Times on September 19, 1926.
>
> Advertising for that section will be restricted to firms that have been in business 75 years or more.

* * *

BURGESS JOHNSON who was my immediate predecessor as editor of Judge has compiled "Vocational Opportunities in Journalism for Young Women" (Bureau of Publication, Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.) This Booklet of nearly 100 pages is based upon the testimony of 200 Vassar graduates who have found practical uses for their skill in writing. Some of these graduates have entered newspaper work. They represent the reportorial staffs of newspapers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and as far west as Omaha. Two have followed the advice of Don C. Seitz and become owners of a paper in a small community where they made their paper pay financially, but more richly in experience.

Other Vassar graduates have become associated with magazines or with publishing houses. Still others have gone into publicity and the preparation of advertising copy. A few have made free lance writing pay. References are also made to book reviewing and to musical criticism.

The mode of treatment is the same for all chapters: first the task is described and then the training necessary for this work is outlined. The informal way in which topics have been treated makes the booklet all the more valuable and interesting for those who want to earn a living by the pen.

Newspaper publishers might read this booklet to advantage. The Vassar girls have not hesitated to be critical of their bosses and to point out where conditions for women in journalism might be improved.

* * *

THE house organ of the Chicago Tribune has for its title The Trib. The current issue features the excellence of the short stories which have been appearing in the columns of the Sunday edition of the Chicago Tribune. Credit is given to the person to whom it belongs—Mary King. John Kelley continues his interesting chat with stories about John Eastman and some others.

Tulsa World Adds Sports Edition

A six o'clock sport edition has been started by the Tulsa (Okla.) World.

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday newspapers combined.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America

Buffalo—A Profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertised goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia
Waterman Bldg. Boston

have you been following the remarkable growth of the Detroit Times

RADIO PROGRAMS
NEWS NOTES
FEATURES
Used and Praised by More than 200 Newspapers
Send for samples and prices
AUDIO SERVICE
326 West Madison St.
Chicago

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED
SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK
Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
-RESULTS COUNT-
6th Floor Occidental Bld.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

DISABILITY AWARDS CONFIRMED

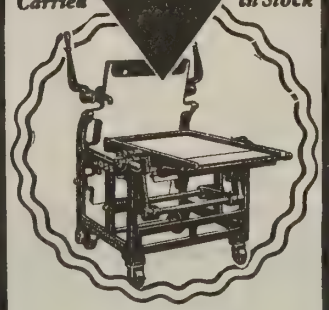
Springfield Linotype Operator Given Both Partial and Complete Payments

Martin Wind, a Springfield, Mass., linotype operator, is awarded both partial and total compensation for injuries received in the course of his employment, in an unusual claim against the Travelers Insurance Company, insurers of the New England Publishing Company, Wind's employers.

The operator received an injury to a finger during the course of his employment in March, and soon afterward returned to work, receiving partial compensation for the injury. While still receiving this compensation, he suffered a fracture of the arm. Commissioner David T. Dickinson ordered that he continue to receive partial compensation for finger injury and at the same time receive total disability compensation for the injury to his arm. An appeal by the Company to the Massachusetts Industrial Accident Board resulted in the award being confirmed last week.

Williams Takes U. S. Post

Jack M. Williams, federal court reporter for past three years on the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News, has been appointed United States Commissioner for four years by Judge Walter C. Lindley of the Eastern District of Illinois. Mr. Williams formerly worked on newspapers in Jackson, Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo, Mich., Toledo, O., and Washington, D. C.



School Named for Newspaper Man

Buffalo's new vocational school, about to be started, is to be named for the late Raymond Bissell, former business manager of the Buffalo Commercial according to a resolution offered and accepted by the Buffalo board of education.

Supplies and Equipment

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO—NEW YORK—LONDON

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

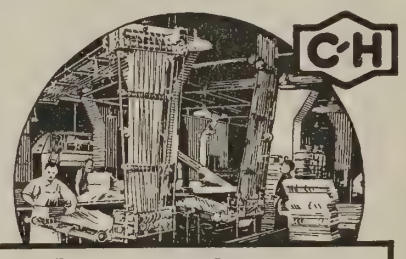
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Used or New Equipment can be sold through EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Fight hot-weather fatigue

Fresh, cool, invigorating air — supplied by Sturtevant Ventilating Fans — would keep your men working at top-notch efficiency during the hot summer months.

B. F. STURTEVANT CO.
Hyde Park, Boston, Mass.
Branch Offices in Principal Cities



Sturtevant
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
Ventilating Fans

Modern Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—A real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

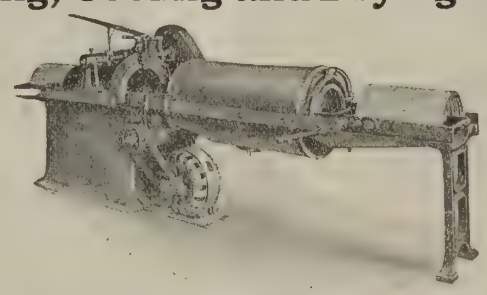
HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

C-H

Newspaper Conveyors

take the papers in a steady stream, as fast as the presses can deliver them, up, overhead, around corners, through a ceiling or a wall to wherever they're wanted for mailing or delivery. Eliminating waste and delay by their speedy, dependable operation they are profitable equipment for papers large or small. Newspaper plants from London to Tokio have been using them for years.

Let us tell you how you can speed deliveries from your presses.



The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Mfrs. of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN
CUTLER-HAMMER

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
1109-17 Transportation Bldg.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

Hoe Automatic Curved Plate Finishing, Cooling and Drying Machine

Trims, tail-cuts, shaves, cools and dries six plates a minute.

R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand St., New York City
7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL. also at DUNELLEN, N. J. 7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
2 Times — .35 per line
3 Times — .30 per line

ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insertions. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE.

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want more business, communicate with the International Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 1004, 1841 Broadway, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Omar D. Gray, Sturgeon, Mo., the best known Newspaper Broker in the United States, who specializes in consolidating newspapers and who incidentally tries to assist all the worth while boys and girls of his acquaintance, writes:

"I want to help land a good job for one of the most capable lady graduates of Dean Walter Williams' most excellent Missouri School of Journalism. After six years in the school she graduates this week. Before purchasing a country weekly paper she wants a year or more on a good country paper in the news or advertising game. She is dependable and capable, thoroughly in love with her work and will be worth all you can pay her. Dean Williams tells me she is an exceptional worker in her line. I will refer letters to her address."

Two Important Newspapers, located respectively in Illinois and Texas, are available for purchase in a private way on a basis of capitalizing profits at 15%, involving from $300,000 to $500,000 on each property. Please give financial references. The H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill.

Splendid Opportunity—Morning paper; exclusive fertile field; new modern $75,000 plant; very valuable lease; over 6,000 circulation; gross business over $120,000; returns to owner $30,000; asking price $175,000; initial payment $75,000; balance easy terms. J. B. Shale, Times Building, New York City.

Interest For Sale

Interest in Daily for sale; in exclusive field; carrying position of manager. Applicant should have ten thousand dollars. Address A-542, Editor & Publisher.

Partner Wanted—For live Iowa daily newspaper in town of 8,000. Must have $15,000. This is a good opportunity for an ambitious and experienced young man. Address A-531, care of Editor & Publisher.

Newspapers for Sale

Small Afternoon Daily for sale in fast growing Eastern Carolina town. Only daily in five counties. Unlimited opportunities. A-553, Editor & Publisher.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation coverage becomes necessary, remember that our twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Centre Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Circulation Building successfully conducted with an organized crew of experienced solicitors. Results guaranteed at minimum cost. Reference supplied. J. J. Murphy, 42 Millwood St., Dorchester, Mass.

Circulation Promotion—We serve 34 dailies supplies for R. F. D. promotion. Priced from $0.40 to $5.50. Packed for mailing. Plans. The Albright China Co., 104 W. 5th St., Palmyra, N. J.

Classified Opportunities are read by Wise Executives

Employment—Equipment—Services

CIRCULATION

Premiums

tomatic Dish Dryer—Every woman wants . Not offered to the retail trade yet. Circula- n Managers say it can't be beat for pulling. ices 50 and 60c each. Try a few now. See results. The Steel Co. Box 203, Palmyra, J.

EDITORIAL

Syndicate Features

w Bedford (Mass.) Times and Ogdensburg vance are the new customers this week. samples of a live, alert, up-to-date service, ite The Graphic Syndicate, 25 City Hall ice, New York.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

vertising Salesman, young and industrious, nted by New York State afternoon daily. rmanent employment. Staff of nine. Oppor- tity for advancement. Reply stating age, perience, etc., to A-559, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer wanted with the erudition Elihu Root and the sparkle of Will Rogers. n't crowd, boys! We don't really expect find him, but the man—or the woman—who nes nearest to filling the bill has a job waiting him on a newspaper with 62,000 circulation a populous Eastern community. Write your n recommendation and enclose some samples your best stuff, that already has been printed. o name the salary you expect. Polly-annas l Edgar Guests need not apply. A-555, itor & Publisher.

y Circulation Manager for morning news- per in highly competitive field. Unusual portunity for able, energetic circulation man h ability. Must be used to hard competition l be able to make a success in city work. e information as to experience, newspapers which applicant has been employed and in at capacity; salary expected, age, and when accept position. A good opportunity for a ngster to make an established future with a d newspaper. A-535, Editor & Publisher.

ssified Advertising Manager wanted for wspaper in New York state, city of 200,000 pulation. This newspaper is a close second in field and with plans the organization has in nd can be made to show very rapid growth der an able manager. It is an exceptional portunity for a man who is seeking a future newspaper Classified advertising. Answer ing age, education, classified experience, mplishments, present salary, reasons for king a connection, to Box A-570, Editor & blisher.

itorial—Man wanted to do some street and signment work and capable of desk work, on ain of Weeklies. Address A-571, Editor & blisher.

gh-class Weekly Newspaper starting soon a charming New York suburb wants a clever istant to a long-experienced editor. Young n unafraid of hard work who will not produce ined English and is willing to help on adver- ing can earn a fair salary, with good oppor- nity to advance himself. Address promptly 564, Editor & Publisher.

ssman wanted to run Duplex sextuple aight-line press; excellent working condi- ns, steady position. Excellent living con- ions. Start in two or three weeks. News- per within one hour and half from New rk. A-576, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Salesman desires connection where rult-producing effort will win advancement. Geral newspaper experience. A-529, Editor &Publisher.

Advertising Manager—My record over 15 rs as an advertising executive will convince a publisher, of my ability. Am seeking con- tion requiring a man accustomed to putting or hard propositions. If you need a proven iness builder, a man who can give results, excuses, write for my record and interview. 73, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Work wanted by graduate of Missouri University School of Journalism, 24. Can draw, make good layouts. Training in retail and direct advertising, advertising cam- paigns, and copy writing. Dependable. Ref- erences. A-569, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Advertising Man—12 years' experience, effective copy-writer; attractive layout; capable sales- man; possessed with a wonderful personality; broad experience with newspapers; a real busi- ness getter; not afraid of work and long hours; now employed. Exceptional references; age 32; married. Address A-568, Editor & Publisher.

All Around Editorial department man—one who has held virtually every desk, and who can write clear, concise editorials, handle men and get out a snappy, up-to-the-minute news- paper. 36, married. Employed, but can leave on reasonable notice. A-577, Editor & Pub- lisher.

Business Manager or Assistant to Publisher—A man fortified with years of experience, now employed as advertising director, is seeking above position. Can satisfy interested publisher con- cerning ability, energy, and integrity. Trained in the fundamentals governing the administra- tion of the successful newspaper. Address A-572, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist: Young artist with five years' ex- perience in art departments on newspapers in the East desires new connections with paper in fair sized town. Will go anywhere as long as there is an opportunity to make a name for himself. Samples of work on request. Courtney Dunkel, care Baltimore News, Baltimore, Maryland.

Circulation Manager—If I were your circula- tion manager

—I'd need no prodding, for I'd travel every possible avenue for development.

—Your competitor would rarely if ever get the jump on anything old or new in sane circu- lation promotion ideas or methods, and when he did I wouldn't sleep well until it was paid back double.

—I wouldn't merely buy circulation. I'd build it and build it as solidly, quickly and economically as it could be built.

—I'd constantly look for leaks in the depart- ment and plug them.

—I'd turn savings effected by elimination of waste and lost motion into circulation by divert- ing the savings to promotion.

—I would, above all, view things always from your angle, and would conduct myself and the department in such a manner that nothing but credit could be reflected to your own judgment in engaging me.

If you are a publisher in a city of 100,000 or more, and believe that a top-notcher at $6,500 is a better investment than a mediocre man at $4,000, and you are looking for the former, I am sure it will pay you to investi- gate if you are in the market for a circulation manager. Twenty-one of my 33 years have been spent in and around the circulation de- partment of newspapers. My record of clean accomplishment in twelve years of circulation management qualifies me as a safe investment for any publisher. I am employed at present, but contemplate an immediate change. You can address me in absolute confidence for fur- ther information. A-554, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Man, over ten years' experience, capable taking full charge, wishes to connect with live wire Florida paper. Give me a trial and watch your circulation grow. Best refer- ences furnished. A-562, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Mr. Publisher, can you use exceptionally good circulation man with clean record, proven ability as producer, with maintenance at low cost. A circulation business man with thorough knowledge of circulation work. References: Present and past employ- ers. If interested, wire or write Ivan C. Moore, 1314 State & City Bank Building, Richmond, Virginia.

Circulation Manager, successful, is seeking new connection. Experience from ground up, always up, and never a failure. No floater, on present position six years. Prefer management several small papers. Nothing less than $6,500 considered. Box A-560, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager wishes to make change. At liberty August 1st. Proven ability and good references. Middle West or Eastern States preferred. A-561, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Efficient and energetic young man now employed with nine years of working experience in every angle of circulation work desires change due to reason paper now is about to change hands. Middle or far West desired. One who thoroughly understands delivery, promotion, branch systems, A B C requirements, mail room, and distribution from actual experience. Knows how to handle boys to great advantage. Mr. Publisher if you are looking for such a man answer to A-565, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—15 years' circulation ex- perience, 10 years as Circulation Manager on largest papers in South. Know Circulation Auditing, Promotion, Office Owned and In- dependent Systems. Have also had experience on combination Morning and Evening Circula- tion. Will be glad to make trip at my expense for personal interview with Publisher desiring services of Circulation Manager. Can furnish satisfactory references from my employer. Inquiries treated confidentially. A-558, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

City Circulation Manager.—Ten years of first class experience. Very successful handling boy carriers, also men carriers. Fine record as a promotion man. Real circulation builder. Best of reasons for seeking change. First class refer- ences from past and present employers. Twenty- nine years of age, married. Circulation Man- ager, 1422 Allegheny St., Atlanta, Ga.

City or Managing Editor with twenty years' experience, available June 20th because of sale. A news executive with successful record. Best of recommendations. A-543, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager—Healthy, vigorous, neat and refined appearance, possessed with energy and ability to sell and train a staff to sell, now employed, desires a change. Last year's record over 300,000 lines gain. A-556, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room Foreman or Mechanical Superintendent of the highest calibre will be available after July 1. Efficiency expert, keen executive and maximum producer; Executive experience covering some of largest papers in the country for past 20 years; age 41, married, union. Best of credentials furnished upon re- quest. At present Foreman of paper printing 16 to 48 pages daily. East preferred but will go anywhere remuneration warrants. A-566, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial and Desk work on Republican paper wanted by newspaper man of experience. Ex- amples of headlines, special articles and editorials furnished on request. References. B-992, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Circulation Man—Where results count. Thoroughly familiar with boy and men methods and all phases of circulation promotion. Will take charge of carriers, suburban or district. Live wire, can produce the goods. Thrive on difficult tasks and opportunity. References exchanged. A-541, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial, Desk Work or Copy Reading, wanted by experienced newspaper man who knows all angles of newspaper making. New York or vicinity. Prefer magazine or book work. A-522, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Man of 16 years' experience in report- torial, desk and editorial work wants position as editor or editorial writer east of Mississippi. Is 40, democrat, married; has two college degrees and legal training; now associate editor leading daily in city of over 100,000. Could make change in four or six months. A-534, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor or News Editor—Must make change because of wife's health. 35 years old with record of uncommon achievements in daily field. Desires city under 100,000 where there is opportunity to build downtrodden paper. 15 years' experience. Address A-528, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Fourteen years on largest metropolitan dailies, thoroughly competent if given co-operation. A-549, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent, technical and prac- tical. Experience covering a number of years as supervising erector for R. Hoe & Co. Any size daily considered. F. J. Preston, 1495 Newton street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

News Editor, city, telegraph. Hard worker seeks connection with mid'le-west daily. Ad- dress A-557, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Executive, practically trained in all departments of newspaper making, provincial and metropolitan, is available for immediate connection, where proven constructive ability, seasoned experience and pleasing personality will find permanency and congenial environment. Formerly business manager prominent New York City daily. Recently, a Hearst business executive. Excellent references. Consider any location. A-574, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Press Room executive of wide ex- perience wants position as Foreman or Super- intendent. Will go anywhere. A-575, Editor & Publisher.

News Executive position on small city after- noon daily desired by college graduate with six years' experience on telegraph and city desks with papers of 12,000 to 35,000. A-538, Editor & Publisher.

Office Manager, now connected with a New York suburban newspaper, will be available about July first. Has been in charge of busi- ness management. A-546, Editor & Publisher.

President's Representative—Educated, experi- enced man desires to join publisher's staff as confidential field investigator, research man, or in a promotional connection. Experienced in advertising, publishing, writing, public speak- ing, news print sales. Holds responsible public position, but wishes to engage exclusively and permanently in publishing enterprises. Experi- enced traveler, versatile, and has original ad- vertising and promotional ideas. Has published magazine of his own. A-517, Editor & Pub- lisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Reporter—Six years' experience general news and feature writing, also special assignments. High recommendations. At liberty June 15. Address A-563, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter and Proofreader—Young man, 28 years of age. University graduate, with two years' experience, desires position with live newspaper. Available June 20. References. D. H. Taylor, 297 Hancock Ave., Athens, Georgia.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut- cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Con- ner Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

LEGAL

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

New York, May 26th, 1926.

The Board of Directors have declared a regu- lar quarterly dividend of one and three-quarters per cent (1¾%) on the Cumulative 7% Pre- ferred Stock of this Company, and a regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent (1½%) on the Cumulative 6% Preferred Stock of this Company, for the current quarter, pay- able July 15th, 1926, to holders of record at the close of business July 2nd, 1926. Checks will be mailed. Transfer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treasurer.

FOR SALE

Florida bi-weekly newspaper with job plant. City has 12,000 population, county seat. Circulation, 3,000; advertising rate, 50 cents an inch. Weekly revenue, $500 for newspaper. Job plant does $15,000 annually. Price for both, $25,000. Terms to suit.

PALMER,
De WITT & PALMER
Newspaper Properties
350 Madison Ave., NEW YORK

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

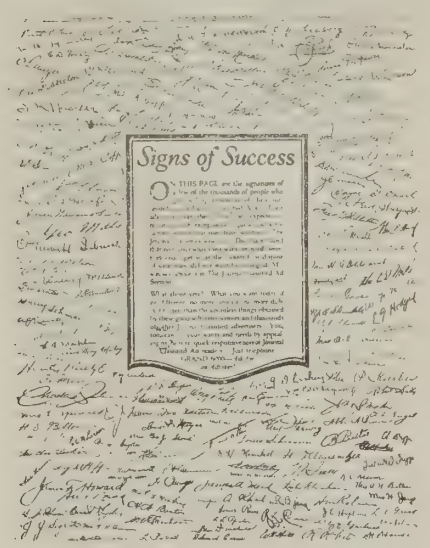
of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

EDITORIAL AND FEATURE WRITER, with over three years' experience on large city daily, is seeking new connection. Ready to go anywhere for right position. "Unusually bright; well educated; great student; will make extraordinary writer." Age 26; college graduate. Mention our No. 5340-B.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.



A list of available executives will be furnished to Publishers on request.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

ONE paper has a plan of canvassing one block in the business district regularly for a month for the smaller advertiser; then taking another block and doing likewise. Dealers are seen daily during the week and every effort made to sell them—if only a one inch ad. The theory is—and it has worked out well in practice—that if they once start, they will become regular advertisers and use larger space. The linage increase since the plan was adopted has been considerable.—B. A. T., Springfield, O.

Novel full-page classified promotion ad run by Milwaukee Journal using border of facsimile signatures of satisfied classified customers.

"Speedway Used Car Bargains" was the eight-column line over a page of classified ads in the Indianapolis News on Monday evening, May 31, the day of the Speedway Races at Indianapolis. Advertisers benefited by the tremendous enthusiasm for automobiles generated by the great racing classic. Most of the advertisers took display headings which were attractively worded. "Drive home from the race in your own car" and other similar appeals were featured. The idea could be adopted by classified managers in other cities that have auto races. Auto races at state fairs, too, might supply the occasion.—Norman J. Radder.

A merchant in a small town in Washington recently got out an effective ad by giving parallel pieces of articles handled in his store and the prices charged by Montgomery, Ward & Co., mail order house. Some of the prices showed the mail order house lower, a representative list of items being selected and the catalog number and page of the latest catalogue being given with each item, but in general the small town store compared favorably. The idea can be worked out in other small towns where the local merchants complain about mail order competition and sometimes fail to see the value of advertising. A representative list of items in the ad follows:

SCREEN DOOR SET

Our Price $0.35
M. W., P394, No. 84D3748 ..... .32

SCYTHE SNATH

Our Price $1.50
M. W., P397, No. 484D6021 ..... 1.55

LONG HANDLED SHOVELS

Our Price $1.50
M. W., P397, No. 484D5725 ..... 1.50

STRAP HINGES

Our Price—
4 Inch $0.20
5 Inch ..... .25
M. W., P413, No. 84D3802—
4 Inch ..... .17
5 Inch ..... .21

—Armin Nix.

COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS

International News Service

"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"

63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

WHITTEMORE WRITES HIS LIFE

Notorious Bandit Gives Manuscript Written in Cell to Baltimore Post

The life story of Richard Reese Whittemore, noted Baltimore bandit and murderer, is being run by the Baltimore Post.

The story was written in long hand by the bandit while in his cell awaiting trial, and offered to the Post, according to Harold D. Jacobs, editor.

"We never saw the story or made any suggestions until after it was completed," Jacobs told EDITOR & PUBLISHER. "We are running it without changing a comma. There are a few grammatical and dictional errors, of course, but on the whole it is mighty clean copy."

Whittemore was convicted recently of murdering a Maryland penitentiary guard.

Three Illinois Weeklies to Merge

The Rushville (Ill.) Times, Schuyler County Herald and Schuyler Citizen, all weekly publications have been consolidated in the Rushville Times, which will make its appearance July 1. The paper will temporarily operate as the Rushville Times and the Schuyler County Herald, but eventually drop the last half of the title. The Times and Herald have purchased the Citizen, the two papers being incorporated by H. F. Dyson and H. E. McLaren, who hold equal shares in the new venture.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

GRADUATIONS are coming thick and fast. Everyone is interested in them. Why not take your local college and with the aid of cartoons and pictures describe the costumes worn years ago, the exercises, etc. Such a story is interesting and not difficult.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston.

The Merrill (Wis.) Daily Herald carries at the bottom of Page 1, every day, set in six-point, a carefully kept list of "Meetings Tonight." Many readers say it is the first feature for which they look each evening.—Wm. L. Doudna.

How does the waiter react when the diner says he is broke? Under the caption "Will the Smile Come Off" a joint feature contribution by a man reporter and woman reporter who tried this out separately in Seattle restaurants appeared as a two column front page story in a Seattle paper.—C. M. L., Seattle.

Los Angeles Times Sunday auto section is running a series of pictures entitled "Yesterdays of Motordom." They show the kind of cars that chugged along the horse-infested streets 20-odd years ago and are being furnished by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Mary Marshall
FASHION WRITER
is sending a
COMPLETE DAILY AND SUNDAY FASHION FEATURE
and a
DAILY FASHION NEWS SERVICE FROM PARIS
Authoritative
Entertaining
Full of Ideas
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York

RING LARDNER'S
Burlesque Autobiography
Starts in his Regular Weekly Letter on July 4th.
Here are Lardner's own reminiscences—done in his inimitable style and bubbling over with rare humor
The Bell Syndicate, Inc.
JOHN N. WHEELER, Pres.
154 Nassau St. New York City

THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Mutual Tower
MEMPHIS, TENN.
CREATORS OF LOCAL DISPLAY FROM A NEW SOURCE
Our Business Review and many other feature pages now running in more than 80 leading American and Canadian newspapers. Write or wire for our representative.

Nearly every large city has an aut club whose files are probably fu of interesting pictures of other day around which features can be writte —A. Nix, Spokane, Wash.

The Davenport Times has a "columr and for some time three or more que tions have been appearing there each da The drift of these questions is to see readers know the "home town." Suc questions as: "Which bank has a strin of flower boxes along its windows? "What store has a sign on one side of showing a 'stovepipe' hat?" Much di cussion has been aroused by these dai questions.—L. G. DeArmand.

An excellent and interesting Saturda "plugger" page for seven-day papers co sists of high lights and chatty inform tion on feature and news matter to a pear in the Sunday issue. This has lor been the practice of The News League Ohio papers.—C. W. Myers, Dayt (O.) Daily News.

Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Complete Feature Service
Wire us for samples and prices of the Largest, Most Original
Most Artistic and Finest
blanket feature service on the market, which includes IVANHOE, VIVIAN VANITY, and the FAMOUS SHORT STORY SERIES, in addition to SPORTS, WOMAN'S PAGE FEATURES, COMICS, FICTION, VERSE, CARTOONS and everything for the newspaper.
Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, President
373 4th Ave., New York City

How To Play GOLF
By JOHNNY FARRELL
Famous Teacher of That Game
24 LESSONS
Illustrated
For release daily
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
New York City

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

Where can you find a greater buying power?

Considered from the standpoint of area, from the diversity of manufacture, and from the wonderful ease with which dozens of thriving cities and towns can be covered in a few hours, no other section has the trade possibilities offered by New England.

New England offers the greatest buying power value today to national advertisers. Here is a market that you can easily reach through the daily papers that are read and absorbed by the better class of New Englanders.

These dailies are ready to assist you in plans of distribution and merchandizing.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	5,845	.03	.03
Boston Globe .....(M&S)	287,590	.50	.50
Boston Globe .....(S)	332,282	.55	.55
*Boston Transcript ....(E)	38,807	.20	.20
Boston Post .....(M)	377,443	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	349,596	.55	.55
††Fall River Herald ....(S)	17,052	.06	.06
Fitchburg Sentinel ...(E)	11,828	.06	.045
*Haverhill Gazette ....(E)	15,729	.065	.05
††Lynn Item .....(E)	16,699	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ..(M&E)	21,918	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury (M&E)	33,321	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	28,806	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript (E)	9,918	.0425	.035
††Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	17,011	.05	.05
Salem News .....(E)	21,398	.09	.07
††Taunton Gazette ....(E)	9,279	.05	.04
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	92,314	.26	.23
Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	51,096	.19	.16
(E)	4,046	.0214	.015

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Concord Monitor-Patriot (E)	5,041	.0375	.025
††Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,887	.036	.023
†Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	29,422	.13	.10

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

††Newport Daily News..(E)	6,271	.0336	.0293
††Pawtucket Times .....(E)	27,451	.07	.07
Providence Bulletin ..(E)	68,815	.18	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(M)	36,416	.11	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(S)	70,518	.18	.18
Providence News ....(E)	29,123	.08	.08
Providence Tribune....(E)	21,961	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun .....(E&S)	4,476	.025	.025
Woonsocket Call ....(E)	14,508	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times .....(E)	7,112	.03	.025
††Bennington Banner ....(E)	3,144	.0125	.0125
Brattleboro Reformer ..(E)	3,370	.03	.0175
Burlington Free Press (M)	13,071	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald .....(M)	11,038	.04	.04
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record (E)	4,055	.03	.0175

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	43,008	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post .....(S)	20,827	.10	.10
Hartford Courant ....(M)	33,003	.09	.09
Hartford Courant .....(S)	56,274	.13	.13
Hartford Times .....(E)	53,121	.13	.13
*Middletown Press ....(E)	8,214	.0325	.03
††New Haven Register (E&S)	46,218	.14	.13
New London Day.....(E)	12,054	.07	.045
††Norwich Bulletin ....(M)	12,724	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour .....(E)	6,069	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel (E)	5,043	.04	.025
Stamford Advocate ..(E)	10,329	.05	.04

*A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, September 30, 1925.
†Government Statement, September 30, 1925.
A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

217,779*

people are buying
The New York Telegram
every evening homeward bound—and these people are of New York's younger element,
whose preferences
are not founded on the habits of the early nineties
but upon the vogues of the moment—
If you would tell your story to these happy, active home-loving people use the columns of
The New York Telegram

*Average net paid circulation for month of May, 1926.

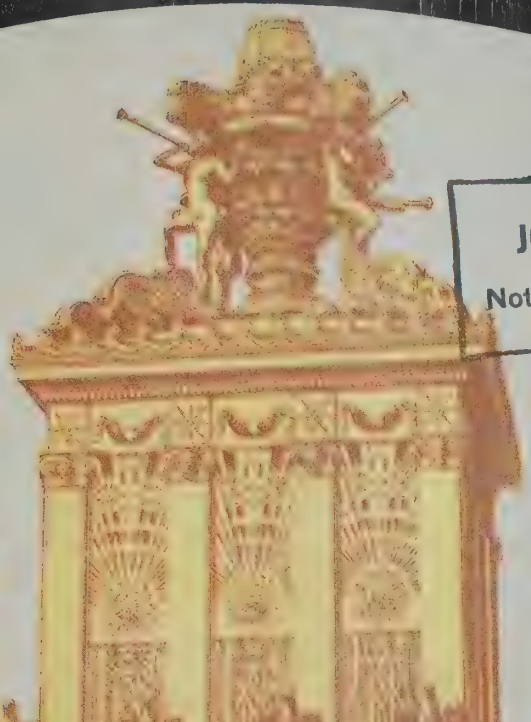
EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 — The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America — 1926



SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 4 | NEW YORK, JUNE 19, 1926 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

1776 — 1926

ASSOCIATED · ADVERTISING · CLUBS · OF · THE · WORLD ·

TRUTH

Convention number at PHILADELPHIA

SHRINE OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE AND PRESS FREEDOM

The One Outstanding Daily and Sunday Newspaper In Philadelphia

The Philadelphia Inquirer dominates Pennsylvania by both the quantity and quality of its circulation and advertising, the timeliness and accuracy of its news and its unique, unfailing, paid carrier service. In Philadelphia, the largest HOME market in the world, The Inquirer is the ONE family newspaper!

Super-Circulation

When a medium's circulation reaches the general public en masse—including all classes—it can properly be termed Super-Circulation. This great newspaper's circulation of 303,211 copies daily and 467,192 copies every Sunday is proof of The Inquirer's outstanding reader-interest.

Largest Volume of Advertising

For many years The Inquirer has led all other Philadelphia newspapers in total volume of advertising—Display and Classified. For the year 1925 this publication led all others by 923,700 agate lines and during the first quarter of 1926 The Inquirer outdistanced its nearest competitor in the morning field by 1,296,600 lines! What stronger evidence could be had of the sales power and prestige afforded advertisers by The Inquirer?

GUARANTEE:—The Philadelphia Inquirer absolutely guarantees that every morning of the year, before breakfast is served, over 75% of Philadelphia's worthwhile homes have received their copies of The Inquirer from the hands of never-failing carriers.

The Philadelphia Inquirer

PENNSYLVANIA'S ONE BIG MORNING NEWSPAPER

NEW YORK
285 Madison Ave.

PHILADELPHIA
Broad & Callowhill Sts.

CHICAGO
2002 Harris Trust Bldg.

The Only Newspaper Building
AT THE SESQUI-CENTENNIAL

COURIER-POST BUILDING

The old Indian King Inn, Cradle of New Jersey Liberty, reset in "agate."

Here the New Jersey legislature met when the British took "preferred position" at Trenton, and forced the patriots into r. o. p. 150 years ago.

Of course A. A. C. W. delegates will be "top of column" at this building. Newspaper men and women will find a very interesting exhibit inside.

LOCATED OPPOSITE NEW JERSEY STATE BUILDING

INSIDE YOU'LL FIND

an editorial exhibit — a graphic explanation of the Courier's remarkable growth from 10,000 to 50,000 circulation in 5 years by emulating the independent spirit of the patriots who sought haven in the Indian King Inn.

EVENING COURIER MORNING POST

CAMDEN, N. J.

Cover South Jersey with more than 60,000 circulation at one combination rate

National Representatives: STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

The Evening Bulletin

NIGHT EXTRA

86TH YEAR, NO. 49 (MAY CIRCULATION: 535,500 COPIES DAILY.) PHILADELPHIA, MONDAY, JUNE 7, 1926 (COPYRIGHT 1926 BY BULLETIN COMPANY) TWO CENTS

IOWA PRIMARIES STIR WASHINGTON

Cummins-Brookhart Vote Seen as Western Attitude on Coolidge and Farm Relief

WET-DRY ISSUE INJECTED

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 7.—Washington looked questioningly toward Iowa today, waiting impatiently for the answer to a riddle that has played on the personal emotions and the political sensibilities of many in high places in the Capital.

In the eyes of both Republican and Democratic politicians, unusual considerations have lifted into exceptional prominence the Republican Senatorial contest between Senator Albert B. Cummins and former Senator Smith W. Brookhart. The outcome is expected to decide which of two old acquaintances of Washington officialdom is to carry the Republican standard in a State usually counted as Republican, and may also throw a ray of light on political questions of near concern to Congress and the Administration.

During his comparatively brief tenure in the Senate, Brookhart more than once was a thorn in the side of the Republican organization, and after his aid to the LaFollette independent campaign in 1924 he was formally read out of the party by the Republican caucus. The possibility of his return is looked upon with manifest apprehension by the Old Guard leaders, not only for its immediate effect in enlarging the numerical strength of the insurgent group in the Senate, but because of its possible moral effect on the standing of the Coolidge Administration in the West.

By the same token, a Brookhart victory would be hailed as a vindication by the insurgent group, five of whom have openly appealed to the Republican voters of Iowa to send the former Senator back to Congress.

Although himself an insurgent during the earlier period of his long service here, the veteran Cummins has been looked upon and counted upon for years as a Republican stalwart. On many fighting issues he has been found supporting the Administration, but the organization leaders do not agree that a defeat for him would be in any direct sense a defeat for the Administration.

On farm relief, one of the outstanding talking points of the Iowa campaign, Cummins has disagreed with Secretary of Agriculture Jardine and gone counter to what has been tacitly accepted as the policy of the White House. He has supported the equalization fee, more than once condemned by those close to President Coolidge, and has participated in conferences at the Capitol which were called for the avowed purpose of forcing farm aid on the Republican organization.

It also is emphasized here that the President himself has not uttered a single word to the voters of Iowa in support of Cummins. In all of the primary campaigns of 1926, he has publicly taken a hands-off attitude, and even the defeat of McKinley in Illinois and Pepper in Pennsylvania, have failed to elicit any authorized expression of regret from the White House. Mr. Coolidge's friends say he does not feel that he can afford to campaign for any candidate for a Senatorial nomination.

(Continued on Page Two, Column Five.)

BENEDICKS LONGEST LIVED

Chicago Official Shows Their Advantage Over Divorced and Single Men

(By Associated Press.)

Chicago, June 7.—The wag who asked "why do married men live longer than single ones" and then answered "they don't, it only seems longer," was wrong in only one respect, they do.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, city health commissioner, made public records of the health department for 1925 showing that for each age period, married men have lower death rates than single widowed or divorced men.

Out of every 1,000 men from twenty-five to thirty-four, those who die include fifteen who are divorced, five who are single and only four who are married.

Above sixty-five, Dr. Bundesen asserted, the ratio is even more favorable to the espoused group.

BRINGS CANNIBALISM TALE

Trading Ship Captain Tells of Starvation Along Siberia Coast

(By Associated Press.)

Nome, Alaska, June 7.—Bringing a tale of cannibalism and starvation among the natives of Indian Point, Siberia, across Bering Strait from Alaska, Captain Ira Rank, of the motorship Trader, has just returned from a trading cruise to islands along the Siberian coast.

Three hundred natives died of starvation last winter, Captain Rank said. Those who survived had lived on a diet of their comrades, relatives and dogs. Many of the natives killed their wives and children with knives and then ended their own lives rather than resort to cannibalism.

These natives, Captain Rank said, had depended entirely on seals to provide their food and necessities of life. The Soviet authorities took away their ammunition and guns to prevent any possibility of an uprising and also refused to permit trading with foreigners.

MEYER LONDON KILLED

New York Socialist Congressman Victim of Automobile Collision

(By Associated Press.)

New York, June 7.—Meyer London, the first Socialist Congressman from an Eastern State, and who represented the 12th District from 1915 to 1919 and 1921 to 1923, died in a hospital last night of injuries received earlier in the day. A car which struck him had swerved out of its course to avoid colliding with another machine.

Mr. London was born in Russia fifty-five years ago, came to New York at the age of twenty, and worked his way through law school. As legal adviser, he led the Clothiers' Union through a successful strike in 1910, and as a Congressman introduced a measure calling on President Wilson to summon a council of neutral Nations to stop the World War. In his second term he vigorously opposed an increase in the Regular Army.

THE WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Brazil and Spain absent themselves from opening session of League of Nations Council at Geneva.

Brookhart says vote will repudiate his unseating and Cummins predicts landslide for himself, as Iowa Senatorial primary begins; daughter of William Jennings Bryan is Democratic candidate in Florida primaries.

Turkey signs Mosul agreement with Britain, acquiescing in protested League of Nations decision.

CHURCH COUNCIL OPPOSES SCHOOL MILITARY TRAINING

Extension of Compulsory Program Held Inappropriate for Youths

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 7.—Recommendations against compulsory military training in schools and colleges, which was declared to be foreign to the ideals of the educational system, were made public last night by the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches.

Coincident with the Committee's appeal was publication of a War Department statement reviewing the growth of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, showing applications of nineteen universities and colleges and of thirty-five high schools for R. O. T. C. units were on file but could not be approved because of lack of funds.

The Committee's appeal asked church people throughout the Nation to study the whole question of militarism in education and expressed special dissatisfaction over extension of the program of military training of an elaborate and technical character even into the public high schools.

Believing the matter should be judged with a knowledge of facts, the announcement said the Committee has authorized the Federal Council's International Justice to publish a pamphlet of the question of [illegible]. The arguments for [illegible] by Major General C[illegible], Commander of the [illegible] of the United States.

SENATE CO[illegible] UPHOLDS [illegible]

Declares President Entirely Within [illegible] in Issuing [illegible]

CITES COURT

(By Associated [illegible])

Washington, June [illegible]idge, in issuing his or[illegible] employment of State [illegible]bition enforcement a[illegible]ly within his rights [illegible]infraction of the C[illegible] law, either express or [illegible]majority report of a [illegible]mittee submitted to [illegible]committee.

In studying the qu[illegible]mittee acted under a [illegible] of which Senator Ku[illegible] was the author. Th[illegible] of the sub-committee [illegible]minority views hold [illegible] was unauthorized and [illegible]

The sub-committee [illegible] what the President [illegible]"order," but a m[illegible] policy. "It stated i[illegible] the order really "acc[illegible] since the Attorney G[illegible]ternal Revenue Com[illegible]thority to make such[illegible]fore the order was [illegible]

Refraining from e[illegible]ion as to the wisdo[illegible]so employing State of[illegible]mittee majority said: "Nothing said her[illegible]strued as an expres[illegible]proval or disapproval evidenced by the not[illegible] President which has [illegible]discussion.

"The committee ha[illegible]erected in the inquir[illegible]under which it has [illegible]sole question of whe[illegible]acted in the premises [illegible]or invidation of the [illegible] of its provisions, exp[illegible]

On the latter po[illegible] Court decisions and t[illegible]similar import to the [illegible]dent Coolidge were ci[illegible]conclusion of the sub[illegible]President Roosevelt [illegible]in 1907 authorizing f[illegible]accept appointments [illegible]Services of the State[illegible] Wilson issued two or[illegible]ing officers of the Re[illegible]to accept positions [illegible]wardens, and the [illegible] Treasury officers to n[illegible]to State, county or mu[illegible]defense.

WILKINS BACK A[illegible]

May Postpone Arct[illegible] Next Su[illegible]

(By Associate[illegible])

Detroit, June 7 [illegible]fogcy weather, failure[illegible]tours of the airplane [illegible]tion properly and the [illegible]Thomas G. Lanphier [illegible]too long from his po[illegible]of Selfridge Field, are [illegible]today by the board [illegible]Detroit Arctic Expedi[illegible]ruption of the A[illegible] program.

"Owing to the persi[illegible]er" a statement by t[illegible] was considered advisable to have Captain George H. Wilkins, Major Lanphier and Sergeant Charles Wisely return to Fairbanks, Alaska, from Point Barrow for a complete overhauling of the flying equipment and to hold a series of conferences to determine the wisest course of procedure.

"The Detroit Arctic Expedition has been dogged by perverse and uncontrollable circumstances. The board of control, however, has no intention whatever of permitting its original objectives to be set aside.

"Just what action will be taken now is undetermined. It may be decided to request Captain Wilkins to return to Detroit at once for an extensive conference on the best methods of procedure for the immediate future. There is possibility that further work may be postponed until next spring."

PREACHERS' EDITOR TO JAIL

Head of Clerical Magazine Gets Four Years for Fraud

(By Associated Press.)

St. Louis, June 7.—William E. Rutledge, sixty-four, editor of the Preachers Magazine, was sentenced by Federal Judge Faris today to serve four years in prison for use of the mail to defraud in promotion of the Economic Oil Company.

Rutledge was convicted last Friday.

Sesqui Events Today

12-1 P. M.—Organ recital in auditorium.

2.30—Band concert in auditorium.

5.30—Lacrosse match—University of Penna. vs. Syracuse, in stadium.

8 P. M.—Band concert in auditorium.

10 P. M.—Fireworks spectacle.

ASKS FRANCE SPARE AMERICAN MUTINEER

Washington Instructs Paris Envoy to Intercede in Legionnaire's Case

FACES DEATH IN SYRIA

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 7.—Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador at Paris, was instructed by Secretary of State Kellogg today to intercede with the French Government in behalf of Bennie J. Doty, also known as Gilbert Clare, a private in the French Foreign Legion.

He is facing trial and death on charges of attempted desertion.

Both the French Embassy and the State Department were appealed to by Senators Tyson and McKellar, Democrats, of Tennessee, the home State of Doty, to use their good offices.

Senator Tyson made a personal visit to the French Embassy for a conference with the Counsellor, who is in charge in the absence of Ambassador Brouner.

MAYOR ADDRESSING S. A. R. AT LIBERTY'S SHRINE

REVOLUTION SONS HEAR DRY APPEAL

Society's Head Urges Members to Support Prohibition and Immigration Bill

37TH CONVENTION OPENS

A rallying call to the support of the 18th Amendment and the Johnson Immigration Bill of May, 1924, was sounded today in Independence Hall at the opening session of the 37th Annual Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The plea was made by Harvey F. Remington, president general of the society and a former municipal judge at Rochester, N. Y., speaking from the bench of the Supreme Court room in the State House. Today is the anniversary of the introduction by Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, before the First Continental Congress, of a resolution declaring the colonies "are and of right ought to be free and independent States," a suggestion which was the forerunner of the Declaration of Independence.

WOMEN FUGITIVES CAUGHT

Two Who Fled Reformatory, Dressed as Men, Arrested in Station

Masquerading as men, two fugitives from the Vermont State Reformatory for Women, at Rutland, Vt., who were serving Federal sentences there, were arrested in Broad Street Station last night by McDevitt and McInerney, Department of Justice agents.

The prisoners, who fled the Vermont institution May 29 by sliding down an improvised rope of sheets and climbing a large front gate, are Helen Keahy, eighteen, known as the "Texas Queen of automobile thieves" and "Billie" Wolain, forty-eight, Nashville, Tenn. Both are married. Mrs. Keahy's husband, it is said, is serving a term in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary for conspiracy with the wife to transport stolen automobiles between States. The older woman was serving a three-year term for peddling "dope."

"We didn't like the joint because we didn't get enough to eat," they told Federal authorities here today. "Why, we got more in two meals at City Hall here than we got at Rutland all the time we were there."

The prisoners, after spending the night in City Hall, were taken to the [illegible]. They will get a [illegible] day.

[illegible]E TAFT ILL

[illegible]ttending Today's [illegible]upreme Court

7.—Chief Justice [illegible]y illness from at[illegible]on of the Supreme [illegible]om, the sixty-eight[illegible], and former Pres[illegible]eeded to the ad[illegible]not to attempt to [illegible]soon, which is the [illegible]old until October. [illegible]f the attack was [illegible]oned. For several [illegible]intermittently suf[illegible]brought on by the [illegible]y depletions result[illegible]life he has led in a [illegible]olic offices.

[illegible]SSING

[illegible]nd three other Railroad train[illegible] The dead are [illegible], and Miss Ella [illegible]ous, of Herrin. [illegible]ar and Thais Mrs. Drye, re[illegible]

[illegible]KES

Alaskan black [illegible]then bringing [illegible]nvestigated by [illegible]sedd aquarium fish, principal[illegible] and are lively [illegible]

[illegible] ONE

[illegible]obably fatally [illegible]a freight tram [illegible]ear here when the casualties.

[illegible] CITY [illegible]RCURY 62

[illegible] Intermittently [illegible]dy Weather [illegible] On

[illegible]AST YEAR

[illegible]we're having this [illegible]ther comment on today.

[illegible]rom behind the [illegible]ernoon and ap[illegible]for brief periods. [illegible]late today. The sixty-two, about [illegible]al.

[illegible]adly this month. [illegible] two days when [illegible]ectable showing [illegible]e of June's tradi[illegible]. there was sun[illegible] of the time and [illegible] But the score [illegible]ro.

[illegible] the month has [illegible]t, sunshine, and [illegible] the season alleg[illegible]ers, weddings and [illegible]

And the fore[illegible] on the "possible" only on the day [illegible] the sun is ex[illegible]

SAYS GAMING HOUSE IS WITHIN 2 BLOCKS OF POLICE STATION

Magistrate Beaton, at Raid Hearing, Hints Gambling Evidence is Being 'Covered Up'—'Liar,' Replies Captain Wagner, Demanding Names and Addresses—Assert Girl, Fifteen, Acted as Lookout

TWO OF 17 HELD IN BAIL; WILL TRY GILCHRIST FRIDAY

Magistrate William F. Beaton, presiding at a gambling hearing today in the 10th and Buttonwood sts. station, started a fireworks display by declaring there was "a big game going on" within two blocks of the station house.

Two defendants out of seventeen arraigned before the magistrate were held for court in $400 bail.

They were arrested Saturday in a raid on a restaurant at 803 N. Marshall st.

Captain George Wagner, commander of the district, a red-headed, square-jawed man, was leaning against the rail in front of the magistrate's desk when Beaton made his charge near the end of the hearing.

The captain's face took on the hue of his hair. He straightened up angrily.

"Why don't you tell us where it is?" he inquired loudly.

"Oh, you know where it is," answered the magistrate.

"There's no place running near here," snapped the police captain. The only place running was knocked off." Presumably he referred to the Mutual Republican Club, 711 Spring Garden st., which was raided May 29.

Magistrate Beaton wanted to know if "this little restaurant is the only gambling joint in this district."

When Captain Wagner told him "we are going after the others," the Magistrate indulged in a short, cynical laugh.

"That's a good one," he said. Wagner insisted police are trying to put down the lid.

"You can get them if you want them," said the magistrate, and he added something about "covering up."

Captain Wagner straightened up and gave his trousers a hitch. He walked away from the desk.

"If anybody says I have covered up anything in this district," said the Captain loudly, "he is a liar."

While the Magistrate was making his charges, announcement came from the District Attorney's office that Dr. Thomas Gilchrist, known in gambling circles as "English Tommy," who was held as proprietor of the Mutual Republican Club gambling room would be tried Friday in room 606 City Hall. Since his arrest Gilchrist, who lives at the Coronado, 22d and Chestnut sts., has several times threatened to "tell the whole truth" about gambling.

The two held for court by Magistrate Benton are Samuel Lees, proprietor of the restaurant and alleged gambling house which was raided Saturday by Captain Wagner and his men, and Phillip Sabolski, Marshall st., near Poplar, who is charged with being a frequenter of the place.

Charles L. Gordon, Assistant District Attorney, appeared to prosecute the case and brought out the fact that Lees' restaurant had been "carried on the rolls" of the 10th and Buttonwood sts. station as a gambling house and had been raided once before on April 10.

After the hearing the magistrate promised to supply Captain Wagner with the name of the gambling house he had in mind.

"Ever since I have been a magistrate I have stood ready to aid the police in their drive against vice in this district" said Beaton.

"Whatever information I have against lawlessness of vice I will give Captain Wagner. The police further know that any time during the day or night that they want warrants signed I am ready to accommodate them.

"During the time Director Butler was here I heard more cases than most

(Continued on Page Two, Column Six.)

305,000 HAVE VISITED SESQUI

Rain and Postponement of Tank Drill Cut Today's Total

More than 305,000 persons have visited the Sesqui-Centennial since it opened a week ago, it was announced today by E. L. Austin, director-in-chief.

The light rain and generally inclement weather which necessitated the postponement of the whippet tank drill by the army in the Stadium kept many away and by noon today only a few had passed through the gates.

On Saturday there were 10,000 persons at the grounds. Of these 5,000 were paid admissions, many which were from school children, and the other 5,000 visited on passes.

RAIN STOPS PHILS AGAIN

Will Play St. Louis Cardinals One Game Tomorrow

Fore the second time in the series the Phillies and St. Louis Cardinals were rained out when the shower of today made the grounds unplayable.

The two teams will play only one game tomorrow, and the postponed game will be made up as part of a double hender later in the season.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST

Partly cloudy, unsettled and slightly warmer tonight. Tuesday fair. Fresh southwest winds.

Weather Table. Page Three. Column One

THE BULLETIN'S THERMOMETER

A. M.						Today.					P. M.
8	9	10	11	12	1	2	3	4	5	6
56	56	55	56	61	66	68

Last year: High, 08; low, 81; hum., 45.

	P. M.					Last Night.					A. M.
8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1	12	11	10	9
65	66	66	66	67	70	75	75	75	75	74	73

LOST AND FOUND

LOST—White wire haired fox terrier with black spot at base of tail, brown & white head; wearing plaid leather collar bearing owner's name. Mon. morning. Rus. Phone Mer. 1[illegible]

LOST—Bag, gray leather, on Bern Mawr or Wyndmoor, containing glasses & Steiner pin. Reward. Phone Cynwyd 292-W.

LOST—Cameo pin, vicinity of 12th and Berks. Sunday evening. Reward. Singer Drug Shop, 12th and Berks sts.

LOST—Small bag cont. jewels & money. Ridge av. car 61 June 7th. Reward. 1115 Ogden.

LOST—Pa. gold filigree, amethyst stone. Set. Reward. Miss Townsend, 3938 Cherry st.

OTHER LOST & FOUND PAGE 37

The Evening Bulletin

welcomes to Philadelphia

the delegates to the Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and will be pleased to have them visit

The world's largest newspaper printing plant

Convention Headquarters are in The Bulletin Building

Facts About Philadelphia

Third largest city in the United States.
Home of Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell.
Area: 130 sq. miles. The World's Workshop.
Produces one-quarter of all American made goods.
819,000 persons are employed in its industries.
Population of trading (retail) area: 3,300,000.
Factories: 6,500; Stores and Shops: 55,000.
Dwellings in city: 423,404; outside city, 125,000.
Average persons to family (U. S. Census) 5.4.

Divide the total population of the retail trading area by the 535,000 daily circulation of The Evening Bulletin and you will see this newspaper goes daily into nearly every home in the Philadelphia Zone.

The circulation of the Evening Bulletin is larger than that of any other Philadelphia newspaper, and is the third largest in the United States.

By concentrating your advertising in The Evening Bulletin you can cover Philadelphia at one cost, and at the lowest rate per line per thousand copies.

NIBBLES AT THE NEWS

Berlin—Styles and food, two never failing sources of interest. Here the smallest feet in the world after the Chinese and Japanese. More than 25,000 pairs of American shoes recently shipped to Russia, are unsalable because of their large size, narrow pointed toes and extremely high heels, and so they will be sent to Finland, where they are expected to fit.

Paris—Taking up food, do you know what "fluffeck" is. It appears on the bill of fare of all restaurants in France morning and evening. The French imagine it to be the English for beef steak but it covers all shades of steak.

Athens—When you go abroad this summer take along an extra five dollars. The Greek Government is charging this much to tourists desiring to see the famous Parthenon. Sixty per cent. of the visitors are Americans.

About 1025 Help and Situation Want Ad In Today's Bulletin

Westerham, England, June 7.—Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had a narrow escape this afternoon when his motor collided with a motor van.

Both machines were badly smashed.

The Chancellor was unhurt, but the van driver suffered a broken rib and other injuries.

BARN BURNS, BLAME FIREBUG

House on Same Farm Near Concordville was Destroyed 2 Weeks Ago

Concordville, Pa., June 7.—A large barn on a farm owned by Howard Hey burn, on the Baltimore pike near here, was destroyed by fire last night with a loss of several thousand dollars. The fire is believed to have been incendiary. Two weeks ago last night the house on the farm was destroyed by fire. The house was an old, historic structure, having been the Old Cloth Tavern during the Revolution, where Washington made his headquarters on the way to the Battle of Brandywine. The house also is believed to have been set on fire.

The fire sent flames high into the air and was viewed by hundreds of motor cars passing along the Baltimore pike. There was nothing in the barn. Mr. Heyburn having moved to an adjoining farm, which he owns, when the house burned.

The love story of a sweet girl is told by Ella Wister Haines in The Bulletin's new serial entitled "Mysterious Sweetheart," beginning tomorrow, Tuesday, June 8th.—Advertisement.

American tennis champion, who underwent an operation for appendicitis Friday night, will leave the American Hospital Sunday, her mother said today.

Miss Wills had a comfortable night and her condition was satisfactory this morning, but she will not be allowed to receive visitors before Wednesday.

Mrs. Wills says her daughter probably will go to the Wimbledon tournament in England as a spectator, but that no definite plans will be made until her release from the hospital. She will probably stay in Paris for two weeks.

Her doctor says she can play tennis within a month, and her participation in the Forest Hills tournament is regarded as certain.

Moscow—American styles in footwear and particularly American sizes are not popular in Russia, where women have the smallest feet in the world after the Chinese and Japanese. More than 25,000 pairs of American shoes recently shipped to Russia, are unsalable because of their large size, narrow pointed toes and extremely high heels, and so they will be sent to Finland, where they are expected to fit.

[illegible]

[illegible]ndred and three other [illegible]ers of the Railroad train [illegible]ed. The dead are [illegible]ed and Miss Ella [illegible]ous, of Herrin. [illegible]ar and Thais [illegible]. Mrs. Drye, re[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]ed Alaskan black [illegible]ed then bringing [illegible]ed investigated by [illegible]ed sedd aquarium [illegible]ed fish, principal [illegible]ed and are lively [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]ed probably fatally [illegible]ed a freight tram [illegible]ear here when [illegible]ed the casualties.

[illegible] CITY [illegible]RCURY 62

[illegible] Intermittently [illegible]dy Weather [illegible] On

[illegible]AST YEAR

[illegible]we're having this [illegible]ther comment on today.

[illegible]rom behind the [illegible]ernoon and ap[illegible]for brief periods. [illegible]late today. The sixty-two, about [illegible]al.

[illegible]adly this month. [illegible] two days when [illegible]ectable showing [illegible]e of June's tradi[illegible]. there was sun[illegible] of the time and [illegible] But the score [illegible]ro.

[illegible] the month has [illegible]t, sunshine, and [illegible] the season alleg[illegible]ers, weddings and [illegible]

And the fore[illegible] on the "possible" only on the day [illegible] the sun is ex[illegible]

BEATEN BY GIRL, 15, IN CHESS GAME

Champion Defeated by Youngster in Simultaneous Contest

Boston, June 7.—Fifteen-year-old Miss Sonia Margolin, of Brookline, defeated Samuel Reshevsky, champion chess player, in a simultaneous contest with 25 players at the Boston Chess Club last night.

Reshevsky, who is 14 years old, won 20 games, drew 4 and lost 1 to Miss Margolin.

[illegible]

[illegible]ed Along with the sunshine shortage there has been a deficiency in the amount of heat. Thus, including yesterday Philadelphia is just thirty degrees shy of the normal figure thus far for the month.

Northerly winds have been to blame for the cold.

Although Philadelphians have been complaining ever since Jun. started the month isn't what it used to be, data at the office of the Weather Bureau show that not until Friday did the months average temperature fall below normal.

Despite all this cold and chilly drizzle George S. Bliss, chief of the Weather Bureau, places no faith in the annual prophecies of a "heatless summer" that have been current.

"There is no scientific method of forretelling weather far in advance," says Mr. Bliss. "The usual method is to base a prediction on recent temperatures, but the plain facts are no one knows enough about them to be able to back up his guesses. They must be thoroughly studied before they will be of any help.

"Whenever we have a spell of unusual weather another old favorite crops up

(Continued on Page Two, Column Seven.)

The Oxford Accent

F. M. Hans, the carman said at a dinner in Worcester—

"The English laugh at our accent. Well, it's time we laughed at theirs.

"One day at Oxford University a coxswain was shot a man, and so he went out and secured a mount. He found a likely-looking student and held him up.

"'I say,' he said, 'are you an oarsman?'

"'No,' said the student, 'I never been on an horse in me life.'"

Seasoit Visitors will find many desirable rooms advertised in The Bulletin today under the classification of Rooms for Rent.—Advertisement.

Matches—Flask on Hip—Man Afire

(By Associated Press.)

Boston, Mass., June 7.—Matches, a bottle on the hip, and the sidewalk, are Boston's most modern improvement on the Indian and his flint.

Thomas Magee slipped and fell in the street last night. He landed on his hip-pocket, simultaneously breaking a bottle and igniting a pocketful of matches.

He rose and ran. Smoke and fire streaked behind him. Patrolman Crowley simulated a fire truck, finally overtaking Magee and extinguishing his clothing.

Today Magee is in the city hospital recovering from painful but not serious burns.

[illegible]

[illegible]ed [illegible]ed [illegible]ed [

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St. at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 59 NEW YORK, JUNE 19, 1926 No. 4

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

Twenty-Second Annual Convention

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 20-24

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM AND CONVENTION FEATURES

Theme of Convention—"ADVERTISING—STABILIZER OF PROSPERITY

SUNDAY

INSPIRATIONAL MEETING

Auditorium, Sesqui-Centennial Grounds

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 20TH

3:00 O'CLOCK

Presiding—ROWE STEWART, Business Manager, Philadelphia Record; Former President, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; Chairman, Poor Richard Club Convention Committee.

ORGAN PRELUDE AND FANFARE - Henry S. Fry
Organist at St. Clement's, at the console

CONCERT OVERTURE - - - Rollo F. Maitland

WEDDING CHIMES - - - - - William Faulkes

LARGO - - - - - - - George F. Handel

ANDANTINO—D FLAT - - - Edwin M. Lemare

SCHERZO SYMPHONIQUE - Georges Debat-Ponsen

CHORALE—"A MIGHTY FORTRESS IS OUR GOD"
Sung by a chorus directed by James Hartzell, Conductor of the Tioga Choral Society and the Germantown Choral Society.

INVOCATION—REV. FLOYD W. TOMKINS, D. D., Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Philadelphia.

HALLELUIAH CHORUS FROM "THE MESSIAH," Handel
Sung by the chorus

ADDRESSES OF WELCOME:

The HON. GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Governor of Pennsylvania.

The HON. W. FREELAND KENDRICK,
Mayor of Philadelphia.

HOWARD C. STORY,
President, Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia.

RESPONSE—C. K. WOODBRIDGE, New York, President, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

PRESENTATION OF FORMAL PROGRAM—H. H. CHARLES, Chairman, General Program Committee.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS—DR. S. PARKES CADMAN, Pastor, Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.; President, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. "Imagination and Advertising."

CHORALE—"O GOD, OUR HELP IN AGES PAST"
Sung by the chorus

ORGAN POSTLUDE.

SUNDAY NOON, JUNE 20TH

1:00 O'CLOCK

JOINT LUNCHEON

Executive Committee, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

District Chairmen and Chairmen of Standing Committees, Associated Advertising Clubs
At the Poor Richard Club

SUNDAY EVENING, JUNE 20TH

6:00 O'CLOCK

Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women, Mrs. Ellen S. Patten, President; Miss Florence M. Dart, Chairman of Convention.

Reception and Dinner in honor of the Overseas Delegates. Admittance by Card. Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Hostess, Miss Clare V. Fey.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

MONDAY

GENERAL SESSION

Academy of Music

MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 21

9:00—MUSIC—Strawbridge & Clothier Chorus.

9:30—Convention formally opened by C. K. WOODBRIDGE, President, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Address of Welcome to Delegates from other countries, by President Woodbridge.

Responses by:

SIR WILLIAM VENO, Manchester, England.

DR. MARCEL KNECHT, France (On behalf of the Press of France).

ANDRE KAMINKER, France (On behalf of District 17).

W. B. TINGLE, Montreal, Canada.

GEORGE S. OETTLE, South Africa.

JHR. WILLERT HOOGLAND, Amsterdam, Holland.

GEORGE H. PATTERSON, Sydney, Australia, and others.

10:00—LT.-COL. EDWARD F. LAWSON, London Daily Telegraph, London, England.

10:30—SIR HENRY THORNTON, President, Canadian National Railways, Montreal, Canada. —"Agate Lines and Railway Lines."

11:00—MARCEL KNECHT, General Secretary, Le Matin, Paris, France.—"Advertising Progress in France."

11:30—BRUCE BARTON, President, Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Inc., New York, N. Y.—"What Is There Left for Advertising To Do?"

12:00—Adjournment.

MONDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 21

Presiding—SENATOR PAUL DUPUY, Publisher, Petit Parisiene, Paris, France.

Presiding—LT.-COL. EDWARD F. LAWSON, President, Advertising Association, London, England.

1:45—MUSIC.

2:00—EDWARD S. JORDAN, President, Jordan Motor Car Co., Cleveland, Ohio.—"My Solution for All the Problems in the World."

2:45—W. FRANK MCCLURE, Vice-president, Albert Frank & Co., Chicago, Ill.; Chairman, National Advertising Commission.—"Educating the Public on the Economics of Advertising—a New Note in the Program of the National Advertising Commission."

3:15—BAYARD DOMINICK, Dominick & Dominick, New York, N. Y.—"Success of the Better Business Bureaus."

3:45—DON E. GILMAN, Christian Science Monitor, San Francisco, Calif.; Vice-president, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; President, Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs Association.—"What the Advertising Clubs Have Done for Advertising."

4:15—MATTHEW S. SLOAN, President, Brooklyn Edison Company, Brooklyn, N. Y.—"Advertising Does Its Part in the Public Utility Service."

5:00—Adjournment.

Reception by Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury from 4:30 to 6:00 p. m.

At Whitemarsh Hall
Chestnut Hill

Automobiles will be furnished for the Ladies at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel at 3:00 p. m.

At 8:00 p. m.

THE PAGEANT OF ADVERTISING

For the first time in history the celebrated New Year's Shooters from the Mummers' Parade are joining with the A. A. C. W. Part of the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant is also in the line of march. The balance of the units are marching corps from the various Advertising Clubs and representation from National and Local Advertisers.

TUESDAY

JUNE 22, 12:30 P. M.

JOINT ASSEMBLY LUNCHEON

At the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel and under the auspices of the WOMEN'S ADVERTISING CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA

Luncheon to members of the Federation of Women's Advertising Clubs, preceding Annual Business Session. Penn Athletic Club. Hostess, MISS MARY J. DENTON. also at 12:30

LUNCHEON AND A CHILDREN'S FASHION SHOW will be given by Gimbel Brothers

9th and Market Streets

AGRICULTURAL PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION

Bennett Hall, Room 201, University of Pennsylvania
TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—HORACE C. KLEIN, President, Agricultural Publishers' Association; The Farmer, St. Paul, Minn.

Business Session.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2 o'Clock

Presiding—HORACE C. KLEIN.

"Advertising to Farmers"—JAMES O'SHAUGHNESSY, Executive Secretary, American Association of Advertising Agencies, New York, N. Y.

AGRICULTURAL PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION

Hare Laboratory, Lecture Room
University of Pennsylvania
WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 10 o'Clock

Presiding—GEORGE C. HIRST, Vice-President and Treasurer, The Osborne Company, Newark, N. J.

THE HUMAN APPEAL IN ADVERTISING

I. The Story:

(a) "Advertising Specialties Create Good Will"—SAMUEL C. DOBBS, former President, The Coca Cola Company; for President, Associated Advertising Clubs, Atlanta, Ga.

(b) "Advertisements That Beautify Home and Office"—E. N. FERDON, President, The Blanchard Company, Aurora, Ill.; President, Advertising Specialty Association.

(c) "Little Gifts That Remind You of the Giver"—THOMAS H. SEWALL, Advertising Manager, Ohio Savings Bank & Trust Company, Toledo, Ohio.

(d) "Business Secrets"—G. M. GOTTFRIED, Manager Sales Promotion, Bakeries Service Corporation.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

II. The Illustrations:
Pictures Speak Louder than Words.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF ADVERTISING AGENCIES

Bennett Hall, Room 301, University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 9 o'Clock

Presiding—H. E. LESAN, President, H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, New York, N. Y.; Chairman, Program Committee.

"Scope of the Advertising Agency"—ROY S. DURSTINE, Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Inc., New York, N. Y.

"Developing New Accounts"—R. S. SIMPERS, McLain-Simpers Organization, Philadelphia, Pa.

"The Work of the Media Department"—GUY H. RICHARDS, Erickson Company, Inc., New York, N. Y.

"Getting the Facts Through a Survey"—PAUL T. CHERINGTON, J. Walter Thompson Co., New York, N. Y.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2 o'Clock

Presiding—H. E. LESAN.

"Using Facts to Build the Advertising Campaign"—MILTON TOWNE, Joseph Richards Company, New York, N. Y.

"The Copy"—ROBERT TINSMAN, Federal Advertising Agency, Inc.,, New York, N. Y.

"The Art"—W. H. BEATTY, Newell-Emmett Company, Inc., New York, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 9 o'Clock

Presiding—H. E. LESAN.

"Collateral Service of the Advertising Agency"—FREDERICK J. ROSS, Frederick J. Ross Company, Inc., New York, N. Y.

"The Business (internal) End of an Advertising Agency"—HARRISON ATWOOD, The H. K. McCann Company, New York, N. Y.

"Where Is the Advertising Agency Going in the Future?"—EUGENE MCGUCKIN, Eugene McGuckin Advertising Agency, Philadelphia, Pa.

AMERICAN COMMUNITY ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION

College Hall, Room 110, University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—CHARLES F. HATFIELD, President, American Community Advertising Association, St. Louis, Mo.

9:30—President's Address, "Conserving Community Funds"—CHARLES F. HATFIELD, Secretary and General Manager, St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, St. Louis, Mo.

9:45—Appointment of Committees.

9:50—"Value of Hotels in Community Advertising"—JOHN C. BURG, Hotels Statler Company, Inc., New York, N. Y.

10:10—"Discussion: Above Paper"—H. B. DICKSON, Convention Manager, The Mayflower, Washington, D. C.
P. G. B. MORRISS, Director of Publicity, The Drake, Chicago, Ill.

10.20—"Bank Advertising and the Community"—T. H. SEWELL, Publicity Director, Ohio Savings Bank & Trust Company, Toledo, Ohio.

10:40—"Legislation to Aid Community Advertising"—MARTIN KEET, Secretary, Chamber of Commerce, Sunbury, Pa.

11:00—"How the Railroads Advertise Communities and Sell Good Will"—C. B. SUDBOROUGH, General Traffic Manager, Pennsylvania Railroad System.

11:20—"Motion Pictures in Community Advertising"—J. KENNARD JOHNSON, Manager, Chamber of Commerce, Bay City, Mich.

11:30—Open Discussion on Papers of Morning Session.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—T. H. SEWELL, Vice-President, American Community Advertising Association, Ohio Savings Bank & Trust Company, Toledo, Ohio.

2.00—"Community Research in Building an Advertising Program"—DR. LEONARD P. FOX, Bureau of Research, Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, Harrisburg, Pa.

2:30—"Recreation and Community Selling"—EUGENE T. LIES, Special Representative, Playground & Recreation Association of America, Chicago, Ill.

2:50—"Relation of the Advertising Agencies to Community Advertising"—W. FRANK MCCLURE, Chairman, National Advertising Commission, Albert Frank & Co., Chicago, Ill.

3:10—"Selling Your Community Through the Store Window"—C. S. CLARK, Assistant to President, Edwards & Deutsch Lithographing Company, Chicago, Ill.

3:20—"National Community Advertising"—DON E. MOWRY, General Secretary, Association of Commerce, Madison, Wis.

3:40—"District Community Advertising Projects:
"What Texas Is Doing"—MRS. ROBERT G. COULTER, Coulter & Payne, San Antonio, Texas.
"Virginia's Campaign at Norfolk-Portsmouth"—CAPT. F. E. TURIN, Manager, Norfolk-Portsmouth Advertising Fund.
"Pike's Peak Region"—GIFFORD GILLASPY, Hathaway Advertising Service, Colorado Springs, Colo.

4:10—Open Discussion, Papers of Afternoon Session.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—DON E. MOWRY, Secretary, American Community Advertising Association; General Secretary, Association of Commerce, Madison, Wis.

9:30—"Part Played by Utilities in Community Advertising"—C. W. CHILES, Manager, Publicity Department, Central Illinois Public Service Company, Springfield, Ill.

9:50—"Creating Community Spirit"—BEN R. VARDAMAN, Editor, National Community Magazine, Chicago, Ill.

10:15—District Community Advertising Projects:
"Maine's Program of State-Wide Advertising"—HARRIE B. COE, Manager State of Maine Publicity Bureau, Portland, Me.
"Advertising the Playground of Michigan to the Country"—J. KENNARD JOHNSON, Manager, Bay City Chamber of Commerce, Bay City, Mich.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

"Pennsylvania's Plan and Results"—T. C. MIRKIL, Manager, State Publicity Bureau, Harrisburg, Pa.

"Denver's Activity (Visualized)"—JOE E. MOORHEAD, Mountain States Telephone Company, Denver, Colo.

11:05—Secretary's Report.
Committee Reports.
Election of Officers.

ASSOCIATION OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING EXECUTIVES

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
9:00 o'Clock, Promptly
National Advertising

MISS GRACE WALTON, Advertising Manager, Julius Kayser & Co.—"If Retailers Can Make Newspaper Space Pay, So Can Manufacturers."

ROY S. DURSTINE, Secretary-Treasurer, Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Inc., and President of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.—"Suggestions From the Advertising Agency Angle."

J. M. CLEARY, Sales Manager, The Studebaker Corporation of America.—"Why Is Free Publicity?"

Subjects for open discussion:

"Is a revision of the present Standard of Merchandising Practice for Newspapers, as adopted by the A. of N. A. E. in 1921, expedient?"

"What is the best current experience in defining local advertising and national advertising and what are the best methods of enforcing established policies?"

"What is the best method of handling situations arising when an advertising agency endeavors to cancel a contract that has been in effect for six or eight months in order to place a new contract for one year from its date?"

"How do national advertisers check up on results secured from periodical publication advertising?"

"Recently some newspapers have issued rate cards entirely eliminating cash discounts to agencies and allowing agency commissions only when payment is made in full on or before the 15th or the 20th of the month. Is this good practice for other newspapers to adopt?"

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
2:00 o'Clock, Promptly
Local Display Advertising

I. R. PARSONS, Advertising Director, The New York Telegram (formerly a department store advertising manager).—"Merchandising a Newspaper."

FRANK B. JENNINGS, Advertising Manager, The May Company, Cleveland.—"Is Circulation Your Chief Merchandise?"

EDWIN S. FRIENDLY, Business Manager, The New York Sun.—"Development of Modern Newspaper Advertising."

Subjects for open discussion:

"What are the best methods for selling special editions and what results are secured by the advertiser and by the newspaper?"

"Should special sections or editions at a high rate be encouraged?"

"What program might a newspaper suggest to merchants as a means of causing people to trade at home?"

"Should a newspaper combat merchants who advertise untruthfully?"

"What should be the attitude of newspapers toward requests from periodical publication advertisers urging the newspapers to sell so-called "tie-up" advertising to retailers?"

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
9:00 o'Clock, Promptly
Classified Advertising

WALTER W. MURDOCK, Classified Advertising Manager, The Detroit Free Press.—"Building Classified Advertising."

FRANK MCCABE, Classified Advertising Manager, The New York World.—"The Relative Importance of Classified and Display Advertising."

Open discussion of classified advertising problems will follow the two addresses. In case all discussions from previous sessions have not been completed, they will be taken up at this time.

Previous to this session the judges will have considered the various stories of newspaper advertising success that were entered in the competition for the A. L. Shuman trophy. Success stories specified by the judges will be presented at this session.

ASSOCIATION OF NEWSPAPER CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING MANAGERS

Price Hall—Law School, University of Pennsylvania
JUNE 22D AND 23D

Opening promptly at 9:00 o'clock, Tuesday, June 22d; Second Session, 1:30 o'clock; Third Session, 9:00 o'clock, Wednesday, June 23d; Fourth Session, 1:30 o'clock.

Note—As much of program as it is possible will be completed at each session, allowing as much time as seems desirable to each subject. The following session will begin where previous session finished.

Registration
President's Address
Secretary's Report
Treasurer's Report
Appointment of Committees

FUNDAMENTALS OF SALESMANSHIP APPLIED TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Chairman—WALTER W. MURDOCK, Manager, Classified Advertising, The Detroit Free Press, Detroit, Mich.

1. Selecting Employees.
2. Preliminary Training.
3. Getting Most Out of Street Salesmen.
4. Accomplishing Most Through Telephone Sales Work.

DEVELOPING VOLUNTARY BUSINESS

Chairman—HARRY GWALTNEY, Manager of Classified Advertising, The Milwaukee Journal, Milwaukee, Wis.

1. Fundamentals and Prerequisites.
2. Promotion in Your Paper.
3. Special Inducements to Advertisers.
4. Relation of Results to Voluntary Business.
5. Service.

PROMOTION

Chairman—C. L. PERKINS, Manager of Classified Advertising, The Chicago Herald-Examiner, Chicago, Ill.

1. Under What Conditions Should Promotion Be Directed to Readers, to Advertisers, to Both Advertisers and Readers?
2. Effect on Advertisers of Promotion Directed to Readers.
3. Is Promotion in Your Own Paper Sufficient or Should You Use Along with It Direct Mail Billboards?
4. Definite Policies in Promotion.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

5. Examples of Outstanding Accomplishments Resulting from Promotion.
6. Possibilities of Preparing Promotion Advertisements Without.
7. The Problem of Getting Space in Your Own Paper for Promotion Copy.
8. Should Novelties, Comic Strips, and Prizes to Readers Be Used, and if so, When?

NATIONALIZED MACHINERY TO PREVENT MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD

EDWARD L. GREENE, Manager of the National Better Business Bureau, New York, N. Y.

SERVICE AS APPLIED TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Chairman—R. E. SEILER, Manager of Classified Advertising, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles, Calif.

1. What Is Service in Classified Advertising?
2. Businesslike Conduct and Its Importance.
3. Importance of Expertly Trained and Competent Classified People.
4. Necessity of Keeping Salesmen Enthusiastic.
5. Necessity of Understanding Advertisers' Business.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS

Chairman—F. L. TATE, Manager of Classified Advertising, The Toronto Star, Toronto, Canada.

1. Routine and Detail of Billing Accounts.
2. Which Is Best Method of Making Collections?
3. Discounts.
4. Verification of Charges or Accounts.
5. Adjustments.
6. How Can Sales and Credit Departments Cooperate?
7. Training for Credit People.

OTHER SUBJECTS TO BE DISCUSSED

1. Censorship of Copy and Control of Agencies to Prevent Them from Offering Copy Repeatedly That Has Been Rejected.
2. Ways and Means of Securing Out-of-Town Advertising.
3. Developing and Handling Church Advertising.
4. What Should Be the Percentage Cost of the Classified Department?
5. Is There Any Particular Way to Build Rental Classifications?
6. Should the Same Rates Apply to All Classifications?
7. How to Handle Birth and Death Notices.
8. What, If Any, Merit Have Special Pages?
9. Are Combination Rates Logical and Do They Constitute Price Cutting?
10. Has Anybody Ever Built Voluntary Business on the Fourth Newspaper of a Metropolitan City?
11. Can We Get All Member Newspapers to Accept and Use the Association Rules on Censorship?
12. Why Can't the Association Conduct an Employment Bureau or Agency for the Benefit of Classified Workers and as a Help to Keep Good Men in the Classified Field.
13. Are Legal Notices Handled as Classified Advertising in Most Papers?
14. Should Classified Rates Be Higher Than Display Rates?
15. How Can We Get the Co-operation of Our Composing Room?
16. Wants Discussion of Typography and Display Classified.
17. Advisability, in View of Reader Interest, of Putting Such Classifications as Death Notices in Slop-over Pages or Near Back of Paper on Sundays.

Election of Officers.

Reports of Committees.

ASSOCIATED RETAIL ADVERTISERS

Logan Hall, Room 17, University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D

Opening at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—SHELDON R. COONS, President, Associated Retail Advertisers; Advertising and Sales Director of Gimbel Brothers, New York, N. Y.

9:30—Report of President.
Report of Secretary-Treasurer.
Appointment of Committees on Nominations and Resolutions.

Note—Important matters necessitate presence of all members at Business Session at 9:30. Your attendance will be appreciated.

10:00—"Advertising Representations and Its Responsibility from a Governmental Viewpoint"—HON. VERNON W. VAN FLEET, Member Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C.

10:30—Questions and Discussion.

10:45—"The Functions of the Publicity Department and Its Relation to the Organization Structure"—PAUL M. MAZUR, Lehman Brothers, New York, N. Y.

11:15—Questions and Discussion.

11:30—"Copy and Promotion: Market Street, Philadelphia, Versus Fifth Avenue, New York"—ADAM L. GIMBEL, Executive Head of Saks & Co., Fifth Avenue, New York N. Y.

12:15—Questions and Discussion.

Adjournment.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D

Opening at 2:30 o'Clock

Presiding—THOMAS P. COMEFORD, Publicity Director of A. I. Namm & Son, Brooklyn, N. Y.

2.30—"Working with the Retailer"—EDWARD L. GREENE, Managing Director, National Better Business Bureau, New York, N. Y.
To be introduced by H. J. Kenner, Vice-President and General Manager of the Better Business Bureau of New York City.

3:00—Questions and Discussion.

3:15—"The Change in Buying Appeal"—L. E. McGIVENA, Manager of Publicity, New York Daily News, New York, N. Y.

3:45—Questions and Discussion.

4:00—"The Graphic Age in Advertising"—LOUIS PEDLAR, Pedlar & Ryan, New York, N. Y.

4:30—Questions and Discussion.

4:45—Adjournment.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D

Opening at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—SHELDON R. COONS, President, Associated Retail Advertisers; Advertising and Sales Director, Gimbel Brothers, New York, N. Y.

9:30—Reports of Committees.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

9:45—"A Review of Advertising of the Past and Present With Certain Prognostications as to the Future"—IRVING R. PARSONS, Advertising Manager, New York Telegram, New York, N. Y.
10:15—Questions and Discussion.
10:30—"Using Direct Mail"—DAVID LAMPE, Advertising Manager, The Hub, Baltimore, Md.
11:00—Questions and Discussion.
11:15—"Style's the Thing"—AMOS PARRISH, Amos Parrish & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.
11:45—Questions and Discussion.
12:00—Election of Officers, Directors and National Commissioners.
Adjournment.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

College Hall, Room 200, University of Pennsylvania
TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 9:00 o'Clock

Presiding—DR. CHRISTIAN F. REISNER, President, Church Advertising Department, New York, N. Y.
"What Truths Shall We Advertise?"—REV. T. M. ARMSTRONG, Pastor, Groesbeck, Texas.
"Spiritual Principles in Advertising"—PROF. LEE A. WOLFARD, Marshall University, Huntington, W. Va.
"Using Advertising Experts"—REV. KERRISON JUNIPER, Pastor, First Congregational Church, St. Petersburg, Fla.
"Books the Church Advertiser Should Own"—GEORGE FRENCH, Montclair, N. J.
"Showing the Value of Church Advertising"— E. D. GIBBS, National Cash Register Co., Dayton, Ohio.
"A Sunday School Evening Audience Through Newspaper Publicity"—REV. J. ELMER RUSSELL, Pastor, North Presbyterian Church, Binghamton, N. Y.
"Advertising in Building a Bible Class"—H. V. JAMISON, Advertising Manager, American Sheet & Tin Plate Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.
"Reaching My Own Community"—REV. EARL HOON, D.D., Pastor, Hyde Park Methodist Episcopal Church, Cincinnati, Ohio.
"The Lutherans Advertise"—REV. HOWARD R. GOLD, Chairman, Committee on Publicity, United Lutheran Church in America, New Rochelle, N. Y.
"Ten Pastors' Experiences"—J. A. BUSWELL, Buswell Service, Kalamazoo, Mich.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—DR. CHRISTIAN F. REISNER.
"Ten Minutes With Twenty Pastors"—J. A. BUSWELL, Buswell Service, Kalamazoo, Mich.
"Examination of Sample Printed Church Advertisements With Expert Criticism"—(A one hour discussion.) Directed by EVART G. ROUTZAHN, Russell Sage Foundation, New York, Assisted by DOUGLAS C. MCMURTRIE, New York, N. Y.
"Outdoor Advertising"—CLARENCE B. LOVELL, Advertising Manager, General Outdoor Advertising Company, New York, N. Y.
"Sermon Topic Posters"—REV. ORVILLE S. DUFFIELD, Pastor, Cooper Memorial Methodist Church, Philadelphia, Pa.
"Securing Audiences Through Motion Pictures"—GEORGE J. ZEHRING, National Council, Y. M. C. A., New York, N. Y.
"Miscellaneous Plans"—HERBERT H. SMITH, Board of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., Philadelphia, Pa.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 9:00 o'Clock

Presiding—DR. CHRISTIAN F. REISNER.
"The Auditorial We"—JAMES SCHERMERHORN, Detroit, Mich.
"Advertising the Kingdom Through Press-Radio Service"—JAMES WRIGHT BROWN, Editor and Publisher, New York, N. Y.
"The Church Page"—REV. W. A. NICHOLS, Religious Editor, New York Evening Sun, New York, N. Y.
"Ideal 'Copy' for Newspaper Advertisements"—REV. G. P. BUTLER, Advertising Department, New York Times, New York, N. Y.
"What a Religious Editor Prints"—MISS RACHEL MCDOWELL, Religious Editor, New York Times, New York, N. Y.
"The Question of Co-operative Church Advertising"—(A one hour discussion.) REV. W. H. LEACH, Editor Church Management, presiding.
(a) "Success in Community Publicity"—E. P. BEEBE, Treasurer, Iron Age Publishing Company, New York, N. Y.

CONFERENCE OF ADVERTISING CLUB EXECUTIVES

Engineers' Bldg., Room 303, University of Pennsylvania
WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 9:00 o'Clock

President—NORMAN M. PARROTT, Secretary, Advertising Club of Baltimore, Md.
9:00—"A Message"—From C. K. WOODBRIDGE, President, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, New York, N. Y.
9:10—"A Well-Rounded Advertising Club"—DON K. THOMAS, Executive Secretary, Advertising Club of Los Angeles, Calif.
9:30—Questions and Discussion.
9:35—"Group Meetings (Departmentals)"—CLIFTON D. JACKSON, Executive Secretary, Advertising Club of New York.
9:45—Questions and Discussion.
9:50—"Announcements and Publicity"—LESTER C. NAGLEY, Executive Secretary, Advertising Club of Indianapolis.
10:00—"How Committees Should Function" —HAROLD M. HASTINGS, Executive Secretary of the Adcraft Club of Detroit.
10:20—"Machinery for Carrying Out Programs"—PAUL S. VAN AUKEN, Executive Secretary, Advertising Council of Chicago.
2:55—"District Conventions"—JOHN W. LONGNECKER, Chairman First District.
3:05—"Budgets"—(Speaker to be assigned.)
3:15—"Departmentalizing the Work of an Advertising Club"—ROBERT A. WARFEL, Executive Secretary, National Advertising Commission, New York, N. Y.
3:25—"A Story From Overseas"—(British speaker to be assigned.)
3:40—"Making Effective Use of the Speakers' Bureau"—(Speaker to be assigned.)
3:50—Recess.
4:00—Free for All Discussion.
This hour has been set aside for discussion of club problems that have not been covered by speakers and in previous discussions; led by Chairman Parrott.
10:35—"Conducting a Club With Volunteers Only"—HENRY F. HAGER, President of the Advertising Club of Muncie, Ind.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

10:50—Speaker from Great Britain. (Subject and name to come later.)
11:00—"Membership"—Open discussion to be led by Chairman Parrott.
11:20—"Club Work in Canada"—W. B. TINGLE, President of the Montreal Publicity Association.
Thirty minutes for questions on subjects that have been discussed this morning.
12:00—Adjourn for Lunch.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 23D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

2:00—"Club Finances"—(Ten minutes to full-time secretary and ten minutes to a volunteer secretary.)
2:20—Questions and Discussion.
2:35—"Club Service Department—Associated Advertising Clubs of the World"—ED HUNTER, Director, Club Service Department.
2:45—"Hints of Officers of Small Clubs"—REGINALD COLLEY, former President, Advertising Club of Fargo, N. D.; now Special Field Representative of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

DIRECT MAIL ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION

Zoological Laboratory, Room 10
University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—FRANK L. PIERCE, Executive Secretary, Direct Mail Advertising Association, Detroit, Mich.
2:00—"Handling Mailing Lists to Get the Best Results"—EDWARD COLEMAN, Publicity Department, Abraham & Straus, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y.
2:30—Discussion.
2:45—"Using Direct Mail to Make Space Advertising Effective"— S. E. CONYBEARE, Assistant Sales Manager in Charge of Advertising, Armstrong Cork Company, Lancaster, Pa.
3:15—Discussion.
3:30—"Getting Your Message Over to the Other Fellow"—A. M. CANDEE, Advertising Manager, The National Enameling & Stamping Company, Inc., Milwaukee, Wisc.
4:00—Discussion.
4:15—Address—HAROLD HERD, London, England.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE, 23D
Opening at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—ELMER J. ROEPER, Business Manager, The Postage Magazine, New York, N. Y.
9:30—"Reducing Sales Costs Through Good Printing"—WATSON M. GORDON, S. D. Warren Company, Boston, Mass.
10:00—Discussion.
10:15—"The Place of a House Organ in a General Advertising Program" —E. R. MANCHESTER, Editor, DuPont Magazine, E. I. DuPont DeNemours & Co., Wilmington, Del.
10:45—Disscussion.
11:00—"Better Direction in Direct Mail Selling"—S. ROLAND HALL, Advertising Agency Service, Easton, Pa.
11:30—Discussion.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 23D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—ROBERT E. RAMSAY, President, The Robert E. Ramsay Organization, New York, N. Y., and Past President, the Direct Mail Advertising Association.
2:00—"You Can't Say 'No' to the Ceiling"—STREETER BLAIR, Treasurer, The Havens-Blair-Cartlich Company, Kansas City, Mo.
2:30—Discussion.
2:45—"The Postal Situation from a Government Viewpoint"—HON. ROBERT S. REGAR, Third Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.
3:15—"The Postal Situation from a Mail User's Viewpoint"—RICHARD H. LEE, National Council of Business Mail Users, New York, N. Y.
4:00—Discussion.

FINANCIAL ADVERTISERS' ASSOCIATION

Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Broad Street

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Open at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—H. ENNIS JONES, Franklin Trust Company, Philadelphia, Pa.; Chairman, Program Committee.
9:35—Address of Welcome—E. T. STOTESBURY, Drexel & Co., Philadelphia.
9:50—Response by CARROLL RAGAN, United States Mortgage & Trust Co., New York, N. Y.; President Financial Advertisers' Association.
10:00—"Are Banks Advertising Their Community or Should They?"—T. H. SEWELL, Ohio Savings Bank & Trust Co., Toledo, Ohio.
10:25—"Living Up to Your Bank's Advertising"—O. HOWARD WOLFE, Philadelphia Girard National Bank, Philadelphia, Pa.
10:45—"Advertising: The Biggest Financial Issue in the World's History"—JAMES HOWARD PERKINS, Advertising Manager, Goodall, Blackhouse & Co., Leeds, England.
11:00—"Selling Trust Service"—FRANCIS H. SISSON, Guaranty Trust Company, New York, N. Y.
11:40—"Life Insurance Trusts"—CLINTON F. BERRY, Union Trust Company, Detroit, Mich.; 2d Vice-President, Financial Advertisers' Association.
12:10—Announcement by President CARROLL RAGAN.
12:15—Adjournment.
1:00—Luncheons:
"Savings Department"—FREDERICK H. P. SIDDONS. American Security & Trust Co., Washington, D. C.
"Trust Department"—PAUL HARDESTY, Union Trust Company, Chicago, Ill.
"Commercial Department"—GUY W. COOKE, First National Bank, Chicago, Ill.
"Investment Department"—EDMUND BOUSHELLE, A. B. Leach & Co., New York, N. Y.
2:00—Historical Tour of Philadelphia and Valley Forge. Leaving from Headquarters Hotel.

GENERAL MAGAZINE REPRESENTATIVES

College Hall, Room 205, University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 10:00 o'Clock

Presiding—A. M. CAREY, Advertising Manager, International Studio, New York; Chairman, Magazine Group, Advertising Club of New York.
10:00—Organization and General Discussion.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

10:30—"Cultivating the Advertising Prospect for the Magazine Salesmen"—PHILLIP KOBBE, Phillip Kobbe Company, New York, N. Y.
11:10—"The Present Day Methods of Selling Magazine Advertising"—Three minute talks by magazine advertising specialists.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—GILBERT T. HODGES of the Executive Board, Frank A. Munsey Company, New York; President, Magazine Club of New York.
2:00—"The Magazine as a Social Force"—REV. DR. A. RAY PETTY, Pastor, Grace Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, Pa.
2:35—"The Place of the Magazine in the Advertising Schedule"—G. LYNN SUMNER, President, G. Lynn Sumner Company, New York, N. Y.
3:05—"Magazines as Advertising Media in England"—IVOR NICHOLSON, Business Manager, National Magazine Company, Ltd., London, England.
3:50—"Some Recent Developments in Circulation Statistics"—PAUL T. CHERINGTON, Director of Research, J. Walter Thompson Company, New York, N. Y.
4:25—"The Part Played by Magazines in the Educational Development of the Nation"—PROF. HAROLD J. STONIER, University of Southern California, Palo Alto, Calif.

GRAPHIC ARTS DEPARTMENT
Engineers' Bldg., Room 323, University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 10:00 o'Clock

Presiding—J. LINTON ENGLE, President, The Holmes Press, Philadelphia, Pa.
10:00—"Advertising Ahead of Salesmen and Getting the Salesmen Behind the Advertising"—JACK W. SPEARE, Advertising and Sales Promotion Counsel, Rochester, N. Y.
10:30—Discussion.
10:35—"How the Printer Can Best Help the Advertiser"—BERNARD LICHTENBERG, Assistant Director of Advertising, Alexander Hamilton Institute, New York.
11:05—Discussion.
11:10—"Getting the Advertiser's Point of View Into Typography"—W. ARTHUR COLE, Vice-President, The Corman Company, New York, N. Y.; President, American Institute of Graphic Arts.
11:40—Discussion.
11:45—"Helping to Solve the Merchandising Problem"—DANIEL B. HASSINGER, Art Director, Robert Gair Company, New York, N. Y.
12:15—Discussion.
12:20—"A Message From Overseas"—WILLIAM CONNOR, Artist, Belfast, Ulster.
12:45—Adjournment.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 10:00 o'Clock

Presiding—J. LINTON ENGLE.
10:00—"What We Expect in the Way of Help From Printers"—VERNE BURNETT, Secretary, Institutional Advertising Committee, General Motors Corp., Detroit, Mich.
10:30—Discussion.
10:35—"Copy and Illustration"—JAMES WALLEN, Advertising Counselor, New York, N. Y.
11:05—Discussion.
11:10—"Shall Printers Become Advertising Men?"—CHARLES AUSTIN BATES, Advertising Counselor, New York,, N. Y.
11:40—Discussion.
11:45—"Why Quality Adds to the Effectiveness of Printed Matter"—DAVID SILVE, Consulting Typographer, New York, N. Y.
12:15—Discussion.
12:20—Departmental Business.
12:45—Adjournment.

INSURANCE ADVERTISING CONFERENCE
Benjamin Franklin Hotel

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 9:00 o'Clock

Group sessions of the three groups which make up the personnel of the Insurance Advertising Conference:
Life Group—Presiding—B. N. MILLS, Advertising Manager, Bankers' Life Insurance Company, Des Moines, Iowa.
Fire Group—Presiding—JOHN W. LONGNECKER, Advertising Manager, Hartford Fire Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn.
Casualty and Surety Group—Presiding—SIDNEY C. DOOLITTLE, Publication Manager, Fidelity and Deposit Company, Baltimore, Md.
12:20—Luncheon—Presiding—EDWARD A. COLLINS, President, Insurance Advertising Conference.
Speaker—CHARLES H. HOLLAND, President, The Independence Companies, Philadelphia, Pa.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:30 o'Clock

Presiding—WARREN W. ELLIS, Vice-President, Insurance Advertising Conference; Manager of Sales Promotion, Commercial Union Assurance Company, New York, N. Y.
2:30—"Blotter—An Expensive Habit or a Selling Investment?"—FRANKLIN DORCET, Whittet & Shepperson, Richmond, Va.
3:00—"The Insurance Advertising Exhibit"—A group of selected speakers, and discussions under direction of the Exhibit Committee, MISS ALICE E. ROCHE, Chairman.
4:30—Annual Business Meeting and Election of Officers.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF TEACHERS OF ADVERTISING AND MARKETING
Law School, Room 1, University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—PROF. EDWARD J. KILDUFF, Chairman, Department of Business English, New York University, New York, N. Y.; President, National Association of Teachers of Advertising and Marketing.
"Supplementary Assignments for the Study of Advertising"—NEIL N. BORDEN, Assistant Dean, Harvard University, Boston, Mass.
"Supplementary Assignments for the Study of Marketing"—PROF. NATHANIEL W. BARNES, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.

TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 6:30 o'Clock
Benjamin Franklin Hotel

Presiding—PROF. EDWARD J. KILDUFF, New York, N. Y.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

"What the University Can Do to Prepare Men and Women for Work in Advertising Agencies"—WILFRED W. FRY, President, N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia, Pa.

"What the University Can Do to Prepare Men and Women for the Business Side of Periodical Publishing"—WILLIAM BOYD, Advertising Director, The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF THEATRE PROGRAM PUBLISHERS

Engineers' Bldg., Room 209, University of Pennsylvania

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 10:30 o'Clock

Presiding—E. E. BRUGH, President, National Association of Theatre Program Publishers, Chicago, Ill.

10:30—Call to order by the President.

10:40—Report of progress of the Association in the past year.

Report of accomplishments of the National Advertising Commission.

11:30—"Selling Advertising"—J. C. CHEVALIER, Secretary, New York Theatre Program Corporation, New York, N. Y.

12:15—Luncheons.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 23D
Opening at 1:20 o'Clock

1:30—"The Use of Theatre Programs for Topics and Information of Civic and Community Interests"—CHARLES F. HATFIELD, President, American Community Advertising Association, St. Louis, Mo.

2:00—"Opportunity to Improve Treatre Programs and Broaden Our Service to the Advertiser"—E. E. BRUGH, Clyde W. Riley Advertising System, Chicago, Ill.

2:30—Reports from All Members of Association.

Clyde W. Riley Advertising System—E. E. Brugh, Chicago, Ill.

Arthur M. Levy, Cleveland, Ohio.

Theatre Program Corporation of Detroit, Mich.

James G. Sprecher, Los Angeles, Calif.

L. N. Scott, Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.

New York Theatre Program Corporation, Ralph Trier, R. M. Huber, J. C. Chevalier.

The Mills Advertising Company, Omaha, Nebr.

Unique Advertising Company, Rockford, Ill.

National Advertising Company, San Francisco, Calif.

3:00—Election of Officers for Ensuing Year.

3:30—Adjournment.

OUTDOOR ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC.

Engineers' Bldg., Room 314, University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—HARRY F. O'MEALIA, President, Outdoor Advertising Association of America, Inc.

Address of Welcome—PRESIDENT O'MEALIA.

"The Influence of Posters on the American Public"—HARVEY CONOVER, Director Creative Bureau, Chicago, Ill.

"The Economic Necessity of Outdoor Advertising"—PROF. A. L. GARDNER, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisc.

"Why a National Advertiser Should Use Outdoor Advertising"—MONT H. WRIGHT, Publicity Director, John B. Stetson Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

"The Refinements of Outdoor Advertising"—KERWIN H. FULTON, President, General Outdoor Advertising Co., Inc.

"The Road to More Markets"—SIR WILLIAM HENRY VENO, Advertising Advisor, Veno Drug Co., Ltd., The Woodlands, Altrincham, Cheshire, England.

"Outdoor Advertising and Financial Institutions"—PRESTON REED, Secretary, Financial Advertisers' Association.

"The Art of the Poster"—WILLY POGANY, World Famous Artist and Noted Designer of Stage Settings and Posters.

"Marketing Pennsylvania's Products"—E. ALLEN FROST, Legal Counsel, Outdoor Advertising Association of America, Inc., Chicago, Ill.

Open Discussion.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 10:00 o'Clock

(In conjunction with Annual Meeting the Pennsylvania Outdoor Advertising Association.)

Presiding—HARRY F. O'MEALIA, President, Outdoor Advertising Association of America, Inc.

"A Better Understanding of America's Markets"—Representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"The Community and the Poster"—DON E. MOWRY, Secretary, American Community Advertising Association.

"A Message from the Advertising Profession of England"—J. K. TRUEMAN, Associated Newspapers, Ltd., London, England.

"Where Outdoor Advertising Gets Its Power"—SAMUEL N. HOLLIDAY, Assistant to the President, General Outdoor Advertising Company, Inc., New York.

"Self-Government in Outdoor Advertising and Community Development"—I. W. DIGGES, Secretary General Outdoor Advertising Company, Inc.

"The Credo of Outdoor Advertising"—CLARENCE B. LOVELL, General Manager, Outdoor Advertising Association of America, Inc., Chicago.

"The Relationship Between Advertising Mediums"—Representative of the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives.

"Outdoor Advertising for the Church"—W. N. BAYLESS, Bayless-Kerr Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

Open Discussion.

PHILADELPHIA CLUB OF ADVERTISING WOMEN

MRS. ELLEN S. PATTEN, President
MISS FLORENCE M. DART, Chairman Convention

SUNDAY EVENING, JUNE 20TH, 6 o'Clock

Reception and Dinner in honor of the Overseas Delegates. Admittance by Card. Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Hostess, MISS CLARE V. FEY.

TUESDAY, JUNE 22D, 12:30 P. M.

Luncheon for Women Members of the A. A. C. of W. preceding Annual Business Session. Penn Athletic Club. Hostess, MISS MARY J. DENTON.

Program—

"What the Woman Consumer Wants to Know"—MISS EDITH M. BURTIS, Secretary, The Silent Partner, and special syndicate writer for the Philadelphia Ledger.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

ADDRESS—LT.-COL. EDWARD FREDERICK LAWSON, Assistant Manager and Proprietor, London Daily Telegraph.

"The Value of Membership to Advertising Women in Women's Clubs"—MISS HAZEL LUDWIG, Manager Research Department, D'Arcy Advertising Co.; Past President, Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis.

Business Session:
Report—Executive Committee Member.
Report of Officers.
Awarding Toledo Trophy.
Three-Minute Report by Club Presidents.
Election of Officers.

TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 22D, 9 P. M.

GRAND BALL, to which are invited all the members and delegates, guests of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and affiliated Clubs of this City. Hostess, MISS WILHELMINA KANE.

PUBLIC UTILITIES ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION

Auditorium, Harrison Laboratory
University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 10:00 o'Clock

Presiding—WILLIAM H. HODGE, Byllesby Engineering & Management Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; President, Public Utilities Advertising Association.

Announcements by Convention Arrangements Committee—J. S. S. RICHARDSON, Director, Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee, Widener Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Secretary's Report—DEMPSTER MACMURPHY, Secretary, Public Utilities Advertising Association, Chicago, Ill.

Treasurer's Report—C. W. PERSON, American Gas Association, New York, N. Y.

Geographic Sections Report—W. P. STRANDBORG, Portland Railway, Light and Power Company, Portland, Ore.

Presentation of 1926 Advertising Portfolio, Containing 500 Representative Public Utility Advertisements—IRVING M. TUTEUR, McJunkin Advertising Company, Chicago, Ill.

"Some Costs and Results Figures"—E. PAUL YOUNG, A. E. Fitkin & Co., New York, N. Y.

"Outdoor Advertising for Public Utilities"— J. J. MORAN, Commercial Manager, Chicago Rapid Transit Company, Chicago, Ill.

"Radio Broadcasting in Advertising"—MARTIN P. RICE, Director of Broadcasting, General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22D
Opening at 2:00 o'Clock

Presiding—LEONARD ORMEROD, Vice-President, Public Utilities Advertising Association, Philadelphia, Pa.

President's Address—WILLIAM H. HODGE.

Address by PAUL S. CLAPP, United States Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Address by LOUIS WILEY, Business Manager, New York Times, New York, N. Y.

Address by W. N. TEASDALE, Advertising Manager, London & North Eastern Railway, London, England.

REAL ESTATE ADVERTISERS' ASSOCIATION

Philadelphia Real Estate Board
13th and Locust Streets

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening 10:00 o'Clock

Presiding—W. EDWIN BLAIR, President, Real Estate Advertisers' Association; President, Blair, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.

"Promotion of Real Estate as an Investment" —E. T. PURCELL, Advertising Manager, Coral Gables Company, Miami, Fla.

"Advertising and Selling of the Co-operative Apartment House"—FREDERICK CONE, President, Andrew Cone General Advertising Agency, New York, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 10:00 o'Clock

Presiding—MISS GERTRUDE BANKS, Secretary, Real Estate Advertisers' Association; Advertising Manager, J. S. Bradley Company, Toledo, Ohio.

"Building Home Communities Through Advertising"—WILLIAM H. WILSON, President, William H. Wilson & Co.; Past President, Philadelphia Real Estate Board; Past Vice-President, National Association of Real Estate Boards, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Co-ordination of Display and Classified Real Estate Advertising"—HERBERT W. HESS, Ph.D., Professor of Merchandising, Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.

SOCIAL WELFARE ADVERTISING CONFERENCE

Law School Bldg., Room 2, University of Pennsylvania

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 23D
Opening at 9:30 o'Clock

Presiding—EVART G. ROUTZAHN, Russell Sage Foundation, New York, N. Y.

This conference will include a discussion of the following subjects:
What Advertising Has Done by Social Agencies.
What Help Has Been Given by Associated Clubs.
What Are the Chief Problems in Advertising Social Work?
Is There a Service Opportunity for Advertising Clubs and Advertising People?
Should There Be a Department on Advertising Social Welfare?

WINDOW DISPLAY ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION

Engineers' Bldg., Room 311,
University of Pennsylvania

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22D
Opening at 10:00 o'Clock

Presiding—FRANK C. KENYON, JR., Manager Sales Promotion Congoleum-Nairn, Inc.; Vice-President, Window Display Advertising Association.

"Push vs. Pull in Window Displays"—HERBERT W. HESS, Ph.D., Professor of Merchandising, Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania.

Discussion—Ten Minutes.

"Farm Market Window Displays"—B. J. PARSONS, formerly with J. Walter Thompson Company, now Director of Merchandising, Standard Farm Unit, Chicago, Ill.

Discussion—Ten Minutes.

"Business a Business With Window and Store Displays" —SAMUEL C. DOBBS, former President, Coca Cola Company; former President, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Discussion—Ten Minutes.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

GENERAL SESSION

Auditorium, University Museum, University of Pennsylvania

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 24TH

Presiding—LOU E. HOLLAND, Kansas City. Past President, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; President, National Better Business Bureau.

9:00—Music.

9:30—HON. WILLIAM M. JARDINE, Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.—"The Business of Agriculture."

10:10—JUDGE C. E. LOBDELL, Fiscal Agent, Federal Land Bank, Washington, D. C.—"Financing the Farmer."

10:50—LAURICE T. MORELAND, George Batten Company, Boston, Mass.—"The Influence of Advertising Upon the Home."

11:20—DR. GLENN FRANK, President, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisc.—"Business and the Social Future."

12:00—Adjournment.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 24TH

2:30—Music.

3:00—Annual Business Meeting.

Report of Secretary-Treasurer, JESSE H. NEAL.

Report of Federation of Women's Advertising Clubs, MISS ETHEL B. SCULLY.

Report of Committees:

Constitution and By-Laws—GEORGE W. HOPKINS, Chairman.

Educational—PAUL T. CHERINGTON, Chairman.

Speakers' Bureau—E. D. GIBBS, Chairman.

Washington Service Advisory Committee—F. M. RANDALL, Chairman.

Exhibit Commitee—CHARLES R. FREDERICKSON, Chairman.

International Advertising Club Relations—FREDERICK M. FEIKER, Chairman.

Reforestation—MALCOLM MUIR, Chairman.

ENTERTAINMENT

WEDNESDAY EVENING, 9:30 to 11:30 P. M.

COLLOSAL MUSIC FESTIVAL AND PATRIOTIC PAGEANT

AMERICA

PERIOD ONE

8:30—Grand Procession of Chorus and Band—"American Patrol."

9:00—Massed Chorus—"Song of World Adventurer.

9:04—Tableau and Pantomime—Court of Isabelle and Ferdinand. Isabelle pledges jewels to Columbus for voyage of discovery.

Tableau — Columbus, Isabella, Ferdinand, Cardinal and 14 other characters—18 characters.

Portrayed by Matinee Musical Club.

Ballet—"Espagna"—Chabrier.

9:14—Massed Chorus "Gloria" from the Twelfth Mass—Mozart.

PERIOD TWO

(Colonial) 1700-1800

9:20—Tableau—Landing of the Pilgrims. Portrayed by the members of Plays and Players. Given under the sanction and support of the Mayflower Siciety.

"Pilgrims' Chorus" from Tannhauser—Wagner Massed Chorus.

9:23—Attack on Stockade and Indian Massacre. Red Men.

9:28—Tableau of Penn with Indians. Portrayed by the Poor Richard Club.

9:33—Tableau—Declaration of Independence—Poor Richard Club.

Procession of Colonists—Philadelphia Music Club.

Washington's Reception at Trenton. Staged by Colonial Dames.

Original arch in the picture is in the barracks at Trenton. (See description of reception.)

Minuet—Ballet—"Marchianza."

9:43—Procession—Flags of 13 Colonies.

Coronation March from "The Prophet."

9:53—Betsy Ross—Tableau "The First Flag."

5 characters—Portrayed by Daughters of the American Revolution. At right, the tableau of "The Spirit of '76," by the Sons of the Revolution. 4 characters. At left, tableau of "Minute Men."

Chorus—"Land of Hope and Glory"—Elgar.

PERIOD THREE

1800-1876

10:00—Sham Battle—Soldiers, Sailors, Marines—Navy Yard.

10:10—Fort McHenry—Tableau—Flag on Rampart.

Procession of Soldiers—Second City Troop—Captain Kinsley.

10:12—"Largo" from New World Symphony—Massed Chorus.

Scene—Uncle Tom's Cabin.

"Deep River"—Burleigh.

Lincoln Tableau.

Littlefield Pickaninny Ballet.

PERIOD FOUR

10:15—Processional—State Fencibles—2d Troop, etc.

Flags of all States and Territories.

American Medley.

10:25—Drill—Soldiers, Sailors and Marines—"Over There."

10:35—"America For Me"—Massed Chorus.

5 minutes.

10:40—Armistice Day—"Victory Ball"—Ballet.

20 minutes.

11:00—Americanization — Flag Business — Massed Bands.

"Stars and Stripes."

11:10—Penn Athletic Club—Progress of Sport.

11:20—Ensemble—"America."

Curtain—11:26-11:30.

And when you return downtown—the cabaret from 11:30 p. m. to 2:00 a. m., aided by—

PROVIDENCE, R. I. WOMAN'S CLUB, Bellevue-Stratford

MILWAUKEE ADVERTISING CLUB.....Ritz-Carlton

PUBLIC UTILITIES ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION, Adelphia

NEW YORK WOMAN'S CLUB.....Walton

LANCASTER ADVERTISING CLUB.....Arcadia

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION, Sylvania

NEW STORY OF PHILADELPHIA PIONEER JOURNALISM

(Written for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By JAMES MELVIN LEE,

Director of Department of Journalism, New York University, and author of "History of American Journalism"

PHILADELPHIA, bewigged and beknickered, set a swift pace for exhibitions when, in July, 1788, it celebrated the adoption of the Constitution. The Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, who incidentally in his published works left a most vivid account of this celebration, was Francis Hopkinson.

Mention of Hopkinson in this article, however, will confine itself not to how

F. HOPKINSON,

Intimate of Franklin and close student of Philadelphia's struggling pioner press he led the parade, but to how he molded without any direct editorial control public opinion in Philadelphia. Thomas Jefferson once spoke of the National Gazette as having saved our Constitution "which was galloping fast into monarchy and has been checked by no means so powerful as by that paper." I may well conclude, therefore, a little account of the journalistic activities of Philip Freneau, well known as the "poet of the Revolution," but not so well known as the editor of the National Gazette.

In the history of American journalism no editor has been more severely criticized than William Cobbett whose newspaper career in this country was practically limited to Philadelphia. Yet so careful a critic as Allan Nevins, the official historian of the New York Evening Post, lately remarked that Cobbett was the greatest journalist of his time, in England or in America. Consequently, I want to present a little different picture of Cobbett than that which has previously appeared in print in America.

The cradle days of Philadelphia newspapers, having been treated somewhat fully in my "History of American Journalism," may be passed over with only brief mention. The first newspaper in Philadelphia—as any school boy knows, to use Macaulay's pet phrase—was the American Weekly Mercury established Dec. 22, 1719, by Andrew Bradford, the founder of the newspaper press in the Middle States of America. Until May 25, 1721, John Copson, a Philadelphia bookseller, seems to have been associated with Bradford in the sale of the Mercury. From the latter date the imprint was "Philadelphia; printed and sold by Andrew Bradford at the Bible, in Second street, and also by William Bradford, in New York, where advertisements are taken in." The William Bradford mentioned in the imprint was the father who on Nov. 8, 1725, published in New York its first paper, the New York Gazette. But this is another story that was well told in EDITOR & PUBLISHER in Nov. 1925.

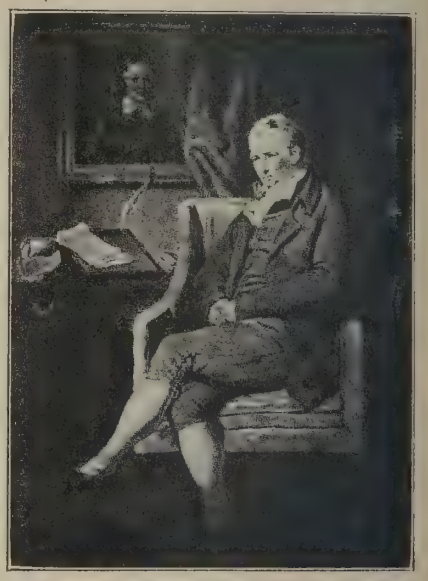
Little local news appears in issues of the Mercury. But the advertisements in this paper and those that followed tell the story of the industrial and commercial growth of Philadelphia. Stationery, for example, is always a pretty good index of station—commercial or social. The daily paper that today carries ads of embossed stationery indicate that some readers have money to spend on luxuries. In a similar way when the American Mercury began to advertise "very good paper, gilt paper for letters, very nice ink stands of various sorts," the proof is rather positive that wealth was increasing in Philadelphia.

For 23 years Andrew Bradford conducted the Mercury. Of course he had trouble with public authorities for printing disagreeable facts and, like other colonial editors, he had inside information about the Philadelphia prison. But his sentence, supplemented by that of his father, gave Andrew Hamilton the background that enabled this great Philadelphia lawyer to defend so ably the cause of John Peter Zenger of New York where the liberty of the press in America was first established by legal decision.

After the death of Andrew Bradford on Nov. 24, The Mercury was continued by his widow, Cornelia Bradford. Just how long she continued publication is not definitely known, but the date of the last issue still preserved is that of May 22, 1746. The Bradford family, however, continues for years to be linked with Philadelphia journalism.

The second paper in Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Gazette, had an unusually long life for a colonial newspaper. It started with an "advertisement" dated Oct. 1, 1728. But the first issue appeared December 24, 1728, with the name of Samuel Keimer in the imprint. On Oct. 2, 1729, B. Franklin, from whom Keimer got the idea of starting the paper, became part owner and on May 11, 1732 he became the sole proprietor. Later he took into partnership David Hall who had a genius for business organization and the two made the Pennsylvania Gazette one of the most influential papers of colonial days. The Pennsylvania Gazette lasted until Oct. 11, 1815, when it was forced to suspend for lack of public support.

The Bradford family reappears in Philadelphia journalism when William Bradford, a grandson of New York's first newspaper publisher, started the Pennsylvania Journal on December 2, 1742. If Benjamin Franklin was the victor in the newspaper battle with Andrew Bradford, he had to bow before the genius of William Bradford III whose Pennsylvania Journal pressed to the front and which was, after the passage of the Stamp Act, the most powerful paper in Philadelphia until in turn it yielded to the Freeman's Journal when America had obtained its independence from Great Britain. The last known issue of the Pennsylvania Journal is that for Sept. 18, 1793. The story of the Pennsylvania Gazette and that of the Pennsylvania Journal have already been told in a series of articles which I contributed to the EDITOR & PUBLISHER in 1917 on "The Growth and Development of American Journalism." But in that series I did scant justice to the Freeman's Journal.



The historical facts about the Freeman's Journal occupy but little space for its life was only a little more than a decade. Established in Philadelphia on April 25, 1781, by Francis Bailey, who had come to Philadelphia from Lancaster, Pa., where he had a printing house on Spring street, it remained under his control until May 9, 1792, when it was sold to James Scott. The latter publisher, however, only printed two issues: his last number was dated May 16, 1792.

At the close of the Revolution it led all other Philadelphia newspapers. To its editorial mast Bailey nailed the following, "To encourage genius, to deter vice, and disrobe tyranny and misrule of every plumage." But what gave the paper its preeminence was its staff of contributing editors for which a definite bid was made, "Open to Queries, Hints, Cards, Satires, Essays, Strictures, Dissertations, Poems, Advertisements extraordinary, etc."

Among these staff contributors and editorial advisers were two of these three men mentioned at the opening of this chat. In its columns appeared many of the patriotic poems of Freneau and some of his best satirical squibs. These contributions from Freneau's pen appeared from 1781 to 1785. Francis Hopkinson divided honors with Freneau in the Freeman's Journal. To them belong the authorship of the satirical pieces to lampoon the Tory editors of New York.

What angered both of these gentlemen was that New York printers during the Revolution had used their presses to flood the country with counterfeit continental money. The counterfeits were so well done that they could not be distinguished from the genuine: they did much to cause the truth of the assertion, "Not worth a continental." Freneau, who had served in the ranks and doubtless had had experience with continental currency, may be excused if at times he was extremely bitter when writing on this topic.

Hopkinson was the son of Thomas Hopkinson who came from London to Philadelphia in 1731, and who ten years later succeeded Andrew Hamilton as Judge of the Vice-Admiralty for Pennsylvania. Hopkinson was the intimate friend of Franklin and they were associated together in many enterprises—educational and scientifical in character. The college of Philadelphia—now the University of Pennsylvania—owes its existence to Franklin and Hopkinson.

WILLIAM COBBETT,

Early Philadelphia editor, often criticized, but by Allan Nevins called the greatest journalist of his time.

Hopkinson's letters show that he was a close student of the press in Philadelphia. In writing to Jefferson, for example, Hopkinson said that "you will be surprised when I tell you that our public newspapers have announced General Washington to be a Fool influenced & led by that Knave Dr. Franklin who is a public Defaulter for Millions of Dollars, that Mr. Morris has defrauded the Public out of as many Millions as you please & that they are to cover their frauds by this new Government."

The following quotation refers to articles which Hopkinson prepared for The Freeman's Journal and shows how extensively he was quoted in exchanges:

> I had the Luck to discover & bring forward into public View on sufficient Testimony the writer of a Series of abominable abuse, under the Signature Philadelphiensis, he is an Irishman who came from Dublin about 3 years ago & got admitted as Tutor in Arithmetic in our University. I am now under the Lash for this Discovery, scarce a Day's papers without my appearance in the newspaper in every scandalous Garb that scribbling Vengeance can furnish. I wrote also a piece stiled The New Roof which had a great Run. I would send you a copy but for the Postage. You will probably see it in some of the Papers, as it was reprinted in, I believe, every State.

In much the same way, the patriotic poems which Freneau contributed to The Freeman's Journal were reprinted in other papers throughout the country—often without credit. Of the poems which attacked the Tory publishers of New York possibly the most famous was "Rivington's Last Will and Testament" which first appeared in The Freeman's Journal on Feb. 27, 1782, after having been advertised in the issue for Feb. 20. Freneau was much more bitter toward Rivington than toward Gaine.

In the poem "Rivington's Confessions"

Price of Stocks, Exchange, Price Current, &c.

... Bills of Exchange, in the several Colonies to the first in our Magazine for January, except the fourth ...

... New-York, 140 to 150*l.* Currency is given for 100*l.* Ster. ... In East-New-Jersey, Ditto. In West-New-Jersey, 130*l.* ... 100*l.* Sterl. In Pennsylvania, Ditto.

Price Current in Philadelphia

..., per Bushel,	5*s.* to 6*s.*	Muscovado Sugar,	3*d.*
..., per Hundred,	26*s.* to 28*s.*	West-India Rum, per Gall.	2*s.* 9*d.*
..., White,	8*s.*	New-England Ditto,	2*s.* 4*d.*
... Middling,	3*s.*	Molasses,	1*s.* 6*d.*
... Brown,	2*s.*

ADVERTISEMENT.

Maryland, Charles County, May 20. 1742.

"Here is a FERRY kept over Potomack, (by the Subscriber) being the Post Road, and much the nighest from Annapolis to Williamsburg, where all Gentlemen may depend on a ready Passage in a good new Boat and able Hands.

By RICHARD BEST, Deputy-Post-Master at Potomack.

ERRATA.

Page 342, line 9, and line 32, for Asia, read Asia.

THE GENERAL MAGAZINE,
AND
Historical Chronicle,
For all the British Plantations in America.

[To be Continued Monthly.]

JUNE, 1742.

VOL. I. NUMB. VI.

PHILADELPHIA:
Printed and Sold by B. FRANKLIN.

Ben Franklin's Monthly newspaper, in its sixth number, carried on its back page the advertisement of a ferry which crossed the Potomac River from Annapolis to Williamsburg, described as "a good new boat" in "able hands."

IMMORTALS OF AMERICA'S FREE PRESS INSTITUTION

—addressed to the Whigs of New York —Freneau thus pays his respects to Rivington and the latter's paper:

My paper is alter'd—good people don't fret—
I call it no longer The Royal Gazette;
To me a great monarch has lost all his charms.
I have pull'd down his Lion, and trampled his Arms.
While fate was propitious, I thought they might stand
(You know I was zealous for George's command).
But since he disgrac'd it, and left us behind.
If I thought him an angel, I've alter'd my mind.
On the very same day that his army went hence
I ceas'd to tell lies for the sake of his pence:
And what was the reason? the true one is best.
I worship no suns when they hang to the west.

On the press of The Freeman's Journal was printed the first collected edition of Freneau's poems (1786). Advertisements of the volume contained the following:

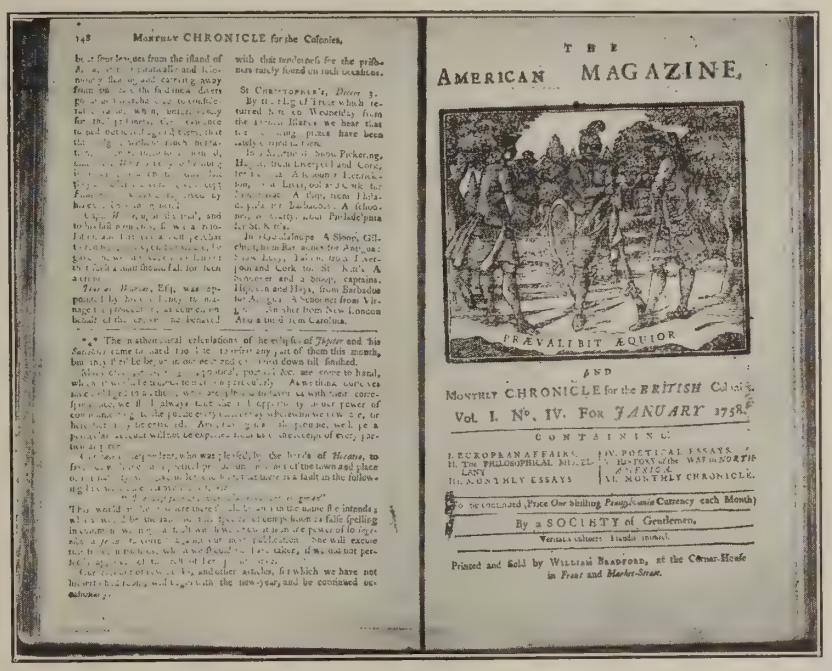
A considerable number of the performances contained in this volume, as many will recollect, have appeared at different times in Newspapers (particularly The Freeman's Journal) and other periodical publications in the different States of America, during the late war and since.

References to Hopkinson and to Freneau, however, should not detract from the journalistic ability of Francis Bailey. At times when a big news story broke he did not hesitate to rip open his front page and print the facts in streamer heads stretching clear across the page. The reproduction of his issue for Oct. 24, 1781, shows how he featured the surrender of Cornwallis to Washington. The story in the first column refers to a Philadelphia magazine which will be mentioned more in detail in another article in this issue.

After The Freeman's Journal was discontinued the most powerful paper in Philadelphia—possibly in the entire country—was the National Gazette established in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1791, and published by Philip Freneau, who by this time enjoyed wide popularity because of his poems. In its columns Freneau was a strenuous advocate of Jeffersonian doctrines and at the same time he held an appointment under Jefferson in the State Department.

Another rival paper was the Gazette of the United States edited by John Fenno, who was a propagandist for Hamilton and held an appointment under Hamilton in the Treasury Department. The latter paper had been established in New York City April 11, 1789. But when the Government had been moved to Philadelphia this Hamiltonian organ went with it.

Space, even in an article devoted to the press of Philadelphia, does not permit a detailed account of the bitter conflict between these two personal political papers of which the more ably edited was unquestionably the National Gazette. Democratic papers all through the country took their cue from Freneau's paper. In the South where but few newspapers had been established the National Gazette had a wide circulation. Its popularity to some extent was due to the fact that Freneau spoke for the masses rather than the classes.



Washington was not often moved to profanity, but the National Gazette, in the language of the street, often "got his goat." Time and time again Washington uttered a string of oaths against that "rascal Freneau who sends me three copies of his paper every day, as if he thought I would be a distributor of his paper." Indeed, Washington wanted Jefferson to fire Freneau. It was when Washington made this request that Jefferson made that reply about how The National Gazette had saved the Constitution, but admitted at the same time that "some bad things have passed through it to the public," yet on the whole that "the good have predominated immensely." Much of the matter, however, that was appearing in Philadelphia papers at the time would not make pleasant reading today for gatherings of patriotic societies.

For the most part Freneau attacked measures which Washington favored: seldom, if ever, did he attack Washington personally. When Washington died press praise was most fulsome. The writers, however, received this rebuke from Freneau:

We grieve to see such pens profane
The first of chiefs, the first of men;
To Washington—a man who died—
Is "Abba, father," well applied!

He was no god, ye flattering knaves,
He "owned no world," he ruled no waves,
But—and exalt it if you can—
He was the upright HONEST MAN.

An epidemic of yellow fever in Philadelphia, possibly supplemented with a period of hard times, put an end to both these political organs. The Gazette of the United States was discontinued Sept. 18, 1793 and the National Gazette Oct. 26 of the same year. (Fenno later started a daily paper in Philadelphia and used the Gazette of the United States as part of the title.)

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE,

PRÆVALEBIT ÆQUIOR

AND MONTHLY CHRONICLE for the BRITISH Colonies.

Vol. I. No. IV. For JANUARY 1758.

CONTAINING

I. EUROPEAN AFFAIRS.
II. THE PHILOSOPHICAL MISCELLANY.
III. MONTHLY ESSAYS.
IV. POETICAL ESSAYS.
V. HISTORY of the WAR in NORTH AMERICA.
VI. MONTHLY CHRONICLE.

To be continued, Price One Shilling Pennsylvania Currency each Month.

By a SOCIETY of Gentlemen.

Veritas cohortet Fraudis inimici.

Printed and Sold by WILLIAM BRADFORD, at the Corner-House in Front and Market-Street.

William Bradford's famous American Magazine, as of 1758, contained news for the British colonies, essays, history, philosophy and poetry, contributed by "a society of gentlemen."

Hamilton finding that Fenno was no match for the able editors of the Democratic sheets turned in desperation to William Cobbett.

Cobbett had been born on a farm in the little Surrey town of Farnham in England on March 9, 1763. For a brief time he went to a little school kept by an old woman who taught him his letters. If his education was most meager, his thirst for knowledge was great. In his youth he once sacrificed his supper in order to buy Dean Swift's "Tale of a Tub" for three pence. From that time on, in matters of style, Swift was Cobbett's teacher.

Cobbett landed in Philadelphia in October, 1792. He was first a pamphleteer, then a contributor to the press, and finally editor and publisher of Porcupine's Gazette and the United States Daily Advertiser which began on March 4, 1797. A little more than a month later this title was shortened to Porcupine's Gazette.

In an editorial salutatory Cobbett said that he would make no professions of being impartial. He regarded such professions not only as useless but as nonsense for "the news-monger who does not relate news as he finds it is something worse than partial." He then continued that one who "does not exercise his own judgment either in admitting or rejecting what is sent to him is a poor, passive tool and not an editor." He frankly admitted that he had not descended from the censorial chair "merely to become a news-monger." "I have not," he said, "taken up that cut and thrust weapon, a daily newspaper, without a resolution not only to make use of it myself, but to lend it to whomsoever is disposed to to assist me." Indeed, one rather admires the frankness with which Cobbett states that he is going to stress views rather than news. But Cobbett's vanity showed itself in his boast that his paper already had more subscribers in every town of note along the Great Post-Road than any other two papers published in Philadelphia.

The last Philadelphia issue of this daily was on Aug. 28, 1799. On account of yellow fever Cobbett left the city for the suburban town of Bustleton, ten miles from Philadelphia, where he brought out ten weekly issues: the last was on Oct. 26, 1799.

For the cure of yellow fever Dr. Benjamin Rush had advocated a system of purging and bleeding. This system was severely criticized both by Fenno and by Cobbett. The latter in his Porcupine Gazette spoke of Rush as a poisonous, trans-Atlantic quack and put this head over the article—"Can the Rush grow up without mire?" Rush brought action for libel against both Fenno and Cobbett, but later withdrew the suit against the former because he had the tip that an American jury would hesitate to bring in a verdict against a fellow countryman. Cobbett lost and judgment was entered against him for $5,000. By strange coincidence the judgment was given on Dec. 14, 1799, the day on which Washington died, "in some degree the victim of the treatment prescribed by Rush." To pay the judgment and court costs Cobbett's property in Philadelphia was sold by the sheriff at public auction.

The best picture of the situation may be found not in Philadelphia papers but in a Boston contemporary, The Columbian Centinel, edited by Benjamin Russell who had done so much to promote the adoption of the Constitution. In an editorial headed "The Fretful Porcupine" Russell said of Cobbett, "Success has made this quill-driving animal vain and conceited." By way of apology, Russell added that Cobbett was never supported by the Federalists "as a solid, judicious writer in their cause" but that they kept him merely "to hunt Jacobinic foxes, skunks, and serpents."

To complete the picture of Cobbett, and to show the language used by an extremely conservative editor, I want to quote part of the concluding paragraph of the editorial on "The Fretful Porcupine:"

The Federalists found the Jacobins had the Aurora Argus, and Chronicle, through which they ejected their mud, filth and venom, and attacked and blackened the best characters the world ever boasted; and they perceived that these vermin were not to be operated on by reason or decency. It was therefore thought necessary that the opposite party should keep and feed a suitable beast to hunt down these skunks and foxes; and "the fretful Porcupine" was selected for this business. The imported or transported beast has been kept as gentlemen keep a fierce bull Dog, to guard his house and property against thieves, Jacobins and Frenchmen, and as such he has been a good and faithful dog, and has been fed and caressed accordingly. It is true he has sometimes, as most dogs will, growled at his masters, and as "Sterne's puppy" was wont to do, has darted at the venerable Priestley; but as he has evinced an inveterate antipathy to all Frenchmen, he has been excused. However, as he grows more and more fretful for want of food (as may be seen by his modest, polite, decent, civil, gentlemanlike dunning, or rather bullying advertisement to his feeders), some think we should shorten his chain; or send him home again to England, to starve, or feed on Jacobin vermin there; or else transport the "Hedge-Hog" to Boston, where the Board of Health would soon order him to be taken by the tail, and thrown into the dock at low tide, as a common nuisance.

An English caricaturist, James Sayers, knowing Cobbett's fondness for attacking almost every institution thus took off the fighting editor in a humorist skit:

Mr. Cobbett ask'd leave to bring in very soon
A Bill to abolish the Sun and the Moon.
The Honourable Member proceeded to state
Some arguments, used in a former debate,
On the subject of sinecures, taxes, vexations,
The Army and Navy, and old Corporations:—
The Heavenly Bodies, like those upon Earth,
Had, he said, been corrupt from the day of their birth,
With reckless profusion expending their light,
One after another, by day and by night.
And what class enjoy'd it?—The upper alone—
Upon such they had always exclusively shone.

It has been said of Cobbett that he enjoyed "the cut and thrust, the falls, bruises, and dry blows of an argument," but that if he often forgot that others did not equally enjoy sport he never asked for quarter. By way of proof the following words, taken from "The Life of Peter Porcupine" and addressed to American critics, were offered:

Let them write on, till their own pens are worn to the stump; let the devils sweat; let them fire their balls at my reputation, till the very press cries out murder. If ever they hear me whine or complain, I will give them leave to fritter my carcase and trail my guts along the street, as the French sans-culottes did those of Thomas Maudit.

When Cobbett first took up his pen in Philadelphia he thus set forth the rules which should govern controversies in the press:

No man has a right to pry into his neighbour's private concerns; and the opinions of every man are his private concern, while he keeps them so; that is to say, while they are confined to himself, his family, and particular friends; but when he makes those opinions public: when he once attempts to make converts, whether it be in religion, politics, or anything else; when he once comes forward as a candidate for public admiration, esteem or compassion, his opinions, his principles, his motives, every action of his life, public or private, becomes the fair subject of public discussion.

(Continued on page 58)

INDEX

to this issue of

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Philadelphia A. A. C. W. Convention—pages 1 to 33.
Rotogravure Section — pages I to XII (following regular page 16).
British Section—pages 34 to 60.
French Section — F 1 to F 50 (following regular page 60).
General News Section — pages 61 to 128.
(Total pages this issue 194)

HOW A. A. C. W. WAS BROUGHT TO PHILADELPHIA

Committee Has Endeavored to Recreate Convention Success of Ten Years Ago—Tried Not to Over-do Entertainment Features, Emphasizing Class Room Atmosphere

By ROWE STEWART

General Manager, Philadelphia Record; Past President Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; Chairman Convention Committee of the Poor Richard Club

(Written for EDITOR & PUBLISHER.)

TEN years ago Philadelphia was the convention city of the A. A. C. of W. and that convention will be long remembered by the people of Philadelphia for the fine impression made on our city. The entertainment features were the most spectacular; the delegates made a good impression and the program included men of national and international reputation, whose subjects were of interest to every merchant and business man.

Secretary Lane, of the Department of Interior, opened the convention with an inspiring address and President Wilson closed the convention with a stirring message delivered from the steps of Independence Hall.

Our visitors were complimentary enough to say that it was one of the finest conventions they had ever attended and today when we meet advertising men from all parts of the world they still talk about the good time they had in Philadelphia and what a great city it is. Only recently Governor Farrington, of Hawaii, told me in Washington that he greatly regretted he would not be able to be in Philadelphia this June, because the representatives from that part of the United States enjoyed themselves so much here ten years ago.

Three or four years ago when plans were made by Philadelphia to celebrate One Hundred and Fifty Years of American Independence with a Sesqui-Centennial Exposition the members of the Poor Richard Club at the conventions of the A. A. C. of W. expressed the desire to have the convention held here during the Sesqui-Centennial year and at Houston we extended the invitation formally with the result that Philadelphia was voted the convention city for 1926.

On our convention committee are a number of men who were on the convention committee of 1916 and we have tried again to welcome you as guests to the city in a way that will make your stay pleasant and profitable and send you back home with the impression that Philadelphia is a great American city and its citizens are glad to see you and have you as visitors and to show you as well the practical side of the "Workshop of the World."

Again the Association has been honored by having the University of Pennsylvania place at its disposal its buildings and grounds in which the departmental sessions will be held and providing for the exhibit of advertising in Houston Hall, the University students' Club House—a most excellent building for that purpose.

The International Trade Conference will have for its meeting one of the most perfect auditoriums in this country in the University of Pennsylvania Museum and in this building also is one of the finest archaeological collections from Egypt and Central and South America, which will appeal to those who are interested in the study of art, architecture, customs, and beliefs of ancient peoples as shown in their monuments, implements, inscriptions, relics, etc., and how those things can be applied to modern advertising. In the University Library too is one of the finest collections of the printing work done by the great Benjamin Franklin.

The departmental sessions in the college buildings and the general sessions on Thursday in Weightman Hall will throw around these meetings an atmosphere of a class room, which is the proper setting for a convention to which the delegates come for instruction and review.

The Inspirational Meeting on Sunday, June 20th, will be held in the Sesqui-Centennial Auditorium—a great building right at the entrance to the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition and opportunity will be given during the convention for our delegates to visit the other buildings of this exposition, which, while not 100 per cent completed, will furnish many interesting sights and induce our visitors, we hope, to return to Philadelphia during the summer and early fall while this exposition is in progress.

We have tried not to overdo the entertainment features of the convention and yet give our delegates plenty to do in seeing the historic points of interest and to give them the opportunity to get together on a social basis during the hours that the convention is not in session. In this we have been greatly assisted by the people of Philadelphia, who are glad to have the opportunity of meeting the men and women of this and other countries who are engaged in the development and promotion of advertising in its many phases.

The details of the program are printed in other parts of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and we hope they will be of such diversity that our delegates will find enough of them interesting to please everybody.

The Advertising Pageant on Monday evening and the Music Festival on Wednesday evening, I know, will be long remembered as great events. Many advertising men and women thought that all entertainment should be cut out of annual conventions and that it should be strictly a business meeting. There are many others, however, who are attracted to a convention because they expect to have a good time in taking part in the entertainment features, as they also give one the opportunity for the renewal of friendships and for making new friends. Our program is sufficient for both kinds of delegates.

I do not believe that you can lay down too strict a rule to be followed by any group as large as the 5,000 or 6,000 who will be in attendance at the convention and that you must give them a program well balanced with business on the one hand and pleasure on the other.

In the magnificent new Club House of the Poor Richard Club you will be welcomed any time during the convention and both there and at our convention headquarters on the tenth floor of The Evening Bulletin Building, which has been placed at our disposal by that newspaper, everything that you may need during your visit will be furnished you.

The Mayor of Philadelphia, as a member of the Poor Richard Club, also joins with us in your welcome. We know that the business program will be of great benefit to the cause of advertising and we are happy to have been the hosts in setting the stage for this important gathering.

Welcome To Philadelphia!

Message To Delegates from His Honor, Mayor Kendrick

Written for Editor & Publisher

Mayor Kendrick

To the Delegates
To the Convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

ON the eve of the Twenty-second Annual Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, as Mayor of the great city of Philadelphia, the Work-Shop of the World, I am delighted to welcome you to our city and shall take the opportunity to greet you in person at historic Independence Hall.

Also as an honorary member of The Poor Richard Club I will be glad to place the facilities of our city at your disposal in any way that will make your stay more pleasant and profitable.

Also as President of the Sesqui-Centennial Exhibition Association I especially invite your attention to that great celebration marking the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, which is now open and at which, on July 4th next, the President of the United States will be the orator.

Enjoy yourself in Philadelphia and come back and see us often.

Very truly yours,
W. FREELAND KENDRICK
Mayor

HOTELS WHERE DIFFERENT CLUBS ARE STAYING

Bellevue-Stratford:
Long Beach, California.
Los Angeles, California.
Montreal, Canada.
Foreign Delegates.
Chicago, Ill. (Adv. Council of)
Chicago, Ill. (Women's Adv. Club).
St. Louis. Mo.
New York City, N. Y.
Greensboro, N. C.
Pittsburgh, Pa. (Women's Adv. Club).
Providence, R. I. (Women's Adv. Club).
Memphis, Tenn.
Fort Worth, Texas.

Benjamin Franklin:
Washington, D. C.
Peoria, Ill.
Indianapolis, Ind.
Baltimore, Md.
Baltimore, Md. (Women's Adv. Club).
Boston, Mass.
Detroit, Mich.
Detroit, Mich. (Women's Adv. Club).
New York City, N. Y.
Insurance Adv. Conference.
Cleveland, O. (Women's Adv. Club).
Adv. Club of Columbus, O., Chamber of Commerce.
Toledo, O. (Women's Adv. Club).
Milwaukee, Wis. (Women's Adv. Club).

Pennsylvania:
Little Rock, Ark.
Davenport, Iowa.
Louisville, Ky.
Binghamton, N. Y.
Ithaca, N. Y.

Elks Club:
San Diego, Calif.
Stanford Adv. Club of Palo Alto, Calif.
Pueblo, Colo.
Colorado Springs, Colo.
Honolulu.
Clarksburg, W. Va.
Charleston, W. Va.

Sylvania:
Toronto, Canada.
Denver, Colo.
St. Petersburg, Fla.
Des Moines, Iowa.
New Orleans, La.
Kansas City, Mo.
New York City, N. Y. (League of Advertising Women).
Buffalo, N. Y. (League of Advertising Women).
Cleveland, O. (Women's Adv. Club).
Johnstown, Pa.
Houston, Texas (Women's Adv. Club).
Dallas, Texas.
Houston, Texas.

Adelphia:
Orlando, Fla. (Orlando & Orange County Adv. Club).
Bethlehem, Pa.
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Lancaster, Pa.
Public Utilities Advertising Association.

Walton:
Miami, Fla.

Ritz-Carlton:
Financial Advertisers' Association.

Vendig:
Nashville, Tenn.
Milwaukee, Wis.

Special Editor & Publisher Rotogravure Section

C. K. WOODBRIDGE
President Associated Advertising
Clubs of the World.

Executive Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Jesse H. Neal

Miss Ethel B. Scully

E. T. Meredith

Lou E. Holland

W. Frank McClure

William S. Patton

Poor Richard Club Convention Committee Chairmen.

HOWARD C. STORY
President Poor Richard Club

ROWE STEWART
Chairman

LEONARD ORMEROD
Executive Secretary

THEODORE E. ASH Badges

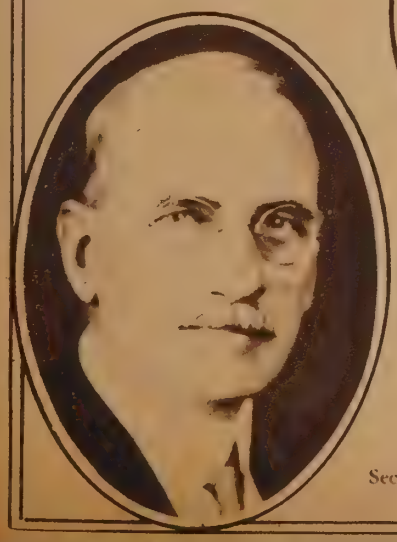
H. L. APPLETON
Pageant

P. C. STAPLES
Music Festival

KARL BLOOMINGDALE
Entertainment

JACK LUTZ
Publicity

H. ENNIS JONES
Camden



WM. J. ELDRIDGE
Churches

A. C. DELAPLAINE
Hotels

EDWARD S. PARET
Sec.-Treas. Poor Richard Club

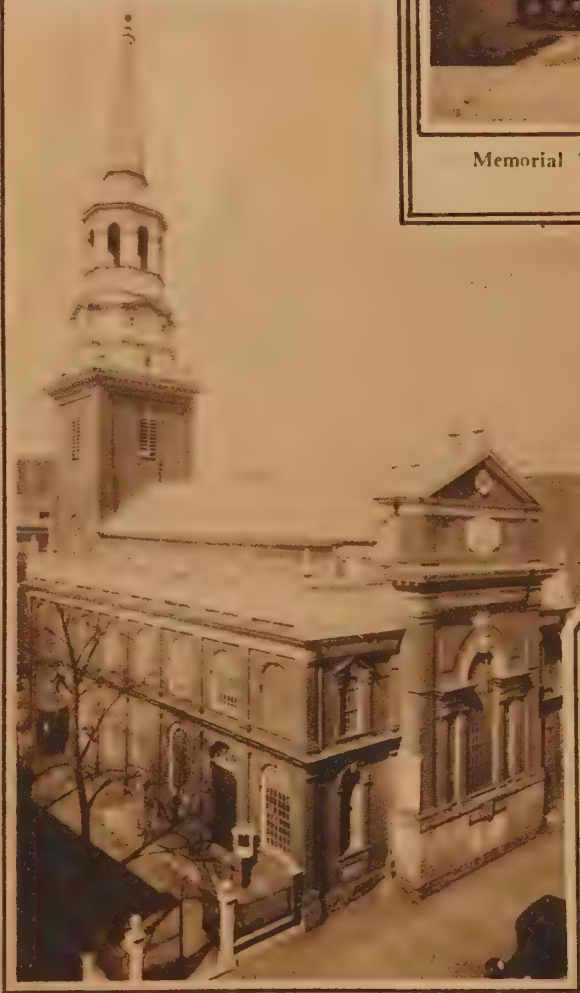
Official Badge

JOHN H. SINBERG
Poor Richard Associates

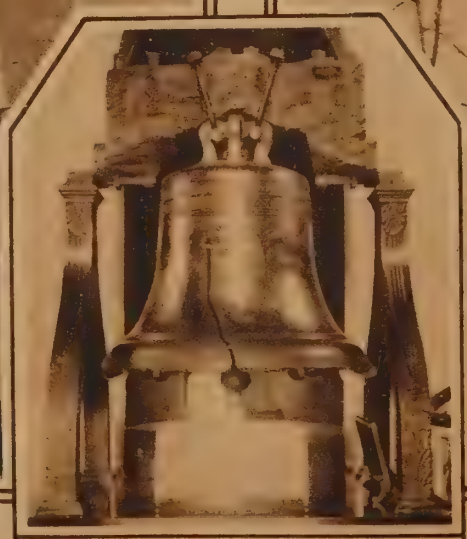
DR. JOSIAH H. PENNIMAN
Provost, University of Penna.

J. B. MACKENZIE
Printing

Ancient Symbols of American Freedom— in Philadelphia.



Carpenters' Hall, where the first Continental Congress met in 1774.



Memorial Tower, University of Pennsylvania, where advertising convention sessions will be held.

Betsy Ross House.
Birthplace of the stars and stripes.

Christ Church. A relic of 1727.

Liberty Bell.

Independence Hall. Best loved building in America.

Week End Edition
SATURDAY SPECIAL SECTION NO. 3
NEW YORK
LATEST PHOTOS IN ROTOGRAVURE
EVE G GRAPHIC
All the News a Feature Magazine a
SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1926
PRICE FIVE CENTS
A market rich in possibilities
Every page of the Evening GRAPHIC ROTO-GRAVURE SECTION bristles with pictures depicting the glories of outdoor life and the field of athletics besides unusual illustrations of people prominent in the eyes of the masses.
A unique Pictorial Section with a powerful appeal to a definite market rich in profit possibilities.
With a guaranteed circulation in excess of 200,000 on Saturdays, the New York Evening GRAPHIC through its Saturday ROTO-GRAVURE PICTURE SECTION offers advertisers a rare opportunity. You can secure NOW a fixed rate for a full year based on an ever increasing value.
H. A. AHERN
Advertising Manager
BERNARR MACFADDEN
Publisher
25 City Hall Place, New York City.

ROTO
Prints Perfect

ACCORDING TO THE ANCIENT Chinese proverb, reproduced at the right, "One picture is worth ten thousand words." In rotogravure where pictures tell the story, people eagerly read the picture news of merchandise as well as of current events.

Rotogravure is editorially desirable because it holds its readers in the tight grip of natural interest. Its appeal is universal.

These same characteristics make it valuable as a selling force, whether used as the chief advertising or in the form of printed material supplementing the main campaign. Seventy well-known American newspapers provide this feature de luxe—rotogravure, and there are numerous plants where rotogravure printing may be obtained.

We shall be glad to supply newspapers or advertisers with full information about rotogravure.

Kimberly-Clark Company

ESTABLISHED 1872
Neenah, Wis.

NEW YORK: 51 CHAMBERS STREET • LOS ANGELES: 716 SUN FINANCE BUILDING • CHICAGO: 208 SOUTH LA SALLE STREET

Manufacturers of ROTOPLATE, the perfect paper for rotogravure printing
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Headquarters at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel for the A.A.C.W. Convention 畫意能達萬言

According to an Ancient Chinese Proverb
One Picture is worth 10,000 words

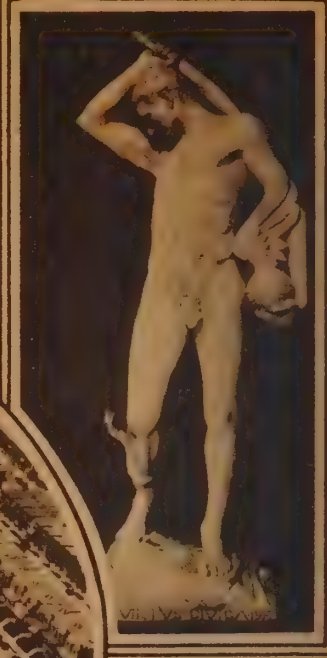
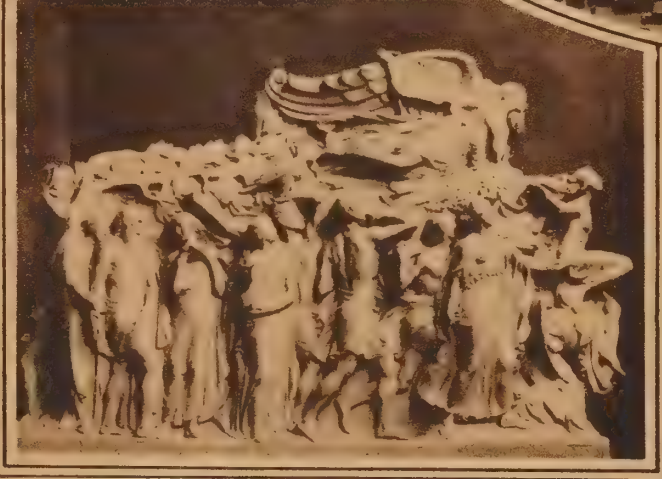
This picture expresses the thrilling action of Louise Brooks' performance. It has caught the shimmering, foamy bits of silk and lace and pearls and feathers that compose the dreamy frock, beautifully blending them into the swift-moving but dainty charm of this star. Posed by Louise Brooks. Frock by Milgrim, New York and Chicago.

GRAVURE



Pictures – the Universal Language

Advance Glimpses of Sesqui Centennial.



U. S. S. Constellation, old Revolutionary War frigate.

Civic Virtue.

View of huge Liberty Bell containing 26,000 lights

Sculptured Groups representing "Philadelphia Progressive" by Konti.

Persian Pavillion.

Electric House.

Palace of Agriculture.

Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of George Washington.

Individuality

Attention

Beauty

Results

GRAVURE PICTURE SECTION

OF THE

NEW YORK

Herald Tribune

RAPID DEVELOPMENT OF VELVETY GRAVURE PRINTING

Seventy Newspapers in the United States Now Employ This Attractive Medium—Spread of Idea to Other Lands—Increasing Linage Records Indicate Appreciation of Advertisers, While Pictures Attract New Readers in Vast Numbers—Remarkable Mushroom Growth of New Art

TO visualize the development of roto gravure during the past decade, it may be likened to the growth and development of an apple orchard from the seed of a single fruit.

The word "blossomed" is advisedly used, because the beautiful brown picture section added the final touch to the symmetry of the tree, with its already developed branches, twigs and leaves. As an editorial feature, par excellence, the rotogravure section was seemingly destined, from the very beginning, to hold major importance. Although this printing process has been, and is being used, for commercial printing to quite an extent, the most marked development has taken place in the newspaper field.

The number has grown gradually and healthily, until today there are 70 regular rotogravure sections issued weekly by newspapers in all sections of the United States. Added to this list might be included three in Canada, two in Mexico, one in Cuba and two in South America. Beside the newspapers which carry a section regularly, there are other newspapers which from time to time use rotogravure for special editions in celebration of various occasions.

In view of the silent growth of this young giant, it is not surprising that attention should be definitely focused by the printing industry as well as newspaperdom upon a feature that is slowly moving into the spotlight.

With its full-tone reproducing qualities, rotogravure was recognized from the first as the perfect medium for presenting the most powerful and best loved material from a reader interest standpoint the picture story. Besides the natural appeal of pictures, rotogravure sections have been rapidly striding forward in the matter of makeup, artistic presentation and diversification of subjects, in order to make a general appeal to readers of all classes and stations in life.

For numerous reasons it is well to recall that rotogravure has been growing and been blossoming and beginning to bear fruit at the same time that the moving picture industry has risen from a place of obscurity and mediocrity to a commanding position in the amusement and educational world.

Therefore, it was but natural that there should follow in the wake of the adoption of the rotogravure section growth in the circulation of newspapers. Today the circulation of regular rotogravure sections in the United States alone totals some 11,000,000. Approximately 51 per cent of the entire Sunday newspaper circulation is covered by rotogravure sections.

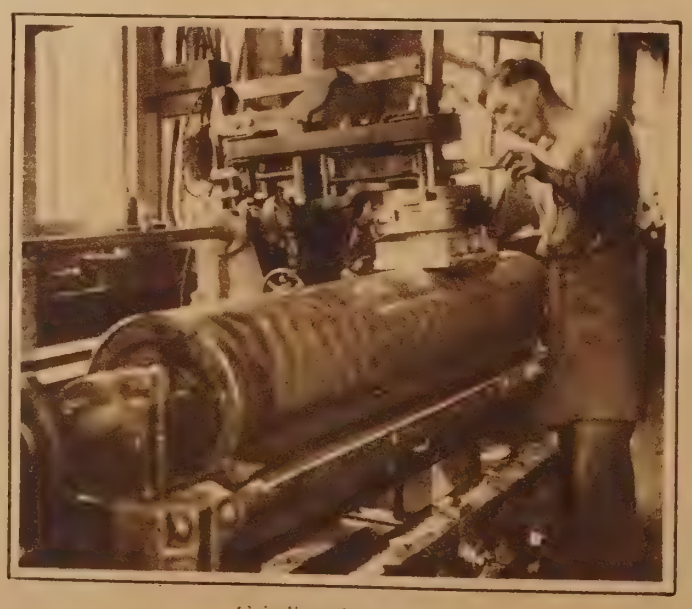
The Census Department records that there are four and a fraction persons in the average American family. Conservatively estimating that there are three readers of each rotogravure section, it may be said that 30,000,000 people look at rotogravure pictures every week.

To those unfamiliar with all the facts, it might seem that rotogravure had just arrived. However, to those most closely allied and actively interested in rotogravure, it seems but as a youngster but recently out of swaddling clothes.

Now that the most expensive experimental work has been done and the hazard has been practically eliminated, rotogravure has been added by smaller city publishers. A good proportion of so called small city newspapers are to be found on the list of rotogravure newspapers.

Rotogravure pages in the making.

Figures, in themselves, are always cold and bloodless. Figures show that the orchard produces so many bushels of apples each season. The cold figures do not tell the complete story—the romance, if you please. They are, nevertheless, the measuring stick.



For this reason it is interesting to note that over a period of five years (1921-1925, the post-war era) records show that of 24 large cities all but one rotogravure newspaper has shown an increase in circulation since the addition of this feature to a regular issue, whether it be the Sunday or the Saturday evening, or even a mid-week edition. These are but straws indicating the direction of the breeze.

Now we come to the part of the historical record that is of the greatest interest and of deepest concern. Is the orchard bearing fruit?

As in other branches of commerce, there are leaders in advertising. Consciously or by intuition, these leaders seem to sense the value of new and untried fields. Some of these pace-setters were not slow to see the value of rotogravure for telling a picture story about merchandise. Today, more than ever before, the picture story has a place of its own in modern advertising and merchandising.

Advertisers have learned—then of the power of rotogravure to move goods. That each year more advertisers are making this discovery is evidenced by the yard stick of linage increases for the past five years. The growth in rotogravure has been consistent in the face of fluctuations in other media.

Year	Lines Published	Per cent of Gain
1921	6,330,091 lines	..
1922	8,781,751 lines	38
1923	10,030,383 lines	14
1924	12,865,265 lines	28
1925	14,518,691 lines	13

Grinding the cylinder.

Further substantiating the tendency, a comparison made in the twenty-three chief cities of the United States from which EDITOR & PUBLISHER Year Book has tabulated newspaper advertising linage, shows that the black and white linage made in 1922 showed a 4 per cent gain, in 1923 a 7 per cent gain, in 1924 a 1 per cent loss, and in 1925 a 5 per cent gain. The rotogravure advertising records for the same twenty-three cities show in 1922 a 32 per cent gain, 1923 a 10 per cent gain, 1924 a 29 per cent gain and 1925 a 12 per cent gain.

On the part of both national and local advertiser there has been and is a gradual capitulation to the fact that rotogravure is a medium in itself. Not many years ago the proportion of national linage to the local linage carried in rotogravure greatly predominated. However, there is a closing of the gap as indicated by the 1925 totals showing less than 2,500,000 lines separating local and national. Local linage amounted to slightly over 2/5 of the total linage.

Furthermore, the linage records for the first three months of 1926 show approximately 31 per cent increase in local advertising over the same period of 1925.

Due to the universal reader interest, advertisers have discovered that consistent use of this medium brings satisfactory results. These results are twofold. Not only are there so-called direct results, which in many cases are almost phenomenal, but as a confidence creator, prestige builder and good will developer rotogravure is at its best.

Advertisers have used space in these rotogravure sections to merchandise the highest-priced luxuries as well as necessities. It often happens that the same section carries a pictorial story about merchandise whose unit cost runs into thousands of dollars as well as an advertisement of such necessities as soap with a unit price of five cents.

There are many instances to illustrate the fruitfulness of rotogravure advertising, both to the newspaper and to the advertiser. The growing linage, in itself, indicates that rotogravure is becoming fruitful for the publisher. Of course, the advertiser must find it fruitful if he is to continue and the growing figures indicate that it is true. They do get direct results, also.

There is the real estate company that sold the $60,000 home. There is the shoe store that sold 488 pairs of high-priced women's pumps for one advertisement. There is the ready-to-wear store that sold 400 dresses in one day and a thousand dresses by Friday following Sunday on which the copy appeared. There is the dairy that doubled its business in three years. There is the jeweler who sold a $5,000 diamond bracelet. There is the department store that increased sales the first week of its annual furniture sales 250 per cent and beat the previous year's record for the month by 78 per cent. There are furniture stores, drug stores, banks, florists, men's wear stores, monument manufacturers, tent and awning makers, and all the lines of retailing that have recorded the benefit secured directly from their use of rotogravure.

There are also some national advertisers, who, having used rotogravure exclusively, know the full power of rotogravure as a medium to present merchandise that can have the spotlight of perfect presentation through the eyes of the camera and full-tone reproduction.

FIRST IN ROTOGRAVURE

The New York Times inaugurated the rotogravure process in the United States. The Times has always been first in the perfection of its pictorial representation of all the news of the world, and in volume and quality of rotogravure advertising.

Five beautiful sections of the Sunday edition of The New York Times are now printed by the rotogravure process.

1. Rotogravure-Picture Section—two or three parts, 16 to 24 pages, largest and best rotogravure section in the world. Advertising rate $2.10 an agate line; net paid circulation 625,000.

2. New Jersey Rotogravure Section—Tabloid size, devoted to events in New Jersey and distributed only in that state, 16 pages. Advertising rate 40c an agate line; net paid circulation in excess of 75,000.

3. Brooklyn and Long Island Rotogravure Section—Tabloid size, first issue Sunday, June 20th; 16 pages of pictures of events and personalities in Long Island. Advertising rate 40c an agate line; net paid circulation in excess of 90,000.

(Combined advertising rate for New Jersey and Brooklyn rotogravure sections, 75c an agate line.)

4. The New York Times Magazine—Tabloid size, printed in black and white rotogravure; illustrated articles interpreting important and interesting current happenings. Advertising rate $1.10 an agate line; net paid circulation 625,000.

5. The New York Times Book Review—Tabloid size, printed in black and white rotogravure; deals with books as news. Critical analysis of the latest volumes by recognized leaders in the literary world. Advertising rate for book and magazine announcements $1.00 an agate line; for other advertisements, $1.10 an agate line. Net paid circulation 625,000.

The New York Times has a larger sale among intelligent thinking and substantial people than any other newspaper. In New York City and its suburbs the Sunday edition of The Times has the largest circulation of high quality of any newspaper. More than 425,000 copies are sold in the city and within a radius of 150 miles.

The New York Times published 423,102 agate lines of rotogravure advertising in five months of this year, a gain of 38,324 lines over the corresponding period of 1925 and 199,922 lines in excess of the next New York rotogravure section.

The New York Times publishes more advertising than any other New York newspaper, printing in five months of 1926, 12,843,818 agate lines of advertising, a gain of 1,322,484 lines over the corresponding months of 1925 and an excess over the second New York newspaper of 4,765,934 lines.

The Times censorship excludes all false and misleading advertising and establishes strong confidence among readers.

"FINEST PRODUCTS from MODERN FACTORIES"

The AULT & WIBORG CO.

INTAGLIO INKS

MOTOR TRIPS ARRANGED FOR A. A. C. W. WOMEN

Page Morton Gibbons-Neff—He's in Charge of Auto-Transportation to Tea at Stotesbury Mansion, Monday, Visit to DuPont Estate, and Valley Forge, June 23-24

WOMEN delegates to the A. A. C. W. convention, and wives of members attending have been invited to be afternoon tea guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury at their famous mansion "Whitemarsh" in Chestnut Hill, June 21. Page Morton Gibbons-Neff, chairman of the transportation committee! He will arrange for automobiles to take you there between 2:30 and 6:30 p. m. Monday. It is one of several trips planned for the women, which include a journey to Valley Forge, and the beautiful gardens of Pierre S. duPont, "Longwood," on the Baltimore Pike, near Wilmington, Del.

Men are not left entirely out of the automobile excursions. They also are invited on a special trip to Valley Forge on June 23, from three o'clock until six; and for a special sight-seeing tour of Philadelphia on Thursday from four until six.

Washington Memorial Chapel, Valley Forge, Pa.

But the best plum of the convention pudding, it seems, has been drawn by the ladies. Philadelphia newspaper men become rhapsodic describing "Whitemarsh."

"Dream palaces of the ages, the famous Tiburtine villa of Maecenas, the Golden House of Nero, residences of royalty everywhere, the quintessential beauties and grandeur of the most lavishly costly private residential structures of ancient times, plus the latest and most ingenious inventions of modern comfort—all, all seem to have contributed architectural ideas which have been brought together and embodied in the wonderful home Edward T. Stotesbury has built for himself atop of Chestnut Hill, at the intersection of Papermill road and Flourtown Pike," is the way one Public Ledger reporter begins a lyric word picture of the place. "Nothing else in Philadelphia, nor, indeed, in any other part of the United States is anything quite like it. It is of a composite style, suggestive of an Ionic temple, relieved by sculpture and other decorations, reminiscent of the Italian Renaissance."

Well, as a matter of plain practical fact, it is not so bad at that—this $2,000,000 private home of an American capitalist. The different thoughts it arouses in people's minds is quite another question.

Whitemarsh, one is told, contains 145 rooms. And for all its Gargantuan size, it has been so constructed as to give the impression, at least, of some moderation. This is due to the skill of the architect. He has designed the building to convey the appearance of two stories, whereas in reality it has six. True, three of these are underground, the caretaker explains. And the effectual concealment of an entire upper story is pointed out as "an amazing architectural feat." This one camouflaged story alone contains 39 rooms.

Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury eat their breakfasts in the basement, when it is not brought to them in their beds. They realized it was entirely contrary to custom to have a breakfast room without sunlight, and accordingly, arranged to have the place flooded with electric lighting, burning from unseen bulbs. Those so minded may like to know that it took 20 workmen more than a year to build this one room.

The first basement floor also contains kitchens—the plural is correct—refrigerating rooms, and a wine cellar which has yet to be raided.

On the opposite side of the building, this same floor holds a large gymnasium, and directly beneath it in a second subcellar is a beautiful swimming pool designed like a Roman bath. In this same part of the house are a squash court and servant quarters. In addition to this Roman bath, the awed whisper is afloat in Philadelphia that Mr. Stotesbury's mansion has 45 bathrooms.

On the second basement floor are many dressing rooms, dismissed by all contemporary writers, as simply "elaborate." On the same floor are also cloak rooms and lavatories.

Ice is manufactured, light generated, and heat supplied from the third underground story—the basement proper.

All this is unseen. When guests at Whitemarsh climb the princely terraced steps of marble to the main entrance, they first enter a vestibule, measuring 27 by 37 feet. On its left is a stair hall, a large smoking room, and a billiard room. To the right is the reception room; Mr. Stotesbury's study, a comparatively tiny affair, and a library, flooded with light, apparently, from all sides.

From the vestibule, these same guests enter a great hall 64 feet long and 34 feet wide—the ballroom. On each side of this ballroom is a gallery leading into circular palm courts, for those who wish to rest after a wearying Charleston. From the palm courts, they may step into a high-ceilinged music room, where a large pipe organ is installed.

Beyond the galleried hall is a great dining room, which those who have seen it say is magnificent. It is from this part of the building that access is had to the wing. In the latter are five men's rooms with baths and lavatories. Here, too, are the pantry, the housekeeper's office, the butler's office, the silver-polishing room, the safe for the silverware and the linen rooms.

On the opposite side of the main building and likewise adjoining the ballroom is a salon and loggia. Access to these rooms can also be had from the palm courts on that side. Adjoining the palm court on the other side is a living room.

All the rooms on this, the main floor, are elaborately decorated with stucco work of the Italian Renaissance. The walls, in restful relief, are painted soft gray and buff.

The more intimate family section of the house is found on the second floor above ground of the main building. There are two suites, here, each consisting of a bedroom, a sitting room, a dressing room, and a bath. One of the suites is for Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury; the other is for their son. Both suites are almost identical.

The guests' chambers—nine of them—are also on the same floor, as are also rooms for maids, many baths, and a loggia.

The third floor of the main building and the second floor of the wing are occupied chiefly by servants. Fourteen servants' rooms, a secretary's office and living rooms, valets' rooms, clothes-pressing rooms, supplies rooms, additional linen rooms, bathrooms for the servants and trunk and cedar chest rooms are there. This is the portion of the house which is invisible to those looking for it from the outside. Altogether there are 39 rooms on this third floor.

The entire building, including the orangerie, belvederes, pavilions and pergolas, covers a total area of 300 by 240 feet. The main structure alone measures 283 by 101 feet, with a wing 88 by 32 feet.

Whitemarsh in Chestnut Hill is only a short automobile ride from hotel headquarters.

The tour to "Longwood," the duPont estate, to be held Wednesday, June 23, is a seventy-five mile round trip on the Baltimore Pike. Longwood lies between Hamorton and Kennett Square, Wilmington.

The trip is through a rolling farmland section, which, although heavily traveled, can be made in less than two hours from Philadelphia. Starting from City Hall, the motorist proceeds south on Broad street to Walnut; west on Walnut to 49th street to Baltimore avenue, and so into the Baltimore Pike, through Media, Black Horse, Concordville, Chadds Ford and Hamorton to "Longwood."

The principal attraction of the duPont estate is the magnificent greenhouses, where some of the rarest and most highly developed flowers and fruits to be found in this section of the country are grown. Here will be found delightful blossoms, ranging from wistaria to Japanese camellias, in wonderful shades and combinations. Plants ranging from the wood violet to giant azalea bushes will be seen. Among the fruits are full grown banana trees, grape vines, cantaloupes, figs and peaches.

The main greenhouse, with its profusion of "Eastern flowers"—tulips, daffodils and azaleas in the spring—is the first sight to greet the visitor. At the rear of this glass enclosure is a music room, where organ recitals are frequently given. Less ordinary plants will be found in similar conservatories flanking the main one. The profusion of flowers cannot adequately be described. In the hackneyed term, Longwood actually must be seen to be appreciated.

While women delegates are visiting the duPont estate, the men will be taken by automobiles to Valley Forge. On June 24, the women will take their trip to the same historical spot.

"Whitemarsh" $2,000,000 Stotesbury estate, Chester Hill, Pa.

WHAT ABOUT TRANSPORTATION?

A Fleet of 200 Cars Commandeered for A.A.C.W. Delegates

A FLEET of about 200 private automobiles and public busses has been commandeered by Morton Gibbons-Neff, chairman of the transportation committee, for use of A.A.C.W. delegates during convention week. Trains will be met and special excursions in and outside of Philadelphia are on the program.

Mr. Gibbons-Neff has arranged with the Philadelphia police for parking space for A.A.C.W. cars in front of all leading hotels. The cars will be plainly marked "Transportation Committee—A.A.C.W."

When large numbers arrive Sunday, June 20, they will be met by the Philadelphians and brought to their hotels. Other automobile trips, described in detail elsewhere, include a visit to the Stotesbury Marion, "Whitemarsh" in Chestnut Hill, the Pierre S. du Pont estate, "Longwood," near Wilmington, Del., and to Valley Forge.

In the United States Mint in Philadelphia, two-thirds of all currency of this country is minted.

ADVERTISING HISTORY TO PASS IN REVIEW

Origin and Evolution of the Business to Be Shown in Floats in Pageant Parade June 21—E. T. Stotesbury Grand Marshal with T. E. Ash Assistant ADVERTISING history will pass in review before delegates to the 22nd annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Philadelphia next week.

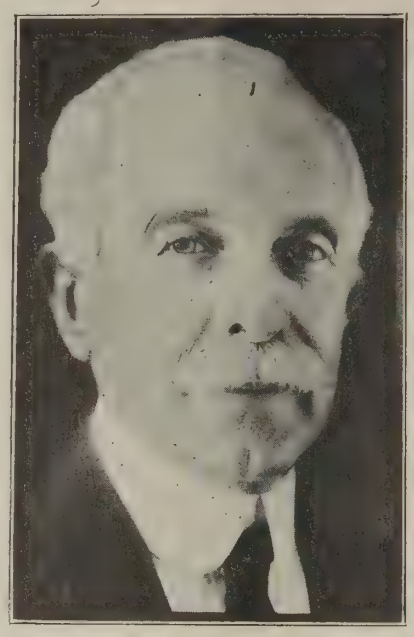
ROSS ANDERSON

For the Grand Pageant, scheduled on the program for 8 o'clock in the evening of June 21, will have advertising as its main theme and inspiration.

Led by E. T. Stotesbury, noted financier and prominent Philadelphian, the parade, made up of some eight divisions, each many blocks long, will march to the music of eight bands from Broad and Snyder streets, north to the east side of City Hall, and out the Parkway to Logan Square. Mr. Stotesbury is to be grand marshal of the parade, and Theodore E. Ash, of the Theodore E. Ash Advertising Agency, is to be assistant marshal. The pageant was planned and organized by Ross Anderson, promotion manager of the Philadelphia Record.

The expected line of march calls for the appearance of foreign delegates to the convention in automobiles immediately following the Grand Marshal's car. They have asked, and will be granted, the privilege of breaking lines at the reviewing stand, in order to be able to watch the pageant pass before them. The reviewing stand is to be at the City Hall. Grand stand seats, it is planned, will be available for delegates in front of the Bell Telephone Company office building and the Academy of Music on Broad street.

The first division of the parade is called the Governmental Division. In it various departments of the government will be represented in floats.



Next will come the Advertising Club division, which will include representatives of the Advertising Club of Ithaca, New York; the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia; the Advertising Club of St. Petersburg, Fla.; the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, Cal.; the Advertising Club of Milwaukee, Wis.; the Advertising Club of Providence, R. I.; the Advertising Club of Kansas City; and the Advertising Club of Denver. Other clubs at the last moment may get up floats or arrange for costumes and be entered in the parade.

The Civic Division comes next. Put on by the city of Philadelphia, this division will comprise floats depicting historic events for which the city is noted, such as the making of the first flag by Betsy Ross, the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and William Penn receiving the charter from the Indians.

In their costly and spectacular costumes, six clubs winning prizes at the last "New Year's Shooter's" parade will also appear in this division. H. Bart McHugh, originator of the "Shooters," and who has directed their annual parade now for 26 years, is in charge of this section of the parade.

Floats entered by business and fraternal organizations of the city will also be in this division, as will floats prepared by the Chamber of Commerce and the Philadelphia Boosters' Association.

Now comes the fourth and most important division of all, in which the origin and evolution of advertising will be symbolized by nine floats. First will be shown the old smoke signals of the Indians, followed by a float showing the ancient hieroglyphics of the Egyptians. Next will come a float depicting the development of type by the Chinese. The

E. T. Stotesbury

Colonial town crier is to represent the next step in advertising progress. Most important to the development of advertising is the advent of paper. A float reproducing the first paper mill in America, which is situated in Philadelphia and still stands, will mark this epoch, followed by floats representing the advertising media of the present day—newspapers, magazines, billboards and direct mail.

This division of the pageant was organized by R. J. Considine, of the Paper House of Pennsylvania, and member of the Poor Richard Club.

About fifty national advertisers have agreed to place floats in the fifth division. Among them will be the Bell Telephone Company, the Atlantic Refining Company, Texas Oil Company, Delco Light, XI Batteries, Bayuck Brothers, Dill & Collins, and the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

The grand free-for-all advertisement given each year to Atlantic City—the Bathing Beauty Contest will make up the next division. Led by the much advertised Fay Lamphier, "Miss America" of last year, there will be more than a dozen floats brought to Philadelphia from Atlantic City, including the beautiful Dolphin float, swarming with alleged feminine beauties in one-piece bathing suits. Bringing up the rear of this division, will be the rolling chair parade also from Atlantic City, each chair bearing one local beauty from about 20 towns.

Local Philadelphia advertisers, and 100-year-old firms of the city, have entered floats to make up the seventh division. This division alone will have between 35 and 40 floats.

Trade-marks, made known to millions by advertising, will comprise the eighth and last division.

The two noted Smith Brothers will wraggle their beards at the watching crowds, and probably throw out cough drops to those poor souls who have become hoarse from cheering. The Bon Ami chick will toddle pass the stands, chased by the wide-awake dog who heard his master's voice. A diamond of flowers, with Reading Lines in red electric lights, will repreesnt the trademark of this railroad, and there will be many others.

No one need worry about understanding the symbolism to be portrayed in this pageant. Those who know nothing of advertising will learn about it at this time. Any lack of imagination will be made up by 400 local boy scouts who will erect platforms along the line of march and wig-wag signals to each other, communicating the progress of the parade and the meaning of it. With megaphones, the boy scouts will then turn towards the crowd, and explain what each float is supposed to represent.

And that terrible time of waiting before the first drum beats and the music of the bands are heard, will not be without amusement. The committee in charge of the pageant has engaged a number of clowns, who precede the parade, and perform slap-stick tricks for those on hand early.

INTERESTING PLACES IN PHILADELPHIA

INDEPENDENCE HALL, Chestnut Street between Fifth and Sixth. The home of the Liberty Bell and the place where the Declaration of Independence was signed.

CONGRESS HALL, standing in Independence Square, adjoining Independence Hall. Built in 1790. Here the National Congress sat, and here both Washington and John Adams were inaugurated.

CARPENTER'S HALL, rear of 322 Chestnut street, where the first Continental Congress met in 1774.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S TOMB, in Christ Church Burying Ground, Fifth and Arch streets.

GENERAL GRANT'S LOG CABIN. Removed from its original site on the banks of the James River, Virginia, it stands in North Lemon Hill, Fairmount Park.

PENN TREATY MONUMENT, Beach street, north of east Columbia avenue, on the site where Penn made his famous oral treaty with the Indians.

PENN'S COTTAGE, built in 1682, and deeded by William Penn to his daughter Letitia. Removed from its original site near 6th and Market streets, Philadelphia, it has been placed in Fairmount Park, west of the Girard Avenue Bridge.

BETSY ROSS HOUSE, on Arch street, near Third, open daily from 9 to 5. The first national flag of the United States was made here in May, 1776, by Betsy Ross.

FAIRMOUNT PARK. One of the largest and finest parks in the world, situated on both sides of the Schuylkill and along the beautiful Wissahickon Creek. It is easily accessible by the Parkway and by various trolley lines.

MEMORIAL HALL (Fairmount Park), the home of the art collections of the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art. Open Sundays, 1 to 6; closed Mondays; other days, 9:30 to 5. These art collections include the famous Wilstach paintings.

MUSEUM OF SCIENCE AND ART of the University of Pennsylvania, 33d and Spruce streets. Beautiful buildings, housing a priceless collection of ancient and modern objects. Open daily 10 to 5; Sundays from 2 to 6.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA, 13th and Locust streets. A fine collection of books, paintings and original documents. Open daily.

ISSUES PROMOTION SERIES

Omaha World Herald Prepares Copy on 20 Newspaper Accounts

The Omaha World Herald has just issued its second series of promotion copy "advertising advertising" for use by newspapers, consisting of a newspaper-size folder containing 12 proofs of the series, which is designed to run in full page-space.

The copy has sparkle and liveliness attained by the use of excellent pen and ink illustrations.

Under a half-page drawing which shows two women talking in a beautifully furnished room, one of the ads says:

"My, what an attractively furnished home you have, Clara."

"That clever little table is new, isn't it? And wherever did you find those smart book ends? We need a lot of new furnishings at our house, too, but I simply don't see how we can afford them, right now, at least."

That clever little table and the smart book ends, along with hundreds of other furniture items from complete suites to frying pans, were prominently displayed, and very reasonably priced in the furniture ads in this newspaper. ... Her caller doesn't read the ads ... Clara does, and therein lies the difference.

In a space at the left of the page is a list of furniture manufacturers and dealers who advertised in the World Herald during 1925, while a box at the bottom of the page carries comparative linage in this classification.

The series contains promotion pages on the following newspaper advertising classifications: Food, women's apparel, men's apparel, building materials, accessories, household and electrical, furniture, musical, hotels and resorts, shoes, automobiles, insurance, department stores, jewelry, millinery, radio, hardware, financial, want ads (general), and real estate.

Issues 174-Page Tourist Edition

The Winnipeg Tribune recently issued its 1926 Tourist edition in a thick tabloid issue of 174 pages, with a four-color cover and many illustrations. Newspaper stock was used in the body of the edition. The issue carried a heavy quota of resort, hotel, railroad and general advertising from Manitoba, and also from the state of Minnesota. Greetings from the governors of Iowa, Minnesota and North Dakota were give a page in the issue.

Winnipeg to Fete Minnesota Editors

Mayor Ralph Webb of Winnipeg, and T. W. Leslie, superintendent of the Parliament building and T. J. Porter, manager of the tourist bureau, will welcome the editors of northern Minnesota to Winnipeg for their four days' outing, June 24 to 27. A banquet is to be held for the editors on June 27 at which Mayor Webb, W. McCurdy, business manager of the Winnipeg Tribune; J. W. Dafoe, editor-in-chief; J. W. Sifton, secretary and treasurer of the Manitoba Free Press and others will speak.

Chicago Ad Club Re-elects Buckley

Homer J. Buckley, president of Buckley, Dement & Co. was re-elected president of the Chicago Advertising Club, June 10. Vice-presidents named were G. R. Schaeffer, advertising manager of Marshall Field & Co., and Stanley Clague, managing director of the Audit Bureau of Circulations. Paul S. Van Auken was elected secretary.

CURTIS NAMES HIS EIGHT FAVORITE AD WRITERS

"Almost Impossible," Says Philadelphia Publisher, to Find a Good One—Most Copy Loses Its Vigor After It Is Given the Usual "Shave and Haircut," He Declares

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

"DO you read the advertisements?" I asked Cyrus H. K. Curtis, internationally known publisher of Philadelphia.

I had invited myself to Lyndon, his estate in Wyncott, 15 miles from the city, and we were riding out there in Mr. Curtis' Rolls Royce. In the conversation that followed that first question the publisher gave the names of his eight favorite advertising copy writers, discussed newspaper promotion and his life ambition to become the leader of the publishing field. I had told him I wanted to hear him play the organ, and he had graciously consented.

"Of course I read the advertisements," he smilingly answered my question. "That is my business. I have to.

"But," he gestured through the glass at the passersby on Chestnut street. "Do they? They buy a paper and turn the pages. They are young and are looking for the sports page; or perhaps they turn first to the stock tables. An eye-catcher in an ad attracts them. They read it. How to make advertising pay? That's the hard thing to get at.

"Perhaps they read the Bulletin now. I have a message to give them. If they'd let me, I'd advertise my Ledger in the Bulletin, but they won't let me. But then what I put in the space I bought would be the important thing.

"If I could only find someone that could really write an advertisement. I've been trying for years to find somebody." Mr. Curtis was thinking out loud. "It's almost impossible." He shook his head. "They have no originality, their stuff is ineffective. They hand it to me all shaved and clean and that isn't what I like. Nice type, nice paragraphs, nice illustrations— nice introduction but nothing else original in it.

"Frequently when I look over the copy submitted to me, I run my blue pencil through all of it but the last paragraph. These advertising writers think they must have an introduction, must lead up to the subject gradually. But often I reach the last paragraph and say, 'There's your ad. Don't give them the introduction, give them the ad.'"

"Who are your favorite advertising writers," I asked?

Mr. Curtis warmed up to the question immediately. And recalling short biographies and anecdotes about some of them, gave the list of his eight favorite advertising writers printed at the head of this article.

"Well," he began, "back in Portland when I was a boy—that was all of fifty years ago, there was a drygoods dealer, who made everyone sit up and take notice. I used to buy the paper every day and turn right away to his advertisement. It contained nothing I wanted to buy either. It was for my mother. I can't recall what he wrote, but he had a light flippant style. His copy was different than the others.

"It seems the man writing the copy was the head clerk. A. Q. Leach was his name. Eventually he left the drygoods dealer and set up in business for himself. Finally he attracted the attention of John Wanamaker and came here to Philadelphia. After five years he went back to Portland, where he bought the largest store in the city. He was successful because he knew how to write ads.

"Then there was Tom Lawson. Lawson knew advertising writing. And John E. Powers. He's the man who made Wanamaker's store. Powers was a Scotchman, and awfully hard to get along with,—blunt and outspoken. He struck a new note in advertising. He set it up in a different way.

"He wrote as brusquely as he talked. And he told the plain truth about the goods he sold. If he was writing about seconds, he'd call them seconds. 'These are seconds,' he'd write, 'that's why we're putting a lower price on them, to get rid of them.' At the same time the other fellows were writing about 'Slaughter Sales,' 'Big Sacrifices.' And they weren't doing any such thing. Powers would come out and tell about some circular capes that had been moving slowly, and therefore the price had been lowered to clear the shelves. It was certainly a case where truth won out. And if anyone had, Plowers had a blunt way of telling the truth.

"Well, Powers demanded a partnership with Wanamaker. I think, and Wanamaker wouldn't give it to him, so he quit. He became a free lance advertising writer. His son John O. Powers is in the advertising business today.

"And of course there was St. Moire Eaton, of the Book Lovers Library. That was all of 20 years ago. He had a style that was so different that he too had a following.

"Arthur Brisbane knows how to write real advertising also; and Ed Howe, of the Atchison Globe. They both have the faculty of appealing to the mass of people. They have the quality of writing just as they talk.

"I must add Edward Jordan to this list. He writes about his automobile in a way that just commands attention. He writes simply. He sets down talk, not writing. His copy has the conversational sound.

"Most advertising writers won't do that. I've often said I wished I had a dictaphone handy when people were talking about my advertising copy with me. They'd say, 'Why I'll go right out and write it just the same way.' But they couldnt' do it. They'd bring it back to me with a shave and a haircut. It wouldn't be the same.

"George H. Lorimer can write advertising, but he's too busy to do it all the time. He's written some wonderful advertisements for us several times, real advertisements, good because of their simplicity, and talking style.

"But good advertising is a question of good talking and simplicity. The hardest thing to write is the simplest. Pictures are good things too to catch the eye. But if the copy that follows after doesn't also attract the attention of the reader, he doesn't care a continental for the picture. Of course the first impressions come through the eyes. If you don't catch a reader right away, he will look for the sport pages or the stock markets or whatever he is interested in."

Cyrus H. K. Curtis

Mr. Curtis said he had named all of his favorite advertising writers. Perhaps, he thought, if given more time, he could think of some more. But the eight he had named were sufficient, he said, to make him dissatisfied and hard to please, as far as many others were concerned.

The car was swinging out along a bumpy parkway. Mr. Curtis, reminiscing, was speaking slowly, and I had been taking down what he was saying word by word as it appears above. I paused to rest a few moments and ask questions about the country we were passing through. Then I became inquisitive again.

I wanted to know his ideas about newspaper promotion.

"I have often said," he answered, "that the worst advertisers in the country today are the daily newspapers and the book publishers.

"The advertising for newspapers is often written or at least supervised by the advertising managers. They are interested in one thing and think everyone else is. The trouble is everyone isn't. What they do most frequently is to shout about linage, linage, linage. And about their being the first paper in their town. The advertiser doesn't care a continental about that. Some argue that they do. But I disagree. Linage is his chief interest, and he thinks it's right for others to have the same interest.

"The book people don't know how to write advertising, and what is worse, they won't spend any money. All they do is to print the name of a book, and put under it, 'Excellently written—New York Times' or 'Mr. . . . speaks well of this book.'

"That doesn't give me any idea of what's in the book, what it's all about, or why I should read it.

"Mr. Jordan—they tell me he writes his own copy—has the faculty of telling his story in such a way that it excites your curiosity and you read it, and many people are buying his car. A Mr. Jordan is needed by the newspapers and the book publishers."

I pressed him for more specific ideas on newspaper promotion. He has given up entirely his interest in his magazines, and is devoting himself exclusively now to his four newspapers, the Philadelphia Public Ledger and North American, the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger, the Philadelphia Sun, a tabloid, and the New York Evening Post.

"What do you think is the best way to promote a newspaper?" I asked.

"In the first place, you must have something to advertise," he began answering the question. "Only a little while ago I put it up to Mr. Smiley in this way: (David E. Smiley, executive editor of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, Inc.) Begin by getting a series of articles. Like the one, for instance, on politics, written by Louis Seibold. That series increased the Post's circulation 5,000 to 6,000. When it stopped, the circulation slid back again. What we must do is to map out something to follow a series like that up. People have fixed habits in newspaper reading like everything else. They get these habits slowly. They are introduced to the Post first by a series of articles that attract their attention. They get to feel at home with the Post. The majority drop back to their fixed habit, but a few remain. Then is the time to start a series to start right after the first series ends on an entirely different subject that will interest an entirely different class of reader. In this way, by keeping it up continually, we will keep on adding a few at a time until our circulation is where it should be.

"And the appeal must change with each series. People get tired of ice cream if they have it all the time. Once in a while they want pie."

(Continued on page 31)

ADVERTISING GOLF FANS READY FOR TOURNEY

Four Grand Prizes to Be Awarded Winners at Meet to Be Held at Noted Manufacturers' Club, Orelands, Pa., June 25—J. B. Mackenzie, Fox & Mackenzie, Committee Chairman

FOUR grand prizes will be awarded winners of the annual advertising golf tournament to be held at the Manufacturers' Club, Orelands, Pa., immediately after the 22nd annual A.A.C.W. convention, June 25, according to an announcement made this week by J. B. Mackenzie, of the firm of Fox & Mackenzie, Philadelphia advertising agency.

The tournament will be held all day Friday, with 18 holes schedules for the morning and the same number for the afternoon. Prizes will go to delegates turning in the low individual gross score, the low individual net; and to the team with the low gross score, and with the low net.

Individuals and teams wishing to play in the tournament will register with Mr. Mackenzie, who is chairman of the golf committee, at hotel headquarters, during the week.

The Advertising Club of Lancaster, Pa., is sending down a strong team, members of which have handicaps ranging from two to ten. Teams, made up of four members, have also already been entered by the Advertising Club of New York, the Advertising Club of Chicago, and the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia.

"Those who want to practice for the tournament, and anybody who any day feels overburdened with convention cares, may motor out to anyone of 20 golf courses near Philadelphia, which have extended golf privileges to A. A. C. W. delegates," Mr. Mackenzie told EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

The clubs inviting A.A.C.W. members to come out and play golf, Mr. Mackenzie listed as follows:

The Aranomink Golf Club, Berkshire Country Club, Brookline Square Club, Brookside Country Club, Doylestown Country Club, Green Valley Country Club, the Landsdowne Country Club, the Danerck Country Club, Lu Lu Temple Country Club, Overbrook Golf Club, Pennsylvania Golf Club, St. Davids Golf Club, Tavistock Country Club, Treydyfferin Country Club, Torresdale Country Club, Trenton Country Club, Wildwood Country Club, Woodbury Country Club, and Bala Golf Club. The Manufacturers' Club will also be opened during the week for A.A.C.W. members.

The Manufacturers' Club is about three-quarters of an hour's automobile ride from the center of the city. It has one of the finest golf courses in the country, said to be second only to the noted Merion Club, where many championships are held.

There are a number of interesting points about this golf course, which a casual inspection fails to reveal.

In the first place it was built in record time, just as the club itself was organized, and started functioning in such short order as to rather daze those responsible for it.

On August 6, 1923, the contract for the course was let to Tooney & Flynn of Philadelphia, and on Aug. 1, 1924, the course was ready to use. The course was complete down to the last sand box and hole flag. Never before in the history of golf architecture has a really classy 18-hole course been constructed in less than a year.

In designing the course, William S. Flynn, who has laid out many courses in Philadelphia and elsewhere, has followed a general plan that has been pronounced a success at countless clubs. The first tee, ninth green, tenth tee and eighteenth green are within easy reach of the clubhouse, enabling members to start play on either the first or second nines.

From the back tees, the course measures 6453 yards, or long enough to test the player's game even with the present long-flying standard ball. There is a shorter course for women.

After convention—golf. The Manufacturers' Club, new course at Orelands, Pa., is the scene of the 1926 tournament.

Par for the main course is 71 and 67 for the shorter course. The 71 strokes for the championship course is divided into 35 for the outward journey and 36 for the return.

The first fairway dips down sharply from the west wing of the clubhouse. It is 385 yards long, but a well-built drive will carry and roll so far that the par of four is easily obtainable. A bunker has been placed 190 yards from the tee to catch a slight hook. At the bunker, the fairway turns to the left. The green is open for a pitch and run approach with a bunker on the left, and a pit on the right.

Hooks are costly on the second hole, since it follows the right bank of a creek for the greater part of the way to the green. At the limit of the drive, the fairway swings across the creek, with the green just beyond the water. A good drive and a mashie will get home.

The third hole requires a drive across the creek to a fairway that bends only slightly to the right. The hole measures 440 yards from tee to green, necessitating a brassie or midiron approach to the green set at the top of an easy grade against the woods. A pit guards the green on the left, while a sharp slope on the right wards off sliced approaches.

On the fourth hole occurs a meeting with a stretch of woods. The hole is 165 yards long with a tee set well back in the woods, and a green cut out of a hill some distance below. Pulled tee shots will encounter a sand pit on the left and slices a grass bunker on the right.

The fifth fairway slopes away from the tee. If the drive is well to the right an open approach to the green with either midiron or spoon is possible. If the drive wanders to the left, it will run afoul of a bunker. The green just beyond the creek is surrounded on three sides by a grass pit.

On the sixth hole the creek must be crossed again. This hole is 195 yards long, requiring a powerful midiron stroke to get home. The green towers high above the tee. A straight shot will get home without difficulty, but, if a trifle off the line, will come to grief in the pit on the left of the green or hide itself away in the hollow of grass on the right and behind.

The seventh hole is a three-shotter. Trees border both sides of the fairway for the length of the drive. To obtain an open second shot it is necessary to get good length from the tee. Because the hole is only 474 yards long, long hitters can sometimes reach the green in two shots, but this is endangered by a bunker that cuts into the fairway from the right.

For beauty and severity the eighth hole is excelled by none on the course. It traverses on old quarry with the tee close to the western wall, and the green cut into the solid rock that forms the eastern wall. The distance is 112 yards, calling for a half stroke with the mashie or a short mashie-niblick pitch.

The last hole on the outward trip is 469 yards with a par of 5. From the tee atop a bluff south of the creek, the drive crosses the creek to the fairway that climbs sharply upward to the clubhouse.

On the tenth, the drive is very similar to the tee shot in the first hole. The fairway stretches down into the valley across the entrance road, past an old barn and over the creek. Except for the barn, which stymies a player who slices from the tee, there is no difficulty on the drive.

To reach the 11th tee, the creek must be recrossed. This hole is 204 yards, with the green atop a natural plateau, requiring both elevation and length.

Another dog-leg is encountered on the 12th hole, which is 475 yards long, with a par of five. A carry of 200 yards or more from the tee, will afford a player an open second shot around a bend of the fairway to the right. The green is elevated somewhat, with a pit on the right.

The superstitious among A.A.C.W. golfers will find many reasons for explaining the 13th hole. In the first place it is 228 yards long requiring a wood shot from the tee, and a long one at that. To further complicate play, large bunkers have been placed on the left of the green with pits on the right.

If a drive from the 14th tee strays too far to the right, it will be snapped up by a pit 190 yards away. After a drive along the left side of the fairway, a player is left an open approach to the green, but from the right, the approach must carry a deep and forbidding trap. The 15th hole is 438 yards with a par of four.

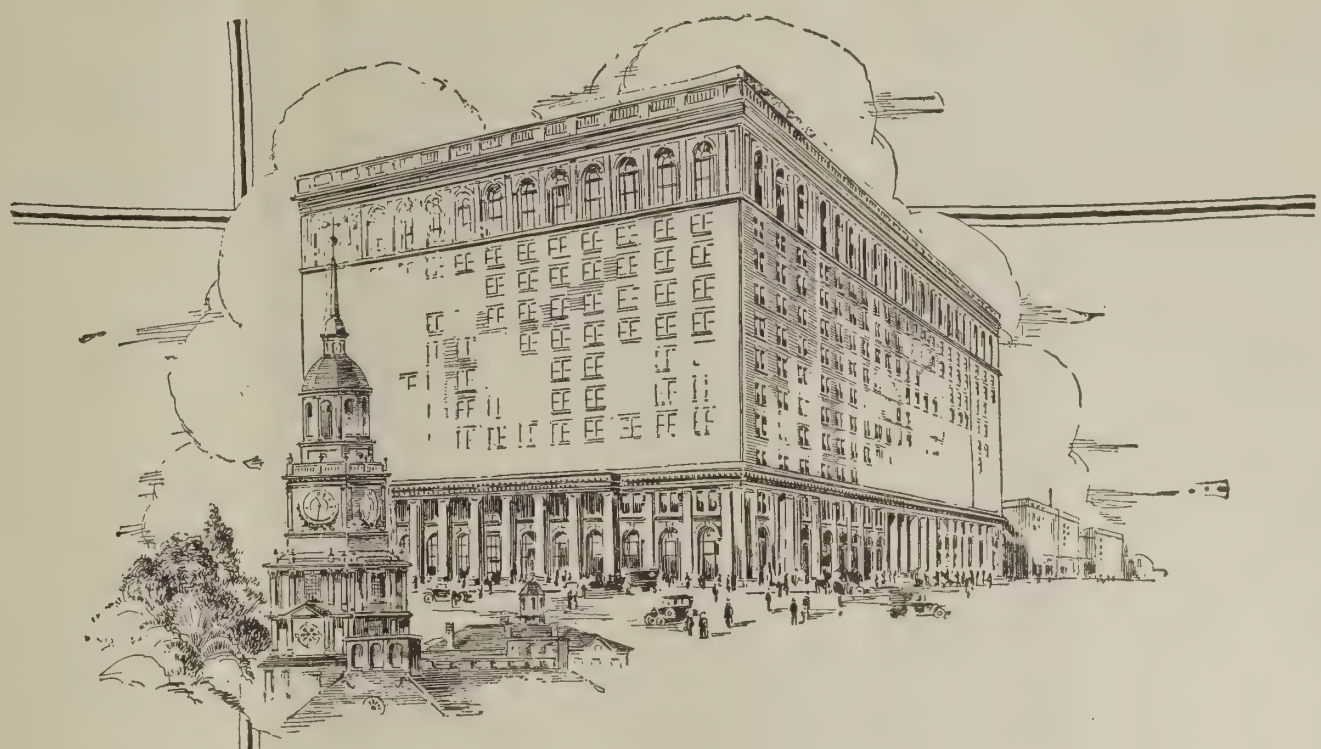
From the 16th tee the fairway falls away rapidly, an aid to a drive that is straight, but antagonistic towards a slice, because pits are along the right. A quarry also cuts into the fairway. The green is set at the edge of this quarry, with a sand pit on the left of the putting area.

The 17th affords another drive from an elevated tee. A pit has been cut into the right edge of the fairway to penalize slices. The green is beyond the creek, and is guarded by pits on both right and left.

On the finish hole, the drive must again cross the creek. The distance to be carried is 474 yards. The par is five. Beyond the creek the fairway mounts the rapid slope to the clubhouse. A diagonal bunker scars the left side of the fairway just short of the green. The putting area is protected further by a pit on the right and woods on the left.

The entire course will furnish the A.A.C.W. golf fans with an invigorating three-mile hike over the countryside.

TO TEACH FINE PRINTING



Work Started on U. of Oregon's Journalism Laboratory Building

Ground has been broken at the University of Oregon for a new laboratory building for the school of journalism. It will be used for the study of shop management, printing processes and fine typography.

Classes in fine printing are to be conducted under the general direction of John Henry Nash of San Francisco, a noted producer of fine typography. Newspapers and printers of Oregon have raised a fund to equip this section of the laboratory and the first hand printed edition de luxe will be produced next fall by advanced students in typography. Books produced there will not be for sale but will be distributed to libraries, and to contributors to the fund.

PLACES OF INTEREST IN PHILADELPHIA WHICH ARE OPEN ON SUNDAYS

Independence Hall.
Delaware River Bridge (under construction.)
Broad street subway (under construction.)
Fairmount Park and its buildings.
Zoological Gardens.
Academy of the Fine Arts, Broad and Cherry streets.
Academy of Natural Sciences, Nineteenth and Race streets.
Johnson Art Gallery, 510 South Broad street.
U. S. Navy Yard (if a pass is previously obtained from the captain of the yard).
University of Pennsylvania Museum of Science, Thirty-fourth and Woodland avenue.
Commercial Museum, Thirty-fourth street below Spruce.
Bartram's Garden Park, Fifty-fourth street and Woodland avenue.
Washington Monument, Green street entrance to Fairmount Park.
Smith Memorial Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, Fairmount Park.

Philadelphia Welcomes the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

Philadelphia is solidly behind the Poor Richard Club in its endeavor to make the 1926 Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World a memorable one, and has arranged an elaborate program that will provide against the possibility of a dull moment throughout the entire length of their stay.

The Public Ledger, proud of its close association with the great advertising profession, cordially invites the visiting advertising men to inspect its magnificent new home, in the shadow of historic Independence Hall, and to make the fullest use of its every facility.

PUBLIC LEDGER

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE

PHILADELPHIA

WHERE MODERN RETAIL ADVERTISING WAS BORN

A. A. C. W. Delegates Invited to Reception at John Wanamaker Store, June 22—How Imagination Plus Power of Expression and Purchase of Newspaper Space Aided Great Store's Growth

A VISIT to the birthplace of modern advertising, the John Wanamaker Store, Philadelphia, is on the program for Associated Advertising Clubs of the World delegates for the afternoon of June 22.

Rodman Wanamaker, president, has invited all A. A. C. W. members to a reception and a tour through the famous store that advertising built.

Meeting at the store at 4:30 in the afternoon, June 22, the delegates will be divided into groups and taken through all the various departments from the basement to the roof of the huge building at 13th and Market streets. When the store closes at 5 o'clock, there will be concerts by the store's own employee musical organizations, and exhibition drills by the store's boy and girl cadet corps, numbering 400. The drills will be held in the store's own armory on the ninth floor.

After this, and after the entire building has been inspected, delegates will be served a buffet supper in the eighth floor restaurant.

Executives, who will be on hand to greet delegates, in addition to Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, will be W. R. Nevin, vice-president; Joseph Williams, treasurer; H. S. Conell, advertising manager, and William Dryden, assistant advertising manager.

There will be no speeches. The great store will speak for itself. It will tell of the marvelous power of advertising rightly and honestly used.

John Wanamaker, the store's founder, whose writings are still used in the store's newspaper advertising copy, was the first advertising genius in the retail advertising field.

Advertising, when Mr. Wanamaker started business, was virtually a neglible factor among merchants. He was only 23, when in 1861 with his brother-in-law, Nathan Brown, he opened a men's and boys' clothing business under the name of Wanamaker & Brown in a building called Oak Hall at the southeast corner of Sixth and Market streets, Philadelphia. What he lacked in years and experience, he made up in imagination, and a willingness to risk all to prove his own ideas right or wrong. Bankruptcy within a few months was freely predicted. But young Wanamaker wrote down in his notebook:

"I will allow no one to dissuade me."

He was convinced that if he could get people talking about his store, they would come to his store, and after they had come they would buy. Thus he set about to make the tongues wag.

He plastered the town with posters. He set up huge billboards. His first idea was rather to attract attention, to arouse curiosity, rather than to sell his goods. That would follow inevitably, he reasoned.

Russell H. Conwell, in his book "The Romantic Rise of a Great American," writes as follows about this early advertising:

"On fences, or wherever space could be found, were posters with simply 'W & B' on them in big wood type. Everybody at once inquired of everybody else, what does W. & B. mean?' It soon became known that it stood for the firm at Sixth and Market streets.

"Balloons, 20 feet high, were sent up and a suit of clothes was given free to each person who returned one. Another advertising 'stunt' was carried out, when tallyho coaching was introduced as a pastime for the wealthy. Oak Hall employes, dressed in the height of fashion, were sent out on a fine coach drawn by six horses and, as the tallyho was sounded, they distributed advertising leaflets.

"In addition to these methods, he was advertising as largely as he could afford in the newspapers. Speaking of these first advertising efforts, he said once: 'When this little store (Oak Hall) closed its doors on its first day's business away back in 1861," the sum of $24.67 was found in the old fashioned till under the counter. The sixty-seven cents were left there for making change the next morning, and the $24 were taken out by the founder and spent with the newspapers, which were asked simply to say that the new store was open and doing business and had a good stock of goods useful to the public. He also spent immediately for advertising all the profit from the order for uniforms of the Custom House Guards.

"In addition to the novelty of his advertising, he kept persistently at it. He said once:

"'Continuous advertising, like continuous work, is most effective. If there is any enterprise in the world that a quitter should leave alone, it is advertising. Advertising does not jerk, it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day, year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power. To discontinue your advertisement is the same thing as taking down your sign. If you want to do business, you must let the public know it. I would as soon think of doing business without clerks as without advertising.'

"Having decided that newspaper advertising was the most profitable, he suddenly took a daring leap and became the most talked-about advertiser in the country. This leap he did not take wildly. He had walked steadily towards it. But when he saw he could take it and that the thing itself was far ahead of anything that had yet been done, he leaped into the full-page advertisement.

"This first full-page advertisement appeared in the Philadelphia Record in December, 1879. This, again, was an innovation that startled the business world, for at this time no store had taken so much space for advertising and eventually held to it continuously. Later he startled advertising and newspaper circles by publishing a full page advertisement in the Paris edition of the New York Herald. This was especially prepared by a staff of artists and writers in Paris.

"Not only did he attract attention by his methods and his mediums, but the matter published was in itself so interesting that the Wanamaker advertising page became a popular feature of the Philadelphia newspapers. It is no exaggeration to say that many women of the city and suburbs refused to take a daily paper that did not contain the Wanamaker advertisement."

There are some interesting details regarding Wanamaker's early newspaper advertising which are not revealed in Mr. Conwell's book. Mr. Wanamaker's secretary kept an album which contains some specimens of this early advertising. This album is at present on file in the advertising department of the Philadelphia store.

It is very evident that Mr. Wanamaker wanted his advertising to be different. One advertisement for instance, published in a Philadelphia newspaper June 13, 1876, just 50 years ago, ran nine inches in depth, a big advertisement in those days, and set in small type, read in part as follows:

YOU DON'T SAY IT!

You don't say it!

You don't Say it Really? Yes it is an

Actual Fact
Actual Fact

our

FURNISHING DEPARTMENT
FURNISHING DEPARTMENT

FURNISHING DEPARTMENT

has been run down with customers

WE BOUGHT 600 DOZEN
WE BOUGHT 600 DOZEN
600 DOZEN
600 DOZEN

UNDERWEAR UNDERWEAR
UNDERWEAR UNDERWEAR
UNDERWEAR UNDERWEAR

and now they are nearly all gone.

Down through the nine inches, Mr. Wanamaker talked to his prospective customers in the repetitious way. He wanted to set them talking. He wanted them to remember what he had written.

In his imagination, probably, he heard two housewives talking to each other, like this:

"Well, what do you think, Mrs. Pajinka?

"Why I don't know, what, Mrs. Cadinka?

"Well, what do you think, that Wanamaker's store bought 600 dozen underwear.

"No, you don't say, 600 dozen underwear.

"Yes, really, 600 dozen underwear.

"You dont say it!

"Yes, it's an actual fact.

"Six hundred dozen underwear?

"Yes, 600 dozen underwear, and now they are nearly all gone."

In the same advertisement is a phrase which Mr. Wanamaker wanted to impress on feminine minds, and he repeated it often in the copy. That was "a curiosity for cheapness."

Thus the advertisement informed possible customers that one of the store's buyers had returned from the agents of the works this week, having closed out lines of goods that were opened on Saturday at marvelous bargains to wit: 14 cases assorted summer shirts and drawers,

(Continued on page 31)

Interior of the Wanamaker store during the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia

Original home of the John Wanamaker business, established in 1861. Of the first day's receipts—$24.67—$24 went into newspaper advertising the next day.

Land was less expensive in 1876 and the Wanamaker Emporium expanded in length and width rather than upward. Above is an exterior view of the store of that day.

The

American Scene

UNDER this title we have arranged an exhibition of advertising art and copy prepared by this agency, the same being on view at the home office of Advertising Headquarters, 308 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Please accept this announcement as our very cordial invitation to you to inspect this exhibit at your leisure and convenience when you visit Philadelphia.

N. W. AYER & SON

ADVERTISING HEADQUARTERS
PHILADELPHIA

NEW YORK SAN FRANCISCO
BOSTON CHICAGO

SATISFYING A PUBLIC'S HUNGER FOR DAILY NEWS

Each Day a Relay Race Is Run Through the Largest Pressroom in the World—A Trip Through the Philadelphia Bulletin's Manufacturing Plant

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

IS there a public demand for news? Listen to the roar of any pressroom for an answer. And when you hear the largest pressroom in the world, you will never doubt again.

It was mid-afternoon the other day when I carried that doubt across the plaza near City Hall to the home of the Philadelphia Bulletin. I was in time to see the Bulletin's sport's edition made while I walked through the largest press-room in the world.

There I watched an army of men guide giant machines in a race against time, fighting seconds and minutes to put papers into homes to satisfy a public's hunger for its daily news.

What is done daily in that stadium of presses staggers the mind of any man. In much less than the hours of daylight, nearly 28,000,000 pages of news are sped through this one place into 158 trucks to be carried from vantage points by 10,-000 boys into a half a million homes. One stretch of the relay race of news from street to wire to type to mat to press to street to home.

And in the Bulletin's plant another race is under way. What is already mammoth is yet not large enough. Success is racing to keep up with success. Workmen are laying foundations for six more 12 unit presses. There are 104 16-page units now, and when immediate plans are through there will be 130.

The story of both races is told in a walk from the old building under a street to the new, up through five floors and down to truck sheds frowning on three streets.

It is the old pressroom that is being made over now in the second time-defeating race. Presses that in 1908 were the joy of American printers have been scrapped to make way for new. In 1908 a room 80 feet long and 47 feet wide for newspaper press work was amazing. The Bulletin presses to day are 132 feet long, and the room has pushed out the walls of the old building, and has tunneled under street into a seven-story annex nearby.

Experience has taught the American publisher it is cheaper to buy real estate and stretch press units out long, than to follow the old theory of building high. It has been shown that the saving in paper alone buys the extra land. The new system is called the straight-line method and was made possible by the invention of the reel.

Under this method the white paper is fed to the press cylinders for printing from below instead of from above. Each press in the Bulletin's annex uses space on two stories, one for the paper reels and one for the presses.

Walk through the basement reel room of the annex, in the mad roar of an edition on the press. Great spools of white paper are whirling around, unrolling upwards into the presses one flight above. A futurist painting of flashing white against black. The belly of a monster, this basement, 160 feet long and 160 feet wide.

Men on this floor move the paper on trucks along narrow gauge rails to feed the reels. These reels are operated by electric control buttons. Just before one reel runs out, a tender steps forward and marks an untouched roll of paper with glue. He presses a button. The new roll swings slowly forward and is glued to the fast disappearing old. Speed slackens a little to prevent a break but not many seconds are lost in the race with time. A fat fresh roll of paper now speeds upwards to be printed and folded and carried up still another flight without pause to the delivery room on the street level.

Up a flight into the main press room, still beneath the ground. Here are five 12-unit Hoe presses, 132 feet long, each weighing 300 tons. Each press is divided up in such a way as to deliver through four folders four 48-page papers or two 52-page papers simultaneously. On this floor, too, is the electric switch board controlling this factory of presses. Along the length of a city block it stretches, a stable of 3680 electrical horses.

Skip the delivery room for a while, to see how it is fed from above and below at the same time. Pass also the second reel room, much like the one seen before. Once again into the roar of this time four six unit presses. The walls of this room must soon be pushed out over the roof of the bigger room below, in order that more units may be added to the presses.

Above this room are two more floors, where presses will eventually be installed. Now they are being used for paper storage. Big as they are they can only hold enough newsprint to last two days ahead.

So great is a public's demand for news!

And now into the delivery room on the street level, a winding twisting mass of endless belts shunting papers out through doors into the jaws of waiting trucks. Here is the terminal of the printing process and the gateway to the city streets. The white paper has been filled with the world's story and the 58-page paper automatically folded and transferred by electric conveyors to be piled in bundles and tied and marked for delivery miles away. See how fast and sure those hands work, slipping a leather thong about a counted pile of Bulletins.

Outside the door, is the sputter of gasoline motors as one truck, two, three are loaded and swing out into the street to make way for others to be filled. There are four loading platforms, on three sides of the Bulletin Annex, and there is one more platform to receive papers for delivery from the press room in the main building. This last platform is supplied by five octuple presses. At this total of five platforms 50 trucks can stand at a time, backed up against the delivery room doors.

At one platform of the annex is a door which is not the terminus of an endless belt. It is where the ink trucks come and the ink is pumped into tanks to be pushed through pipes to the presses.

While I had thus walked through the largest press room in the world, pausing only while my guide, G. A. Wiedemann, shouted explanations above the din, the sports edition had been finished. The giant presses were still. There was the time and the quiet now necessary for more detailed information.

At 8:30 in the morning, the presses start their work. The first copies are for mailing. With one edition at 11:30 in between, the main edition is begun at 1:44 and by 3:05 is completed. In this hour and twenty minutes the bulk of the paper is printed. Then comes the race to keep up with the news of baseball games and races under way many miles away. Between 4 o'clock and 4:25 the sports edition is printed. The first star final begins at about 5 o'clock and the two star at six. There are many pauses for fudge-lifts.

In speaking of these modern presses, a press capable of producing a 16-page paper is counted as a unit. The 104 press units in the Bulletin plant produce an average of 1,173,000 16-page papers or 391,000 48-page papers an hour. This amazing press capacity means that 39,-100 eight page copies, or 6,517 48-page copies can be turned out every minute.

In June of 1895 William L. McLean, who had been general manager of the Philadelphia Press, took over the Evening Bulletin. It then had a circulation of only 5,000. The new owner of this old paper established in 1847 began at once to look far into the future. It is his policy, he has said, to keep 10 years ahead with his production plans.

The one and only old fashioned Bullock press that printed this 5,000 circulation was immediately replaced with a Hoe Quadruple Rotary Perfecting press, capable of producing 48,000 eight-page papers in an hour, a marvelous record in those days. The circulation jumped up in a year to 33,625. By 1908, the Bulletin had eight sextuple presses, and this was so remarkable at that date that Alfred Harmsworth, later Lord Northcliffe, made a special trip from England to see what this man McLean was doing. During the eight following years the press room equipment grew to include thirteen octuples. In 1918, still keeping 10 years ahead, the annex was started. First the basement was finished and filled with presses, then the two upper floors were equipped. The building was finished as it now stands in 1924, but Mr. McLean, still ten years ahead in his race with time, has already ordered more presses from the factory, and has plans drawn for extension of the upper stories of the annex.

Meanwhile that seven-story building rocks each day in the roar of that other race to get more than 500,000 papers spread out over a city of 2,000,000 in 129 square miles laced with narrow streets. These papers must be in subscribers' hands while news is news and advertising valuable to reader and subscriber. So great is a public's demand for news.

104 16-PAGE UNITS IN WORLD'S LARGEST PRESSROOM

View of the Philadelphia Bulletin's pressroom, where nearly 28,000,000 pages are printed daily. Immediate plans call for additional installations which will make a total of 130 printing units.

Weird Spanish Censorship

Weird story of the operation of the Spanish censorship was told this week by the Marquis de Valdeiglesias, editor and publisher of Madrid La Epoca, who is visiting the United States.

La Epoca was stopped by the board of censorship because a story was published referring to some improvements carried out in Spain, and forgot to name the dictator, Primo de Rivera.

PICK BEST NEVADA PAPERS

Journalism Students Make Award to Weeklies and Dailies

Nevada's most representative newspapers, according to advanced students in Journalism at the University of Nevada, Reno, acting as judges in a statewide contest under the direction of the Nevada State Press association, are:

Weekly—Fallon Churchill County Eagle.

Tri-weekly—Elko Free Press.

Daily in cities under 10,000—Ely Times and Winnemucca Humboldt Star (tie).

Daily in cities over 10,000—Reno Nevada State Journal.

These newspapers, winners in their respective divisions, will receive prizes offered by the Western Newspaper Union.

Hamilton Resigns in Ft. Wayne

Frank G. Hamilton, advertising manager and vice-president of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) News-Sentinel has resigned because of poor health and will spend the next few months in traveling. He will continue as vice-president of the company. Mr. Hamilton has been with the News-Sentinel for 15 years.

Offers "Most Useful Citizen" Cup

A "Most Useful Citizen" loving cup is being offered by the Seattle Post Intelligencer, which will be awarded yearly to the person living in Seattle deemed most worthy of the honor.

ONE-QUARTER MILLION

Agate Lines

INCREASE

In National Advertising in the First Five Months of 1926 in the Pittsburgh Gazette Times

(Morning and Sunday)

and

PITTSBURGH CHRONICLE TELEGRAPH

(Evening Except Sunday)

Sold Singly or Combined

The Answer—It Pays

Thoroughly Cover Fourth Largest Market in America

Evening and Sunday Morning Combined Circulation

270,000

Evening and Morning Combined Circulation

217,000

Chronicle Telegraph (Evening) and Pittsburgh Gazette Times (Sunday) Carry More Automotive Advertising Than Any Other Evening and Sunday Newspaper in Pittsburgh.

E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, New York
122 South Michigan Blvd., Chicago
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

URBAN E. DICE
National Advertising Manager
Gazette Square, Pittsburgh, Pa.

R. J. BIDWELL COMPANY
742 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.
White-Henry-Stuart Bldg., Seattle, Wash.

AD MEN'S BOSSES PAY THE FARE—YOU CAN WAGER THEY'LL BE THERE

When Sharp Chin Solos Start to Twang You'll Know It's "Over With a Bang"—Four Out of Five Will Come in State; Phillie Will Help Them Celebrate

Written especially for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By F. D. SCHNITGER

Writer of "Grim's Fairy Tales"—Ledger Syndicate

THE boys and girls who write those cute little fairy stories entitled, "You'll Never Miss the Easy Payments"; "How to Become a Social Lion in Six Easy Lessons on the Saxophone"; "He Loved Her Till She Ordered Chicken Salad," etc., will gather at Philadelphia, June 20th to the 25th for the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

There will be plenty of 'em in attendance for these word jugglers can find more reasons for attending a convention than a publisher can for playing golf during business hours.

Trust the discoverers of Halitosis to put the bee on the boss for important expense money. It will be oats for them, and when they come out of the boss's office, whither they have gone to get the official "Okeh," orders on the treasurer will be like pyorrhea—four out of five will have it.

But after the boss has fallen for the annual convention shake-down, like a fat man for a banana peel—what has Philadelphia to offer, in addition to chin solos by world famous advertising men and other sordid business matters? These, after all, are only mere details in the life of a Conventionite. Who ever heard of going to a convention for the purpose of the convention itself? Perish the thought! As well speak of attending high-nose opera for the sake of music.

First and foremost there is the Sesquicentennial. According to old man Webster's son, Noah, "Sesquicentennial" is a fifteen-dollar word meaning—"of or pertaining to a century and a half." It seems that someone with a sardonic sense of humor figured it would be a Wow to pull a street carnival in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and the consequent alleged independence of America.

Although no one has ever been able to prove it, we Americans know that we are a free country because it says so in the Constitution—and, as one of the French Louis said to the man-in-the-Iron-Mask, you can't laugh THAT off.

As a result of the Sesqui, Philadelphia this year will draw a bigger crowd than an ice wagon in Hades. You really must visit the Sesqui for we are reliably informed that several new riding devices will be introduced and if one is following the advertising profession one must be up on What's What.

Another point of interest is the office occupied by Col. William's good friend and pal—General Smedley Butler during the time he was de-alcoholizing and purifying Philly. As a result of his campaign, the foremost critics have had to revise their list of "The Six Best Hellers" to read something like this—1. General Butler; 2. Mussolini; 3. Kip Rhinelander; 4. Abd-El-Krim; 5. Countess of Cathcart and Moral Turpitude; 6. The Gal who occupied the now famous Bathtub.

Any good bootlegger will be able to direct you to the General's former headquarters which are kept decorated with flowers by the friends of Col. Williams.

Maybe you have heard of a weekly publication nicknamed The Saturday Evening Pest sometimes called The Advertising Man's Bible. Considering the fact that it has only been published since about the time George Washington wore short pants, it has built up a very creditable circulation. The plant is located in Philadelphia and, we understand will be open to visiting delegates.

Those with a yen for American history can be kept busier than a mosquito on a wooden leg, for Philadelphia has more places of historical interest than there are dents in Ford fenders. Space forbids enumerating them—but give 'em the inquiring eye.

We have been asked to give a few "Convention Don'ts" as well as the above Do's.

In the light of past experience we would say that the most important one is—Don't try to fill inside straights or three card flushes for even the most elastic expense accounts will sometimes backfire.

Don't believe the guy who tells you it's genuine bottled in bond Scotch—just ask him if he knows any more funny stories.

And finally—Don't fail to come.

Salt Lake City Wants N.E.A. Meet

The Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce has sent an invitation to the National Editorial Association to hold its 1928 convention in that city. The invitation was written on a giant typewriter and the paper used measured 8½ by 12 feet.

Paper's Correspondents Organize

Correspondents of the Niagara Falls (N. Y.) Gazette, were guests of the publishers at a dinner and inspection of the plant recently. The correspondents formed an organization with Fred B. Skinner of Medina as president; A. G. Bridge, Stamford, Ont., vice-president; and Mrs. Mabel H. Lewis, Johnson Creek, Secretary.

N. H. Editor Dies on Train

George Kelley, editor of the Lebanon (N. H.) Granite State Free Press, died June 12, of a heart attack on board the New England Rotary special train bound for the international convention of Rotary Clubs at Denver. Death came as the train was nearing Oakley, Kan.

SALT LAKE CITY DAILY OPENS NEW HOME

Deseret News Celebrates With Housewarming — General Manager Kirkham Master of Ceremonies—Veteran Employes Introduced

The completion of the new home of the Salt Lake City Deseret News on Richards street, near the old building, which will be used by departments of the News and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company was celebrated on the evening of June 7, when more than 300 employes of the paper gathered at the new plant for a housewarming. The entire evening was devoted to the celebration of the completion of the large structure which will house one of the most modern and convenient newspaper plants in the west.

Assistant General Manager James M. Kirkham, was master of ceremonies. Heber J. Grant, publisher of the paper in behalf of the Mormon Church, owners, spoke. A feature of the evening was the introduction by Mr. Kirkham of the veteran employes of the paper. There were several who have been with the paper more than 35 years, one more than 50, one 47.

New 6-Day Paper in Colorado

Under the editorship of Leo H. Bowen, the Glenwood Springs (Col.) Avalanche-Echo is now being published six days a week, instead of weekly.

Philadelphia's Newest and Fastest Growing Newspaper!

THE Philadelphia Daily News, the most modern newspaper in the third city of the country and unrivalled among tabloids anywhere for newsiness and entertaining, interesting and pictorial features, is still increasing in popularity (circulation) and has reached the heights of advertising power.

The 100,000 mark of circulation probably will have been passed ere this meets your eye for week after week has shown an increase in net paid daily average and the Sesqui has only just begun. Sworn net paid daily average for the week ending May 22, was 82,873.

Advertising in the first year—March 31, 1925, to March 31, 1926—totalled 2,428,291 lines, and it has more than doubled since the second year began.

Eagerness for a live, popular medium in this territory thus is shown to have been supplemented by unstinted approval of the Philadelphia Daily News by advertisers here.

Many national advertisers already have realized that, full of honors among advertisers in its home city, the Philadelphia Daily News cannot be omitted in any campaign that includes Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA DAILY NEWS

THE PEOPLE'S PICTORIAL

Fifteenth and Cherry Streets

BEAUTIFUL STORY BEHIND ADVERTISING EXHIBIT OF POOR RICHARD'S SCHOOL

Originated by a "Father" of 129 Boys, Endowed by the Father of One Who Died, the Name George Morris Price Is Becoming Famous in Philadelphia

A "FATHER" of 129 boys and another father of one son who died and an advertising club with nothing to do combine to make a beautiful story behind the George Morris Price School of Advertising and Journalism, the students of which are exhibiting their work next week among other exhibits of the 22nd annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Philadelphia.

BARTLEY J. DOYLE

MICHAEL PRICE

Bartley Doyle, president of the Keystone Publishing Company, hasn't any children of his own. But he likes to see young boys get along in the world. He has taken a family of 129 sons under his wing. Mr. Doyle is also interested in advertising and in advertising clubs. Some three years ago he was president of the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia, and responsible for a radical change in that organization.

"See here," he said in effect to the members, "as a hotel our club is all right. We eat here and once in a while we hear some speaker. But that's not my idea of a club. It seems to me rather selfish that we should gather here just to eat and please ourselves. While we are spending our time here, let's accomplish something for others. We're a club that has nothing to do. Let's find something to do."

And Mr. Doyle, with others in the club, went out and organized a small school of advertising and journalism to be taught by Poor Richard members.

A young man named George Morris Price was particularly interested in this seedling school. The first year, when it had fifty members, he was a great help to Mr. Doyle, the principal organizer. Poor Richard's club house was then on Camac street, a quaint little place, with not much room available for teaching young men the fundamentals of advertising and the practical side of the business. But it worked well enough to show that Mr. Doyle's ideals of service were entirely pragmatic.

Not long after the school got under way, Mr. Price went on a trip abroad. He never returned. He was lost overboard one night, while crossing the Mediterranean sea from India.

The father of this young man was Michael Price, president of McNeely & Price, a manufacturing concern. The elder Price had been very proud of his only son, now so suddenly severed from him. He'd always expected his boy would make a name for himself in Philadelphia.

After George's death, he began to think about ways in which he might perpetuate his memory. He considered doing something for Lehigh, his son's University. The thought of the cruel sea was on his mind, and for a while he planned a fund to provide an annual prize for heroism in rescuing lives along the eastern Atlantic shore.

But then he remembered his son's interest in the Poor Richard Club and its advertising school. He began to wonder himself how that school was getting along. George used to mention it a great deal. About this time he had a talk with Mr. Doyle. A $50,000 endowment for the establishment of the George Morris Price School of Advertising and Journalism followed this conversation.

This school last year, now housed in the third floor of the Poor Richard Club's new home, and still operated under its direction, with Mr. Doyle as advisory chairman, had nearly 200 students, who have turned out some really marvelous exhibits of advertising craftsmanship. Its alumni number 100, all of whom are engaged in some form of advertising work.

A two year's course is given by the George Morris Price School for men ranging from 18 to 30 years old, under the supervision of Thomas J. Mulvey, director, and John Lutz, his assistant. A small fee is charged for purchasing books to be used in classes held three evenings a week. A certificate is given on graduation, which helps the bearer considerably in finding employment in Philadelphia agencies. On commencement day a short while ago, a class of 50 was graduated.

The name of George Morris Price is becoming famous in Philadelphia.

"But the demand for the graduates is far in excess of the supply," Mr. Doyle told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. "We have three bright, beautifully furnished rooms, but that is not enough. This last year we accepted a class of 150 and turned away nearly 200."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

June 19-24—Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, 22nd annual convention, Philadelphia.
June 19-26—American Golf Assn. of Advertising Interests, Spring tournament, Cooperstown, N. Y.
June 24-26—Kentucky Press Assn., mid-summer meeting, Pineville, Ky.
June 25-28—New Jersey Press Assn., summer outing, Lake Minnewaska, N. Y.
June 25—New England Associated Press Members, Copely Plaza Hotel, Boston, Mass.
June 28-29—Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Assn., State College, Pa.

WE'RE ALWAYS BUSY—WHY?

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS

Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get It Quickly
Get It Right

Conducted on
THE KENDALL PLAN

We would like to know more of your circulation building methods and charges. Without obligation to us, you may submit details, terms, etc.

Our last Campaign was run _____

Name of paper _____ City _____

By _____ Title _____ State _____

Should we use a Campaign we would want it to start about _____

Eighteen consecutive successful years of "Knowing How." Wire or write for details, references, etc.,

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

At present conducting third campaign within six years upon the WHEELING, W. VA., INTELLIGENCER.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

Make Allentown your test town in Pennsylvania

ALLENTOWN'S large number of retail outlets—over one thousand — allows advertisers to get thorough distribution in this genuinely American city.

The Morning Call's 31,400 circulation gives a complete coverage of the city and trading territory.

The Call carried over ten million lines of advertising during 1925, and the monthly figures this Spring have been breaking all previous records.

Allentown should be on all Pennsylvania lists.

Allentown Morning Call

Story, Brooks & Finley
National Representatives

"Ask us about Advertisers' cooperation"

Annals of the Poor Richard Club

Being a short history of the famous Advertising Club of Philadelphia especially written for Editor & Publisher by a Charter Member and former President.

WILLIAM J. ELDRIDGE

Pleasant face of famous old Poor Richard club, host to Associated Advertising Clubs for second time in 10 years

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN was born January 17, 1706. Just two centuries and one month later—February 16, 1906, there was an informal gathering of men interested in advertising who met in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia and discussed the need and possibility of organizing a club that should represent the interests of advertising. The need of such a club was recognized, the possibility was questioned, but it was decided to call a meeting of leaders in this field as buyers, sellers and makers of advertising.

To this end some 50 invitations were issued to the advertising managers of prominent business houses recognized as users of publicity, to leading advertising agencies, to writers and publishers, to meet at the Board of Trade room in the Bourse Building on March 15.

About 20 men responded to this invitation. Charles E. Roberts of Lippincott's Magazine was called to the chair and after some discussion a committee of five was appointed to present plans for a permanent organization.

The committee appointed consisted of Clarence K. Arnold of the Arnold & Dyer Advertising Agency, W. M. Ostrander, well-known real estate man and promoter; William Percy Mills of the Evening Bulletin, John C. van Haagan, advertising agency, and Mr. Joseph H. Appel, advertising manager of John Wanamaker's.

The committee soon submitted a plan embodying the formation of a club to be known as THE POOR RICHARD CLUB, using the well-known pen-name of Bejamin Franklin and commemorating him as the Father of Advertising. Thus was born just two centuries and two months after the advent of the first Poor Richard a second that has sought to honor his memory and carry into effect the high and sterling business ethics for which he stood.

It was decided to limit the membership to seventy-five or at the most eighty. The annual dues were fixed at ten dollars for resident members and five dollars for non-resident. Further regulations were adopted as to officers committees and meetings, and an annual dinner or banquet was decided upon as a fixed event.

The Poor Richard Club thus organized was fortunate in enlisting the interest of Thomas Martindale, a well-known business man, prominent in civic affairs and a true disciple of advertising. He accepted the presidency of the club and immediately plunged into an active promotion of its purposes.

From the first the Club has been noted for its social activities. The first event of this kind was a shad dinner held at Washington Park on the Delaware River on the evening of May 1, 1906. Twenty-two members were present and addresses were made by members of the club including Thomas A. Daly, the well known humorist and poet, who had just been elected to the presidency of the American Press Humorists, a national organization.

The Poor Richard Club tendered a dinner to the American Press Humorists at Belmont Mansion in Fairmount Park on June 8, in recognition of the honor confered on its fellow member, "Tom" Daly.

At this dinner there were about 110 present. On June 22, 1906, the club adopted a constitution and by-laws, in which the objects of the club were specifically set forth as follows:

(1.) The scientific study of advertising in a sincere endeavor to promote its best interests.

(2.) The widening and amalgamation of advertising circles, bringing them into a closer and better understood relationship.

For the official management of the club an executive committee of nine was provided. By way of entertainment a formal banquet was to be held at the time of the annual meeting in November and a literary and social meeting was to be held monthly from December to March "at which papers on advertising topics" were to be read, to be followed by a general discussion and informal supper.

The first annual banquet of the Poor Richard Club, the forerunner of the many brilliant annual events that have followed, was held in the Bellevue-Stratford on the evening of November 27, 1906. Mr. Martindale, who had been re-elected at the annual business meeting to serve for another year as President, was toastmaster. The affair was a brilliant success although it lacked the "stunt" features and frolic that have distinguished subsequent banquets. The speeches were largely indicative of the purposes for which the club was organized and prophetic of what the club could become if those purposes were honestly carried out.

The great need of the club was felt to be a permanent place of abode. Meetings were held from time to time in various restaurants and the new born infant was much like a foundling on the doorstep. A committee headed by Clarence K. Arnold was appointed to devise some means by which a club house could be secured, and after some search finally located at 239 South Camac Street. Several other clubs on this street have caused it to be called "The Street of Little Clubs."

The property, an old-fashioned dwelling of two stories and a half, was purchased at a cost of $4,500, and alterations to suit the purposes of the club, together with furnishings made a total cost of about $10,000.

The purchase was financed by each of the seventy-five members purchasing a bond for $100, the balance being cared for by mortgage.

As a property owner the club was under the necessity of incorporating, and a charter was granted, dated July 23, 1907. The charter members were Clarence K. Arnold, Thomas Martindale, J. W. Morton, Jr., Richard A. Foley, Wm. C. Supplee and the following Directors whose names appear on the document: Clarence K. Arnold, Joseph H. Appel, Henry Ferris, H. C. Gara, Charles Westing, W. J. Eldridge, David T. Fleisher, B. J. Wasserman, Louis J. Kolb, W. Percy Mills, secretary and J. W. Morton, Jr., treasurer. The purpose of the club was declared to be: "to foster, protect and promote the welfare and interest of persons engaged in the trade and business of buying and selling advertising space in, and advertising matter for, periodicals and publications of any character, and of producing advertising matter, and for the protection and encouragement of such trade and commerce by combining the intelligence and influence of members against impositions and fraud, as experience may from time to time dictate, by bringing about greater uniformity and certainty in business connections and by establishing closer ties of business association among the members, including the establishment and maintenance of a club house for the above purposes."

The new home was formally opened November 18, 1907, and the event was proudly heralded as the first advertising club in the country that owned its own club house.

There were many difficulties encountered by the club in its management of its new responsibilities. The endeavor to

We Have an Interesting Story to Tell

Concerning the Jewish population of 250,000 in Philadelphia which constitutes one of the largest and richest markets for every type of product.

THE JEWISH WORLD

The Only Jewish Daily Printed in Philadelphia

Plant and General Offices: 223-25 S. 5th Street

Full Merchandising Co-operation

manage a dining room with a three course meal at 35 cents a cover with a Japanese chef and a Japanese waiter plunged the exchequer into a deficit that made a speedy change necessary. The yellow peril was disposed of and Godfrey Brown, a genial African, succeeded him, and for several years satisfied the appetites of the hungry Poor Richardites without seriously embarrassing the treasurer.

The long dining table was a pleasant gathering place for the members at lunch time although the attendance, owing to the limited membership, was necessarily small. However, there were frequent visits from prominent persons and the quaint little club house entertained many visitors of high repute in literature, business, politics, travel, etc.

The second annual banquet was held on January 17, 1908, as it had been decided that this annual event should celebrate the birthday of its Patron Saint, and it has been held regularly at that time every year since except when the 17th falls on Sunday.

For several years the special feature of the annual banquets was the speech-making and on some occasions there have been as many as eight speakers. We cannot undertake to name the many prominent personages who have honored Poor Richard on these occasions. Whether the club has gained or lost in turning these Anniversaries over entirely to entertainment and hilarity may be a debatable question, but the attendance has grown so large that it is difficult for a speaker to hold the attention of the audience, and as the demand for seats exceeds the supply it may be assumed that the participants are satisfied.

Much credit is due to the untiring and unselfish and at the same time self-sacrificing labor that the committee-men put into these occasions, and the ingenuity and ability displayed could be capitalized profitably if directed in other channels. This, however, is largely the Spirit of Poor Richard. There seems to be a wonderful degree of well directed energy expended in the most unselfish spirit imaginable.

The Poor Richard Club was early affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and delegates attended most of the conventions as held from year to year. A special delegation to the Chicago convention succeeded in capturing the convention for 1916 for Philadelphia. This was considered a great honor although it meant untold responsibility and labor for the active members of the club.

In view of the increasing activities of and interest in the club and the overcrowded condition of the dining room on special occasions, the capacity of the club house was doubled by the purchase of the adjoining property No. 241, the ceremonial "breaking in" being solemnly performed by President Robert H. Durbin on July 1, 1915. The membership at this time was increased to 150.

The management, financing and entertaining of the convention, June 25 to 30, 1916 were admirably cared for under the chairmanship of Rowe Stewart and involved all the members of his committee, with many volunteers, in almost unbelievable labor. The wonderful success of this most spectacular of all the conventions of the A. A. C. of W. but emphasizes the loyalty of Poor Richard to the spirit of its traditions.

The first number of Poor Richard Club Almanack was published in November 1912, and as indicated in the title was to be "Published when the Spirit moves." It was printed in colonial style type on a single sheet of blue hand craft paper "made at the Matthews mill just outside of Philadelphia in the year 1836" and presented to the club by Grant Megargee.

The Almanack has appeared with more or less frequency since this first issue, and has assumed different forms and sizes from time to time. It is the medium of the interchange of thought and the communication of news and notices to the members and is now published regularly every month.

For several years a school of advertising was conducted by a few of the club members and classes of young men and women eager to become proficient in this line met at the club house for instruction. The size of these classes and the possibilities of development were handicapped by lack of room, and in 1923 the question of a larger building was agitated.

A most agreeable impetus was given to this movement when Michael G. Price placed $50,000 as an endowment in the charge of Poor Richard Club for the establishment of a Memorial to his son who was formerly a member of the club and much interested in it. On a trip to the Mediterranean he had been lost at sea and Mr. Price desired that the Charles Morris Price School of Advertising and Journalism should be managed by the club.

In order to suitably house and furnish the school the splendid property at 1319 Locust Street was purchased and altered, furnished and decorated so that today Poor Richard Club boasts one of the finest and most luxurious homes with two comfortably equipped school rooms. The financing of this $250,000 Club House required an enlargement of the membership which has been increased to 750 active and 250 non-resident members.

The club is at this writing busy in arranging for the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

The membership of Poor Richard Club has always graded high. Most of the large industrial, financial and commercial houses are represented by their principals, and the newspapers and advertising agencies are members.

Besides the School for Advertising, Poor Richard has sponsored the Junior Advertising Club encouraging young men to associate for similar purposes. The Women's Advertising Club also acknowledges the co-operation of the older organization.

The President whose term expires June 30 is Howard C. Story. The newly elected officers for 1926-1927 will be installed July 1, are as follows: Morton Gibbons-Neff, President; James P. Henry, Vice-President; Edward S. Paret, Treasurer; A. King Aitkin, 1st Vice-President, and George E. Loane, Secretary.

Directors—Theo. E. Ash, John A. Lutz, Lee E. Hood, Charles L. Asam, Rowe Stewart, Harry L. Appleton, Walter P. Dilg, J. B. Mackenzie and Charles Paist, Jr.

SOME PLACES OF WORSHIP IN CENTRAL PHILADELPHIA

Baptist—17th and Sansom streets.
Christian Science—Academy of Music.
Congreational—18th and Greene streets.
Ethical Culture—1324 Spruce street.
Friends—15th and Race streets.
Protestant Episcopal—13th and Spruce streets.
Hebrew, Broad and Green streets.
Lutheran—21st and Chestnut streets.
Methodist Episcopal—Broad and Arch streets.
Presbyterian—Broad and Spruce.
Roman Catholic—13th and Market streets.

LONG ISLAND PRESS TO MEET

Annual Convention Scheduled for Rockaway Beach, June 21

The annual meeting of the Long Island Press Association will be held at Rockaway Beach, Monday, June 21.

The morning session will be a business meeting at which the publishers will discuss advertising rates and various methods of promotion.

In the afternoon members will be guests of the Chamber of Commerce of The Rockaways at a shore dinner. The program for the remainder of the afternoon includes an automobile tour of The Rockaways, visits to the various amusement places at Rockaway Beach, and a theater party in the evening.

THE LARGEST MORNING DAILY CIRCULATION IN PENNSYLVANIA OUTSIDE OF PHILADELPHIA AND PITTSBURGH

* * *

SCRANTON REPUBLICAN

TO adequately cover the rich Northeastern Pennsylvania market, you need the greater selling power of the Scranton Republican, the largest daily morning circulation in Pennsylvania, outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, 90% of which is home delivered.

Statistics tell you that the women of the Nation buy 85% of its living necessities and luxuries. The Republican with its splendid daily features of interest to women, and its great Home Delivered Circulation is without a question, the woman's preferred newspaper in Scranton and immediate trading area.

That morning newspapers are wielding an increasingly superior selling power is proven by the new morning newspapers that have come into existence in the country during the past year, with a corresponding decrease in evening publications.

Tell your story in the Scranton Republican and reach the people who make up the bulk of the buying power in the great Northeastern Pennsylvania Market.

34,650 Net Paid Circulation

* * *

Special Representative

Paul Block

New York Chicago Detroit Boston Philadelphia

AN INVESTMENT IN COLOR AND MOTOR TRUCKS

Col. James Elverson, Jr., Philadelphia Inquirer, Starts to Build New Plant to House Color-Gravure Presses and Garage—Story of Paper's Growth Romantic Chapter in Newspaper History

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

EDITOR & PUBLISHER herewith present first of two articles on the history of the Philadelphia Inquirer and its publisher Col. James Elverson, Jr., a venturesome, far-seeing newspaper maker.

Next week's article will be entitled: "WHEN A PUBLISHER MAKES HIS PLANT HIS HOME," and will tell hitherto unpublished details of the $10,000,000 Inquirer plant, which incorporates so many unique ideas that it is being continually visited and studied by newspaper engineers from all over the world.

"THE Philadelphia Inquirer is going to grow."

If that is mere boasting, Col. James Elverson, Jr., is foolishly risking some of his millions on empty vanity.

But Col. Elverson isn't that kind. He is a practical, thorough hard-working publisher, splendidly schooled by a father who made nothing into a fortune in the same business now continued by his son.

His confidence in the future expansion of the Inquirer, therefor, may well be eliminated from the sphere of speculation and put probably in the class of canny investment.

Col. Elverson, whose $10,000,000 newspaper plant, not quite a year old, is one of the show places of the newspaper publishing world, started this week to tear down and rebuild a foundry across the street from the present plant to construct an auxiliary three-story color-gravure printing shop and a two-story garage.

In other words, the Inquirer's helmsman is investing in color and motor trucks,—two unrelated stocks, which today are considered gilt edged securities for newspaper futures by those who look beyond their noses and are a little too shrewd to take a flyer just yet on airplanes for newspaper distribution.

Col. Elverson is among pioneers as far as color-gravure is concerned. He is slightly behind the race in newspaper transportation.

A color-gravure press manufactured by the Tiefdruck Syndikat, Berlin, has been ordered and should be in Philadelphia ready for installation Sept. 1. Many of these presses are in operation in this country today, but only three are being used for newspaper work, although the claim is they reproduce pictures in color at almost the same high speed as the old-line black and white. In addition to the Tiefdruck, the new Inquirer annex will house two Hoe rotogravure presses.

Motor cars are being used by newspapers for long hauls as never before. This is because of boosts in second class mail and baggage rates. The Inquirer is waking up to what has been done already in other large cities, notably in Detroit by the News, and in Indianapolis by the News, in the use of trucks for newspaper delivery to outlying territories. James L. Young, the Inquirer's circulation manager, has now built up 18 long-distance routes, but that is just a thin sprinkle to what he will eventually accomplish. Newspapers are acting on hippodrome stages today, and the paper that wins the big circulation applause seems to be the one that gets out farthest with complete editions in the shortest length of time.

The base for Mr. Young's expected increased motor fleet and also the three new presses will occupy space measuring 305 by 115 feet, with an area of 35,000 square feet.

When the plans were first drawn for the Inquirer's monumental home on Broad street, the foundry across the way was purchased for the purpose of the annex now being built. This, however, is the first general announcement of that fact. There is still room in the main pressroom, but the management is saving that space for additions to the paper's black and white battery.

Because, you see, "the Philadelphia Inquirer is going to grow." And repetition of this assertion, made by H. E. Blackman, Col. Elverson's right-hand man, brings me back to the story of the paper's growth, a story forming a romantic chapter in American newspaper history. Mr. Blackman has been associated with the Inquirer for 36 years and knows the chapter by heart. Since the colonel himself is in Europe now, Mr. Blackman told it to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

Although the Inquirer's first number was printed June 29, 1829, with a hip-hurrah editorial manifesto that would make even a California or Florida booster sick with envy, it didn't become one of Pennsylvania's outstanding newspaper successes until the elder James Elverson bought control in 1890. It had been somewhat fickle about its field in the early days, jumping from morning to evening back to morning. Jesper Harding, a practical printer, was one of its early publishers, and the imaginative may find a relationship between him and the late President.

Col. James Elverson, Jr.

In 1840, the Inquirer accomplished its first real stroke of enterprise. Charles Dickens was the novelist of the day, and the Inquirer made a bid for and obtained the first American rights for exclusive publication of "Barnaby Rudge" and "Master Humphrey's Clock." The harnessing of English writers to pull American newspapers along is common enough practice today, but it was new then and gave old leaders in the field quite a bump. Moreover the Inquirer permitted Dickens to set his own price, an unheard of procedure at the time.

As the Inquirer today is investing in color and automobiles, the big early investments made by James Elverson, Sr., when he bought the paper were in political reform and classified advertising promotion.

Mr. Elverson, Sr., had got his first taste of American politics during the Civil War. He had come to this country from England a young man with plenty of ambition and not much else. He had an uncle in the shoe manufacturing business in Newark, N. J., and went to work for him. He soon tired of this way of making a livelihood and like the late Frank Munsey, studied the great marvel of the day, and became a telegrapher. When North and South fought he had become so expert in his chosen field, that he was appointed official telegrapher for Secretary Seward, war minister of Lincoln's cabinet. Decoding private messages for this important cabinet minister was one way of getting inside information on political matters and at least an interest in how the government was being run.

After the Civil War, Mr. Elverson returned from Washington to Philadelphia and purchased the Philadelphia Call, a daily newspaper. Out of this paper grew from Mr. Elverson's cultivation two weekly story papers which rolled up enormous circulations. They were Golden Days for boys and girls, and the Saturday Night for their parents. These very successful publications laid the foundation for the wealth which enabled Mr. Elverson to purchase the dying Inquirer, put it on its feet, and by entering the political reform movement of the 1890's build up the "Republican Bible" of Pennsylvania. The Inquirer had much to do with smashing the Cleveland Democratic era, and the part played by the paper made its publisher an important figure in the Republican party of Pennsylvania.

The Inquirer is still staunchly Republican, but has lately been showing a strong independent face against "gang" politics in the Keystone state. And even the other day it took a crack editorially at President Coolidge, calling him down for his refusal to spend two days in Philadelphia around July 4 for dedication of the Sesqui-Centennial.

Before becoming the Bible of the Republican party, the Inquirer became the Bible of the unemployed. Mr. Elverson Sr., believed classified advertising was news, and after he purchased the Inquirer, he took particular pains to build up that department of his paper.

The basic need in a man's life is that he have a job, Mr. Elverson reasoned. The economic structure of the nation is dependent upon steady employment. "Situations Wanted" and "Help Wanted" advertisements sell papers as well as being a public service, in the opinion of the elder Elverson, and, for a while, when he first gained control of the Inquirer, he gave away space to those out of work who cared to call up his paper and ask for it. That promotion stunt worked well for Mr. Elverson, and his son today believes so strongly in the circulation building and holding power of the agate set page that the line rate charged for situations wanted is still kept very low. In fact, there's very little margin between the cost or printing and the price charged for insertions in this classification on the Inquirer's classified pages.

Upon entering the daily's big new building, the first thing one sees is the receiving end of the Inquirer's classified department, managed by W. D. K. Shelmaire, a veteran in Mr. Elverson's service. The counter for transaction of general transient business bristles with pneumatic order tubes. At the rear is a mezzanine balcony, where an army of girls is employed throughout the day receiving want ads over Bell telephone lines. Below on the main floor, a similar staff of want ad operators are similarly employed in taking from the direct wires, want ads over the Keystone telephone lines.

And this one department and its efficiency is the keynote of the arrangement of the entire Elverson building, erected by a publisher's son in memory of his publisher father. The Elverson building occupies an entire city square, with a frontage of 166 feet on Broad street, and a rear measurement of 192 feet on 15th street, and a depth of 396 feet on Callowhill street and Pennsylvania avenue.

Work was begun on the Elverson Building in July, 1923, and so rapid was the progress of construction and so carefully had plans been prepared that the building was occupied a scant two years later. The first edition of the Philadelphia Inquirer to be printed in the new building was that of July 13, 1925.

WHERE RETAIL ADVERTISING WAS BORN

(Continued from page 22)

The Wanamaker Philadelphia store of today

25, 35, 40, 50 cents each. They are a curiosity for cheapness.

Then the copy went into detailed description of the different priced shirts and drawers, repeating the phrase about every other line.

The year 1879 is given as the date when the Wanamaker "news style" advertising was introduced. But the fact that this advertisement in 1876 gives the unmistakable news of the return of one of the buyers from the wholesalers with a supply of underwear, would seem to warrant the assertion that the date could be set much earlier.

Files of Philadelphia newspapers during the Civil War disclose the fact, not generally known, that Wanamaker publicity in those days was partly in the form of verse.

The little store in Oak Hall prospered. John Wanamaker wanted more space. He bought the old Pennsylvania freight depot on the corner of 13th street. This was in 1875.

"That green John Wanamaker is crazy," other Philadelphia merchants said.

The depot was a long way from the center of town and was considered far too large to be used as a retail store. Mr. Wanamaker got people to know where the spot was by getting behind a project to bring Moody and Sankey, the revivalists, to Philadelphia.

He gave them the use of the building for three months for a compensation of $1.

In May, 1876, the year of the Centennial, Mr. Wanamaker's made-over freight station was opened and named the "Grand Depot," and thousands of Philadelphians crowded in to see and buy. Only a few thought the store would succeed, the majority gave it a year to continue. But the store did succeed, and advertising was Wanamaker's greatest aid.

The same pessimists were about when Mr. Wanamaker bought the old A. T. Stewart store in New York in 1896. It was too far down town, they said.

It would be idle to declare that advertising was solely responsible for the conquering progress of this great business. Quality merchandise, fair dealing, willingness to do the new thing—all have been basic. But it is true that without advertising all the rest would have been useless.

John Wanamaker's vivid imagination and activity were responsible for so many retail innovations, that it would be impossible to list them all and describe them in this article. He was the first merchant to conduct a department store in the modern sense of the word. His was the first store to transmit and receive Marconi telegrams. His was the first store to operate a radio broadcasting station. And this is only a few.

The present advertising staff has been set a remarkable record to live up to.

Today, Wanamaker's stores in New York and Philadelphia, are investing more than a million dollars a year in advertising.

The present executives believe with the founder of the stores, who once said:

"A certain farmer's last advice to his son was, 'don't spend money recklessly—except for fertilizers.' Advertising is the fertilizer of business—don't be afraid to use it liberally."

Colorado Newspaper Organs Merge

Consolidation of the Colorado Editor with the Inter-Mountain Press was effected with the issue of June 1. The Inter-Mountain Press, edited by George Haubrich, had been for a number of years a magazine devoted to the interests of Rocky Mountain newspaper publishers. The Colorado Editor is the official organ of the Colorado Editorial Association and is published monthly. It is edited and managed by Edwin A. Bemis, secretary and field manager of the association.

Air-Mail Field Named for Daily

Denver's new air-mail field, which places the city on a trans-continental air line, has been named the Denver Post Airdrome in recognition of the part played by that newspaper in making it possible for Denver and Colorado to have air-mail service.

CURTIS NAMES EIGHT FAVORITE AD WRITERS

(Continued from page 19)

In many ways Mr. Curtis had shown that he was keenly interested in his newspapers. What were his other chief interests? Again I became the nosey reporter and asked. Was he interested in politics? He most certainly was not.

"When I bought the Philadelphia North American," he said, "a paper printed my picture on the front page, and said I had bought it, because I wanted to become Senator. That was ridiculous, of course.

"Why I wouldn't be President of the United States, if I was paid a $1,000,000 a minute for it—no not if it was handed to me on a silver platter. I have told this to some people, and they have said, 'But wouldn't you accept it if it was plainly your duty, if there was a crisis and you were just the man to meet it?' And I enswered 'Applesauce.' I wouldn't fill the bill.

"I can't understand why people get into politics. I asked Mr. Taft once why he was interested in it. He said he didn't know, it was just in his blood, he thought, and he couldn't help it. It's not in my blood, thank goodness, and I can help it.

"If I have ambition or vanity, and every man has," Mr. Curtis concluded, "it is that I want to be the biggest thing I can in my own line—which is publishing."

(Finish the trip to Lyndon with Cyrus H. K. Curtis in the next article to appear in next week's issue of Editor & Publisher.

Not Content to Just "Sit Pretty"

Here's a Newspaper in an independent trade area—and one of the most important in Pennsylvania—that for almost 75 years has dominated the field. Today this paper gives FULL COVERAGE to advertisers—has the lowest proportionate rate—carries the most news and the most advertising.

But— no efforts are being spared in an endeavor to maintain THE JOHNSTOWN TRIBUNE in the fullest confidence of its Public. News columns—always well up-to-the-minute — eliminate the sensational—and its Staff ever remembers that THE TRIBUNE is a "Home Paper."

A strict censorship of its advertising columns continues as a safeguard for its 160,000 readers who Know and Appreciate.

Circulation — Now Over 32,000 Net Paid — Steadily Increases without the aid of Premiums, Campaigns or Contests.

The Johnstown Tribune is a Going, Growing Newspaper. It Couldn't be Satisfied to Just Sit Pretty.

In Johnstown and Its Trade Territory

It's The Tribune—Everywhere

PHILADELPHIA HAS BEEN "MOTHER OF MAGAZINES"

First American Magazines Published by Andrew Bradford and Benjamin Franklin Appeared There in 1741—Since Then City Has Been Home of Scores of Important Publications

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

Director, Department of Journalism, New York University and Author of "History of American Journalism," etc.

THE honor of being the "Mother of Magazines" unquestionably belongs to the city of Philadelphia. That city in January, 1741, brought forth the first American magazine, to be exact, twins—The American Magazine printed by Andrew Bradford and The General Magazine printed by Benjamin Franklin. To decide which of the two is entitled to the credit of being first is as hard as answering the question, "Which is the mother, the hen that laid the egg or the hen that hatched the chick?"

Benjamin Franklin, publisher of The Pennsylvania Gazette and postmaster of Philadelphia was unquestionably the father of the idea of printing an American magazine. Unfortunately he talked the matter over with John Webbe who was to get together the literary material. The latter taking Franklin's idea, went over to Andrew Bradford, publisher of the American Mercury, with whom arrangements were made for printing the magazine. Franklin, having seen his idea of a Philadelphia newspaper stolen from him by Samuel Keimer, determined that in the printing of the magazine he would be first in the field. He was; but Bradford was the first with a published announcement in the Mercury. Franklin followed with a standing advertisement in his Pennsylvania Gazette.

This standing ad is reproduced in one of the cuts used to illustrate my article on the newspapers of Philadelphia. The story is thus told in the concluding paragraph of the advertisement:

This MAGAZINE, in Imitation of those in England, was long since projected; a Correspondence is settled with Intelligent Men in most of the Colonies, and small Types are procured, for carrying it on in the best Manner. It would not, indeed, have been published quite so soon, were it not that a Person, to whom the Scheme was communicated in Confidence, has thought fit to advertise it in The Mercury, without our Participation; and, probably, with a View, by Starting before us, to discourage us from prosecuting our first Design, and reap the Advantage of it wholly to himself. We shall endeavour, however, by executing our Plan with Care, Diligence and Impartiality, and by Printing the Work neatly and correctly, to deserve a Share of the Publick Favour; —But we desire no Subscriptions. We shall publish the Books at our own Expence, and risque the Sale of them; which Method, we suppose, will be most agreeable to our Readers, as they will then be at Liberty to buy only what they like; and we shall be under a constant Necessity of endeavouring to make every particular Pamphlet worth their Money. Each Magazine shall contain four Sheets, of common sized Paper, in a small Character: Price Six Pence Sterling, or Nine Pence Pennsylvania Money; with considerable allowance to Chapmen who take Quantities. To be printed and Sold by B. FRANKLIN in Philadelphia.

The life of both magazines was short. Bradford brought out only three issues and Franklin printed but six. That Franklin's was the more important is shown by the files that have been preserved. The files of Bradford's American Magazine are found in the John Carter Brown Library at Providence, R. I., the Library of Congress at Washington, and The New York Historical Society. Files of Franklin's magazines, however, are found in The American Antiquarian Society at Worcester, The Boston Public Library, the Library of Harvard College, the Library of Yale College, the Library of Congress, the Library Company of Pennsylvania, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and the New York Public Library.

The Bradford family has already been mentioned in the article on newspapers. William Bradford, a grandson of New York's first newspaper publisher and the nephew of Andrew Bradford, was the next magazine publisher in Philadelphia. In October, 1757, he brought out the first number of The American Magazine and Monthly Chronicle for the British Colonies. Its editorial policy was to support the cause of the Crown against France. Illustrations again show the last page of the issue for December, 1757, and the cover for January, 1758. The editorial "hot air page" instead of being in the front was the last page. To be exact the editorial blurb was often limited to a half page.

The cover is interesting because it contrasts the treatment of the Indian by the French and by the English. In the cut on the cover an Indian is shown in the center. On the left there appears an Englishman reading from the Bible and holding under his arm a roll of woven cloth, doubtless intended to dramatize civilized dress. On the right stands a Frenchman who offers to the Indian a tomahawk and a purse of gold.

This magazine printed by William Bradford lasted just one year and was edited by the Reverend William Smith, the first Provost of the University of Pennsylvania. It had many distinguished contributors, including Francis Hopkinson already introduced to readers of this issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, page 14.

In the July and August issue of 1758 appeared the letters by James Logan to establish Thomas Godfrey's claim of being the inventor of "Hadley's Quadrant." Godfrey was a great friend of Franklin: in fact, he once boarded in the latter's house on High Street. He accidentally discovered the principle upon which the famous quadrant is made while working for Logan. In allowing a test of the instrument to be made at sea by an acquaintance he permitted it to be brought to Hadley's attention.

When the articles in The American Magazine were brought to the attention of the Royal Society of England that society handed down the decision that honors of the invention should be divided between Godfrey and Hadley and sent to the former, by way of award, household goods to the value of two hundred dollars. Yet the quadrant continued to bear Hadley's name. The issue of The Freeman's Journal, reproduced on another page, has in its first column a story about a number of Philadelphia Whigs who recalled the articles in the American Magazine and who sought to get justice for Godfrey. It will be noticed that this article in The Freeman's Journal requested publishers of newspapers in England to reprint the item—something they did not do—and so the quadrant still bears Hadley's name, though its real inventor was Godfrey.

Ten years later another magazine of the same name appeared in Philadelphia. It began in January, 1769, and lasted until September; its printers were William and Thomas Bradford and its editor was Louis Nichola. Nichola was connected with The American Philosophical Society of which Benjamin Franklin was president. In a certain sense, it was the official organ of that society. The price of the magazine was thirteen shillings—Pennsylvania currency. I may say that I have not mentioned the prices of other magazines because they are printed on the covers reproduced.

Three other Philadelphia periodicals of the eighteenth century ought to be noted a little in detail. The first of these The Pennsylvania Magazine was started in January, 1775, by R. Aitken, a printer and bookseller who had his place of business opposite the London Coffee-House on Front Street. Its editor was none other than Thomas Paine who came with letters of introduction from Franklin and who was hired at the munificent salary of twenty-five pounds a year. Hopkinson was again one of the regular contributors.

For two reasons Paine's magazine deserves distinction: it was the first to last more than a year and it was the first to illustrate its pages. The cuts used in the regular department, "Monthly Intelligence," are of great historical value because they illustrated military campaigns. Paine was of course the life of the magazine which ceased publication in July, 1776, because of war conditions.

Francis Bailey, best known as the publisher of The Freeman's Journal, had the courage to start The United States Magazine in January, 1779. It lasted for one year and was edited by Hugh H. Brackenridge, a classmate of Philip Freneau at Princeton and joint author with him of a commencement poem, "The Rising Glory of America." The editorial policy of The United States Magazine was "to paint the graces on the front of war, and to invite the muses to our country." Its standing cut represented a triumphal arch with a corridor of thirteen columns—one for each colony.

From a journalistic point of view, the most important contribution in the first issue of The United States Magazine was a satirical skit upon James Rivington, the Royal Printer of New York, from the pen of Dr. Witherspoon who was President of Princeton when the editor and Freneau were students at that institution. In the skit Rivington is represented as expressing the wish that he may be of service to the United States "as a writer, publisher, collector, and maker of news," in spite of the fact that his credit as a news writer had been broken by "overstretching."

Seven years later there appeared in September, 1786, the first issue of The Columbian Magazine. It lasted until February, 1790, and had various printers. Mathew Carey was the responsible sponsor and he was the most important magazine editor that America had up to his day. So popular was The Columbian Magazine that occasionally an edition had to be reprinted.

From 1741-1800 twenty-eight maga-

(Continued on page 118)

VISITORS WILL PREACH ADVERTISING FROM PHILADELPHIA PULPITS

Delegates to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World Will take Charge of Services in Many Different Churches June 20

DELEGATES to the Associated Clubs of the World's convention next week will preach the advertising gospel from many Philadelphia pulpits, on Sunday June 20.

Many men well known in the agency and publishing fields will face a congregation for the first time, while other churches will be given the services of clergyman delegates to the convention.

As announced this week in Philadelphia, the Sunday arrangements list the following churches and speakers, where advertising will be the text:

(SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 20TH.)

10:30 St. George's Episcopal Church, Indiana Ave. and Livingston St.—Mr. E. P. Beebe, Treasurer, Iron Age, New York City.

10:30 Chestnut Street Baptist Church, 40th and Chestnut Streets—Dr. A. A. Stockdale, First Congregational Church, Toledo, Ohio.

10:30 Tabernacle Lutheran Church, 59th and Spruce Sts.—Dr. Kerrison Juniper, First Congregational Church, St. Petersburg, Fla.

10:30 Calvary M. E. Church, 48th and Baltimore Ave.—Rev. C. M. Pace, D. D., First M. E. Church, Duluth, Minn.

10:30 Emmanuel Presbyterian Church, 42nd and Girard Ave.—Dr. G. W. Benn, Westminster Presbyterian Church, St. Petersburg, Fla.

10:30 Oak Lane Methodist Episcopal Church, Old York Rd. bel. City Line—Rev. John F. Brabner Smith, World Service M. E. Church, Chicago, Ill.

10:30 Third Baptist Church, Broad and Ritner Sts.—Rev. F. A. Hayward, Federated Baptist Church of Indianapolis, Ind.

10:30 Bridesburg Presbyterian Church, Pratt and Salmon Sts., T. H. Shore, President, San Diego Advertising Club, San Diego Cal.

10:30 First Baptist Church, 17th and Sansom Sts., Mr. Wm. T. Mullaly, William T. Mullaly, Inc., New York.

10:45 Oak Lane Presbyterian Church, Oak Lane and Lawnton Ave.—Dr. B. F. Martin, Davenport, Iowa.

10:45 First Schwenkfelder Church, 30th and Cumberland Sts.—Mr. Frank LeRoy Blanchard, Publicity Director, Henry L. Doherty & Co., New York City.

10:45 Holy Trinity Presbyterian, 11th and Rockland Sts.—Colonel J. K. Groom, Director of National Advertising Northern Illinois Group, Aurora, Illinois.

10:45 McDowell Memorial Presbyterian Church, 21st Street and Columbia Ave.—Professor L. A. Walford, Marshall College, Huntington, West Virginia.

10:45 Northminster Presbyterian Church, 35th and Baring Sts.—Rev. Charles Stelzle, D. D., Metropolitan Tower, New York City.

11:00 S. D. Cooper Memorial Methodist Church, 63rd and Girard Ave.—Mr. J. H. Bushwell, Bushwell Service Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.

11:00 Woodland Presbyterian Church, 42nd and Pine Sts.—Mr. E. D. Gibbs, Advertising Director, National Cash Register Co., Dayton, Ohio.

11:00 St. Andrew M. E. Church, 45th and Walnut Sts.—Mr. Paul T. Cherington, J. Walter Thompson Co., New York City.

11:00 Central Congregational Church, 18th and Green Sts.—Mr. John Clyde Oswald, New York Employing Printers Association, New York City.

11:00 Frankford Presbyterian Church, Frankford Ave. and Church St.—Mr. Herbert H. Smith, Board of Christian Education of Presbyterian Churches, Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia.

11:30 Falls of Schuylkill Presbyterian Church, 4510 Ridge Ave.—Mr. John A. Goodell, National Thrift Commission, New York City.

7:30 Union M. E. Church, Diamond above 20th St.—Mr. E. D. Gibbs, Advertising Director, National Cash Register Co., Dayton, Ohio.

7:45 Grace Lutheran Church, 35th and Spring Garden Sts.—Rev. B. F. Martin, Davenport, Iowa.

7:45 Fifth St. Methodist Temple, 5th below Green St.—Mr. W. Frank McClure, Albert Frank Co., Chicago, Ill.

7:45 Scots Presbyterian Church, Broad St. and Castle Ave.—Mr. James Schermerhorn, Detroit, Mich.

7:45 Bickley Memorial M. E. Church, Sixth St. and Chelten Ave.—Mr. J. A. Richards, Joseph Richards Co., New York City.

7:45 Trinity Lutheran Church, 18th and Wolfe Sts.—Mr. S. M. Holliday, Assistant to the President, General Outdoor Advertising Co., New York City.

7:45 Bethany Temple Presbyterian Church, 53rd and Spruce Sts.—Rev. C. N. Pace, Duluth, Minnesota.

7:45 North Presbyterian Church, North Broad and Allegheny Ave.—Dr. Earl Hoon, Hyde Park M. E. Church, Cincinnati, Ohio.

7:45 First Primitive M. E. Church, 26th and Lehigh Ave.—Rev. H. R. Gold, Lutheran Publicity Bureau, New Rochelle, N. Y.

7:45 St. Philip's M. E. Church, F. and Tioga Sts., Philadelphia—Mr. Frank LeRoy Blanchard, Publicity Director, Henry L. Doherty Co., New York.

7:45 Thirteenth Street M. E. Church, 13th below Vine St.—Rev. T. H. Armstrong, D.D., Groesbeck, Texas.

8:00 Sherwood United Presbyterian Church, 56th and Willows Ave.—Rev. John Elmer Russell, North Presbyterian Church, Binghamton, New York.

8:00 Luther Memorial Lutheran Church, 54th and Chester Ave.—Rev. Kerrison Juniper, 1st Congregational Church, St. Petersburg, Fla.

8:00 Messiah Reformed Church, 13th and Wolfe Sts.—Mr. James Wright Brown, Publisher, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

PHILADELPHIA ILLUSTRATES TWO WAYS OF GETTING TABLOID READERS

Wild Life Features of News of the World in Cameo—Take Your Choice in the Philadelphia Daily News or Philadelphia Sun—Managements of Both Proud of Their Progress in Little More Than a Year

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—Tabloidism has caught hold in Philadelphia. Readers in this city have taken to small paper reading in steadily increasing numbers, and the two tabloids here, the Philadelphia Daily News, evening, and the Philadelphia Sun, morning, each presenting entirely different editorial products, have won their ways to establish recognition.

But while these tabloids, representative of two distinct types, have found readers, both managements have experienced difficulty in selling local advertisers the advantages of small-sized media, and, therefore, Philadelphia's first year's experiment in tabloidism has been decidedly costly.

The Daily News has spent its money in female figure pictures and racy features to build a circulation of 52,251 in time for the government statement, and a present claim, sent out to advertisers in the form of sworn affidavits, of 82,000. Far more in the Philadelphia tradition, the Sun, owned by Cyrus H. K. Curtis, primly lifts its skirts from the mud, and only occasionally permits a peep at ankles and knees. From some 9,000 in the early days of May, 1925, after returns were disallowed, the Sun's circulation has reached a claim of more than 70,000.

"The Sun is a paper which Mr. Curtis is proud to own," John Martin, his son-in-law, and president of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, Inc., said this week. And Bernarr Macfadden is doubtless equally proud of his Philadelphia venture.

Mr. Martin said the present apparent advertiser apathy was expected. Philadelphia business men, he declared, are always slow in accepting new forms of advertising, and he is optimistic over the future.

First by several months to get under way, the Daily News had many difficulties to face in March, 1925, which were spared its slightly younger neighbor. To begin with the original plant, where Lee Ellmaker, general manager, started publication with the financial backing of Congressman Vare, was entirely inadequate. Then a delivery system had to be organized, an expensive proposition in this wide-spread city. About 9,000 subscribers, sold on the tabloid before it first appeared, could not all be served for several weeks. The Sun used the plant of the Public Ledger, and its copies were distributed by Ledger trucks. Thus the Sun quite early in its career began to boast of home delivered circulation. Today Mr. Martin asserts some 50,000 copies go direct into Philadelphia homes. The News makes a corresponding claim of 15,000. On Jan. 1 of this year, Mr. Macfadden purchased the controlling interest, and by April the News had moved into its present quarters.

"What we are putting out," David E. Smiley, editor-in-chief of the Sun, said, "is a daily news picture paper, a bright, chipper, cheery newspaper, which tells everything quickly, tells it once, and gets through. The Sun is, we think, more like the London tabloids than like those of New York."

Frederick E. Shapiro, managing editor of the News, frankly admits a liking for scandal and crime, vividly portrayed. He is a disciple of the tabloid school established in New York.

Mr. Shapiro is proud of a front and last page reversal plan he has put into operation on the News. He starts his first edition called "The Postscript" at 10:30 in the morning with pictures offered exclusively in the show-window, bannered with the usual scare-heads to inside stories. With changes in heads and pictures as the news develops, pictures are kept in front through four editions, until the "Pink" edition at 7 o'clock in the evening. During these five editions, the last page keeps pace with the sporting events of the day, and by 7 o'clock, with final racing and baseball news in type, the two pages are reversed, and page one carries complete racing returns and box scores, and one spot sports picture.

The first inside pages of the Sun are news pages. People with widely varied interests can gain satisfaction from this 30-page abbreviation of world events. Staff reporters of the Morning Public Ledger serve two masters. All local news coming into the standard sized paper is turned over to be re-written for the Sun. The Sun also gets the complete A. P. report. But beyond the customary double truck of pictures in the middle of the paper and up to the third from last page of sports, and a next to last page filled with comics, the entire space is used for fiction and feature material.

The News is predominately a feature paper. It uses many Hearst features, and has an arrangement with the Mirror of New York for exchange of pictures and news.

The managements of both papers claim the money spent in promotion stunts during the first year has been very little. The News started offering small prizes for letters to the editor, and was followed in this contest by the Sun. It has also used theatre-tie-up contests with show tickets as prizes to the winners. At present, it has quite a number of Philadelphia girls vying with one another to be sent on vacations at the tabloid's expense.

The Sun's main promotion has been accomplished by an insurance policy offer and the Sun club for children. There were no restrictions for membership in the club until the first of this year. The Sun furnished badges free, and was host to thousands of children at many picnics. The club is its own local product, and is not a syndicated feature. Because of the paper's generosity and the lack of strict membership requirements, the enrollment list grew to 13,000 and became unwieldy. Stricter rules for admittance were put in force the first of this year. To be a member, a child had to prove that a Sun went into his or her home. In consequence now the membership has dropped to between 7,000 and 8,000. Mrs. E. F. C. Moore is in charge.

Committee of Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women

Hostess to the visiting women delegates during the Convention. From left to right, sitting: Mrs. Ellen S. Patten, President; Miss Florence Dart, Convention Chairman; Miss Mary Whalen and Miss Josephine Hunt, Auditoriums; Miss Clare V. Fey, Luncheon Committee; Miss Mary Denton, Publicity; and Miss Wilhelmina Kane, Reception Committee.

In addition to the insurance and club, the Sun has three small prize contests, including the letters to the editor. Letter writers have increased from a beginning of 20 a day to 200 a day, and those in charge believe this idea affords a splendid means of maintaining personal contact with readers.

Youthfulness is a characteristic of the editorial executives of both papers. Mr. Shapiro, managing editor of the News, is 30, the same age as Harry B. Nason, managing editor of the Sun. Mr. Nason is a native Philadelphian, and has had no experience outside of this city. Mr. Shapiro, on the other hand, came here only about a year ago from Washington, where he was night editor of the Washington Herald. Prior to that he was on the Washington Post, was night editor of the Newark Ledger and on the copy desk of the New York Evening Telegram. He has also worked for the St. Louis Republic and the St. Joseph Gazette.

Mr. Nason was born into the newspaper business in Philadelphia and grew up in the printer's ink atmosphere. His father is the present Sunday editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer. The son was put to work as a reporter first in 1912. He was transferred from the Public Ledger to the Sun, when Mr. Curtis bought the Philadelphia North American and started the tabloid.

Charles P. Martyn is night editor of the Sun; Bob Clarke, city editor; W. D. Wolfe, telegraph editor, and Clair Hare, sports editor.

Mr. Shapiro has as his assistants: J. H. Keen, a former night city editor of the Washington Herald, as city editor; Robert Hobbs, news editor, and Irving K. Fagan, early morning editor.

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA EXTENDS GREETINGS TO A.A.C.W. DELEGATES

Provost's Office
University of Pennsylvania

Rowe Stewart, Esq.,
Philadelphia Record, Philadelphia, Pa. June 7, 1926.

My Dear Mr. Stewart:

The University of Pennsylvania takes pleasure in joining with all Philadelphia in extending a most cordial greeting to the delegates of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, who are to hold their 22d annual convention here, beginning June 19th.

The growing importance of this interesting and valuable organization is to my mind emphasized this year by the fact that the French Government will be represented by an official delegation. Those leaders of thought from all parts of the world who are to assemble here will, I have no doubt, produce results from their conferences that will play a material part in the maintenance of the prosperous condition which mankind in general is enjoying.

The University has particular interest in this convention, because of the fact that many of the important sessions will be held in our buildings. It is fitting that this should be so since the Founder of this institution, the many-sided Franklin, numbered among his accomplishments a fine understanding and appreciation of the art of advertising.

Please extend to the delegates the good wishes and warm welcome of the University.

Faithfully yours,
(Signed)* JOSIAH H. PENNIMAN
Provost,
University of Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA'S PRODUCTS VALUED AT TWO BILLIONS

PHILADELPHIA comes rightfully by its title of "The World's Greatest Workshop," because it produces a greater number of vitally essential articles than any other municipality. With one-sixtieth of the country's population, this city produces more than one-twenty-fifth of all "American-made goods."

More diversity of products is shown in Philadelphia than in any other city. Year by year the city produces about two billion dollars' worth of manufactured products. Three-fifths of all of the street cars in the country are made here. A locomotive an hour for 31 hours is a record achieved by one plant. In the great shipyards lining the Delaware, America's merchant ships, naval ships and vessels for other countries' marine have been constructed. For a period one yard alone, that at Hog Island, produced an 8800-ton steel ship every 48 hours.

In a single year this city has produced 45,000,000 yards of carpet, 6,669,000 hats, 180,000,000 yards of cotton piece goods, 400,000,000 cigars 250,000,000 pairs of hosiery, 60 per cent of the world's glazed kid, 10,000,000 saws, 365,000,000 pounds of cotton and cotton waste, and 83,862,700 false teeth.

Philadelphia holds first place in this country in production of textiles, locomotives, steel ships, street cars, leather, storage batteries, cigars, dental instruments, talking-machines, carpets, bone buttons, hosiery, saws and felt hats. It occupies second place in production of worsted goods, sugar and molasses, fertilizers, foundry castings, petroleum products, chemicals, druggists' preparations and machine-shop products.

The great textile section, almost a city in itself, occupies the northeastern part of the city. The leather industry also lies in that direction. The great metal concerns form a ring about the northern and western rims of the city.

The League Island Navy Yard possesses nearly 1,000 acres. Also it is the world's largest station, and usually 7,000 sailors and a regiment of marines are on duty there.

The Frankford Arsenal, and the great Quartermaster's Depot of the United States Government, employing several thousand workers, are vitally important phases of the city's industrial life.

The Observer

England's Oldest and Greatest Sunday Journal.

THE OBSERVER is more widely read and quoted in the United States of America than any English Newspaper.

Senator Borah, Chairman of the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, speaking in the Senate on Friday, January 22, 1926, on THE WORLD COURT, said:

"I pause to read a paragraph from Mr. Garvin, the celebrated Editor of the London OBSERVER, perhaps the most celebrated editorial writer in the world."

1791 Editorial, Advertisement and Publishing Office: 22, TUDOR STREET, LONDON, ENGLAND. Telephone: CENTRAL 2943. 1926

BRITAIN AND PROGRESS

The Times

SINCE 1785,
GREAT BRITAIN'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

IT carries a greater total volume of advertising than any other newspaper published in Great Britain.

In financial, motor car, real estate, classified, and resort and hotel advertising, it easily leads.

It is the regular daily newspaper of statesmen, financiers, society, professional and business men; and the indispensable medium for all seeking to market high-class goods in Great Britain.

THE ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER
PRINTING HOUSE SQUARE
LONDON, E. C. 4., ENGLAND

1927

Daily Mail

(LONDON, ENGLAND)

FRONT PAGE

THE ONLY VACANT DATES for NEXT YEAR—1927

WE publish below a list of the only "DAILY MAIL" Front Pages which are vacant next year. All the other dates for 1927 have been booked. The price of "THE DAILY MAIL" Front Page is £1,400.

August 1, 1927
August 6, 1927
August 18, 1927
August 26, 1927
December 24, 1927

"THE DAILY MAIL" is, in itself, a Complete Advertising Campaign for the United Kingdom.

CARMELITE HOUSE,
LONDON, E.C.4, ENGLAND.

250, PARK AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

N.B.—The Front Page of "THE DAILY MAIL" is accepted as the best advertising value in the World. The next best is an inside page of "THE DAILY MAIL."

Dramatic Scenes of British General Strike as Seen by A. A. C. W. Chief

Story of the Short-Lived Industrial Upheaval as Viewed by an American Visitor—Britain Better Honored Today Around the World Than Ever Before

By C. K. WOODBRIDGE
President Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
(Written for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ARRIVING in London on Friday, April 30th, with an elaborate business program mapped out, there was every indication, as far as could be seen, that all the arrangements would be carried through in their entirety. One of the most important objects of the visit was to attend the British Advertising Convention, as President of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, scheduled to take place at Blackpool during the following week. So on the day after arrival with 1,000 delegates we traveled by special train to Blackpool, full of high hopes and intensely enthusiastic about what was to be the most successful conference of its kind which had ever taken place in the Old Country.

Many of the preliminary gatherings had actually taken place on the Sunday and the delegates were entering into the spirit of things when suddenly a great national crisis developed. It transpired that though all day long, conference had followed on conference, between the Labor Leaders and the Government, all efforts to avert the strike had dismally failed. While negotiations were in progress the printers of the London Edition of the Daily Mail were actually called out. The Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, drew the attention of Mr. J. H. Thomas, M. P. to this fact, but Mr. Thomas denied all knowledge of the "overt act," to which the Prime Minister replied that it was quite obvious that he was not conversant with the actual position of affairs. From that moment the greatest strike in history was decided upon.

At eight o'clock on Saturday Lieut. Col. Lawson, Chairman of District 14 of A. A. C. W., one of the Directors of the Daily Telegraph received word to return to London. It was then and there decided to provide for a big Inspirational meeting for Sunday night, and to then decide on the continuance of the Convention program. That gathering proved to be the one and only meeting of what had promised to be a great British Advertising Convention. Brief addresses expressing regret and genuine disappointment, a word from the President of the A. A. C. W., then a demonstration of genuineness of British character—a great crisis faced with courage—determination—with due regard for the merits of the cause which precipitated the strike, and a keen sense of humor. Although there were rumors that some solution would eventually be found, which kept many delegates up till 2 or 3 on Monday morning waiting anxiously for news by wire, nothing came through, and so by common consent, the Advertising Convention was definitely cancelled. On Monday noon all the delegates returned to London. Many purchased the Manchester edition of the Daily Mail en route, but were not aware until they reached the Metropolis that the London edition of the greatest daily had not appeared at all. Monday was a day of tremendous anxiety. No one knew what was going to happen. The one thought uppermost in everybody's mind was that at midnight all work would cease. According to the general opinion prevailing at the time the Trade Union Congress had declared war on the British Constitution and were determined to bring into being a Bolshevik regime. There were drawn and sad faces everywhere. It was evident at a glance that this great people realized they were in for a time of real anxiety, when, perhaps, everything they possessed would eventually be thrown into the melting pot, when all the habits of a lifetime would be completely changed—surely Britain could never be the same again.

On the stroke of midnight, exactly as it had been planned, the great strike commenced. By Tuesday morning the old order had truly changed, yielding place to new. No trains, no buses, no trams, no tubes, no newspapers. What a changed land was England. Then something that is typically British happened. In entirely new circumstances the people at once began to adapt themselves to them. The great thing was to "carry on" and to carry on meant getting to business, and so every conceivable form of motor vehicle from a Rolls Royce to a Ford, lorries, wagons, carts, motor cycles, bicycles, many of which were rusty with age, were again brought into requisition. Everybody with a vehicle helped to get people to town, every conveyance was full to overflowing, even dust carts carried bank clerks to city banks and thousands who could not find any means of transport walked to their jobs. This happened day after day during the strike period and as time went on a John Bull spirit of grim determination to see things through, whatever the cost, crept into the face of the people.

Gradually it became apparent that the Government was just as determined to see that democratic government in Great Britain, as it had been carried on throughout the ages, should not vanish. In the first instance, Hyde Park and Regents Park were commandeered by the Government as great clearing centers for the collection and distribution of foodstuffs. Here a vast army of workers took up their headquarters with the one fixed object of saving the nation from starvation and seeing that as far as possible essential services were maintained. Army lorries went to the docks to collect flour, meat, vegetables and other necessary foodstuffs and owing to the threatening attitude taken up by the strikers it became essential to provide these volunteers with the fullest protection. So there emerged from the docks processions, miles in length, of lorries laden with food, manned by soldiers wearing their steel helmets, carrying rifles, and fully equipped for action with armored cars at frequent intervals offering additional support. This protection became a daily necessity in view of the impossibility of deciding how events would shape. In this way the nation's food was conveyed to Hyde Park and Regents Park for subsequent distribution. The Guards Regiment were despatched to South Wales, Glasgow, and other parts of the country where it was feared serious developments were likely to ensue. Submarines guarded the traffic and dock on the Thames, and aeroplanes kept a daily vigil on centres calling for special protection. A special Emergency Act allocating exceptional powers to the Government to cope with revolutionary acts was immediately passed.

The call for volunteers met with a magnificent response. No less than 500,000 special constables were enrolled throughout the country and for every form of service an unnumbered host rallied to the Government side. Members of Parliament took charge of Underground Stations, leading business men worked like Trojans at menial tasks, Oxford and Cambridge University graduates and Medical students from the Hospitals drove Tube trains, worked lifts and assisted like stevedores at the docks. Strikers technically "out" rallied to support the Government. Pirate buses worked by volunteers began to appear on the streets, but these came in for a hostile reception in certain quarters. Some were overturned by the strikers, bricks were thrown through the windows, many passengers were injured, and it became necessary to introduce barriers of wood, and wire netting across the windows to enable the buses to travel in safety. The attitude of the strikers became more menacing as they noted that the transport problem was gradually being solved from day to day.

On the Continent during the strike there was evidence of a certain amount of Continental support. For instance, ships embarking for England were held back. It was reported that Trade Union movements in various parts of Europe gave sympathetic support to the T. U. C., and that Bolshevik money was despatched from Russia. There were unmistakable signs that a hope was harbored for the overthrow of law and order in Great Britain. A returning traveller from Russia reported personal contact with Russian Government officials: plainly indicated their belief that the great industrial upheaval had begun, and they could not suppress their keen disappointment in the failure of the strike.

Of course, there was a humorous side—there always is in England. The nation that played football going into battle could be equally amusing during the worst strike it had ever experienced. This was only to be expected. For instance, when bricks were thrown through the bus windows, the following was chalked on the side of one: "I have no pane, dear mother now, so throw your bricks through here." On another bus run by Guys Hospital Medical Students an announcement was made to this effect: "The driver of this bus is a Guy's student. The conductor of this bus is a Guy's student. The special police on this bus are Guy's students. Anyone interfering with us in the execution of our duty will become Guy's patients." Naturally, every bus was overcrowded yet room was always found for the one passenger more, a quick start and stop provided space. It happened to be an old lady on one particular occasion who was immensely impressed by the great courtesy extended to her on the part of the volunteer conductor. She acknowledged with gratitude the great service he was rendering to his country in its hour of need. On the Underground, it was the duty of a well-known public man to keep the station clean and in order to assist him in his work he exhibited a notice which said "Throw your matches on the line. I have to sweep the platform." On the rail-

(Continued on page 42)

BIG THREE ORGANIZERS OF BRITISH ADVERTISING

From left to right—C. Harold Vernon, Lieut. Col. E. F. Lawson and Sir William Veno, snapped at the recent advertising convention at Blackpool, England.

HOW LONDON NEWSPAPERS MET THE GREAT STRIKE EMERGENCY

Improvised Editions in Reduced Type Form or Typewritten Duplication

The Times

No. 44,268. LONDON, TUESDAY, MAY 11, ... PRICE 2d.

PERSONAL

LEGAL NOTICES.

SHIPPING (continued).

NEW YORK AND CANADA BY THE ROYAL MAIL LINE.

LATEST London BULLETIN

Price 2d

No. 21 Tuesday,

STRIKE LATEST NEW

GENERAL OUTLOOK.

The Daily Telegraph

MONDAY, MAY 10th, 1926

THE PRIME MINISTER TO THE FOURTH

PRICE TWOPENCE

SUNDAY EXPRESS

No. 384. LONDON, MAY 9, 1926. ONE PENNY.

TO-DAY

COMMONS OR CONGRESS?

A STEADFAST NATION:

TRADE UNIONISM IN DANGER

"COUNCIL OF ACTION" FOILED

FOOD TRANSPORT ATTACKED

RAILWAY SYSTEM

APPEAL for 30,000 SPECI... CONSTA...

Daily Express

No. 8123. LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1926.

TO-DAY

PUBLICITY TRIUMPHS
CHILDISH ARGUMENT
EVERYONE HELPING UNION LIABILITY

FOOD BLOCKADE T...

PUBLIC SERVICES TO COM... AT ALL COSTS

TO THE ARMED FORCES

THE BRITISH WORKER

STRIKE NEWS BULLETIN

Council of the Trades Union Congress

EVENING, MAY 7, 1926. PRICE ONE PENNY

General Council does Constitution.

enge the Constitution.

seeking to substitute un... utional government.

desirous of undermining arliamentary institutions.

e aim of the Council is to e for the miners a decent ord of life;

ouncil is engaged in an In... dispute.

Constitutional

FAILURE OF THE O.M.S.

Daily Mirror

NEWSPAPER WITH THE LARGEST NET SALE

ONE PENNY

THE BRITISH WORKER

OFFICIAL STRIKE NE...

Published by Th...

STRIKE ISSUE

THE SUNDAY CHRONICLE

MAY 9, 1926

PRICE

...AY MEN RETURN T...

...Y FINDS S...

...BLING

Vol. LXXXV No. 12,791

THE FINANCIAL NEWS.

111, Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C.4.

Telephone: City 6830. Monday, May 10, 1926. Price 2d. 4 pages

Telegrams.

During the Strike, THE FINANCIAL NEWS the present in this abbreviated form, service at the earliest possible o...

This daily circular anyone who sends for the ...

The Daily Telegraph

STRIKE BULLETIN

One Penny

...on, Saturday, May 8th, 1926.

THE GENERAL POSITION.

...d officially on behalf of the Government yesterd... changed since the previous day. As far s... e had been nothing very serious and... situation.

...ations is quite satisfa... Stepney and ... the genera...

PLEASE PASS ON THIS COPY OR DISPLAY IT

The British Gazette

Published by His Majesty's Stationery Office.

No. 5. LONDON, MONDAY, MAY 10, 1926. ONE PENNY.

VITAL SERVICES BETTER EACH | MR. BALDWIN AND THE | TO ALL WORKERS IN ALL TRADES. | NEWS FROM THE DISTRICTS | LORD BALFOUR DEFINES THE

BRITISH EMPIRE WORLD'S LARGEST PARTNERSHIP

Embraces More Than 13,000,000 Square Miles, One-quarter of World's Surface, With Population of 450,000,000 People—Absorbs 40 Per Cent of U. S. Exports

By J. W. T. MASON

New York Correspondent London Daily Express and author of "Creative Freedom"

(Written for Editor & Publisher)

THE British Empire is the largest partnership in the world and is still growing. It deals in freedom and democracy and is the only government now in existence or that ever has existed which trusts its over-seas dominions to govern themselves as they see fit. Any of these overseas dominions could leave the Empire tomorrow if it wished and no force would be used to hold it an unwilling member of the co-partnership. No other nation can say the same for no other nation gives its colonies complete self-government, just as no other nation has made imperialism pay in terms of democracy. The British Empire is conducting experiments in popular administration in the four quarters of the globe and is a living advertisement of the fact that democracy is not limited to any clime. Wherever the British flag flies, democracy has been made or is in the making.

The British Empire's publicity comes from its accomplishments. It has just given to democracy the best advertisement that form of government has had since the anti-democratic movements developed in Europe with the ending of the world war. The peaceful settlement of the general strike in Great Britain this year, by the sole force of democratic public opinion, has done more to advertise that the world is safe for democracy than any event since the unconditional surrender of the Hohenzollerns.

The British Empire balances the world. It has an area of 13,909,782 square miles, over one-quarter of the entire land surface of the globe. Its population totals 450,094,000 people, or 25 per cent of the world's inhabitants. Of this immense number, only 80,000,000 British subjects are Christians. There is scarcely a creed which does not exist in its native environment, somewhere, under the British flag. It is an old saying that the sun never sets in the British Empire, and it would be equally true to say that every existing human conception of God finds the God of that conception within the British Empire.

The wealth of the British Empire is incalculable. Its imperial sway is by far the richest the world has ever known. Unexploited resources in the British overseas lands cannot be estimated. There is enough coal underground in a single province of Canada to wipe out the whole of the British war debt. In 1917, it was roughly estimated that the British Empire was worth $130,000,000,000. But, this figure was based on the tangible wealth of that period. It did not take into consideration the potentialities of ownership of twenty-five per cent of the world's land surface. If this had been done, other ciphers must have been added to the row.

The British Empire contains seventy-six different governmental divisions. Among them are the seven great self-governing dominions: Canada, New Foundland, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Irish Free State and Northern Ireland. Elsewhere, many different ways of administration prevail. In India, the complicated problem of evolving a new dominion is in process of being solved. How it will be solved nobody can say, for one of the many peculiarities of the British temperament is its abhorrence of mechanically planning things in advance. The phrase "muddling through" describes the way the makers of the British Empire do their work. The phrase was made by the British themselves, really in mock self-depreciation before other nations which are always predicing the British Empire's collapse.

The "muddling through" characteristic of the British people means that the British trust themselves to meet a situation after it arrives and are suspicious of trying to outguess fate in advance. Long experience in the art of self-government has convinced them that the human race progresses by slowly evolving its own way out of difficulties, and if it goes too fast, it gets entangled in the labyrinth of life and may expire in exhaustion. Therefore, the British Empire has got a reputation for being slow and ponderous in its movements. So it is; but it never loses its balance. The great Empire builders and democratic statesmen of the British commonwealths thus give nothing for the mere asking. Those parts of the Empire which prove their manhood and show a competence for self-guidance eventually get what they want. But, they have to prove their capacity; and they have to prove that the safety of the Empire shall not be jeopardized in making experiments. Experiments are invited after the responsibility of manhood has been demonstrated but not before.

The British Empire is an industrial enterprise as well as an enterprise in democracy. It was trade that built up the Empire and it is trade that keeps the Empire growing. Not an exclusive trade but trade for the world at large. This is another unique characteristic of the British expansionists. They expand to benefit themselves and to benefit all others who are willing to take advantage of the trade opportunities the Empire offers. Britishers leave home to make their way under the Union Jack overseas knowing that they cannot prosper without inducing prosperity in general among the races with whom they come in contact. If the other races refuse to accept prosperity at the hands of the newcomers, then the recalcitrants succumb or move farther on. The test of the full partnership in the British Empire is the test of life in America—it is the test of efficiency.

Before the British Empire expanded in the nineteenth century, there were undeveloped spaces north, south, east and west where now great civilizations flourish. The wastes of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Canada were developed to increase trade and raise the standards of living of the British pioneers who ran all the risks of initial failure and who later invited the world to share the softer fortune of easy progress. Thus, in Canada, today, according to the British Dorland Agency's "Empire Markets," only 55.4 per cent of the total population are of British origin. In British South Africa, German traders have a monopoly, largely, of direct commercial dealings with the natives, while the richest mining agents are Americans. It was, indeed, an American, John Hays Hammond, who as consulting engineer for Cecil Rhodes and the great British gold mining companies showed the British the way to the yellow metal in the African soil. Today, the British Empire is the most prolific gold mine in the world. It produces about 10,500,000 fine ounces annually, of which over seventy per cent comes from South Africa. All the rest of the world together equals only one-half the gold production of the British Empire. About the same proportion holds, too, for diamonds. The British Empire furnishes the world with 1,000,000 carats of diamonds yearly, the remainder of the earth bringing forth between 400,000 and 500,000 carats.

The British Empire is not a closed shop. The United States, in particular, knows this to be true and knows that the British markets are its best foreign customers. Forty per cent of American exports are sold within the British Empire. America made, in 1924, $1,744,600,000 in goods sold to British Empire consumers, divided as follows:

United Kingdom	$983,000,000
Canada	624,000,000
Australia	125,200,000
British Africa	46,600,000
India and Ceylon	36,500,000
New Zealand	29,300,000

The United States, therefore, has acquired its own mighty share of the prosperity which thrives at the ends of the earth under the rule of the British Empire and which is sustained by the pioneer spirit of the Anglo-Saxons who continuously leave their motherland in the service of civilization overseas.

The British Empire is held together by the intangible thread of common culture, tradition and loyalty and by the very tangible cord of self-interest. The British Empire has no fundamental law such as the written constitution of the United States. All the members of the Empire are subject, theoretically, to the will of the Parliament in London. But, no act passed by Parliament extends to any of the Dominions of the Empire unless the Dominion is specifically mentioned. When that is done, the parliamentary enactment is supreme. The legislature of a Dominion cannot pass a law nullifying an act of the Parliament in London any more than a state in the American union can override congressional legislation.

Nevertheless, "state rights" is a more sacred thing in the British Empire than in the United States. That is to say, the Dominion governments are much freer than the legislatures of the American states. By no possibility, for instance, would Parliament ever pass a law enforcing a Volstead act on Canada or Australia or New Zealand or South Africa or Ireland. The imperial rule at London is so mild that one can scarcely detect it. The Dominions do what they wish as long as they do not interfere with one another's own rights of freedom.

Beside the seven self-governing Dominions, there is such a variety of democratic experiments in progress in the British Empire as history has never known elsewhere. The supreme authority governing India is a mixed group, consisting of the Secretary of State for India, in London, who is responsible to Parliament, and the Governor-General and his Executive Council, in India, together with the Indian legislature consisting of the Council of State of 60 members and the Assembly of 144 members—118 elected and 26 officials. The Indian government is largely swayed by the personality of the Governor-General. Thus, one of the last official acts of Lord Reading, who retired as Governor-General this year, was to give the impetus, last February, to the movement for the abolition of the Indian opium trade which has been made effective this month. Under this decision, ten per cent of India's opium exports will be suppressed annually for the next ten years so that by the end of 1935, no more opium will be exported from India except for medicinal use. During the intervening decade, the only exports of opium permitted will be to foreign governments. The suppression of the opium traffic will mean a loss to the Indian government of $7,200,000 yearly, in revenue, over and above $20,000,000 annual loss entailed since 1913, when the Indian authorities prohibited further export of opium to China. This is the sort of moral action which the present method of rule in India permits.

In other parts of the Empire other ways of governing prevail. Malta and Northern and Southern Rhodesia have large measures of self-government with a few powers reserved, for local reasons. Elsewhere, as in the British West Indies, there is government by legislative assembly, wholly or partly elected, and an executive council chosen by the Governor. In still other places, as Ceylon, Fiji, Gibraltar, Trinidad and the Straits Settlements, the Governor acts with a

(Continued on page 40)

COMMERCE PAVES WAY TO WORLD PEACE

By Lieut. Col. E. F. Lawson

(Written for Editor & Publisher)

IT is a privilege to be able to send a message of heartfelt good wishes for the success of the International Advertising Convention at Philadelphia. The path of international commerce is the surest way to the peace of the world.

Lt. Col. E. F. Lawson

Nothing but good can be served by the friendly intercourse of those who on both sides of the Atlantic are engaged in commercial publicity. We look forward to a good convention, and to a convention which will do good.

ENGLAND'S NEW CONFIDENCE

By SIR WOODMAN BURBIDGE

Written for Editor & Publisher

Sir Woodman Burbidge

THE strike through which the country has just passed has just passed has given us a new feeling of confidence in England, which has to some extent, we think, been shared throughout the world.

A friendlier feeling exists to-day between employer and employee, and we are all looking forward to increased prosperity.

In this connection we do not underestimate the invaluable help that Advertising has to offer.

Let me wish the Philadelphia Advertising Convention every possible success.

GREAT BRITAIN'S RED ENSIGN ON THE SEVEN SEAS

COPYRIGHT

GEOGRAPHIA LTD 55 FLEET STREET LONDON EC4

An unusual map showing the British possessions marked in stipple. EDITOR & PUBLISHER is indebted to Christian Science Monitor and Geographia, Ltd., of London legislative council, nominated by or on behalf of the Crown. In Zululand, Basutoland and Bechuanaland, legislative and executive powers reside solely in the Governor. Then, there are various forms of protectorates, spheres of influence and mandates, the last under the League of Nations.

Representatives of the Empire come together in London at frequent intervals to discuss mutual problems. These gatherings are called Imperial Conferences. They originated at the visit of overseas premiers to the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, in 1887. They were first called "Colonial Conferences" but the colonial idea was dropped as being too little associated in the popular mind with self-government, and the imperial idea was substituted. But, imperial does not mean in this association what it is interpreted to represent by those who think of it in terms of "Imperial Rome." It means an over-seas union not for provocative or militaristic purposes but for world progress. Defense is discussed at the Imperial Conferences, but subordinately. Trade and increasing co-operation for the extension of commerce are the principal matters occupying the time of the delegates at the conferences.

Defense of the British Empire predominantly rests with the motherland. The over-seas possessions are rather like members of a large family living at the old homestead and tilling the family acres. They look to father and mother to keep outside trouble from entering, to disturb the family peace. Thus, the following table shows the comparative costs for defending the British Empire for the fiscal year 1913-14, before the outbreak of the World War and for 1925-6. It is interesting to note how differently the figures fluctuate:

	1913-14	1925-6
United Kingdom	$399,174,420	$618,582,530
Australia	19,630,970	25,631,410*
Canada	11,916,000	12,454,000
South Africa	6,233,600	4,373,260
New Zealand	2,727,200	4,592,410*

*1924-5.

The heart of the Empire is London and the United Kingdom as the homeland, and the Empire can never be stronger than its heart. The strength of the heart has been demonstrated by the remarkable power of taxation, self-inflicted by Great Britain during and since the World War, which has restored the pound sterling to par and has saved British financial honor. No other people have stood the torture of the income tax as the British have done, and it is this spirit of rugged honesty that has raised the British Empire to its post-war commanding position. The income tax rate in Great Britain is today on a normal basis of 20 per cent as compared with 2 per cent in the United States. The maximum surtax, in addition, is thirty per cent. So, the British people are paying from one-fifth to one-half of their incomes to the government to keep the heart of the Empire going.

The per capita taxation in the United Kingdom, for 1923-4 amounted to $77.50 for the support of the national government, about three times as much as in the United States. In addition, the British paid a per capita local tax of $20, itself nearly as much as the national taxation in America.

Nevertheless, the saving power of Great Britain exceeds $2,000,000,000 per year, of which $500,000,000 is put in over-seas investments.

The trading genius of Great Britain sends forth its influence to the ends of the Empire and stimulates the overseas colonists as nothing else does. The Union Jack, flying from every port, is a constant advertisement of British trade and a continual reminder of Britain's ever increasing enrichment. The British have a peculiar capacity for shipping management, which exceeds that of any other people and without which their Empire could not hold together. Ships of United Kingdom register for 1925-6 aggregate 19,440,711 tons to which should be added 2,781,487 tons registered in the British Dominions, giving a total for the Empire of 22,222,198 tons. Total American shipping is now 15,377,480 tons. British vessels engaging in international carrying trade do an enormous business for foreign countries which gives to the Empire an invisible trade balance not appearing in the usual statistics but adding greatly to the imperial wealth.

According to the Department of Commerce, at Washington, last year's export and import trade of the United Kingdom amounted to about $10,000,000,000, or more than $220 per capita. The per capita trade of the United States for the same period was about $70, though these figures cannot be accepted absolutely, since there are slight divergences due to differences in reckoning home trade accounts. Nevertheless, Great Britain is far ahead in her per capita over-seas commerce, for the British live largely on foreign trade.

The total imports of the British Empire for 1923-4, the latest year for which aggregate figures are available, were valued at $10,775,000,000 and the total exports were $9,806,000,000. Thus, the Empire does an import and export business of more than $20,000,000,000 annually. Repeated efforts are being made to increase inter-imperial trade, the ideal being to make the Empire as interdependent industrially as the American states, each part stimulating every other part to produce at its maximum so that prosperity can be advanced continuously. Last year 29.7 per cent of imports into Great Britain came from other parts of the Empire. In 1913 it was 24.8 per cent. There is every indication that this movement will increase, encouraged by imperial preferences in tariff rates and otherwise.

The United States, however, is not losing by the development of prosperity within the British Empire. The more prosperous the Empire becomes by each part of the Empire helping each other part, the wider will be the stimulus to extend the imperial markets by selling goods to the United States—a movement which can grow in large measure only by the Empire buying goods from the United States. About one-half of the commerce of the world is now transacted among English speaking peoples and this tendency is expanding, for the English speaking peoples have a common understanding of one another which stimulates commercial intercourse, while the common language is in itself an enormous influence in all matters affecting cordial relations in trade and industry.

LORD SOUTHWARK GREETS A.A.C.W. DELEGATES

By LORD SOUTHWARK

IT gives me pleasure to send my heartiest good wishes to the representative and enthusiastic delegation from this country to the Philadelphia advertising convention. There is little doubt that advertising by making known and revealing the needs and wants of every country, by stimulating and encouraging trade between each nation, will produce a spirit of co-operation and enlightenment that will do much to foster international wealth and world peace.

The Dorland Agency's "Home Markets" report on Australia, for instance, shows that for 1924-5, imports from Great Britain were $56 per head of population while imports from the United States ranked second, at $32; India being third with about $5.

The same agency's report on Canada shows that last year Canadian imports from America took first place, being valued at more than $53 per head of population, Great Britain coming second with $17 and the rest of the British Empire ranking third at less than $5.

The science of selling is calling to the British Empire today to advertise. There is a more intensive study proceeding in Great Britain concerning efficiency of production and the necessary ways of advertising British goods throughout the world than ever before. A recent example is the selling campaign for British teas recently begun in the United States by Sir Charles Higham, one of whose ambitions is to make the American public as fond of tea as are the British. The Higham tea advertising is increasingly successful and will certainly be followed by other similar efforts to sell more British goods.

In Great Britain many publications are being issued telling the British people how to increase their own home trade as well, and what they should do to stimulate their own prosperity by this means. The most recent of these is called "The Road to More Markets: A Challenge to British Manufacturers," which was issued in connection with the Manufacturers' Session at the Second British Advertising Convention, held at Blackpool, England, in May. The pamphlet points to the fact that the overseas markets for British goods are 25 per cent below their pre-war capacity and urges the exploitation of the home markets of Great Britain to recoup this temporary loss.

"The careful study and scientific exploitation of home markets" by America is analyzed in the pamphlet and the conclusion is drawn that "there is no assignable limit to the capacity of the home-market to buy British goods, for producing-power and purchasing-power are the same thing seen from different sides. The science of selling will enable British producers to supply a continuously expanding home market. This, in its turn, will lead to the recapture of the lost fourth of our export trade."

That summarizes the spirit of Great Britain, facing the critical circumstances of post-war reconstruction, of her own enormous financial burdens and the disruption of those foreign markets which, before the war contributed so much to British well-being and financial success. New times require new methods and Great Britain is developing the new methods.

MESSAGE FROM M. J. CLIFFORD

Looks to Philadelphia for Refreshment of Business Planning

To Editor & Publisher: We send every good wish to the great Advertising Convention at Philadelphia.

The prospect in this country is brighter than it has been for a long time, and we are depending on the delegates who visit Philadelphia from this country, to return to us greatly refreshed in business ideas after their deliberations with the advertising men of all countries, who are to attend the Convention.

GOOCH'S LIMITED,
M. J. Clifford,
Managing Director.

British Delegates Leave London For Convention

Photograph Especially Made For Editor & Publisher Beats Them Across Atlantic By Magic Power of Radio Waves

(Photograph copyrighted by Editor & Publisher)

Photoradiogram of British delegation departing for Philadelphia convention. From left to right: Russell Chapman, Sir William Veno, Lieut.-Col. E. F. Lawson and W. M. Teasdale.

Last Saturday the British delegates to the Philadelphia Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World assembled at the Waterloo Station in London to take the boat train.

A London photographer, assigned by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, made a news-picture of four of the delegates.

One hour later this photograph had been filed for commercial trans-Atlantic photoradiogram transmission.

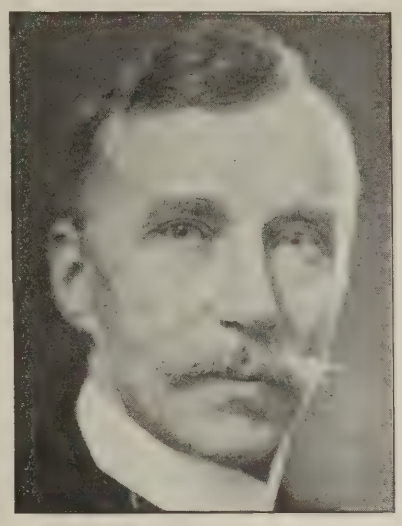
Five hours later the picture, as reproduced herewith, was delivered to Editor & Publisher's offices, Times Building, New York.

The delegates whose shadows thus preceded them by more than six days across the ocean, are: Russell Chapman, Sir William Veno, Lieut.-Col. E. F. Lawson and W. M. Teasdale.

This is the incredible magic of the highest and newest form of communications science. Imperfect as it may be in the result, yet only time is required to refine its product. Radio experts agree that the day is almost at hand when photograph material will be handled overseas with absolute fidelity to the original.

The environment of the British Empire is the world at large. The aids and appliances of the science of publicity are now at work throughout the world readjusting advertising methods of the past and creating new ones for the future to the British Empire's well-being. American Ambassador Houghton recently predicted that within a few years Great Britain would be in the midst of greater prosperity than has ever been known before. That is the way the signs point. There is one primary reason why they do: In time of grave national peril and distress, Great Britain held her financial honor inviolate, giving to the world an example of material self-sacrifice and spiritual self-discipline which has set a new standard even for "the word of an Englishman."

ENGLAND A BETTER MARKET



By Sydney Walton

Director of Yorkshire Evening News, Eastern Morning News and Hull Evening News.

England still is sound and strong. I do not say this for rhetoric's sake, but with exact sense of realities. True, we are changing over from an old industrial order to a new and transitions are not smooth and easy. But the essential England is unshaken, firm, steady, determined. Through March we come to June. And, to be commercial, England is a better market than ever.

ENGLAND FINE MARKET FOR QUALITY GOODS

Salesmanship and Advertising Finding Satisfactory Results in Britain—Message to Convention from Famous English Advertising Agent

Frederick E. Potter.

(Written for Editor & Publisher)

IT is with regret that I am unable to attend the convention at Philadelphia. I have old associations with that famous city and am sorry to miss the great exposition which is being held there.

As one who has been for long an enthusiast for Anglo-American amity and co-operation for the peace of the world, I feel the necessity that continued effort should be made to secure mutual understanding and united effort for all high and worthy purposes. The advertising convention will help this desirable end.

Like most other countries we have our commercial difficulties and industrial troubles, but England still offers a fine market for goods of quality. In the advertising agency world we are well equipped to safeguard the interests of firms desirous of doing business here. It would be a mistake to take too seriously pessimistic reports of conditions which appear in the press from time to time.

Feeling to some extent the pulse of business I can state that expert salesmanship and modern advertising are finding satisfactory results at the present time. Having the honor to conduct the publicity of several world-famous American products I am able to write with some confidence on this aspect.

May the convention prove in every way a great success, a time of fraternity and of mutual helpfulness for "Truth in advertising" and for the continual betterment of publicity methods and trading ideals.

I would like to extend the kindliest greetings to my many American friends whom I regret not being able to meet on this occasion.

Yours sincerely,
Fredk. E. Potter.

CONVENTION SLOGANS

By ARTHUR RICHARDSON
Advertising Director The Sunday News of London

(Written for Editor & Publisher)

In Great Britain U. S. A. means "Universal Satisfaction Assured."
We want G. B. to mean "Good Business" in U. S. A.
The British business man's message to the Convention is:
Fraternize Freely
Emphasize Excellence
Advertise Always.
Good money awaits Good value!

Convention Greeting from Harry Salmon

To the Philadelphia Advertising Convention:

I am a great admirer of American business methods and organization, and we have learned many valuable lessons from you which we have applied with permanent benefit to our own business.

For this reason I wish it were possible for me to be with you at your great Advertising Convention in Philadelphia, but for many reasons this cannot be.

I have been asked to send you a message. It is this:—

Whatever your business,

1. Produce the best quality goods by the best quality methods.
2. Sell them at a fair price, aiming at a large output at a small margin of profit, rather than a small output at a large margin of profit.
3. Advertising them freely and stand by your slogan, "Truth in Advertising."

HARRY SALMON.
Managing Director, J. Lyons & Co., Ltd.

DRAMATIC SCENES OF BRITISH STRIKE

(Continued from page 37)

ways, the roads, and in every department of public service, the good humor prevailed, even during the gravest days of the strike, and how much this contributed to peace can never be estimated, but that it contributed immeasurably there can be no question whatever.

The Prime Minister spoke to the nation by wireless messages. He kept the nation steady during one of the greatest crises in its long history by this means. Then the Government launched its own newspaper The British Gazette, the circulation of which crept up to millions within a few days. The Daily Mail printed its daily editions in France and these were conveyed over by aeroplane not only to London, but to every part of the British Isles.

Great crises produce unusual methods for dealing with them. A wholly novel achievement at the London Offices of the Dictaphone Co. Ltd., is worthy of note. The Wireless Strike Bulletins issued daily by the British Broadcasting Company were received in the company's offices and from a loud speaker were recorded direct on the dictaphone. They were transcribed by typists practically simultaneously with their reception and within a few moments of the termination of the message the complete bulletin, typed, was being exhibited in the windows of the company's show room. The whole process of reception and transcription was carried on in full view of the public. Crowds surged round the windows to watch the typists at work and read the news. Within a few minutes of the exhibition of the news in the windows the company issued the bulletin in the form of typed sheets by a special duplicating process. These "Wireless News Bulletins," were easily "first in the field" and were enormously popular.

At the end of the first week of the strike everything looked blacker than ever. There seemed every prospect that it would go on for weeks, perhaps months, and that the crisis would resolve itself into a wearing down process between the Government and the forces arrayed against them. This had every appearance of meaning not only the ruin of industry, but the final eclipse of Britain as a great power. What happened afterwards was that the Prime Minister broadcasted his now famous speech setting forth the Government position, in simple, but stirring language which rang true. He stated that negotiations would immediately be resumed as soon as the general strike was called off, but that that condition must be complied with first. That speech, supplemented as it was by utterances from Lord Grey of Falloden, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Sir John Simon, M. P. and others saved the nation. It was realized that in Mr. Stanley Baldwin the country had a man whom it could trust implicity, whose word was his bond, who was a man of peace, who put his country first. On the following Wednesday, May 12th, the T. U. C. called the strike off and during the next few days the strike was settled so far as the Railwaymen, Busmen, Tramwaymen, Dockers, and Printers were concerned. It now only remains for a solution to be reached with the Miners and the Prime Minister has given such a splendid lead here also that there is every possibility of agreement being reached ere long. The fact that the strike has only cost the Government £750,000 so far as it can be ascertained is eloquent testimony to the wonderful volunteer service which was manifest throughout those terrible nine days.

What the strike cost in loss of trade will probably never be known. Life in the old country is rapidly assuming a normal aspect and there are undoubted signs that it will shortly be entering upon an era of prosperity without parallel in its long history. Once again Britain has triumphed over foes within as it has so often done over foes without. There was no recrimination, no taking advantage of the position created by the strike, masters and men sat down together, drew up a working agreement and work proceeded forthwith. That is the British way and it would be true to say that the name of Britain is more honored and cherished throughout the world to-day than even that name has ever been before.

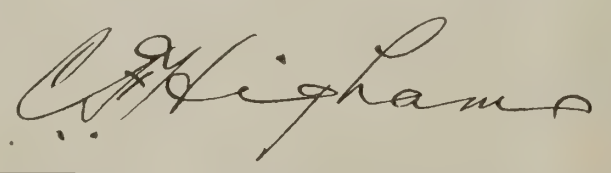
In the words of Sir Hall Caine—"All this clearly showed that force is powerless: to compose divisions between class and class, man and man, brother and brother: the moral law alone can do that: any attempt to compel a solution by force on either side can only lead to a limitless and fruitless suffering."

The spirit of friendly co-operation must prevail.

MESSAGE FROM SIR CHARLES HIGHAM

British Advertising Expert Comments on Philadelphia Convention "English Speaking Peoples Are Leaders of the World."

Written especially for Editor & Publisher



Sir Charles Higham

IT is characteristic of Editor & Publisher, our great and good friend on your side of the water, to think of having another strong British section in the convention number of that admirable paper. These touches of goodwill help to make the path of the English-speaking peoples more pleasant and profitable.

I am sorry that circumstances make it impossible for me to be at the convention this year, because I always learn something at an advertising convention. You have progressed a lot since the first convention I attended in Dallas, Texas, years ago. We are all taking our business seriously and ourselves less so—which is all to the good.

I would like to take this opportunity of congratulating Philadelphia on its enterprise in getting the convention, and even more so on having a big exposition. I hope that both will be an enormous success, as they deserve to be.

I am dictating this in London before I leave in a few days' time to visit your city, and I know the hospitable greeting I shall get, as all English men and women get who come to Philadelphia. I know you will take great care of the British Delegation and extend to them your characteristic hospitality. That they will all benefit by their visit I am certain, and come back enthused to carry on the work of the other side of the English-speaking world, and help to prove once more that in practically every sphere of human activity, the English-speaking peoples are the leaders of the world.

LACK OF NEWSPAPERS SLOWED LONDON LIFE

Indication of How Cities Would Go to Sleep—Stores Empty Because Advertising Columns Were Silent

According to the manager of the Savoy Hotel, London, one of the most aristocratic hostelries of the city, the reason why the big hotels and stores were almost entirely deserted during the recent general strike was not so much for lack of transport, but through the lack of advertising in the newspapers.

"It is doubtful," said the Savoy's manager to London reporters after the strike, "if the strike itself hit a single one of the Savoy's clients. They had their own autos, the American bands still played, there was no dearth of food, even the rarest; inside, things should have been quite normal. But they weren't.

"Why? Just for the same reason that no woman thought of going shopping. Newspapers and particularly the advertisements keep people thinking, making them get out and about.

"On the seventh day of the strike the emaciated news sheets even had to print appeals to the general public to use the emergency transport services that had been organized. There weren't enough people to use what had been provided.

"Nothing could be more significant of the power of newspaper advertising of which London has had to go without for 11 days.

"People didn't come and dance because they never read about anything connected with amusement, the theater, or anything to do with the entertainment world. The stores, except the provision stores, were also empty for the reason that some 500,000 women each morning were unable to read about things that they felt they wanted to buy,—no advertising—no knowledge.

"They still wanted to buy the things, and the things were still there to buy, but the vital medium was lacking.

"The strike has proved, from the point of view of hotels, stores, restaurants, theaters and public amenities generally, that advertising is more effective and even more vital than transport itself.

"The hour the strike was over—the tide rushed back; newspapers printed, advertisements and amusements were crying out, the people heard the wheels of the life of the biggest city in the world begin to whirl as before."

Four A.A.C.W. Spokane Delegates

Four Spokane men are expected to attend the 22nd annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to be held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24. The Spokesman-Review will be represented by E. Z. Smith, the Chronicle by G. W. Roche and F. W. Martin. Jacob Cohn, member of the firm of Ben Cohn and Brothers, jewelers, is also planning to attend the convention.

In England the best advertising always appears in — "PUNCH"

"I consider 'PUNCH' an exceedingly good medium for our advertising, not only because of the peculiar quality of 'PUNCH' from the artistic and literary side, but because the advertisements in 'PUNCH' are of a better class and of a better class of article than can be said of he adver isements in any other paper."

JOHN V. PUGH,
Managing Director, Messrs. Ridge-Whitworth, Ltd. Coventry.

"Punch"—

"the paper that is England"

MARION JEAN LYON
Advertisement Manager. "PUNCH"
80, Fleet Street, London, E.C. 4, Eng.

STURDY PROVINCIAL PRESS COMPETES WITH LONDON'S MIGHTY DAILIES

Weeklies Usually Appear on Fridays — Sunday Papers Mainly Devoted to Sport and Features— Editing Standards High

By H. A. TAYLOR

Director, Newspaper Features, Limited.

Written Especially for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

CONVERSATIONS with American friends whom I have met in England, and in their own country, have led me to the conclusion that it is not easy for an American to appreciate fully the difference between the National and the Provincial Press of Great Britain.

A superficial examination of the newspaper position in Great Britain soon shows that there are five distinct classes of newspapers.

Firstly, there are the papers published in London, and, generally speaking, on sale simultaneously in every part of Great Britain; two of these have subsidiary publishing offices in the North of England, enabling them to publish special editions for that part of the country and to compete, on something like an even basis, with the Northern newspapers. Secondly, there are the London evening papers which, while circulating in a considerable area in the South of England, are unable to get much beyond a hundred miles of London in time seriously to compete with the evening papers published in the Provinces. Next, there are the Provincial newspapers; the morning newspapers competing sturdily with their London contemporaries, and the evening papers enjoying freedom from London competition, but, in some places, involved in brisk rivalry of a local nature.

Outside these three classes are the weekly provincial newspapers, published, usually, on Friday, and devoted almost exclusively to local affairs, and, in some instances, bearing a very strong imprint of the parish pump. And, finally, we have the Sunday press of London and the Provinces, whose competition is largely, if not mainly, concerned with features and with sporting reports.

That position is a fairly simple fact, but, when the visitor comes to examine the various classes of newspapers, he is apt hastily to make the assumption that, when the average London newspaper is placed side by side with the average Provincial newspaper, the public will always prefer the London product. From this assumption he will easily reach the conclusion that, in a very short time, the Provincial morning and weekly newspapers will cease to exist.

To confirm this conclusion, he will point to the numerous expensive feature carried by the National newspaper, and the limited feature-content of its Provincial contemporary, and assert that, news-contents being more or less equal, the man in the street will buy the paper that gives him the greater volume and greater variety of interesting reading matter for his penny or twopence.

Nevertheless, it is not safe to be absolutely logical in delivering judgment on anything appertaining to Great Britain. According to strictly logical reasoning, the British Empire cannot exist, and there are many lesser institutions which, according to the most generous of theories, ought to have been dead long ago, if, indeed, they could ever have been born.

Similarly, in considering the Press of Great Britain, it is most unsafe to venture predictions or to base judgments upon anything but continuous detailed experience. The Provincial press of Great Britain is a very well-established and thoroughly healthy institution. Competition from London, fierce and unrelenting, does not shake it, and will not extinguish it.

The American reader, accustomed to seeing the bright and numerous array of features in even the most modest of newspapers in his own country, is apt to think, when he looks over a British Provincial paper, with its one or two odd features, that such paucity of interesting "magazine" material means either poverty or impending doom, or both.

This state of affairs is, however, readily explained.

We are a conservative people, and although there have been feature syndicates in Great Britain for forty years or more, the syndicate is still something of a cinderella among newspaper organizations. Indeed, there are still to be found editors and proprietors who boast that they have never used a syndicated feature and never will—in much the same way as one may encounter in the country districts old folk who boast that they have never had a bath, and have never used a telephone. The number of such die-hards is, of course, small, and is rapidly dwindling.

The war, with its rationing of paper supplies, and the great post-War depression of trade (from which we are, at last, steadily and surely emerging), acted on the press like a strong wind on an orchard in spring. It cleared away the unhealthy and the insecure newspapers, and blew away the cobwebs that were settling upon certain of the others.

A judicious blending of contents of national interest with an adequate treatment of local affairs, and a steady increase in feature-contents, is being achieved, and the Provincial newspapers are retaining and, in many instances increasing, their hold upon the public.

The reader of a Provincial newspaper is not a a head-line taster. That type of person is more readily satisfied by the National press. The Provincial reader is usually a person of a more serious turn of mind, a person of strong local patriotism and a studious observer of events. Thoroughness, rather than hustle, is his pre-eminent characteristic. He and his kind constitute a public from which most advertisers get a higher return for their money than they do from the newspapers whose readers are very numerous but very casual in their perusal of a newspaper.

One of Mr. Lloyd George's organizers admitted to me a few years ago that, in testing the feeling of the country, he began about a hundred miles outside London; and there are many politicians who declare that the opinion of the country is better represented by the Provincial newspapers than by the more capricious product of Fleet Street. Further, the standard of editing is, in many Provincial newspapers, as high as any to be found in London, for Fleet Street does not retain all the talent that comes to it. Many journalists use it merely as a school in which to graduate for high Provincial appointments.

METHODIST RECORDER

The Leading Methodist Newspaper

Net Sale: Over 56,000

Gipsy Smith, the well-known Evangelist, says:

"I cannot understand how any Methodist can live without the Methodist Recorder."

Offices:

161 Fleet Street, London

Advertisement Rates: £25 per page (17" by 11½")

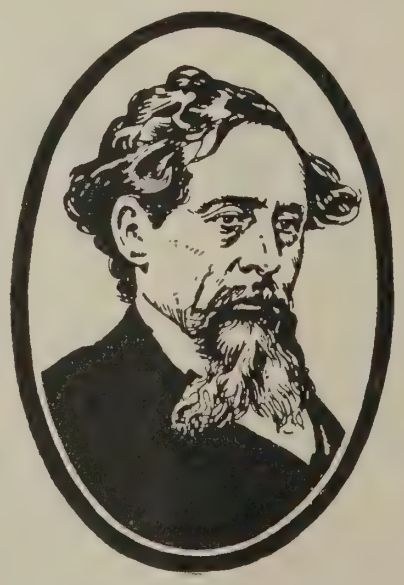
"JUSTICE AND PROGRESS"

King Albert's Tribute to the "Daily News"

The King of the Belgians has sent a special message of congratulation to the "Daily News" on the occasion of the issue of its 25,000th number.

His graciously worded telegram, translated, is as follows:

On the occasion of the publication of the paper's 25,000th number, I warmly congratulate the management of the "Daily News," whose vast influence in the world has always been at the service of ideas of justice and progress. ALBERT.



All classes of readers and advertisers testify to the service rendered during 80 years of progress by the London

Daily News

—the paper that pays advertisers and can prove it

Certified Net Paid Sale, April, 1926

647,404 Copies Daily

Founded by CHARLES DICKENS

First Editor 1846

Advertisement Office
Bouverie House,
Fleet Street, E. C. 4
London, England

STUDY BRITISH STATISTICS

Britain is the richest market in Europe. It does more trade, and has a more stable economic condition, a wider distribution of wealth, and a higher standard of living, than any other foreign country.

TRADE. It holds an even bigger proportion of the world's trade than it did before the war, and heads the list of trading nations with a 16·5 % share of the total trade to its credit—more than double that of any other nation except the United States (15·5 %).

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS. Currency is deflated to par and the Gold Standard has been in operation since last year. All creditors are being paid in full and the annual Budget is balanced yearly. The "cost of living" has been stabilised for three years.

DISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH. There are 44,000,000 people in the country, of whom 17,000,000 are wage earners. The total national income is estimated at $16,000,000,000 per annum. Investors in Government securities number 15,000,000.

STANDARD OF LIVING. A recent investigation in the United States showed that the proportion of families in receipt of more than $2,000 income was 18 %. The corresponding figure for Britain is 23 %. Holiday resorts, theatres and places of amusement are crowded to capacity. 1925 was a record year for all the big London retail stores. The profits of companies manufacturing semi-luxury articles are higher than ever before.

To develop trade in this market is a merchandising and advertising problem best advised upon by those who have known it inside and out for a quarter of a century.

SAWARD, BAKER & CO. LTD.

Advertising from A to Z

27 CHANCERY LANE, LONDON, W.C.2

Clients:

California Packing Corporation
Dromedary Dates
Pompeian Beauty Preparations
Ovaltine
Glaxo Baby Food
J. & P. Coats' Threads and Cottons
Clark's Anchor Threads
Gibbs Dentifrice
St. Margaret Hosiery and Underwear
North British Rubber Company (Clincher Tyres)
Reslaw Hats
Nil Simile Shoes
Vulcan Motors
Murray's Mellow Smoking Mixture
Younger's Scotch Ales
Cristolax
Colleen Soap
Fitu Corsets
Jecomalt
Rothman's Direct-to-smoker Service
Iron Jelloids
Walters' Palm Toffee
Bengué's Balsam
Haymills Estates
Barker & Co., (Coachbuilders) Ltd.

FINE POINTS OF TRADE AND ADVERTISING IN ENGLAND

Buyer Wants a Yard Wide and Exact Truth in Sales Talk—No Room for Pessimists on the Tight Little Isle—"Victory of the Pound Sterling"

By C. MAXWELL TREGURTHA

Written especially for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

IN my daily paper as I sit down to write I observe a headline "The Victory of the £." And I find it is a tribute quoted from the New York World Yet this tribute comes on the heels of the greatest organized attempt to paralyze Britain by a general strike—the strike that would not flare up because the match had the wrong sort of head.

C. MAXWELL TREGURTHA

The New York World describes that strike as a momentous moral victory for the British people, and says that the achievement of parity for sterling in the wake of the strike is a victory less spectacular but no less real. Not a little of that victory was due to Baldwin and the B. B. C. (British Broadcasting Company).

When you have a prime minister who is a kind of peaceful Mussolini, with a keen insight into the real situation and a firm determination to withstand all efforts to undermine the Government, and when the prime minister addresses the whole country in person through the medium of the microphone with calm, deliberate utterances, the machinations of a few revolutionary spirits are instantly rendered futile.

Truth has a quality which identifies it as the real thing. No amount of camouflage rhetoric can have the same effect on the simple Englishman. Baldwin's sincerity won out, because we know that his sincerity was no veneer. Truth must win in politics and advertising.

To do trade with England you must understand the English temperament. Someone, probably a Frenchman, described us as phlegmatic. Don't be misled. We are not phlegmatic. The men folk of England never grow up—they're just big kids. That is, excepting those who contract indigestion through hustling. The womenfolk try not to grow up—but they worry overmuch. Men don't worry. They have a maxim: "What's done can't be undone. Don't worry over errors, just make sure they don't happen again." Englishmen are simple but not easily imposed upon—they have something of the Scot's skepticism. Englishmen are very emotional—but not on the surface. They can face calamity with the seeming calm of a stoic, but inwardly they are in a tumult. They were like that in France.

There is yet another attribute; the tendency to laugh in the face of trouble and regard it as a jest. If you could have witnessed the cheerfulness of the crowds when faced with a skeleton travel service and the genial cheeriness of the volunteer transport workers you would have got a big grasp of the Englishman's character.

If you can visualize this character, you will understand the spirit that broke the strike.

This is not intended to be a panegyric. It is just a candid examination of a type of buyer. Nor is it out of place here because it concerns trading.

England is really doing very well despite the wailings of the Jeremiahs who say "England is finished." Strikes are but passing phases, merely pot-holes in the road. They give a jolt, but only a jolt.

Trade is too well sprung to suffer damage to its chassis by an occasional rough road on its journey.

"Victory of the £." That surely in itself is all the evidence that is needed of the rightness of trade in England.

At the moment English trade needs more science in the business of marketing. It is evident that the cost both of production and marketing must be reduced. Trades are now realizing the importance of collective effort and various industries are conducting campaigns for the development of their trade as a whole. By increasing demand each individual finds a distinct improvement in his own trade. The idea is not new in America. It is not altogether new in England, but it was quite a while before the "get-together" spirit was appreciated. The English trader is rather loth to show his hand—just a trifle "ca canny."

It is slowly dawning on the minds of the manufacturers and traders of England that the only remedy for high costs is increased demand and that increased demand is best brought about through Advertising. It has needed quite a lot of effort on the part of such men as Sir Charles Higham and Mr. W. S. Crawford to force this truth home.

At the present time a united effort is being made by all traders to boost British goods. Two slogans are now in use; the one "Buy British Goods," the other "Sell British Goods." They are part of a mild attempt to encourage the public to buy imperially. But no such anaemic effort will yield any results worth comment. Until much propaganda has been issued and the whole press devotes daily space to "reason why" copy on the subject, the British public is not likely to pay great heed to the purchase of British Goods.

I do not think the movement can ever gain much ground because thinking men and women consider the project fundamentally wrong. "What would happen to our export trade if all other countries adopted this idea?" asks one. "How can we, who depend so much on imports from foreign countries, possibly attempt to ostracize all but British Goods?" asks another.

That Britain makes dependable products none will deny, but Britain cannot be best in everything. I could enumerate quite a number of things which enter into the routine and the leisure hours of my life which are not English—and I would hate to be forced into using English (or British) substitutes for them. I'm fond of the cinema, but if I had to submit to an all-British show I would soon lose my taste for "the pictures." This isn't disloyalty, it is sheer frankness. I dread to think what would happen, too, if I had to smoke British tobaccos!

The people of Britain will never buy otherwise than on value. They will not pay more for a British-made product if they can purchase its equivalent for less money. Many foreign-made things on sale on this market have no British equivalent.

There always has been and always will be a good market in Britain for good American products. The only rival to this market America has to concern herself with is Germany. Germany seems to have a knack of imitating American products and following them into our market at much lower prices. Here is an example: A certain American rouge lipstick sells here at somewhere in the neighborhood of 4/-. A German copy of it retails at about 1/6. Perhaps our slogan should be: "Buy British Goods—or American!" It would be equally fatuous if the German (or other foreign) product was less than half the price. It takes a long vision to see the economic soundness of paying more for the real British article. Most people are not that much concerned with posterity.

But to return to the subject of advertising. Advertising in England has made amazing progress. Not many years ago the contrast between English and American advertising was as pronounced as the difference between a Ford flivver and a Rolls-Royce motor car. Today there is still a contrast, but not on points of craftsmanship or artistry. The contrast is merely that of treatment, necessary difference because the appeal is to different temperaments.

Some of the leading men in Advertising have been able to train the English artist to think advertisingly and to adapt his art to use instead of ornament. Some of our literatary men have been convinced that there is no degradation in using their pen to write alluringly of manufacturers' ware. We have availed ourselves of the many new American type faces (revivals of old European craftsmen). Thus through good art, good copy and good typesetting, English advertising has become a thing of beauty and a greater influence for the betterment of business.

"EYES WEST"

By SIR WILLIAM H. VENO

Written for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

ON June 12th I joined the British party on the "Berengaria." After my experience in New York and Houston last year, it would be hard to stay away from Philadelphia.

An American Advertising Convention exudes an atmosphere which stimulates imagination, creates new ideas, broadens one's vision, and brings one into contact with the best of good fellows. The memory of the amazing hospitality and good feeling shown to the British party last year still lingers with me.

The two great branches of the English speaking family are destined to work together as the leaders of civilization, world progress and world peace, and the more frequently the two families meet, in mutual respect and harmony the better.

GET YOUR

LONDON

LETTER

DIRECTLY FROM

LONDON

If you require British editorial matter of any kind—be it a London Letter, a special news story, or a British feature—do as the leading British editors do, and

WIRE TO "NEWSBOY" FOR IT

In other words, communicate with

NEWSPAPER FEATURES, LTD.

23 FLEET STREET, LONDON, E. C.

CABLES—"NEWSBOY, LONDON"

Sir Charles Higham

invites Correspondence with

AMERICAN ADVERTISERS

who are now in, or contemplate entering,

THE BRITISH MARKET

I CONDUCT, at Imperial House, Kingsway, London, an efficiently-staffed Service Advertising Agency, on the lines of the best Agencies in your Country. My American clients include

The Parker Pen Company
The American Safety Razor Corporation
The United Drug Company

to whom I refer you as to my capacity.

As to my standing in any respect I refer you to the Publishers of this or any American Newspaper

CHARLES F. HIGHAM LTD.

LONDON—ENGLAND

Cable Address: 'Highamads,' London

Merchant Prince Sees Strike As Great Advertisement

London's famous merchant at his desk in the huge Selfridge store

THE great strike which we have just gone through, and which has been so victoriously terminated in favour of law and order and "live and let live," will probably prove to be one of the best advertising features of this advertising age.

¶ Every paper in every land has given much space to this effort to control the Nation through Trade Unions, and there are probably but few of the fifteen hundred million people in the world who have not discussed it.

¶ To everyone then with intelligence the result has been accepted as vitally important and, as I have suggested, I think will be a tremendous advertisement for the good sense, the strength of purpose, the general good humour, poise, and absence of hysteria of the people of these Islands.

¶ Our British Delegates, while attending the Philadelphia Advertising Convention, will all have reason to know and to feel the influence of this great advertisement.

¶ I hope, too, that they will return bringing back new ideas and even a further knowledge of the science of advertising.

Gordon Selfridge

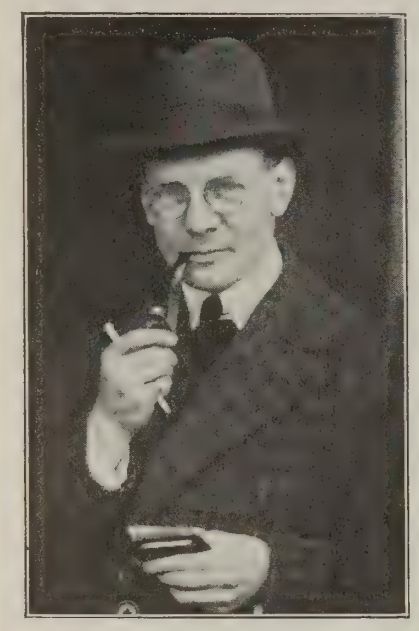
The Daily Telegraph

enjoys an unrivalled measure of public confidence and esteem, not due to a fleeting popularity, but the result of years of sound journalism and truthful presentation of news.

In addition to its very large amount of displayed advertising, the enormous measurement of "Classified" Advertisements carried every day is a clear proof of its unique value as an advertising medium, and its readers open it each morning with a mind prepared and receptive for its many columns of advertising news.

For Advertising Rates, apply
H. G. REEVES, Advertisement Manager,
"THE DAILY TELEGRAPH,"
138, Fleet Street, London, England.

BRITAIN—BEFORE AND AFTER THE GENERAL STRIKE



There Is No Bad Blood in England Now—Britain Is Again on the Trade War Path—Strike Left Less Damage Than Most Sanguine Would Have Expected—Statement by Advertising Expert

By W. H. HARFORD

Director of Saward Baker & Co., Ltd.

(Written for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

IN moments of detachment before the general strike I used to picture this, my country, as a man in his prime fighting the battle of life in competition with younger races but handicapped by blows from outside the ring delivered by an unfair fate named War. Yet this man, Britain, was miraculously winning. Oblivious both to the admiration of some sections of the world audience and to the doubting faces of others he was inch by inch pushing onwards. He was whipping himself to the contest with a dogged energy that was almost demoniacal. He was calling up reserve after reserve of latent strength and still there appeared immeasurable reservoirs of vitality untapped. It was epic. And yet! And yet everybody knew that some of the bonds that made his task so enormous and his achievement so astounding could and must be snapped by himself alone!

W. H. Harford

But passing from difficult simile to cold facts we know that Britain emerged from a war, for which the strongest adjectival descriptions are pale things, with the laurels of victory and the loads of debt. Debt in figures that made the mind reel and the sweets of success bitter sweetness.

We immediately made one great error. We faced the future too swiftly. Instead of first putting our material and mental machinery in order we started the new trade war with a combination of pre-war implementary and the improvised weapons of the European holocaust. Maybe the need for rapid action appeared too strong for us, but could we have realized that the methods of trade had changed so much between 1914 and 1919 we should probably have organized not only our production, but our selling activities in conformity with the new day, instead of slowly and painfully improving them in the succeeding years.

And instead of patching up at intervals the disagreements between employer and workman we should by a patriotic appeal, which, if properly made never fails in this country, have capitalized by unity and understanding, our characteristic will to work. The fact that we were hampered by circumstances for which we were not responsible and by some for which we were in a sense to blame, serves to enhance the magnificence of the achievement we wrought and to place it in a white clear light before the other countries of the world.

Not the least part of the achievement was first the unqualified acknowledgment and second the faithful carrying out of, our financial obligations. We of course recognize that by taking the honorable course, difficult as it was, we have proved that in national matters as in individual matters that attitude was commercially sound in the long run. This part of our achievement is familiar to Americans but it is perhaps less appreciated in the United States that in the years succeeding the termination of war we increased our general standard of living. We improved the social and economic status of our people despite our unemployment figures and despite the other obvious economic disabilities.

It may come as a surprise to many that of the seventeen million people in this country who are in receipt of incomes nearly two and a half millions earn an average of £715 per annum, a further two and a half million earn an average of £225 per annum, whilst the remaining twelve million earn an average of £129 per annum. But a statement of family incomes is probably a better view of our condition. Of the ten million families in the country it has been estimated that upwards of a quarter of a million are in receipt of an income of £1,000 a year and upwards, two million have an income between £1,000 and £400 and seven million have an income of below £400. And it must be remembered that our system of unemployment insurance benefits, trade union benefits and unemployment pay by the state prevented even the poorest classes, which exist in all countries, fall to pre-war level.

These accomplishments were made possible by the gradual improvement of our commercial machinery and it is significant that on the literal eve of the general strike hundreds of manufacturers in the northern area of England—the textile and machinery producing districts—were wending their way to the Second British Advertising Convention to take part in a manufacturers' conference on the subject of efficiency in selling methods. It may be easy in America to assemble five hundred non-advertising manufacturers to attend an advertising convention—I do not know that it has ever been attempted in the States—but in this country, I, who organized this manufacturers' session, fell that practically five hundred responses from one area of the country alone was a significant sign. It was fraught with immense possibilities, but then the long talked of, never really expected menace of the general strike came like—like nothing we have experienced before.

It was decided to postpone the convention because it was obvious that when the strike was over the necessity for a close consideration of how to expand markets would be paramount. There were, however, many delegates who knowing there might be no trains running were anxious to "carry on and walk home."

Throughout the succeeding nine days British good temper and British level-headedness was never more strikingly manifested. If people had normal work to do they went to work, how they got there is now the subject of many humorous stories. If normal work was impossible, then they worked to keep the country going. One of our own office boys walked fifteen miles to the office and was very little late.

Amongst the more serious aspects of the affair was the strike of printers and allied trades which reduced the newspapers to "emergency sheets"—some just facsimile messages—because rarity of authentic news in the first few days led to rumors of rioting and disorder. The facts are that there was very little disturbance and when the press got stronger, as it did, day by day, and as the Government newspaper, born the first day of the strike, began to get big circulation, rumor was killed and the nation accepted with placidity the dual task of defeating the strike and prosecuting business.

The way in which we stood a shock which in most countries would have led to the running of blood, has had a curious psychological effect upon us. For years we have been suffering from an inferiority complex. We have been the world's worst advertisers of a nation as a nation. We have praised the enterprise of other countries and deprecated ourselves. We have seen virtue in others whilst doubting ourselves. But in trams and trains to-day you hear a man say to his neighbor "We are a wonderful people." We are!

Now, we are joking and telling funny stories about the strike which might have meant the end of Britain and of Europe. We are a wonderful people. Whilst we were dealing with the biggest menace we have ever faced, we watched the pound sterling rise to its highest point for many years. Whilst the mines were empty, the factories closing down, the trains being run by amateur drivers, our money value rose and that of some European countries fell. Of course we are a wonderful people.

But to my mind, the most amazing thing of all is the calmness of the recovery. It is as though the Heavens had rained oil upon the stormiest sea. The vast majority of people are back at work as though nothing had happened and we are tired of strike talk. Frankly, it has been wearisome to write that part of this article dealing with the strike itself.

When it comes to talking about the future, however, thoughts and enthusiasms crowd in. Pen cannot travel fast enough. We have finished with pessimism. To the devil with doubt. We who have done these things can do undreamed of other things.

It reminds me of the story told of a gathering of townsmen in a Belgian village, the famous Town Hall of which had been sacked by the first rough rush of the German foe. The discussion centered round the question of whether the Town Hall should be rebuilt or left as a sad relic of an unforgivable crime. Some were for one course and some for the other. But when a young Belgian with a light in his eye cried out "Build again! of course we will build again, but we will build it three feet higher" the matter was settled.

The great general strike has left less damage than the most sanguine would have expected. Mr. Winston Churchill says it will not be necessary to impose fresh taxation this year and the cost to the Government was really negligible. Mr. Walter Runciman, M. P., shipowner, manufacturer and banker, estimates the total loss to the country to be thirty millions, and then declared "This country had as great power for a return to prosperity as ever it had in the past. There was a power of co-operation which had not yet been fully insisted upon . . . . a power of enterprise by which men would take risks tempered by knowledge; and a desire on all hands to extend the commerce of this country. Not only within imperial boundaries, but throughout the whole world."

From the issue of "The Times" reporting Mr. Runciman's speech, I have clipped the headlines of reports of various company meetings—just from one issue. They are reproduced here and tell their own story.

There is one final point of tremendous import. The strike was defeated but the settlement was pacific. There is no bad blood in Britain now. The newspaper proprietors who had the most cause to be bitter because the men attempted to censor editorial and interfere with management are printing leading articles breathing the spirit of reconciliation and sounding the note of progress.

Out of the deeps of a national crisis springs the flame of progress. The nation has regained its soul. The spirit of adventure is abroad. New methods will be embarked upon. New energy will be imparted into commerce. Britain is again on the trade warpath. We are a wonderful people.

HEADLINES THAT SPELL BUSINESS

COMPANY MEETINGS.

NORTH BRITISH AND MERCANTILE INSURANCE COMPANY.

GROWTH OF INCOME AND PROFITS.

WORLD-WIDE ...

REVIEW ...

DEP...

ALLIANCE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

PROGRESS OF THE YEAR.

OF WHOLE ...

RANCE.

WHITEAWAY, LAIDLAW, AND CO.,

SUBSTANTIALLY IMPROVED RESULTS.

DIVIDEND INCREASED.

PROGRESS IN CURRENT YEAR.

The EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of Whiteaway, Laidlaw, and Co. ... was held on ...

BRUNNER, MOND AND CO.

INCREASED PROFIT.

GREATER EFFICIENCY.

IMPORTANT NEW ...VELOPMENTS.

...DENCE IN THE ...UTURE.

... MOND'S SPEECH

...NARY GENERAL MEETIN... Co., Limited, was held ... Hotel ...

...ETT'S SPEECH.

... of the ...

UNION AND ... INSURANCE COMPANY.

SATISFACTORY LIFE FIGURES.

INCREASED INTERIM BONUS

CONSIDERABLE ADVANCEMENT IN FIRE PREMIUM INCOME.

...HUNDRED AND FIRST ANNUAL ...

GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF POLICIES.

FAVOURABLE MORTALITY EXPERIENCE.

...ONAL ENDOWMENT ...

COMMERCIAL UNION ASSURANCE COMPANY.

REVIEW OF YEAR'S BUSINESS.

...TERRUPTED PROGRESS.

...ION ...STRO...

THE YORKSHIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

FURTHER PROGRESS.

REVIEW OF DEPARTMENTAL ACCOUNTS.

The 102ND ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Yorkshire Insurance Company was held ...

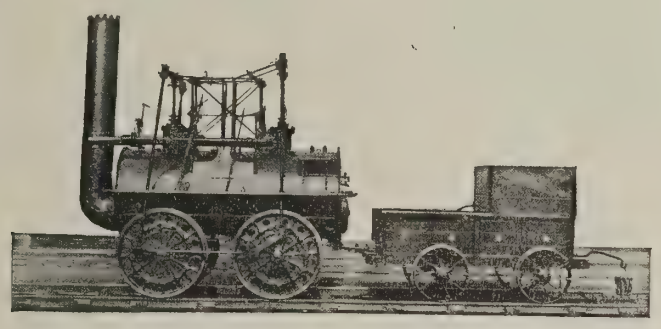
Clipped from one day's issue of The Times of London, telling a story of stable conditions in England's economic life.

Facts About Philadelphia

Philadelphia's population is 1,936,932.

Philadelphia makes 60 per cent of the glazed kid produced in the world.

Philadelphia has more than 1,000 churches of all denominations.



The city's industrial payroll for a year averages about a half billion dollars.

Of the 328,274 workers in industry in Philadelphia, less than 13 per cent are foreigners. Philadelphia has 15 per cent more skilled workers than New York, and 10 per cent more than Chicago.

Invested capital in industrial plants in Philadelphia in 1923 amounted to $1,066,-901,923.61.

British Progress
London & North Eastern Railway

1825

Started by George Stephenson when he constructed the Stockton and Darlington Railway (27 miles), the first public railway in the world, now part of the L·N·E·R.

1923

The London & North Eastern Railway of England and Scotland formed by the merger of seven British Railways into one great Company with nearly 7,000 miles of line. This amalgamation was accomplished without hitch or any interruption of the services rendered to the public.

1926

The L·N·E·R
has for its motto "Forward."
Conveys { 371 Million passengers per annum.
143 Million tons of freight per annum.
Own 38 Docks and 23 Hotels.
Is the Shortest and Quickest Route between London and Scotland.
Provides the money-saving night route between England and the Continent via Harwich.

General Agent for America:
H. J. KETCHAM,
London & North Eastern Railway,
311, Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y.

L·N·E·R

BRITISH ADVERTISING TRENDS SINCE HOUSTON

Improvement Seen in Technique—Development of Co-operative Advertising—Work to Be Done to Convince Retailers and Buying Public of Value of Publicity Service

By SINCLAIR WOOD
Director, Advertising & Publicity, Ltd., London, Brussels, New York

THE advertising man is, generally, so full of enthusiasm and optimism that he is prone at times to allow his optimism to run away with his judgment. For several years in Great Britain it has been the custom as each year closed for leaders of advertising to review the progress of the preceding twelve months. Were a layman, now, to read those reviews for the past five years, he would, I fear, expect advertising in Britain to be in a healthier, more advanced state than actually it is. Improvements that have taken place in only one or two quarters have been taken sometimes to constitute general improvement; progress has been classed as progress without any consideration of degree, sincerity, or speed, and numerous dark spots have, whether in ignorance or through the spirit of eternal hope, too often been ignored.

Reviewing, as impartially as possible, the state and trends of British advertising during the twelve months since the Houston convention, there are some real improvements to report, but equally there are matters in which it cannot be said that any advancement has been made. The directions in which there is improvement may be more numerous, but it is questionable whether, all things considered, British advertising has advanced far from the state it was in a year ago.

To deal first with the most cheerful aspect, there has, I think, been very real improvement in advertising technique. The movement that began soon after the end of the war to have copy written by people who could use the King's English has gained force during 1925-26. Service agencies, and manufacturers maintaining their own advertising departments, are becoming convinced that to induce several thousand people to make a purchase or an inquiry by means of a few words is a difficult, specialized occupation calling for trained and specially equipped minds, and that such a type of mind must be paid for. And they are paying for it. Advertisers, too, are learning that a five-dollar drawing may not be good enough to focus attention on the argument presented in a thousand dollar-space, and more competent artists are being paid to translate the advertising man's ideas. There has been real progress in this direction, as well as in the details of advertisment preparation. Layout work may not on the whole have shown great improvement, but there has been very considerable growth in the tasteful setting of newspaper advertisements. More and more agencies are inducing their clients to have every advertisement specially typeset, and to supply papers with complete plates, so avoiding the dreadful similarity that had been unavoidable in the case of most papers. Three or four typesetters, at least, are now giving most intelligent, knowledgable service in this direction.

The second bright spot is the development of co-operative advertising. Five or six important campaigns have been added during the past year. Still, much remains to be done—only a very tiny proportion of the industries, trades, and services that could profitably co-operate in advertising have as yet done so. One factor that militates against the spread of co-operative advertising is the scarcity as compared with the United States, of trade associations, and the general ineffectiveness of those that do exist. The British manufacturer and merchant tend to be self-contained, and view their fellow men more as competitors than as co-operators. The very idea that they should pool information about costs and methods scares them. The result is that, even in the case of existing associations, it is difficult to obtain and maintain agreement sufficiently long to achieve results. Advertising people are somewhat to blame for the continuance of this state of mind—they should be preaching more actively the benefits of co-operation. Up to the present, I believe, eighty per cent or ninety per cent of the co-operaive campaigns in Britain have been developed and are being operated by one advertising agency.

The c. o. d. system introduced by the Government a few months ago presented to advertising an opportunity of which advantage is being taken very slowly indeed. The system opened up possibilities for reducing distribution costs by making more accessible the large bodies of people living in districts remote from good shopping centers—the people who raise the advertising cost of almost every successful product in general use. The way for c. o. d. had been well paved by the post-order system run so successfully by the great department stores and mail order houses. But the opportunity has not been seized. Observation suggests that many of the advertisers who adopted the system during its first week gave up because they had not made huge profits within a fortnight. They were not prepared, apparently, for the constant hammering necessary to break down the British distrust of something new.

A factor that has probably affected the nonsuccess, as yet of c. o. d. is the distrust the British public still has of advertisements and consequently of advertised goods. However we may encourage ourselves in our trade papers and at our club and convention meetings, the fact remains that the great majority of the British public still associates advertising with exaggeration and misstatement. The most depressing thing about a review of last year's advertising history is, I think, that practically nothing has been done to change the public state of mind towards advertising. The average British housewife, when she buys an advertised product, firmly believes that she is "paying for the name" and the retailer agrees with her heartily. Nearly every woman believes that advertisements are untrue, and leaders of thought in the country—teachers, lawyers, preachers—are of the same opinion,

The country's clearest thinkers, when they can be induced to discuss adver-

A National Newspaper of Unique Character and Influence

CHARACTER counts with newspapers as with human beings.

The character of a newspaper may be judged alike by its advertisements and its editorial contents.

"The Sunday News" is a National Institution of unique character and influence.

For nearly a century (84 years) this famous old newspaper has maintained its pre-eminent position as the typical British Sunday Newspaper.

For space in
"THE SUNDAY NEWS"
formerly known as "Lloyd's Sunday News") communicate with
ARTHUR RICHARDSON
Advertisement Director,
3-4-5, Salisbury Square,
Fleet Street, London,
England.

THE SUNDAY NEWS

tising at all, tell you almost to a man that it is a waste of money and manpower, that it increases the cost of living and that it adds to unemployment. Very occasionally, an economist will agree that co-operative advertising, or advertising in support of some great social cause, may be justified, but never that there can be any excuse for advertising an individual proprietary article. It is most difficult to bring them to any appreciation of the part that advertising plays in distribution. The country is not making agement. Before drawing up advertising plans or advertisements, these organizations are making a conscientious study of the market in regard to each individual product, investigating competition, methods, potential and actual demand, consumer habits, needs and prejudices, and trade practices and sentiment. Based on this study they are preparing advertising plans that are sound fundamentally, and more likely to create, not only immediate sales, but repeat sales, and to build good will and successful businesses.

SINCLAIR WOOD

any study of distribution problems. It does not know there is a distribution problem. It expects that somehow goods should walk or fly from the factory door to the consumer, who ought to pay the price that the article costs the manufacturer and no more.

"Down with the middle man" has become a kind of parrot-cry solution for our living cost difficulty.

That is another depressing thing about British advertising. Advertising men are not taking the lead in bringing about serious study of distribution problems. They do not know anything about distribution themselves. Mostly, advertising agencies are still organizations for the preparation and placing of advertisements. Very few are competent to discuss with a client on equal terms the sale of his goods—able to go with him into costs, margins, distribution channels, selling plans, and to frame advertising campaigns that are built on a sound foundation. In the great majority of cases selling and advertising are carried on in water-tight compartments, without any conception of the fact that each is nothing but a part of marketing, and that alone either is a nonproductive function. The result is waste of effort and money so-called "advertising failures," with high distribution costs, consequent high cost of goods, and restriction of purchasing.

Just one bright spot appears here—one of the brightest in the last year's history. Five or six advertising agencies have come sincerely to appreciate that their real job is to help their clients dispose of their output at a profit, and that they must become, if not in name then in fact, marketing agencies instead of advertising agencies. These few are staffing their organizations not only with space-buyers and advertising technicians, but with men experienced in sales management.

Some, but insufficient, progress has been made towards bringing about a readier public acceptance of advertising and of advertised goods—towards convincing people that a statement is not necessarily incorrect because it is made in an advertisement. Much public speaking is done by advertising people, but usually to fellow workers with whom they are in complete agreement on the subject in question, or to manufacturers and merchants whom it is desired to convert to advertising. A little, but a very little, free space has been devoted by the newspapers to the advertising of advertising, and that has been almost entirely in the provincial press.

Mention of the work of the newspapers for the good of advertising reminds one of their painfully slow progress towards helping advertising practitioners to make their work more scientific and resultful. The additions to the lists of publications that issue guaranteed net sales certificates is disappointing. But what is worse is the fewness of the papers which issue any kind of analysis of their circulation. This question has an importance in Great Britain which, in the case of newspapers is far greater than in the United States, because in our country the great daily and Sunday newspapers published in London—and some in other cities—circulate from end to end of the country and constitute the cheapest medium for the advertising of most products. Yet only in the case of about two national newspapers is it possible to obtain a dependable detailed statement showing the distribution of the paper's circulation.

Instead of accurate, complete information, advertising men have to work on impressions gathered from coupon redemption, salesmen, and other sources, obviously insufficient and often misleading. The

(Continued on page 56)

A hearty welcome is extended to you from the Proprietors of . . .

"THE GRAPHIC"
AND
"THE BYSTANDER" COMPRISE Great Britain's "Powerful Pair"

The Leading Publications in the World of Illustrated Journalism

No advertising campaign appealing to the Upper Middle Classes is complete without the use of these two Publications

"THE GRAPHIC'S" reputation is well established and known throughout the British Empire, and deals with Men — Matters — Art and Politics on the best lines.

"THE BYSTANDER" is the Leading Light Society Weekly — A firm favourite with everyone.

Any further information and Scale of Advertisement Charges sent on application to

DIRECTOR OF ADVERTISING
GRAPHIC AND BYSTANDER, LTD.
116-117 Fleet Street, London, England, E.C.4

RAPID DEVELOPMENT OF "QUEEN OF MIDLANDS"

Millions Spent to Improve Nottingham, Situated in Heart of England, Rich in Natural Resources and Center of Thriving Basic Industries

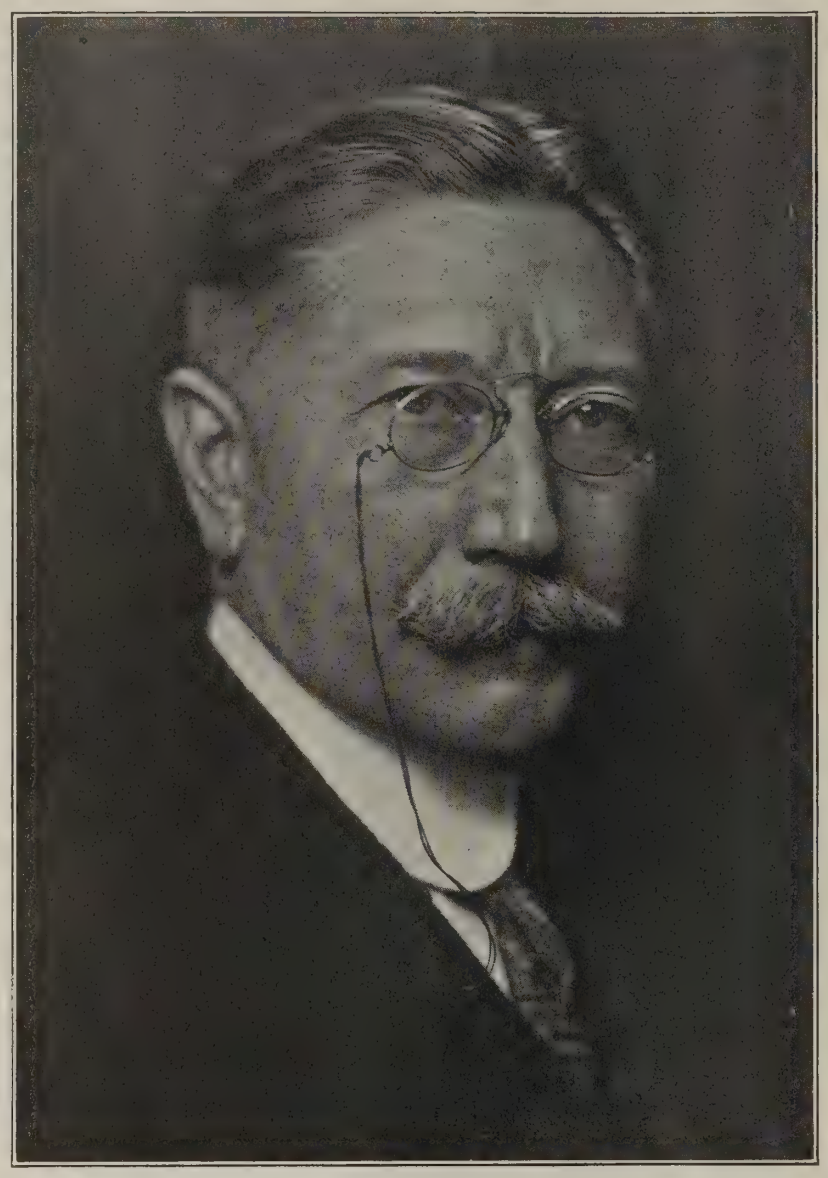
By H. E. Popham

It has been said very truly of the City of Nottingham that if she does not justify her proud title of "Queen of the Midlands" it is not for the lack of a lavish natural dowry to enable her to maintain that Sovereignty of which even the jealous rivalries of competing neighbors have been unable to dispossess her.

Physically and industrially Nottingham is situated in the heart of England, in the midst of the richest coalfields and iron ore deposits in the country. The natural wealth of this area, whose potentialities are almost incalculable, are now being exploited on an enormous scale.

Nottingham is the capital of one of the most important industrial counties of England, and is the leading city in a region with a population of three millions. The city is well served with railways, is on the main lines of two, and is one of the most important centres in the country of both road and water transport.

Nottingham has been a desirable place of human settlement since the earliest days of occupation of the British Isles by mankind, and for over a thousand years it has been a place of recognized importance in the development, political, industrial and commercial, of England. It stands today preeminent with great and rapidly growing textile, engineering, mining, leather, tobacco and chemical manufacturing trades, the names of many of her products being household words throughout the world, and also she has no rival in advantages of site and rich natural resources.



The enterprise and energy of Nottingham's captains of industry, whereby her progress is maintained and her prosperity enlarged, are adequately backed up and supplemented by the foresight and enlightenment of her municipal administration, which may more than challenge comparison with any city in the Kingdom.

As illustrating this phase of Nottingham's development, it may be mentioned that the great electric power station on the banks of the Trent, opened in 1925, at a cost of $4,000,000 is already being extended at a further cost of about $1,250,000; the width of the fine bridge across the Trent has been recently doubled, at a cost of $650,000, the Council is spending over $2,000,000 on canalizing the Trent, so as to make Nottingham approachable direct by craft of good size from the great seaport of Hull; thousands of new houses have been built or are in course of erection upon ideal sites for the accommodation of a huge and growing artisan population. Old slum areas and congested districts are being cleared out and rebuilt; the water supply is pure and abundant; the sanitation of the city has been thoroughly overhauled. Adequate recreative facilities are provided for all ages and tastes in beautiful and spacious parks and playing-fields, Nottingham being unusually well catered for in this respect.

At an outlay of $1,000,000 the city has lately acquired the fine Wollaton estate of some 750 acres, which has given Nottingham possession of a demesne larger than Hyde Park, London; an historical Elizabethan mansion of incomparable beauty, and an ideal housing site of immense extent. New arterial roads are being constantly constructed at a cost of millions of dollars for relief of traffic congestion in the centre of the city. Nottingham's wonderful boulevard-embankment by the Trent, the envy of all inland cities, is having a finishing touch put to it by the provision of a new riverside park, the main entrance to which will be forwarded by a magnificent memorial gateway commemorating the Nottingham men who fell in the Great War.

BRITAIN EMERGING

By PAUL E. DERRICK

Paul E. Derrick

THOSE who knew Britain before the War, during the War, and immediately after the War, will find no better means of expressing her present condition, nor of indicating her future, than by comparing the past eight years to the eight months succeeding the smashing up of an American town by a cyclone.

While the storm lasted there was no time to think of anything but the storm. As soon as it passed, everyone was fighting fire, nursing the disabled, providing food and shelter for those who had escaped death, and the burying of the dead. Then came the salvaging of the ruins, the clearing away of the débris, and the rehousing of the survivors.

As order began to come out of chaos, interest in the outside world—finance, markets, and all the old-time concerns of life began to re-assert themselves; the engrossment of the immediate began to give place to interest in the future. Life began to slow down to a state of introspection and calculated outlook.

Britain is steadily approaching the normal. To an astonishing degree she is rebuilding her national finance, industry, commerce, and her social structure. No other nation has accomplished so much. Her recovery from the War, when considered in relation to her gigantic task, her sacrifices and disorganization, has been relatively as complete, and astonishingly soon, as was the rebuilding of San Francisco after the earthquake, or of any Western American town demolished by cyclone.

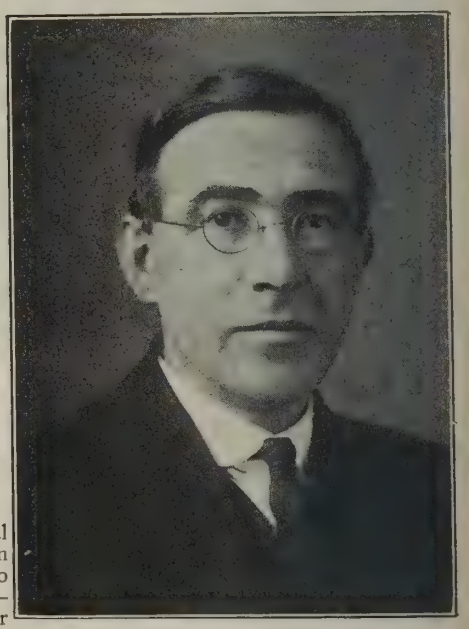
Britain still has much to do to wipe out her financial losses, caused by the war—greater, by far, than any other nation ever faced; much to do to heal her wounds—more battle-scarred than any other nation ever was; much to do to re-establish her industry and commerce—a bigger task than any other nation ever undertook.

Americans who measure the post-war enterprise of Britain by counting her unemployed, should realize that as many men are now in steady employment as before the War. Her vast army of unemployed is the measure of her increase in man-power since the War. Her unequalled war losses of men have been more than made up. Restriction of emigration overseas, and particularly the restrictions imposed by the United States, has resulted in a huge army of excess labor which her steadily expanding industry cannot, as yet, absorb.

In her slow and sure way, Britain is steadily emerging from the abyss into which the War plunged her. Her face is set futureward. Who, knowing the facts, can doubt her continued greatness as a nation? Who, with sufficient intelligence to clearly imagine the condition of the world with Britain "down and out," and, knowing what she stands for in the world's future, could complacently consider such a world catastrophe as her elimination from the small group of great powers?

That Britain is the keystone in the arch of European civilization should be patent to anyone acquainted with her historical record, and with present world-wide political conditions. Least of all should Americans lose heart in her future, nor should they envy her return to prosperity. America and Britain increasingly need each other. I plead for a just mutual Anglo-American appreciation, and closer political and social relation; for a cessation of ignorant, jingo judgment, and mischievous pin-prickings. Let us, rather, cultivate mutual understanding.

Only Britain and the United States, together, can "make the World safe for Democracy."



FALSE NOTIONS HERE REGARDING ENGLAND

Famous English Publisher Says We Woefully Misunderstand Economic Position—Hopes Convention Will Recruit Tourists

By Sir Ernest J. P. Benn

(Written for Editor & Publisher)

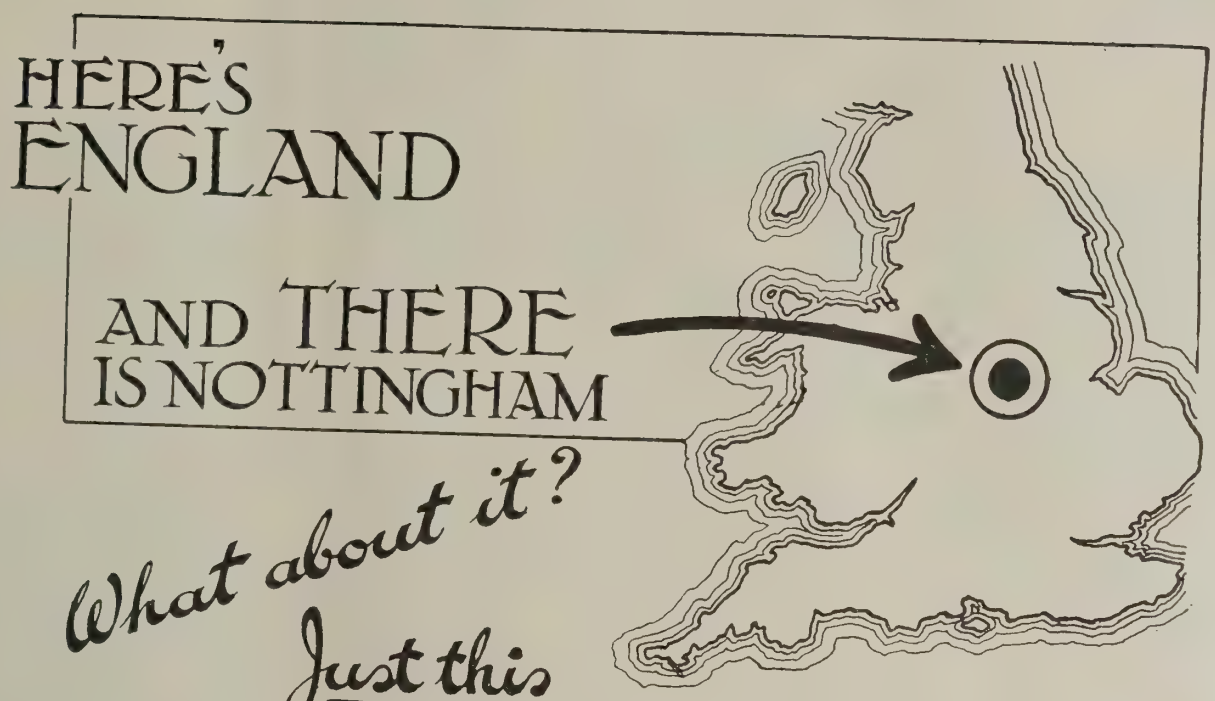
The British delegation to the A. A. C. of W. Convention at Philadelphia will, I hope, be able to do much to correct the poor impression so widely held in the United States of the position of England today. I was in America in the autumn of 1925, and was appalled at the general misconception of our condition. It is the Englishman's privilege to grumble and he has never been known to do anything else, but English grumbling has not mattered very much so long as England was enjoying perfect political and economic health and strength as in the days before the war.



Sir Ernest J. P. Benn

Since 1918, however, the fog that has enveloped the continental countries of Europe has tended in the American mind to spread over England as well, and doles and unemployment, strikes and heavy taxation, have all appeared by the time the news of them got to America to be dire calamities weighing upon this country and bringing us near bankruptcy.

Nothing could, of course, be further from the truth. England has its little troubles, but it is still immeasurably better off than any other country in the world, except perhaps America, in all the things that matter.

I hope that the Advertising Convention will do something to divert the stream of American tourists to England. The American invasion of Europe this year has for the most part missed England. For some reason that I cannot understand everybody is going to the Mediterranean, or getting off the steamer at Cherbourg and doing the Continent, but very few seem to include England in their program. If only Americans would come and look at us as we are, they would discover for themselves how much importance ought to be attached to the English Channel and how mistaken it is to regard the condition of Europe as any criterion of the condition of England.

THAT although the area of England is only fifty thousand square miles, as against the U. S. A.'s three millions, you will find the same differences in district habits and view-points when you come to sell in England as you encounter in the States.

And the moral is?

Try out your campaign before you are committed to a big expenditure.

Where?

In the Nottingham area . . . where North meets South, and East meets West, and there dissolve all those local idiosyncrasies that tend to deflect the advertising needle.

The Average Englishman is to be found only in the Midlands.

CHOOSE THE

Nottingham Guardian

For "CLASS" GOODS, and

Nottingham Evening Post

For POPULAR ARTICLES.

Nottingham, London, Derby, Lincoln, Grantham, Mansfield, Loughborough.

London Office: 59, Fleet Street, E. C. 4

BRITISH ADVERTISING TRENDS SINCE HOUSTON

(Continued from page 53)

consequence is that almost every manufacturer who advertises a product to the general public pays for waste circulation and—what is probably worse—does not know definitely where his advertising is strongest, and so cannot co-ordinate his sales effort as effectively as he should.

Knowledge of the circulation of the principal provincial papers is equally important, yet such information is available only in three or four cases.

A disappointment too is the small number of women who are entering advertising in the executive grades, or who are graduating to executive work from the routine ranks. Where between seventy per cent and eighty per cent of advertised products are to be bought by women it is surprising that more of the sex are not grasping the opportunity that awaits them in advertising. That is partly due to the fact that "careers for women" is an idea new to Britain, and partly because the Britisher's conservatism extends to a dislike of women in business on any kind of equality with himself. It is to be hoped that, for the good of advertising and the nation's business, a more liberal viewpoint will emerge before long.

The most heralded activities of the year have naturally been those of advertising organizations. Quite a number of new advertising clubs have sprung up in provincial centers, and the organizations concerned with advertising and its allied businesses have been incorporated in a new body known as the Advertising Association. The Association has done some good work, particularly in its appointment of a national vigilance committee, the function of which is to eliminate the dishonest and the exaggerated from advertising. Within the limits to which it has confined itself the committee has had some success, but its efforts so far have not gone beyond the suppression of people using the classified columns dishonestly. If, later, it works with equal success among the numerous powerful advertisers using large display spaces in questionable ways, it will have performed a very great service indeed. The committee has not, unfortunately, the unanimous support of those concerned with advertising, because it has worked with very great secrecy and has not acquainted the members of the advertising business sufficiently with its policies and methods.

Similarly, the Advertising Association is not quite whole-heartedly supported by the people whom it should represent and lead. Some of its methods have given rise to criticism. It has not, in the opinion of many, taken a sufficiently firm stand against many of the blatant malpractices that exist. And it has not announced any very constructive program. One rather serious error it appears to be making is in describing, far and wide and frequently, advertising as a "profession," which obviously it is not, is not likely to be for a very long time, and cannot be in any case while the creators of advertising and the people who sell them their tools—space, printing, blocks, etc.—are associated in one body. As well amalgamate the Bricklayers' Union with the Royal Institute of British Architects and call every member a professional man.

To sum up. There is a growing understanding that advertising is a part of marketing and that the work of the advertising practitioner, if he is to earn his pay, must aid his client to sell his goods. Technique is improving rapidly. Some of the dishonest users of advertising are being eliminated. On the other side of the account, the status of advertising and of its workers is practically stationary. Advertising is not believed in by the public or by the retailer. Malpractices, such as commission-cutting, still abound. There is as yet no real training ground for recruits. Women are not entering the work as fast as they are needed. Organized advertising is louder than it is effective.

But we strive and hope.

A Single Advertising Appropriation

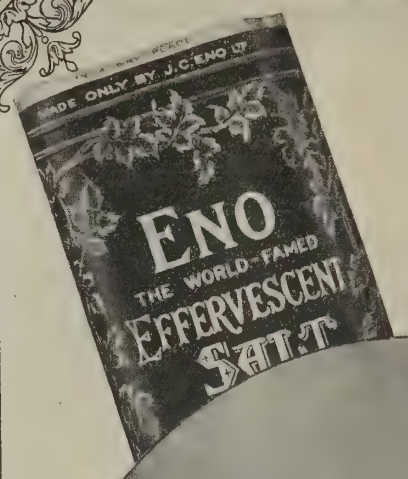
Will cover the two publications that reach those who control the national advertising of the United States and Great Britain.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
New York
and
ADVERTISING WORLD
London, Eng.

have entered into an agreement in respect to editorial and advertising representation in their respective fields and thereby afford a single source of information and service for those interested in international marketing and advertising.

Combination Advertising Rates for 12 Insertion Contract

Full Page	$280.00 per insertion
Half Page	145.00 per insertion
Quarter Page	82.50 per insertion



You are cordially invited to communicate with Editor & Publisher, Suite 1700 Times Building, New York, for further details of circulation, editorial policy and mechanical requirements of Advertising World. This office can be of great assistance to manufacturers who desire information in regard to marketing conditions of Great Britain. Publishers of leading American newspapers will also avail themselves of this opportunity to deliver their messages to the largest advertisers of Great Britain, many of whom are keenly interested in the markets of America.

Editor & Publisher
1700 Times Building
Broadway at 42d St.
New York, N. Y.

Telephones:
Bryan 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056
able Address: EDPUB, NEW YORK

Advertising World
14 King Street
Covent Garden, W. C. 2
London, England

Telephone: Gerrard 7615
Cable Address:
ECOPUBLISH, RAND, LONDON

On board ship, get ENO at the barber's. At home or abroad, at any druggist or chemist. $1.25 and 75c. a bottle.

ENO

TRADE MARK

THE WORLD FAMED
Effervescent Salt

THE conquest of fear and its unhappy consequences, on the trip across, can very largely be accomplished by close companionship with this sparkling, clean-tasting refreshener. A dash of ENO in a half glass of water, the first thing in the morning, will do much to keep you in spritely mood for thorough enjoyment of the voyage. It tends to dissipate the effects of over-indulgence in the joys of the menu, promotes recovery from fatigue, and helps you refrain from taking the "cradle of the deep" too seriously.

Sales Agents:
HAROLD F. RITCHIE & CO., Inc.,
171 Madison Avenue, New York
Toronto Sydney Wellington

Prepared only by
J. C. ENO, Ltd., London, England

The QUICKEST and MOST EFFECTIVE means of covering

PRODUCTIVE BRITISH MARKETS

Advertise in these influential KEY JOURNALS

The Group of SPECIALISED PUBLICATIONS of ILIFFE & SONS LTD.

LONDON, ENGLAND.

A specimen copy of any of these journals will be sent on request, together with advertising tariff and any further information required.

THE AUTOCAR.

The acknowledged leader of the automobile Press. Covers the whole field of motoring, and embraces all types of cars. Has a larger circulation than any other journal of its kind, and is the recognised best medium for reaching the British motoring public. Weekly.

THE MOTOR CYCLE.

The Motor Cyclist's Newspaper. Enjoys the distinction of being the most widely circulated specialised journal in the world. Its advertising pages are the market place of the motor-cycling community. Weekly.

MOTOR TRANSPORT.

A practical, well-illustrated journal for all interested in mechanical road transport. Deals with all types of industrial and utility vehicles, their maintenance, operation, and control. Read by business men connected with all branches of trade and commerce. Weekly.

THE AUTOMOBILE ENGINEER.

A technical journal devoted to the theory and practice of automobile and aircraft production, and the development of modern repetition engineering. Issued in the interests of designers, draughtsmen, manufacturers, managers, and heads of departments. Monthly.

MOTOR BODY BUILDING AND VEHICLE CONSTRUCTION

An old-established trade journal published in the interests of automobile manufacturers, motor body builders, garage proprietors, and motor repairers. The recognised authority on British coachwork. Monthly.

ICE AND COLD STORAGE.

The oldest and largest British journal devoted to the ice-making, cold storage, and refrigerating industries. Its readers include executives connected with cold stores, ice factories, hop stores, public abattoirs, breweries, etc. Monthly.

MODERN SCIENCE.

A magazine of progress, invention and discovery, dealing with current developments and achievements. An excellent medium for reaching a select and cultured public. Monthly.

THE WIRELESS WORLD.

The oldest-established radio journal—the most interesting, the most original, and the most reliable. It deals with all wireless matters, caters for all interests, and gives the earliest news of all radio developments. Weekly.

EXPERIMENTAL WIRELESS.

A magazine devoted to the interests of advanced amateur workers, experimenters, and wireless engineers. It contains technical and scientific information relating to every aspect of wireless experiment and research. Monthly.

THE AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHER.

A very fully illustrated journal catering for all classes of camera users. Recognised as the most productive medium for reaching the British photographic field. Weekly.

EACH A LEADER IN ITS OWN PARTICULAR FIELD

ILIFFE & SONS LTD., Dorset House, Tudor Street, London, E.C.4, England.

STORY OF PHILADELPHIA'S PIONEER JOURNALISM

(Continued from page 15)

To Cobbett Philadelphia was everything except a "City of Brotherly Love." So long as he lived there—with apologies to a popular song of yesterday—there was "a hot time in the old town." For it Cobbett coined the alliterative phrase, "corrupt and contented." For him it had no "Rural Rides." He and his cohorts were too busy with political feuds.

Cobbett may possibly be entitled to the last word. At least he is entitled to his hearing before final judgment. Just before he sailed for England on June 1, 1800 he issued a farewell address that was published in many American newspapers. In it Cobbett said:

As I have never spoken anything but truth to you, so I will never speak anything but truth of you; the heart of a Briton revolts at an emulation in baseness, and although you have as a nation treated me most ungratefully and unjustly, I scorn to repay you with ingratitude and injustice.

. . .

With this I depart for my native land, where neither the moth of democracy, nor the rust of federalism, doth corrupt, and where thieves do not with impunity break through and steal five thousand dollars at a time.

THE Freeman's Journal: OR THE North-American Intelligencer.

OPEN TO ALL PARTIES, BUT INFLUENCED BY NONE

PHILADELPHIA: Printed by FRANCIS BAILEY, at Market-Street, between Third and Fourth Streets.

BE IT REMEMBERED!

THAT on the 17th Day of October, 1781, Lieut. Gen. Charles Earl CORNWALLIS, with above 5000 British troops, furrendered themselves prisoners of war to his Excellency Gen. GEORGE WASHINGTON, commander in chief of the allied forces of France and America.

LAUS DEO!

GODFREY DE BOUILLON.

Regular issue of Freeman's Journal announcing the surrender of Cornwallis.

With the words just quoted the Cobbett chapter in the history of the Philadelphia press may well be brought to a close. Let Peter Porcupine of Philadelphia drawn in his quills. Still I must a press Post script of later years.

After the passing of two decades the poets, Halleck and Drake, were in partnership under the firm name of Croaker & Co.—spoken of as 'the wits of the day and the pride of the age." Their place of business was on the editorial page of the New York Evening Post. On Saturday, May 1, 1819 that page contained at the top of the first column a poem signed by Croaker & Co. and entitled "A loving epistle to Mr. William Cobbett of North Hempstead, Long Island." (He was on his second visit to America).

The opening stanza pays this tribute to "Porcupine," who twenty years earlier was such a disturbing element in Philadelphia journalism:

Pride, boast, and glory of each hemisphere!
Well known, and lord in both—great Cobbett hail!
Hero of Botley there and Hemstead here
Of Newgate, and a Pennsylvania jail.

The poem then goes on to tell Cobbett to banish Philadelphia pole-cats from his mind, greets him as "first of scribblers and of men," speaks of him as selling "Grammars and garden seeds in Fulton Street," and then offers to raise a purse to pay his debts. But it concludes:

For this we ask that you, for once, will show
Some gratitude, and, if you can, be civil.
Burn all your books, sell all your pigs, and go—
No matter where—to England, or the devil.

Strange as it may seem a somewhat rare pamphlet published in Philadelphia in 1796, "British Honor and Humanity; or the Wonders of American Patience," written in reply to William Cobbett, is the only contemporary work that sums up the newspaper situation in America about the close of the eighteenth century:

There are considerably above an hundred newspapers in America. In one half of these, their editors very seldom write a line. Numbers of them reside an hundred leagues or upwards from the Atlantic, and think or care but little about the politics of the Old World. Of the remainder, it will be hard to find ten newspapers on the continent which have a marked partiality either for France or against her. The far greater part of them copy such pieces as come in their way without much nicety of selection. The remainder, which professedly espouse a particular party, are, in point of numbers, divided with tolerable equality. The Boston Chronicle, The Argus of New York, and The Aurora of Philadelphia are ranged on the side of France. Yet even these newspapers, or at least the two latter, give abundant access to the friends of Britain. The letters of Camillus, in favour of Mr. Jay's treaty, were begun, and for some time continued in The Argus, till their immeasurable length had tired the patience both of the printer and his customers. Again, Mr. Bache has frequently inserted in his Aurora pieces very dissonant to his feelings, and some times the meanest ribaldry against himself. Three other daily prints follow the British standard. These are The Columbian Centinel of Boston, The Minerva of New-York, and The Gazette of the United States published in this city. The last of these three editors, and perhaps the remark suits the two former, is far from inflexible. Mr. Fenno had submitted to be the panegyrist of Mr. Cobbett, but since the publication of the letter already cited from The Porcupine to Mr. Bache, another has appeared in Mr. Fenno's paper, declaring that Mr. Cobbett is entirely indefensible.

Clarence S. Brigham, Librarian of The American Antiquarian Society at Worcester, Mass., has nearly completed his "Bibliography of American Newspapers, 1690-1820." He informs me that there were issued in Philadelphia more newspapers which had weekly and tri-weekly editions, in addition to their daily issue, than in any other city. Mr. Winship, who wrote the last report of the Council for the April meeting of that association, made a somewhat detailed analysis of Brigham's "Newspaper Bibliography." I want to quote one paragraph in that report for it lists in a numerical way newspapers published from 1690 to 1820 in Boston, New York, and Philadelphia:

A comparison of the figures for the three leading cities shows how securely New York had established her position as the metropolis before 1820, with 127 papers to her credit, as against 98 for Philadelphia and only 71 for Boston. But that there is a danger in drawing conclusions from such statistics as these, is suggested by an analysis of them, for 55 of the New York papers, 43½ percent, did not live more than a single year, as against 35 short-lived publications in Philadelphia, 35 percent, and 16 in Boston, 22½ percent. The chances for intellectual mortality in New York appear to have been twice as great as in Boston. On the other hand, New York had 44 papers which continued for more than five years, half of which stopped before reaching ten years. Philadelphia had 37 of more than five years, of which 22, only one less than New York, went beyond ten. Boston had 31 of more than five, and 18 of more than ten years.

During those years that Philadelphia was the capital of the nation, however, it was the journalistic metropolis.

Philadelphia gave American journalism its first daily newspaper when The Pennsylvania Packet and Daily Advertiser appeared in that city on September 21, 1784. To trace the origin of this paper, however, I shall have to go back to the little weekly which John Dunlap established on October 28, 1771 and called The Pennsylvania Packet; and the General Advertiser.

While the British occupied Philadelphia the paper was published at Lancaster, Pennsylvania. The step from a weekly to a daily was a gradual one, for the paper appeared at various times as a semi-weekly and as a tri-weekly. As one turns the file of this paper one frequently finds the name of the owner incorporated in the title. For example, when Zachariah Poulson, Jr. purchased it on September 30, 1800 he called it Poulson's American General Advertiser.

Left to right—Azariah H. Simmons, Arunah Shepardson Abell and William M. Swain, founders of Baltimore Sun and Philadelphia Public Ledger. (From photograph made about 1837.)

The reproduction of the first issue of this first American daily, which illustrates this article, shows the tremendous advance that has been made in advertising. Advertisements, originally confined to the last page, are now put on the first page. As a matter of fact, in this first issue both the first page and the last page were all advertisements. The third page was split fifty-fifty. The only page entirely devoted to text was the second. Indeed, the influence of advertising may be seen in the title. Not only in Philadelphia but in other cities the first daily paper usually had in its title the work Advertiser.

No mention of the press of Philadelphia would be complete without passing reference to that grand old man, Zachariah Poulson. When he sold his

ZACHARIAH POULSON
Grand old editor of American Daily Advertiser, last link to the days of Franklin.

American Daily Advertiser on December 18, 1839 to The North American this tribute to him appeared in The Saturday Evening Post:

No man probably in this country has ever enjoyed so undisturbed a connection with a newspaper as Mr. Poulson. Commencing at a time when competition for public favor was known, he has strictly pursued the even tenor of his way, without departing from the rules which he adopted in the outset of his course. While his younger brethren were struggling and striving with each other—adopting all means to secure patronage—enlarging their sheets, and employing new and extraordinary means to win success—he looked calmly on, and continued as he commenced, nothing doubting that his old and tried friends would adhere to him. Nor was he disappointed in this expectation, since up to the moment of his dissolution The Daily Advertiser has neither abated in usefulness, interest, or profit.

Poulson died July 31, 1844, "being the last link connecting the Philadelphia publishing fraternity with that of the days of Franklin." Like his father, his "countenance on which nature had shed its bounty was ever enhanced and lit up by the evidences of a happy train of mental associations." For proof of this assertion see the portrait of Poulson printed in connection with this article.

First place belongs to the press of Philadelphia for excellence of "New Year Verses." These broadsides were distributed by news carriers on the first of the year to their patrons who were expected to remember the news boys. The reason for this excellence may be found in the fact that Philip Freneau, set the standard and was for several years the poet laureate of the Philadelphia press.

The exact date when the first of these broadsides appeared has not been fixed. But by 1783 the practice of publishing had become so well established that Philip Freneau began "New Year Verses, Addressed to those Gentlemen who have been pleased to favour Francis Wrigley, News Carrier, with their Custom" as follows:

According to custom, once more I appear
With the verse you expect at the dawn of the year.

Two lines which open the broadside "addressed to the customers of The Freeman's Journal by the lad who carries it" and written by Freneau (also 1783) describe the mode of treatment:

Let those who will, in hackney'd rhyme
And common cant, take up your time.

The truth of the assertion that these

(Continued on page 60)

When advertising to the British Market it is vital to success to observe that Scotland is served entirely by its own daily newspapers, chief of which are:—

The Glasgow Herald

(ESTABLISHED 1783)

The premier newspaper and the largest and leading advertisement medium: occupies a position of unrivalled influence in the homes and business interests of Scotland. No other newspaper there carries so much advertising.

The Evening Times

Certified net sale 280,560 copies per day. This is far in excess of the combined sales of any two other Scottish evening newspapers. It is the home newspaper of the evening and offers exceptionally good advertising value.

The Bulletin & Scot's Pictorial is the daily picture paper which serves the whole of Scotland exclusively with the pictures and news which are of particular interest to the Scottish people. It is a much praised advertisement medium.

These newspapers are published in Glasgow, the second largest city in the British Isles, and circulate throughout the whole of Scotland. Their readers are ready buyers, quick to respond to advertising.

Advertisement rates and all particulars on application to the Advertisement Manager, 65 Buchanan Street, Glasgow, Scotland, or 112 Fleet Street, London, England.

STORY OF PHILADELPHIA'S PIONEER JOURNALISM

(Continued from page 58)

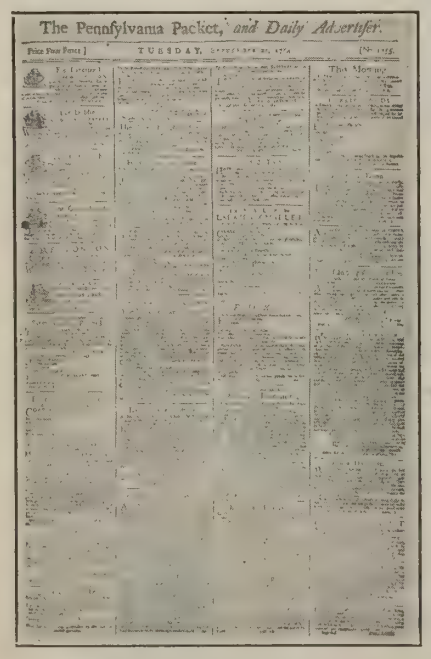
"carrier addresses" were in hackneyed rhyme my own modest collection proves.

Freneau must have had something of a monopoly for a time at least on the production of these broadsides, for he prepared them for The Pennsylvania Evening Post, (established by Benjamin Towne, January 24, 1775), The Pennsylvania Gazette, as well as for The Freeman's Journal. He had some outside trade for in 1784 he prepared "a newsman's address" for The Columbian Herald, Charleston, S. C. The best of these "New Year's Verses" from Freneaus' pen may be found in a broadside prepared for The Freeman's Journal. This poem began:



Blest be the man who early prov'd
And first contriv'd to make it clear
That TIME upon a dial mov'd.

Another contribution made to American journalism by Philadelphia was the penny paper. It was called The Cent and was established in 1830 by Dr. Christopher Columbus Conwell. For fifteen years I have been searching for one of these press coins from the Philadelphia mint, but without success. That fact explains the briefness in the mention.

The first real penny paper in Philadelphia, the Public Ledger, was established in 1836 by three practical printers—Arunah S. Abell, Azariah H. Simmons, and William M. Swain. All had worked for Benjamin Day on the New York Sun, the success of which doubtless suggested the Philadelphia enterprise. On February 20, 1836, these three men signed papers which provided for the establishment of the Public Ledger, though the first issue did not appear until March 25, 1836. The purpose to establish such a paper had leaked out and another penny paper, the Daily Transcript, preceded it by a few days. The latter paper, however, soon became one of the numerous newspaper factors in the consolidations which today make up the Public Ledger. The three printers already mentioned later went to Baltimore where they established the Sun on May 17, 1837—a paper which fell exclusively into the hands of Mr. Abell in 1864.

How the Public Ledger in 1864 became the property of George W. Childs, who was editor and proprietor from that date until 1894: how it later became the property of Adolph S. Ochs, the present publisher of The New York Times: how it was sold by Mr. Ochs to Cyrus H. K. Curtis—to tell that story would take too much space and is not necessary, for these chapters have already been well written.

For the same reason I am purposely omitting all mention of present day papers. Their history has been well covered in separate chapters. These will be found in the anniversary issues that have been issued from time to time and which are preserved in many libraries.

The Pennsylvania Packet, and Daily Advertiser.

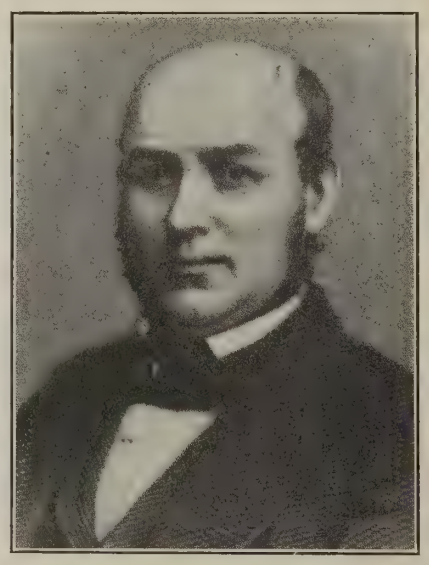
TUESDAY.

Advertising first page of Pennsylvania Packet & Daily advertiser, published in 1874, being one column spaces announcing ship sailings, merchandise offerings, legal notices and rewards for recovery of lost articles.

FUTURE PROSPERITY LIES IN WORLD PEACE

Message to the Convention from the Director of London Daily Chronicle



To Editor and Publisher:

I am happy to wish every success to the Advertising Convention at Philadelphia in June.

The frank discussions made possible by such a convention must solve many of the difficulties that face us be they of publicity, trade, policy or peace.

In the prosperity of the English speaking peoples lies the future peace of the world and while the prosperity of your country is patent to all, the seeds of commercial happiness and security are being shown in England today and a spirit of optimism pervades that is leading us to triumph over every difficulty.

GEO. W. CHILDS

Celebrated Philadelphia editor and publisher, once proprietor of Philadelphia Public Ledger.

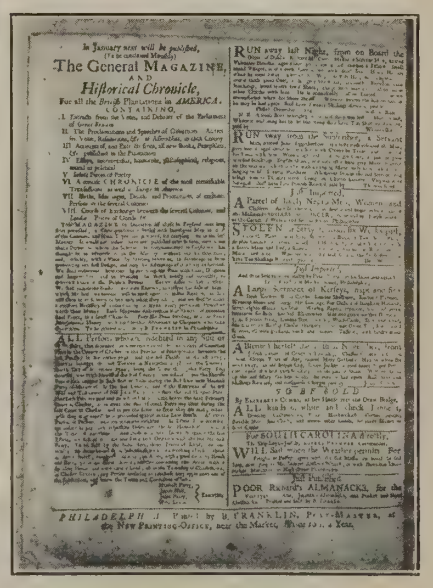
I have mentioned specifically The Philadelphia Public Ledger because when it united to itself the Philadelphia North American it achieved in a way a direct connection that dates back to the first daily newspaper in America and, incidentally, still farther back to the old Pennsylvania Packet to which Hopkinson and Freneau contributed.

Space may be stolen to mention the most popular contribution which Hopkinson made to the Pennsylvania Packet. I refer to his ballad, "The Battle of the Kegs," which appeared in the issue of March 4, 1778. This ballad, later reprinted as a broadside, one of which is still preserved in the American Antiquarian Society, told the story about some American amateur torpedoes invented by David Bushnell. These amateur torpedoes, encased in kegs, were sent down the Delaware where they at least annoyed the British soldiers, even if they did not blow up British ships.

The opening stanzas of the ballad, as printed in The Pennsylvania Packet were:

Gallants attend, and hear a friend,
Trill forth harmonious ditty;
Strange things, I'll tell, which late befell
In Philadelphia city.

'Twas early day, as poets say,
Just when the sun was rising,
A soldier stood, on log of wood,
And saw a sight surprising.



As in a maze, he stood to gaze,
The truth can't be deny'd, sir,
He spy'd a score—of kegs, or more,
Come floating down the tide, sir.

A sailor too, in jerkin blue,
The strange appearance viewing,
First damn'd his eyes, in great surprise,
Then said some mischief's brewing.

These kegs now hold the rebels bold,
Pack'd up like pickled herring:
And they're come down t' attack the town,
In this new way of ferrying.

I opened with a remark about Francis Hopkinson who was the newspaper wit of his day. I have done scant justice to his serious contributions in the interest of American independence. But in mentioning his most popular contribution to the press, "The Battle of the Kegs," I find a convenient place to write "Thirty" for this little chat.

Author's note—Justice demands that acknowledgement be made to Clarence S. Brigham, Librarian of the American Antiquarian Society at Worcester; to Victor Hugo Paltsits, Keeper of Manuscripts of the New York Public Library; to John B. Elliott; and to L. N. Nichols, also of the New York Public Library; for data used in preparing this article and the one on Philadelphia Magazines.—J. M. L.

In January next will be published,
The General MAGAZINE,
AND
Historical Chronicle,
For all the British Plantations in AMERICA.
CONTAINING,

RUN away from the Subscriber, a Servant

A Parcel of lately imported Negroes, Women and

STOLEN

A Large Settlement of Kittys, Pay and Fee

ALL Persons who have subscribed to any Copy of

A Planter's Servant

WILL Sail when the Weather permits. For POOR RICHARD'S ALMANACKS, for the PHILADELPH

Advertising in Franklin's General Magazine, showing paid notices of slave sales, rewards for runaway slaves and general mercantile announcements.

ASSOCIATES OF POOR RICHARD'S CLUB

Famous Organization Elects 500 Non-Advertising Members, Breaking Rule for First Time in 10 Years—Noted Names on List

Poor Richard Club has elected 500 associate members as part of its drive to pay for the A. A. C. W. convention to be held in Philadelphia next week. It is the first time the club's rule prohibiting non-advertising men members has been broken since 1916, when the last advertising convention was held in its city.

Noted Philadelphians are on the list this year. Among them are J. C. Strawbridge, Strawbridge & Clothier; Frank M. Hardt, vice-president of the Philadelphia Trust Company; Charles Edwin Fox, District Attorney; P. H. Gadsen, president, Chamber of Commerce; Lessing J. Rosenwald, vice-president of Sears Roebuck; Henry G. Prengle, president, Philadelphia Trust Company; Agnew T. Dice, president, Philadelphia & Reading Railway; Ex-Mayor J. Hampton Moore; Walter C. Redding, president, Philadelphia Real Estate Board; William S. Vare, Senator elect; Robert J. Brunbred, president, Western Saving Fund Society; Ex-Mayor John Weaver; and E. J. Passmore, president, Bank of North America.

Coast Veteran Dies

Charles Lovelace, well known San Francisco newspaper man died June 9, in hospital shortly after being struck by an automobile. He had worked on most of the big papers on the Pacific Coast. Lovelace, who was on the Los Angeles Times at the time of the explosion several years ago clung to a window sill high above the street, but finally lost his hold and dropped to the sidewalk. He was picked up for dead and taken to the morgue, where a spark of life was discovered. He was confined to a hospital for many months but recovered.

Illinois Daily Host to Children

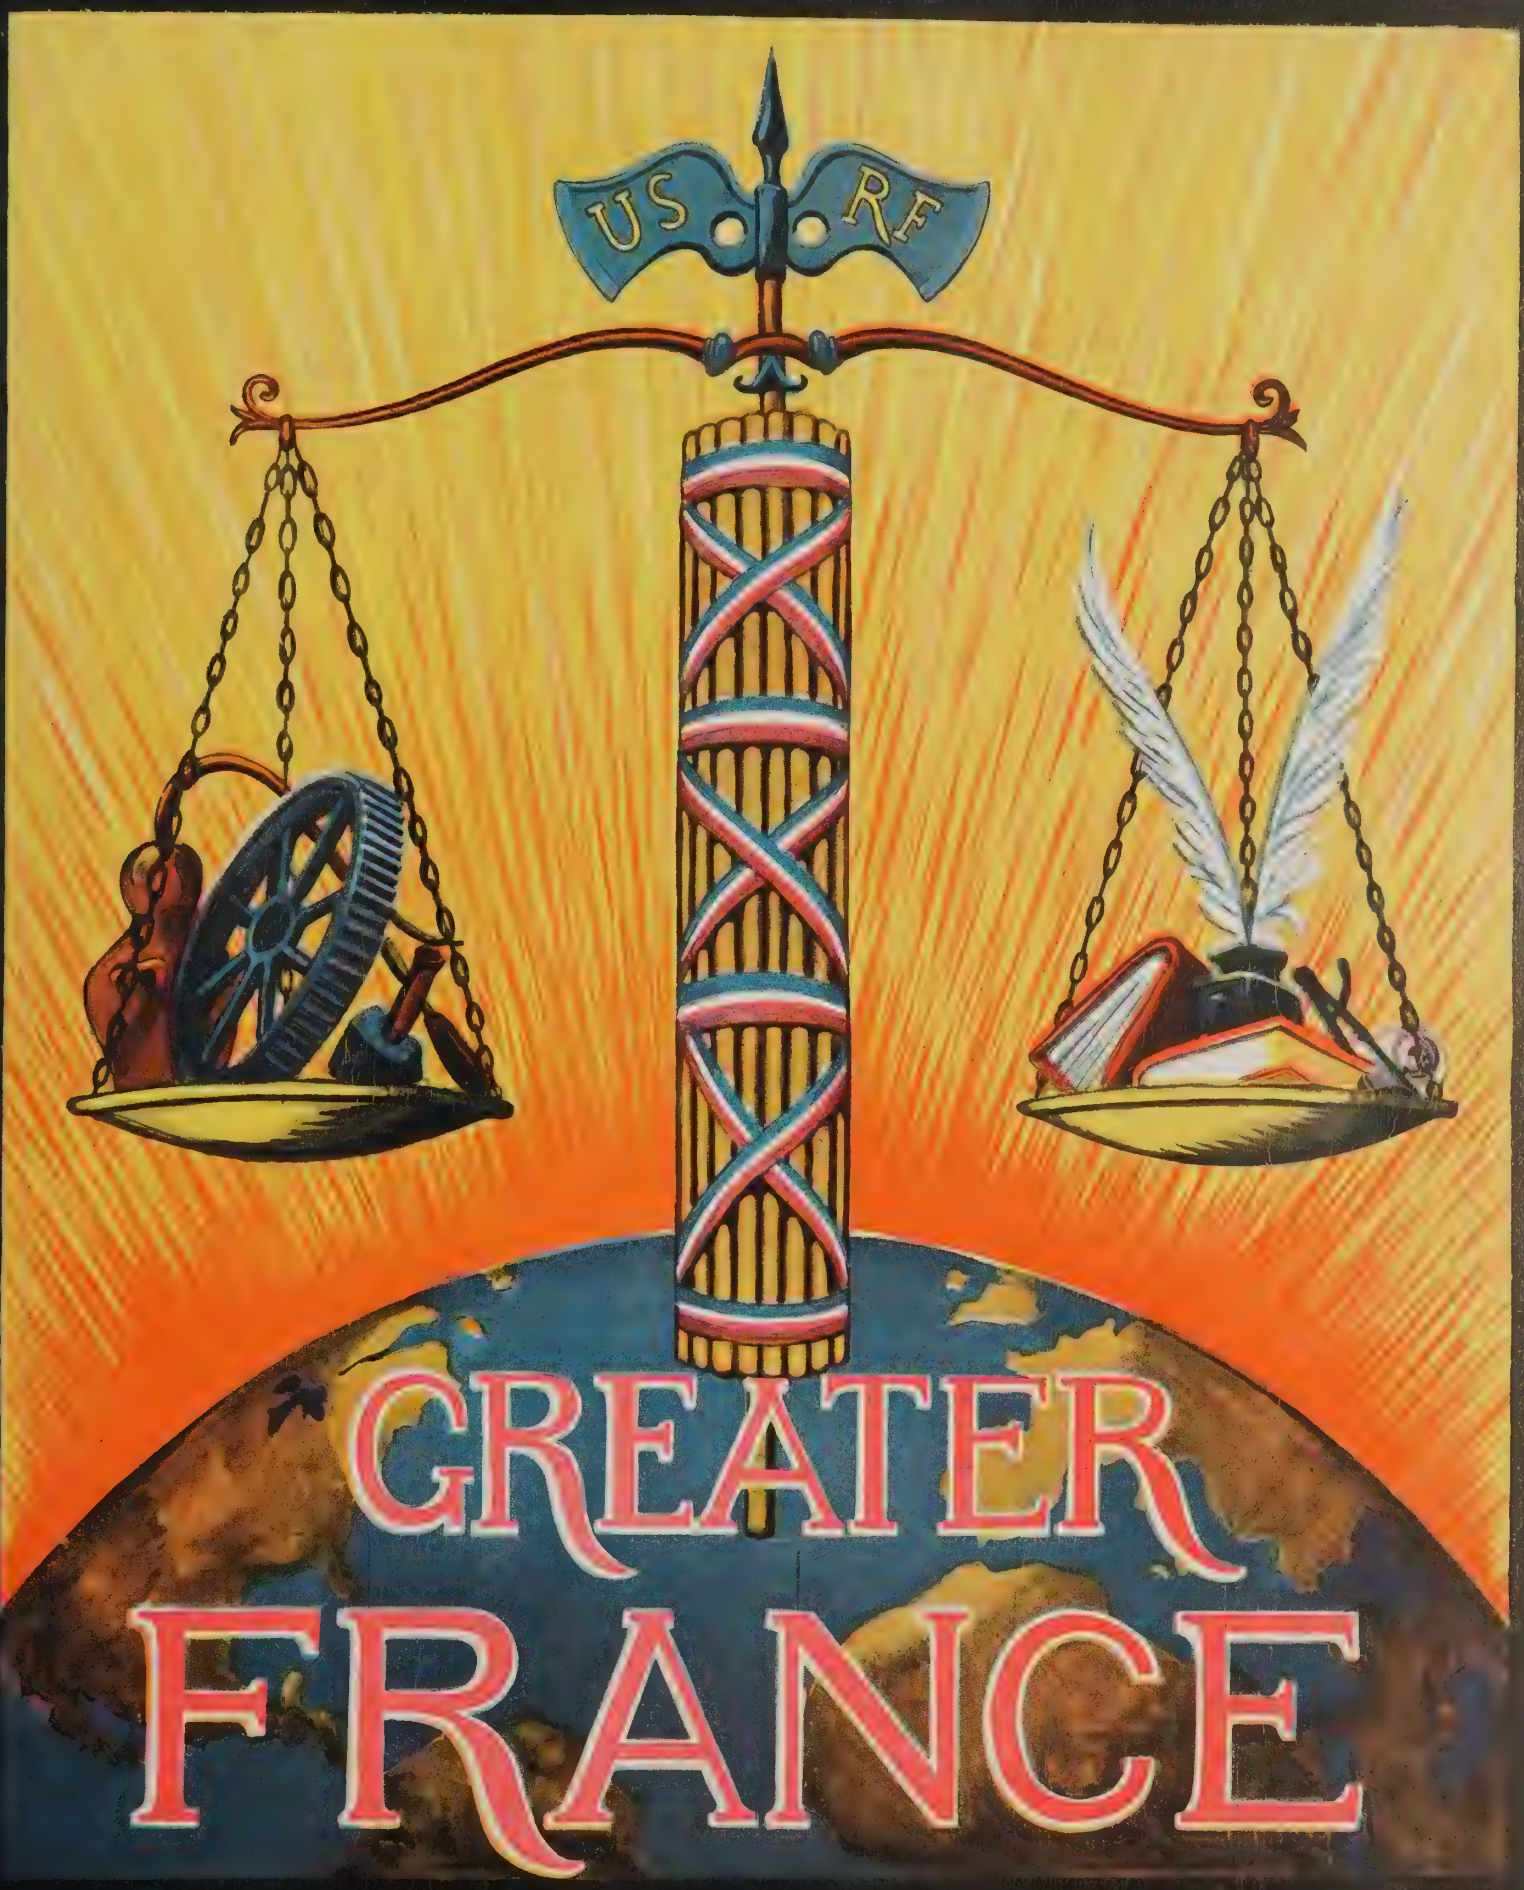
The first get-together of the Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph's Junior Club, with a membership through central Illinois, was held with 3,000 celebrants at the Irwin theater, June 12. A special program of child pictures was given.

Iowa Dailies Protest Freight Rates

A hearing was held in Des Moines, Ia., last week by Examiner Kerwin of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the freight transportation rates for newsprint from northern points to Des Moines. E. G. Wylie, freight commissioner of the Greater Des Moines Committee obtained a continuance until the current week. Mr. Wylie pointed out, in emphasizing the differential in the rates, that International Falls, Minn., has a rate of 24½ cents a 100 pounds on the haul to Cedar Rapids, a distance of 573 miles, on newsprint paper and a higher rate on other papers. From Fort Francis, Can., and International Falls to Des Moines, about 600 miles, the rate is 29 cents, while Moberly, Mo., 192 miles south of Des Moines and St. Louis, 340 miles beyond Des Moines, have a rate only half a cent greater than the Des Moines tariff.

Two Special Issues in 3 Days

The Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News this week attained a new local record, publishing two special editions in three days. The first, containing 32 pages, commemorated the formal opening of the new home. While hundreds of visitors thronged the plant, the staff was finishing a 46-page Trade Extension special which announced a double-merchandising day sponsored by the merchants of the community.



Pantagraph Leases Business Site

The Bloomington (Ill.) Daily Pantagraph has taken a 99-year lease on the northwest corner of Washington and East streets, exercising an option it has held for several months.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publisher's and Advertiser's Journal in America 1926

NEW YORK, JUNE 19, 1926

Cordial Greetings from the French Press

Objects of the "Sister Nations" are Understanding, Increased Commercial Exchange, Improved Advertising Methods—Tribute to the Sovereign Power of the Press

By

Henry Simond

President of the National Federation of the French Press
Director of L'Echo de Paris

IT gives me great pleasure to present the most cordial and affectionate greetings of the National Federation of the French press, whose president I have the honor to be, to the press and the Advertising Clubs of the United States.

How often, in speaking of our two countries, have we all employed that pleasant and friendly phrase, "sister nation." That expression to which France clings with so much sincerity, and which was so magnificently exemplified on the fields of battle must not be allowed to remain a mere literary phrase. This is not the time for theories. The feeling implied in the expression, "sister nations," made itself manifest as a tangible reality when the Advertising Clubs two years ago did us the honor of coming to France. That visit has been a charming memory to us, and it is therefore with the greatest pleasure that we pay this return visit to Philadelphia.

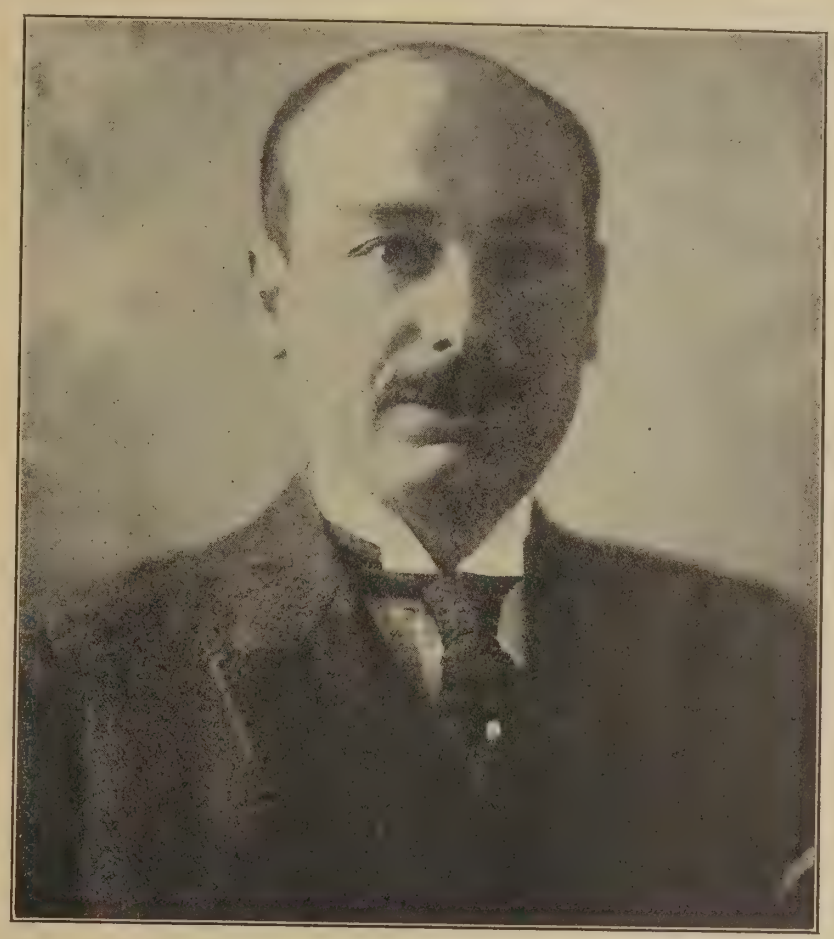
Whether on this side of the Atlantic or the other, the Press is a queen, an attentive sovereign, without conceit, vigilant, thoughtful of the interests of all, but always a sovereign. All sovereigns are to a degree parents; it is more than a conventional visit of politeness which the French press and the Advertising Clubs come to make. It is a visit of affection, of confidence, with some of the characteristics of a family reunion.

However, this is not all. Our desire in France—and we are convinced that we will find the same thought in the United States—is to see our relations more and more closely knit between the two countries in every particular. But if it is beside the mark to emphasize the efforts in this regard which have been made by both American and French newspapers, the benefits which may accrue through this work of publicity, it is nevertheless necessary to point out.

The reason for the existence of advertising is, in effect, to create the desire to buy. In the development of one country, as in another, its object is to make known the articles and products of factories and workshops, to increase appreciation, to stir up contacts, in brief, to encourage a continually increasing commercial development and to constantly reenforce commercial interchange. Thus we are better able to form judgments and estimations. Because of the geographical distance between France and America, our products may serve as instruments of propaganda, may help the people of the two countries to know each other better. Advertising is the essential factor of this exchange.

I must beg you to excuse me if I seem to present self-evident ideas—which do not offer a field for practical discussion, but if these truths are apparent, this is certainly an opportunity where they may well be repeated. And that repetition may serve to give them renewed vitality by recalling them to our minds. The old story of the tortoise and the hare recalls the point. It is always necessary to hammer the nail, and to give these ideas, themselves, the wide advertising which they deserve. In this magazine it would be superfluous to praise their advantages.

Whoever thinks and reasons admits the general interest aroused by French publicity in America and American publicity in France. Even from the individual viewpoint, and I care not how strictly personal the attitude taken, it is the same. The benefits are apparent, to every branch of the profession, that must result from the united efforts of the American Advertising Clubs and the large French agencies. From all viewpoints, the intensification of advertising, in each country, offers the most valuable lessons, helping each nation to understand the mentality of the clientele which it wishes to reach.



Without doubt we have in France methods and ideas which surprise Americans as you at times disconcert us. We act childishly, and say that certain things are good and others bad. The methods of the two countries have their qualities dictated by the individualities of race and of the people to which they are addressed. They have their differences and their peculiarities which it is important to study and compare in order that we may understand each other.

It is for this which we strive: understanding between men, increased commercial exchange, improvement of the methods of advertising, in fact, the same purposes which brought you to France and which in turn are bringing us to you. It is a great and important work which, if we are ardent and sincere and unsparing of our efforts, will bring forth beautiful and enduring rewards for your country as for ours.

TRUTH IDEA WINS EUROPE'S ADVERTISERS

Famous French Editor and Senator Tells of History and Progress of Advertising in France—American Methods Sane and Simple—Looks to a Greater Future

By SENATOR PAUL DUPUY
Owner of Le Petit Parisien and Excelsior

Senator Paul Dupuy

WE find today that advertising and the press are so closely connected that it is difficult to think of them separately.

The press existed for many years without advertising, also during that period of time the latter was carried on independently of the former, and it was ignorance regarding the intimate relationship that should have linked together these two forms of furnishing information, that permitted such a state of affairs to continue.

Daily, it is becoming more evident that the press and advertising have united their interests, and are now aspiring to the same ideal—that of spreading the truth.

The reason why they chose different roads during the first years of their development, was due to short-sightedness that led them to follow selfish personal interests, instead of universal interests, thus causing their paths to diverge.

The first newspapers were pamphlets using the newly invented printing press for particular ends. In other words, one employed the press as a means to an end, instead of rendering service to the public through the press. In the field of advertising, conditions were similar. Products of little value were highly praised, as it was thought that in this way buyers would be attracted, and the result of large sales would be the same when articles had found a market through their real worth.

Finaly, when the time arrived when the purveyors of these two methods of disseminating information began to think of uniting, one to spread the news destined to influence its readers, the other to extol products lacking genuine value, the two partners realized that they were ashamed of one another.

When faced by this problem, the editor of a newspaper would say to himself, "if my readers after using the articles recommended by my journal, find that what has been printed regarding them is not correct, not even sincere, will they not be tempted to distrust news of every sort published by me?"

It then happened that after months of discomfort one welcomed with enthusiasm and set up as a principle, the reason formulated by Emile de Girardin, a French political journalist born in 1806. Girardin said to his readers, "We cannot in any way control the advertisements that appear in our columns, whereas to uphold our honor and dignity we cannot permit ourselves to give false news in our paper. Consequently it is necessary to separate that which we know from that of which we are ignorant. Otherwise we would be responsible for that of which we are not responsible."

And as the advertisements were found on the last page (fourth page) of his journal, Girardin set up the following statement:

"The fourth page of advertising is a wall upon which the advertisers put what they please."

Many newspapers in Europe still hold to this formula as above reproach and their highest guarantee. It is in fact a guarantee, but one of want and poverty for those by whom it is employed.

Once again it is the United States of America which has, through their development along this line, traced a path for the whole journalistic world. Though remaining faithful to the theory of the wall they decided to clean their walls throughly. That is to say, they refused to sanction the right of their advertisers to publish anything of a shocking or disagreeable nature.

The value of this discipline was proved by the beneficial results that followed, for in spite of the fiction of the wall, editors were forced to see that, in the minds of their readers, the spirit of the newspapers, and that of the advertisements accepted by them, was one and the same, and any failure on their part to satisfy their subscribers would prove injurious to the interests of all advertisements presented. Those which did not appear to inspire confidence were eliminated, the real value of the products advertised was looked into, they were scrupulously analyzed and finally, the advertising department came under the complete control of the editors. This is an honor to the American press and the real source of its extraordinary prosperity. Some newspapers have made this control so severe that it is almost a certified guarantee for any advertiser or advertisement to be accepted by them.

France and Europe in general are slow in comprehending that the interests of the journal and those of the readers are identical. Little more is asked of an advertiser than that he take a great deal of space and pay for it regularly, slight attention being paid to what will appear in the space.

The coming to France of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and their faith in the methods used today in the United States, proved a complete revelation to the greater part of the members of the press and the advertisers. One is especially impressed by the spirit of close collaboration existing between the business firms inserting advertisements and the newspapers.

The service to be rendered and the interests of the public are the only questions to be considered. In Europe unfortunately other factors than these claim attention, and it is the interests of the middleman that still dominate the field of advertising. These middlemen are not as in the United States, possessors of technical knowledge regarding advertising, men who understand the market and are capable of giving sound advice to their customers who confide to them their propaganda.

But through business connections, or selfish motives that frequently arrive at nothing, they monopolize the advertising concessions and distribute according to personal interests. Under these conditions the advertisements are disseminated without intelligence.

The American methods are sane and simple. The marvellous results brought about by their use is evidence of the solid foundation on which they are based, and it is astonishing that Europe has not followed these ideas more faithfully.

Several pioneers, however, have come to the front and are indicating the road to take. The big newspapers and the important advertising agencies are beginning to understand that confidence is the essential element to be considered in the development of the advertising industry.

The convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World in Philadelphia will be visited by a French Delegation, and its work will be followed with the greatest interest in Paris and other parts of France.

Without doubt, before many years have passed, Paris, that from numberless points of view is recognized as one of the most important centers of the world, will in turn be considered as an essential factor in a greater development of advertising. And once again the two great Republics will be associated in a work of social progress.

SENATOR DUPUY'S CAREER

THE United States probably has no better friend on the European Continent than Senator Paul Dupuy, manager of the Petit Parisien. Ever since the time when as a mere youngster, fresh from college, M. Dupuy went to America to complete his education, to his latest trip with the Caillaux Debt Mission in September of last year, he has ever been in complete sympathy with the ideals and struggles of our country, and furthermore he has ever had a thorough understanding of our temperament, our accomplishments and our ambitions.

Paul Dupuy was born in Paris in 1878. Until he became of age his education followed the normal course of the son of an upper class Frenchman and at 22, he became actively associated with his father in the management of the Petit Parisien.

For two years he worked in the newspaper plant, and during that time secured a fundamental grasp of the problems of newspaper production, and at the end of these two years, which may be called his apprenticeship in newspaper work, Senator Dupuy's father decided to send him to America.

This visit included a survey of the entire country and resulted directly in young Dupuy's purchasing, largely upon his own initiative, the first complete printing plant ever bought by a European newspaper in the United States. His two years in the plant of the Petit Parisien had shown him conclusively that if the paper was to fulfill its destiny as one of the great dailies of the world it must be equipped to turn out daily editions whose circulation would run into the millions.

Once this plant was set up and in operation, two years later, Mr. Dupuy made another visit to America to make another purchase that has been far-reaching in its influence upon French journalism in general and upon the destinies of the Petit Parisien in particular. He had seen, immediately the new printing plant was in operation, that his newspaper must be absolutely independent of the fluctuating newsprint supply, and that the only practical way of accomplishing this was to produce its own paper. The result was the purchase of a paper mill plant, which in time was established and set in operation at Nanterre, near Paris, equipped with the widest and fastest machines built at that time in the United States.

The effect upon European procedure and manufacture was immediate. Such methods of production as the newspaper plant entailed upset the ordinary methods to such an extent that Mr. Dupuy was forced to import an American manager for his plant together with a foreman and a force of forty workmen. The Nanterre plant today produces more than 100 tons of paper daily.

From that day on, after Mr. Dupuy took charge of the management of the Petit Parisien, he advanced rapidly to his position as one of the most prominent newspaper publishers in Europe and to a place of greatest importance in the political life of his country.

He was elected to the French Chamber of Deputies in 1910 and after serving in this capacity for ten years, succeeded to the seat of his father in the Senate in 1920.

Shortly after the World War, Senator Dupuy made a second voyage of study through the United States, and this time took with him a large portion of the staff of his various publications.

To them he demonstrated both the advantages and the defects of the social structure in America, studied newspaper production at the largest American plants, and brought his men back to France with something more of the understanding and feeling for America and things American as he himself has always had.

Last Fall Senator Dupuy came to Washington as a member of the French Debt Funding Mission which was headed by M. Caillaux, and though in the States only a few weeks, succeeded in cementing the firm friendships he had made years before and in creating others.

SOUNDS KEYNOTE OF FRANCO-AMERICAN UNITY

Urges Sister Republics to Program of Closer Fraternal and Business Association—French Press and Advertising Agencies Prosperous Industry—Cordial Greetings

By Dr. MARCEL KNECHT

Official Delegate of the French Press and Advertising Organizations, General Secretary of "Le Matin"

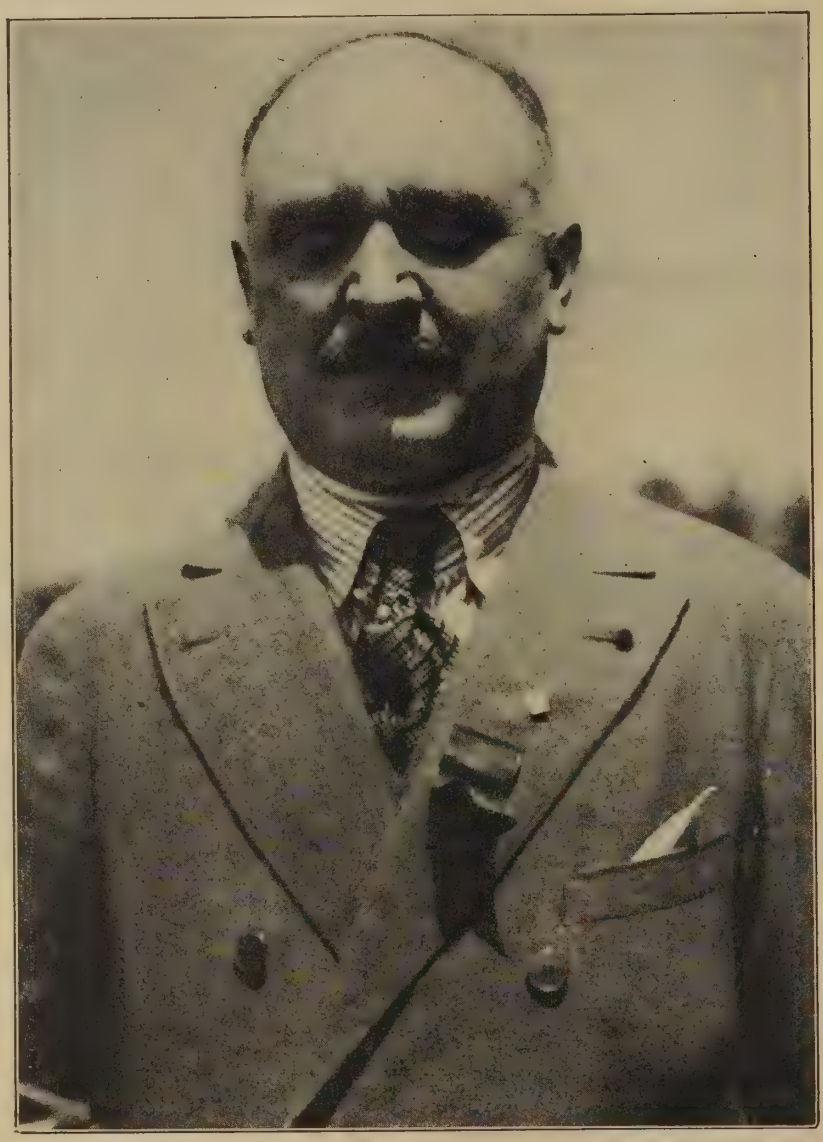
FROM December, 1914, until January, 1922, I had the great privilege of directing the French Bureau of Information in the United States, and from 1919 to 1921 of presiding over the Foreign Press Correspondents Association of America.

It was a joy for me to be in most friendly touch with all the newspapers, reviews and magazines of America, and also to have the opportunity of speaking in many States and cities where I understood the greatness, the good will, and the incomparable future of the American people.

A Frenchman, who has been able to study American public opinion during the great War and to feel, like the beating of a human pulse, the generous efforts of the United States toward liberty and justice, will always keep in his heart a very affectionate spot for the noble land of Washington, of Lincoln and of the soldiers of Chateau-Thierry, of Flirey and of Thiaucourt.

Very few Frenchmen thoroughly understand America and very few Americans understand France. The two Republics, bound by sacred, historic ties, strongly attracted toward each other through the same idealism, the same enthusiasms, the same love of modern progress, are unhappily separated by the difference of language and also by distance.

And still, there is so much likeness between the French and the American farmers, between the little shopkeepers of an American and of a French provincial city, between scientists of the Rockefeller Institute and scientists of the University of Paris! On both sides, the same thirst for more intellectual knowledge, for more efficient organization, for the real family life!



After 1918, France had to go back to work, and especially to strive very hard against gigantic difficulties. We all know that official initiatives are not always inspired by sentiment, nor permanently based on common sense and reciprocal interest. We younger generations of France, we believe, like the American people, in the supreme power of private initiative, of fraternal association between States, between cities, between similar professional, religious, commercial, groups and bodies. Only independent forces of public opinion can improve relations between France and America.

The most powerful and modern dynamic elements are, we may affirm it without mistake, on one side commerce and industry, on the other side the most faithful and devoted instrument of public opinion, the press, and its immediate collaborators: the advertising clubs and agencies.

The supremacy of politics over these forces singularly weakens nations, and sometimes brings them to ruin.

Two years ago, in 1924, the French press and advertising agencies had the great privilege of welcoming and entertaining, on behalf of the French people, in Paris, a large and splendid delegation of the Advertising men of the United States, of Canada, and of the world. The whole of the French press and of its devoted friends, the advertising agencies, fraternally united their resources and their national influence to prove to the 800 American Advertising men their warm desire of establishing lasting relations.

Since 1924, the French newspapers, Paris and provincial dailies, weekly, illustrated reviews, etc., had to struggle hard for their own interest, for the very life of their fellow-countrymen. Few countries in the world have a press more patriotic, energetic, and national in its far-reaching influence than ours. Every Paris daily, either large circulation information newspapers or political newspapers, every provincial daily or weekly, is read all over our territory, and mould public opinion instead of being led by it.

Dr. Marcel Knecht

Photographed especially for Editor & Publisher on his arrival at New York.

Every Frenchman and every Frenchwoman has received a perfect instruction, even in our primary schools, and make up one of the most intellectual nations of the World. The daily and thorough reading of a newspaper, especially of our dailies of 6 and 8 pages, means a great deal to the citizen of France.

In France, where administrative and geographical centralization has given an artificial and somewhat tyrannical suprem acy to the executive Government and to the legislative parliament, private initiatives have been discouraged, put aside sometimes, though seldom crushed. Happily for the public opinion and for the independent democracy, the press has emerged leading the way towards truth, progress, and solidarity.

Whenever Governments are slow, narrow-minded, selfish or unimaginative, a French newspaper, sometimes Parisian, sometimes provincial, develops a bold offensive, and always enthusiastically backed by public opinion, and finally supported by the Government and Parliament itself, conceives and realizes what had been declared impossible by the official world.

The French press, still more powerful, more strongly equipped, more fraternally united under the intelligent presidency of a great French newspaper owner and journalist, Mr. Henry Simond, had received with deep pleasure the official invitation of the Advertising Clubs of America and of their eminent President, my dear friend C. K. Woodbridge. In spite of several actual difficulties, the largest and the smallest newspapers, in friendly cooperation with our national Havas Agency and its great leader, Léon Rénier, have voted to send a delegation with full powers to Philadelphia and other leading American cities, and have expressed their absolute desire of establishing on that occasion, not only sentimental but especially practical business relations which will never relax.

Never, in the history of France, all the Paris papers and all the provincial papers united, have taken such a national collective resolution. The most hopeful feature of this vote is that the newspapers' owners and directors assembled for that purpose have voted to act as private forces, acting independently, without any help or support of any kind from their Government.

Our delegation simply represents the millions of copies of our newspapers, and furthermore our hundreds of thousands and our millions of readers and of friends. We bring the affectionate greetings of the whole French public opinion to the American advertisers, to the American press, to the American industries, and to the American public.

It is not propaganda, for France has always opposed propaganda, which is the caricature of loyal and cordial relations between peoples. We come here, neither to criticize, nor to beg humbly any support, that kind of support given by a strong man to a weaker man; we come here on behalf of the strongest, most prosperous and most united industry of France, the press and advertising agencies.

Though we pay for our pulp a heavy price, we are sound financially; we employ thousands of intellectual, technical and commercial collaborators, and our editorials and foreign news have not only far-reaching consequences in France, but all over Europe.

The press of France wishes to be the impartial arbiter which will give to the franc its former prestige and strength.

America has not yet understood the incomparable efficiency of our national institution, the Press. With our press, with our Advertisers, with your Press, with your Advertisers, we will help your productive industry, and you will help our industry. Without hurrying our and your greatest production, we have the mission to contribute to a larger and more frequent distribution of American thought and American products to France, of French thought and French products to America.

We must also distribute to our newspapers better cabled and mailed information about American institutions political developments, etc.

When, in a few months, in a few years, fraternally associated together by sentiment and also by business, we shall have accomplished this program, we will have rendered an immense service not only to our two nations, but also to the cause of international peace, which can be only maintained through industrial and commercial prosperity.

On behalf of all my French colleagues, I am proud to express to all our Colleagues of America and of the World our cordial and friendly greetings.

DR. KNECHT'S CAREER

DR. KNECHT was born in 1882 in Nancy, France, and after having obtained his degree for the professorship of English Literature at the University of Nancy, studied at the University of Cambridge and at the University of Berlin.

In 1899 he began journalistic work with the publication of an illustrated weekly, and in 1902 he created an important export firm dealing in agricultural products, principally wheat.

In spite of his business activities, M. Knecht obtained his University degree in addition to writing editorials on foreign politics for Paris and Nancy dailies and delivering lectures at the Nancy Lycée and University.

In 1905 he organized several committees for the betterment of cordial relations between France and England, and France and America, and later, in 1909 played a prominent part in the organization and management of the International Industrial Exhibition at Nancy. In 1912 he organized the great drive for French aviation.

Having been mobilized in 1914 on the staff of General Foch, M. Knecht was, after a long illness in military hospitals,

(Continued on page F6)

TELLS OF THE NEW ADVERTISING IN FRANCE

Press Publicity Now Distinguishes Every Branch of French Commercial Activity—Merchants and Manufacturers Recognize Marvelous Results—American Methods an Inspiring Influence

By LÉON RENIER, JR.
Commercial Manager L'Agence Havas

IT may be a little beside the mark for Frenchmen to come here to speak about publicity, above all about publicity by means of the press, in addressing Americans who are masters of that art. Nevertheless, the fact that publicity has assumed in the French press an increasing importance for some years may excuse that temerity.

For this reason I think it may be important to explain as briefly as possible to our American friends what results have been obtained by our press in the matter of publicity during the last few years.

In the beginning, the press among us was almost non-existent. It was little more than a very feeble means of expressing political opinion and, since the first gazettes had nothing to compare with the grand editions of the dailies of today, it is self-evident that in those times there was scarcely an advertisement in the papers.

It was Emile de Girardin, founder of La Presse in 1836, who first had the idea of selling his last page to advertisers, in somewhat the same way as the owner of a house sells space for posters on his walls.

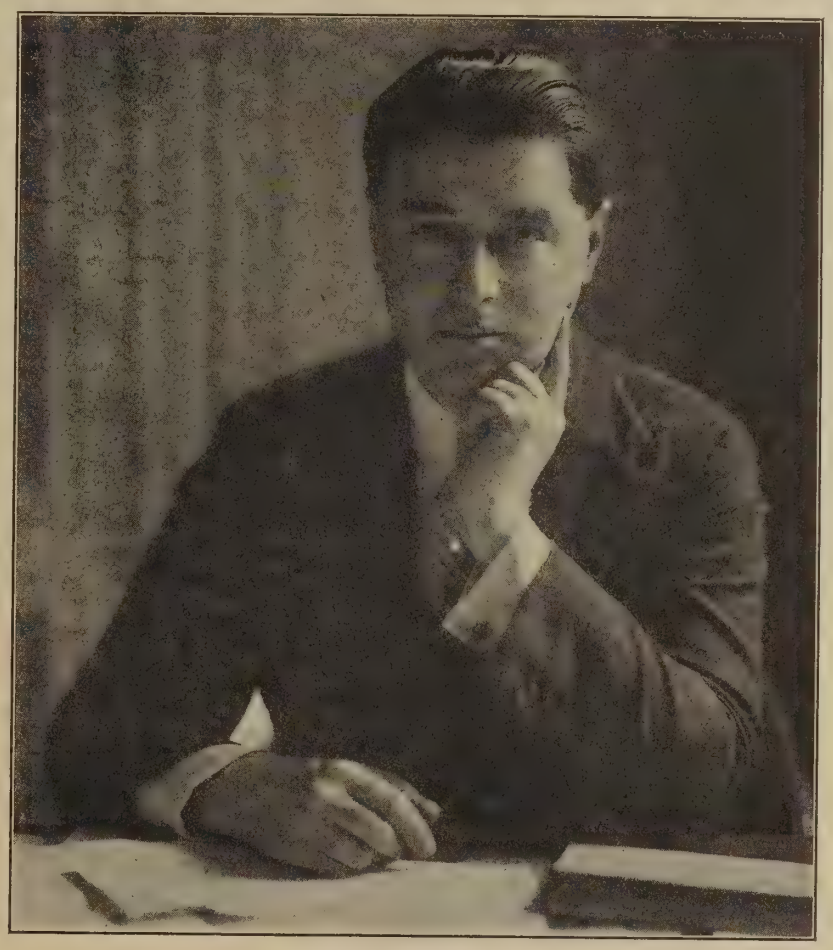
From that time really dates newspaper publicity, beginning in an extremely modest way. With the appearance of rotary presses in 1875, the dailies took a more important position and publicity received an equal aggrandizement. But up to the war of 1914 it must be remembered that the importance of this press publicity was in no way equal to that which it enjoys today.

As a matter of fact, a considerable part of the public took no interest whatever in the last page of the daily. Readers were content with the first pages where they found stories, informative articles, novels, etc. On the other hand, the manufacturers and merchants themselves felt it beneath their dignity to publish in the press advertisements praising their products. There was hardly any publicity during that time except for pharmaceutical specialties, a fact which did nothing to increase the dignity of advertising since the greater part of pharmaceutical products were not really efficient remedies, but smacked of charlatanism.

It was to the credit of the forerunners of real advertising that certain scattered workers, full of youth and enthusiasm, were influenced by the English and American methods of advertising and were able to adapt these methods for application in France.

The managers themselves soon took a lively interest in the matter and collaborated with the advertisers, with the result that advertising rapidly became better constructed and above all more sincere, since they understood the force of the expression "truth in advertising" so dear to the Americans.

Considering another side, the first French advertising men made a great effort to increase advertising technique, in giving it the best possible appearance, and introducing artistic touches.



The problem was delicate and difficult because of the fact that these pioneers were opposed on the one side by lack of confidence among the advertisers and on the other side by the distrust of the public.

It was necessary then, as a beginning, to educate the readers and to prove to the merchants and manufacturers that advertising, far from injuring a product, might work for the benefit of commerce and industry.

Conferences were held in several French cities, newspapers published articles, and our French advertising men by dint of individual effort soon saw their work crowned with success.

It may be said nowadays that press publicity in France distinguishes every branch of our activity. Merchants and manufacturers recognize the marvelous results which have been obtained. And those who, but a few years before, attempted only with doubt and misgivings to do a small amount of advertising, do not hesitate to reserve entire pages, and even double pages in the daily and illustrated press to demonstrate the worth of their products.

The great automobile industry, the firms of Renault, Citroen, Peugeot, the great stores, the large provision houses, now take advantage of the press to popularize their products, through which means there has been created in France a sane competition resulting in great advantages for the commerce and industries of our country.

LÉON RENIER, JR.

The very banks turn nowadays to the newspapers in order to address their clientele which is quite as ignorant of their financial issues as of all the banking operations particularly belonging to such institutions.

Finally—and this is not one of the smallest conquests of newspaper advertising—the Rue de la Paix, including its numerous jewelers, dealers in antiques, in perfumery, etc., has come to the newspaper to exploit certain articles which are not always in general use. It may be understood from this development what success has been obtained by press advertising.

If the greater part turned to American and English methods it must not be forgotten that the French advertising men have been marvelously capable in adapting these methods to our country.

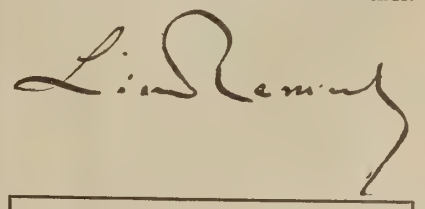
French education as regards advertising is not yet entirely complete, and the advertiser must consider both the regional spirit and natural skepticism. That is why French advertising has succeeded in creating a national character of its own.

Numerous American advertising campaigns have been undertaken in the French press with very interesting results but it was necessary to modify them so that they might be put in harmony with the French character.

Repeated experiences have shown that certain American advertisements, technically perfect, certain slogans with an astonishing efficiency on the other side of the Atlantic only obtained a mediocre success in France. The task of the advertising expert of our country, then, has consisted not in blindly imitating foreign publicity but in "Frenchifying" it in order to render it effective. For it is important to remember that French advertising has numerous aspects resulting from the fact that France itself is composed of diverse regions where it is necessary to speak different languages if one wishes to be heard and understood.

It is also important to point out that advertising in our papers would be still more important if certain conditions did not prevent. The dailies have eight or ten pages and would claim a far larger circulation if the price of paper did not obstruct their extension.

The managers of the papers cannot increase the daily issues as they desire since the expense for materials, chiefly for paper, would result in a deficit.



It must also be remembered that the managers of papers, as well as the managers of advertising agencies, are often thrown into great difficulties by the instability of exchange.

During the war the Americans and the French had an opportunity to become acquainted with each other, to judge each other and to love each other. No false shame keeps the French from recognizing that in the matter of advertising the Americans have been their teacher and that in their country press publicity has been advanced to a very great degree of perfection. Such a lesson must not be lost.

In France the different advertising agencies—even the greatest—have understood the value of following American methods. They have gained thereby an organization, in power and in clientele, and the information from the other side of the Atlantic bears fruit.

Nevertheless it was not without legitimate pride that the writer of these lines remembers the visit of the advertisers who in 1924 came to our shores—a visit at the conclusion of which he had the great satisfaction of hearing certain among them say to him: "We know a good deal about advertising but we have learned something by visiting you."

That admission has been a real inspiration for us and we find in it the best encouragement to continue to work in close collaboration with the Americans who are our instructors and our friends.

M. Renier's Career

LÉON RENIER, Junior, must be classed as one of the younger generation of French business men who have come into prominence since the close of the World War, but because of his position in the organization of L'Agence Havas, his personality, and his attainments, he must also be put at the very top of this class.

Born in 1885, M. Renier was a student at the secondary schools of France where he completed the entire course before going into one of the best French colleges of law. Following this he completed his education with a year at an English University supplemented by a year at a German college. At the same time he devoted a great deal of time to the study of the habits, customs and commercial activities of both countries.

His education completed at the age of 20 years, he entered Agence Havas, where his father was already a member of the board of directors, as a simple clerk, and before taking over the responsibilities of his present position several years later, went through every department of the organization as a workman. He thus has a thorough knowledge of the operation of the extensive business both from the news and advertising angles.

When the World War broke out in 1914, M. Renier immediately enlisted in the Infantry on August 2, and served actively with his unit through the early years of the conflict. He was wounded twice, decorated for bravery in action, and was later transferred to the Flying Corps where he further distinguished himself for gallantry.

When the War was finally over, M. Renier was mustered out of the Army and directly thereafter became commercial manager for the enlarged Agence Havas. During the period of remarkable expansion which the organization has enjoyed in the years since the War, M. Renier has proved conclusively that he is "the right man in the right place" and has been of inestimable aid to French trade in both domestic and foreign fields.

As a recognition of and a reward for this service, the French Government recently created M. Renier a Knight of the Legion of Honor.

FRENCH DELEGATES ARRIVING IN U. S. AND RECEPTION COMMITTEE

Especially photographed for "Editor & Publisher"

French delegation and overseas reception committee of Advertising Club of New York on Pier 54 North River on arrival of the S. S. Paris of the French Line at noon on Wednesday, June 9, 1926.

Right to left: Major Adrien Muller, H. H. Charles, Frank LeRoy Blanchard, Clifton D. Jackson, J. W. Brown, L. H. White, Dr. Marcel Knecht, Charles C. Green, W. H. Dodge, Leon Renier, Jr., Robert Remy, Gilles Duroulet, J. S. Erdwurn, Henri Dumay, Jr., Andre Kaminker, Jesse H. Neal, Paul Meyer, Hector Fuller and I. R. Parsons (extreme left).

GLITTERING GEMS IN PARIS MARKET

By Hugues Citroen

President of the Syndicate of Diamond Merchants
Officer of the Legion of Honor

PARIS is the world market for precious stones, including pearls, sapphires, emeralds, rubies and all others except diamonds for which the principal markets are located at Antwerp and Amsterdam.

Ninety per cent of the choice pearls from India are brought to Paris and although they are sorted and classified at Bombay this work is done only preparatory to shipment to the Parisian market where the best workmanship permits the finishing to be done far better than at the source.

Sapphires, emeralds and rubies are cut at Paris where the incomparable stone cutters of the world are found. The modern jewelry work and the reproductions of the more classic forms permitting of the creation of marvels of the jewelers art, produced by these Parisian workmen, attracted the admiration of people from every country of the world at the Exposition of Decorative Arts held in Paris last year.

The United States constitutes one of the greatest markets for French jewelry and precious stones and in America today are to be found some of the most perfect pearls, the most beautiful diamonds and other precious stones of the highest brilliancy and value.

To supply this high class clientele American jewelers usually come to Paris many times a year and it is for us a great pleasure to receive them and we believe it has been a great pleasure for them to come to our country. These buyers of jewels come principally during the month of June and since they are usually accompanied by members of their families it has been an honor for us to make their acquaintance in ways other than business.

It is a great satisfaction to the Syndicate of which I have the honor to be President to see in this relation of seller and customer and the exchange of ideas that naturally grows out of it, that our two groups are working toward better relations between America and France.

Favorable propaganda between the United States and France, a better understanding between the business men of the two nations, will go a long way toward reestablishing our economic position and putting the commercial relations between us on the firm and solid basis they should enjoy.

KEYSTONE OF FRANCO-AMERICAN UNITY

(Continued from page F4)

mobilized into the Diplomatic Service and sent first to Switzerland (French Press Bureau) and in October, 1916, to New York and Washington, where, under Ambassador Jusserand, he was at first Assistant-Director, then Director, of the French Information Bureau.

In 1918, at the University of Wisconsin, M. Knecht, who had delivered more than 2,000 speeches and lectures in 18 American States and in Canada, received the Honorary Degree of LL. D.

During his long mission in America, he accompanied, as liaison agent, sucessively Marshal Joffre, Premier René Viviani, M. Henry Franklin-Bouillon, and others.

In 1920, he organized and escorted the delegation of the Knights of Columbus going to present the Lafayette statue to the city of Metz, and the same year, he escorted the Milwaukee delegation to the city of Strasbourg.

In 1921, he escorted the American Legion delegation to France.

In 1922, M. Maurice Bunau-Varilla, owner and director of Le Matin, enlisted his services, and gave him the important functions of general secretary, which requires numerous political, international, industrial and business contacts.

Since 1922, Dr. Knecht has especially developed at Le Matin:

1—Strong and friendly relations with America;
2—Permanent relations with the recovered French provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, as well as with Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy, etc.
3—The relations of the Press with all the new great industrial forces of France, luxury industries, couture, fashion, hotel industry, touristic industies, etc.

In 1924, Dr. Knecht was elected by all the newspaper directors as general secretary and manager for the reception of the Advertising Clubs of America, and a few months after was elected an Honorary Member of the New York Advertising Club.

In July, 1925, he was chosen by the French Government and the Paris International Arts Exhibition Committee as Chairman of the Reception Committee of a large delegation of American captains of industry sent by Secretary Herbert Hoover.

In the same year, the French Hotel Associations elected him Chairman of the Executive Committee which entertained recently 300 American Hotel delegates.

Recently, President Doumergue and Premier Briand made Dr. Knecht an Officer of the Legion of Honor, to reward the great services rendered by him to the cause of Franco-American friendship. The Honorable Myron T. Herrick, Ambassador of the United States to France, and himself a Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, acted as sponsor to Dr. Knecht on the presentation of the Order.

Dr. Knecht is also: Grand Officer of the Nichan Iftikhar, of Tunisia; Commander of the National Order of Morocco; Commander of Isabella of Spain; Commander of St. Sava of Serbia; Commander of the Oak Crown of Luxembourg.

The French Minister of Labor and of Social Welfare has conferred upon him the gold medals of Welfare Work; and of Social Assistance.

LE MATIN Building, right on the "Boulevards" heads the newspapers because of its qualities, of the high grade of its readers, and of its huge diffusion.

Le Matin

LE MATIN is the most complete, the best and most rapidly informed of all the great French dailies; it is also the best illustrated; its ateliers for photo-engraving are famous.

Anxious to give to its readers nothing but real information it secured the services of special correspondents in all the French towns and in every foreign capital. It has then at its disposal a first-class information service.

LE MATIN publishes daily the latest commercial and financial news, and the rate of exchange from all European and American banks.

LE MATIN is the most powerful instrument of Industry, Commerce and Agriculture, and gives them the largest and most efficient co-operation.

LE MATIN has given a great development to photographic reportage . . . . and its photo-engraving ateliers prepare quickly and until the very last minute, the plates necessary to illustrate the newspaper.

LE MATIN always endeavors to publish articles which can be read by anybody; it is a newspaper for family reading.

Because of the exceptional quantity of its information, the deliberate briefness in the presentation of facts, the ingenious light of its titles and sub-titles, and the method which directs the classification of its different items, because of its elite collaborators, LE MATIN is really the newspaper which is the best adapted to our time of haste and progress.

LE MATIN is printed on its nine great rotative machines, which have forty exits; those machines, equipped with all the latest improvements, permit the printing in the shortest time of its different issues which thus come out at the last minute.

Lastly, LE MATIN, always desirous to be at the head of all the technical progress, has secured the exclusivity for France of all which concerns the utilization by the press of the Belinogramme, the admirable invention of the great French scientist M. Belin, which enables the transmission and reception by telephone wires of drawings, hand-written or printed documents, or photographic proofs, with all their precisions and their half-tones.

LE MATIN has opened a beautiful reception-hall for one thousand people, which opens on a great reception-room and an exhibition-room; this hall has its own private entrance.

LE MATIN'S buildings cover an area of four thousand square meters, right on the Boulevards.

LE MATIN, which has a daily circulation of over a million copies, is the only newspaper which has secured not only the quantity but the quality of readers. In all the classes, it is the newspaper of the elite; it is for this reason that its publicity is amongst the more efficient, as it reaches directly those who have the greatest purchasing power.

Lastly, LE MATIN, which always fought for the development of sentimental, economical and political relations between United States, Canada and France, publishes very often editorials signed by famous statesmen and writers who impartially study the great American problems and always try to create a necessary and cordial understanding between America and France.

LE MATIN Exhibition Room

HAVAS WORLD POWER IN NEWS AND ADVERTISING

French Agency Established Eighty Years Ago—Remarkable Development of Its Business in Recent Years—Review of One of the World's Largest Advertising Activities

By ALBERT G. LANEY

PROBABLY everyone who ever worked on a newspaper for any length of time knows of the Agence Havas. Its news despatches come day and night from every section of the globe and are used in thousands of newspapers in practically every country of the world. Literally millions of persons read every day items gathered by Havas, and in a dozen languages. So that one cannot be connected with a newspaper in any important city without coming constantly into contact with Havas.

And yet I have known newspaper men of long experience, even correspondents and editors of English language papers in the French Capital, who were astonished to learn that Agence Havas is probably the oldest, and certainly one of the most important institutions in the world operating as an advertising agency. In point of fact, its news gathering service, extensive and efficient as it is, is no more than equal in importance to its service as an advertising agency.

M. Charles Houssaye, Vice-Chairman of the Board of Directors and Manager of the News Department.

Further, and more important, there was and is back of Agence Havas, the fundamental, basic understanding of advertising in France, the idea that advertising is commercial information just as surely as general news is also information. Thus the recent development of Agence Havas has been in accord with the development throughout the advertising world, and the connection between the news service and the advertising agency, is now one of name and general management only, a fact that must be thoroughly understood if one is to realize the tremendous scope of the entire organization.

The development of special representation of newspapers has been rather that of an intermediary activity connecting the advertising agency with the news service through the fact that most newspapers receiving Havas news service, place their advertising representation in the hands of that agency.

There is a sound historical reason and background for this, resulting in the present organization, a situation which probably never will be duplicated, since the same reason can never exist for its foundation in France or elsewhere.

The story of the development of Havas in both its important functions, is one of the most absorbing to be found in the publication field. It is the story of the development of an idea conceived in 1835, and the realization of a splendid dream which opened before one man as this idea began slowly to develop.

To be speedily and accurately informed, the feverish desire for news, is a development of very recent times, almost of the 20th century. Paris learned of Napoleon's death on July 6, just two months after the great general had died in exile at St. Helena. Nor did Paris care particularly about this lack of news, though it caused concern to a few enlightened minds.

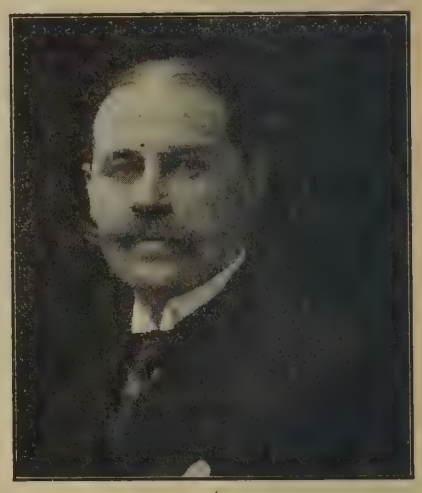
M. Léon Renier, Senior, Chairman of the Board of Directors of L'Agence Havas, and the man directly responsible for the unusual expansion of the organization since the war.

One of these belonged to a young man who had left his native home at Oporto, Portugal, for France, toward the end of the Revolution, with which he was in sympathy. His idea, of which the splendid organization of Agence Havas as we know it to-day, is an outgrowth, had its small beginning in a little office in the rue Jean Jacques Rousseau, from which in 1835, Charles Havas offered to supply daily extracts from English, German, Italian, Spanish and Russian newspapers, to the various Government departments, the Embassies and the few Paris newspapers of that day.

Thus the Agence Havas, probably the first comprehensive news service in the world, was founded.

When the idea of a daily news service took hold almost at once it became immediately apparent to young Havas that the sources of information were wholly insufficient for the needs of his clients. From that day Agence Havas began to grow.

The first result was the settling in motion of an organization to concentrate news from all of France and other European countries into one central bureau, from which it was distributed to the entire French Press, provincial as well as Parisian. At the same time French news was contributed to the foreign press in return for news from abroad. Correspondents were engaged in England, Germany, Italy, Spain and Holland and to them was entrusted the task of collecting and transmitting the news.



All means of communication, means which seem highly primitive to-day, were used to insure speed. There being no telegraph, Havas at first made use of the Chappe telegraphs, a system of transmitting messages by flashes of light from one tower to another, a method extremely costly and highly unreliable.

In 1840, after five years of apparently fruitless effort, his financial resources all but exhausted in trying to overcome insurmountable odds, M. Havas conceived an idea that amounted to a veritable flash of genius and was to prove that his idea of a news service was no idle dream. He established between London, Brussells and Paris, a regular, daily carrier pigeon service.

Public attention was immediately attracted to him and he was able to have important news from the London morning papers reach Paris in time for publication in the late afternoon editions. The press was quick to appreciate the innovation and subscribers to his service increased immediately.

The growth of Agence Havas from this point was rapid. By 1845 it had prospered to such an extent sub-agencies had been established in Madrid, Rome, Vienna, Brussels and in America. One of the first assistants of Charles Havas, M. Reuter, had already founded the great London agency which still bears his name, and, working in conjunction with the head office in Paris and its branches, there was then hardly a country in the civilized world not covered by the "Bureau Havas" and its news was transmitted to many individuals of importance and the French papers, by the famous "Correspondence Havas."

Agence Havas, with all its connections, was at this time, in 1845, the most important news gathering and distributing organization in the world, but it was strictly a news organization. And the period between this date and 1860, marked the beginnings of the development of Agence Havas as an advertising agency, which has in time, not only equalled the news organization in importance, but grown into perhaps the most extensive advertising agency in the world.

M. Maurice Depicerre, Administrateur Délégué and Manager of the Advertising Department.

At this time the newspapers in the French provinces had only small financial resources, their revenue being derived solely from subscriptions and the sales of copies. It was therefore, impossible for them to undertake the cost of a regular Paris news service that by this time embraced the entire world.

A few of them, however, had begun about this time, to receive a small revenue from metropolitan advertisers, secured for them by M. Bullier, one of the founders, with M. Mathieu Lafitte, of a rather limited agency known as the Société Generale des Annonces. It was not a going concern and in 1860 M. Havas conceived his second far reaching idea and offered to M. Bullier an amalgamation of the two organizations, an offer which was immediately accepted.

Then, with the same vision that had marked this modest beginning, he offered to 200 of the most important French provincial papers, papers which could not yet afford to subscribe to his news service, a special daily news review covering French and foreign news, in return for the exclusive right to a certain amount of advertising space free on the third and fourth pages of these papers, the agency to derive its revenue from the sale of this space. Such was the origin of Agence Havas as an advertising agency and from that beginning the world organization of today has grown.

Almost without exception the newspapers to which this proposition was made, accepted, and Agence Havas became, through the amalgamation, a combined advertising and news distributing organization.

Shortly afterward electric telegraphy

(Continued on page F10)

SOIXANTE-SIXIEME ANNEE. — N° 23645 On s'abonne aux Bureaux du Journal, 5, RUE DES ITALIENS, A PARIS (9e), et dans tous les Bureaux de Poste LUNDI 10 MAI 1926

PRIX DE L'ABONNEMENT

PARIS, SEINE & SEINE-&-OISE ..... Trois mois, 20 fr. Six mois, 36 fr. Un an, 72 fr.
DÉPARTEMENTS et COLONIES FRANÇAISES. — 21 fr. — 40 fr. — 76 fr.
ÉTRANGER { Pays accordant une réduction de 50 0/0 sur les tarifs postaux. — 38 fr. — 74 fr. — 144 fr.
Autres Pays. — 53 fr. — 102 fr. — 200 fr.
LES ABONNEMENTS DATENT DES 1er ET 16 DE CHAQUE MOIS
Un numéro (PARIS et DÉPARTEMENTS) : 25 centimes
Directeur politique : Adrien Hébrard
Toutes les lettres destinées à la Rédaction doivent être adressées au Directeur
Le Journal ne répond pas des manuscrits communiqués
ADRESSE TELEGRAPHIQUE : TEMPS PARIS

Le Temps

PRIX DE L'ABONNEMENT

PARIS, SEINE & SEINE-&-OISE ..... Trois mois, 20 fr. Six mois, 38 fr. Un an, 72 fr.
DÉPARTEMENTS et COLONIES FRANÇAISES. — 21 fr. — 40 fr. — 76 fr.
ÉTRANGER { Pays accordant une réduction de 50 0/0 sur les tarifs postaux. — 38 fr. — 74 fr. — 144 fr.
Autres Pays. — 53 fr. — 102 fr. — 200 fr.
LES ABONNEMENTS DATENT DES 1er ET 16 DE CHAQUE MOIS
Un numéro (PARIS et DÉPARTEMENTS) : 25 centimes

ANNONCES : AUX BUREAUX DU Temps, 5, rue des Italiens, à L'AGENCE HAVAS et dans ses succursales et dans toutes les Agences de Publicité
Le Journal décline toute responsabilité quant à leur teneur
TÉLÉPHONE : CINQ LIGNES, Gutenberg 03.07 — 03.08 — 03.09 — 03.32 — 03.33
CHÈQUE POSTAL : Numéro 60

SOMMAIRE

PAGE 2

Dans le Levant : La Situation générale, ROBERT POULAINE. — La Crise politique en Belgique. — Nouvelles de l'Etranger. — Revue de la presse. — Nouvelles du Jour. — Armée. — Académies. — Variété, PIERRE BRISSON.

chancelier Luther à chercher désormais des appuis à droite. Le parti populiste n'a jamais dissimulé ses sympathies pour les nationalistes, et s'il a dû admettre la collaboration parlementaire de la social-démocratie, afin d'assurer au cabinet la majorité nécessaire à la ratification du traité de Locarno, et la décision de demander l'admission du Reich à la Soc... la situation s'est totalem...

POUR LA FÊTE DE JEANNE D'ARC

Lorsque la proposition d'instituer une fête nationale en l'honneur de Jeanne d'Arc fut présentée au Sénat par Joseph Fabre, et fut ...lée par la haute Assemb... séance 1894, nous di... la simple vérité, l'exactitude des faits n'ont aucune importance dans ce rôle. Mirbeau parle avec respect de Renan, mais pourquoi l'appelle-t-il gymnosophiste? Ce maître n'allait pas tout nu. Pourquoi, louant à bon droit Leconte de Lisle, comme poète, le félicite-t-il de ne jamais avoir mis les pieds ...? Le livre récent de Mme Jean... quente ...nelé qu'il fré... ne fut ...gnement et on... effet...

Les Espagnols sur l'oued Kert

Les Espagnols ont attaqué dans la matinée du 8 sur l'oued Kert en 2 colonnes.

La première débouchant d'Azib-el-Midan a marché dans la direction générale de Tleta-d'Azelef, c'est-à-dire nord-est sud-ouest, sur la rive nord du Kert; elle a atteint la pente orientale du djebel Founzine. A la ... les troupes espagnoles et ...

LE REGLEMENT DE LA PAIX

La réorganisation du conseil de la Société des nations

MM. Paul-Boncour et Fromag...t partent aujourd'hui ... Paris, se rendant à Genève, où ils prend... travaux de la commission ...projets de réorganisa... ...nations.

THE impartial independence of the "TEMPS" originating in a really liberal character and an inviolable respect for the Public, together with its traditional spirit tempered with a prudent but incessant reconciliation of the exigencies of contemporary journalism, have made this newspaper one of the most weighty organs of public opinion of our days.

More than one hundred years have passed since the first "TEMPS" appeared in 1820 but after playing a prominent part in the events of that period, it ceased publication in 1843. The title was restored in 1861 by Auguste Nefftzer who obtained the cooperation of a number of distinguished writers. Louis Blanc the historian, who lived in London, used to send him his letters from abroad and Georges Clemenceau, then a beginner, contributed articles on the life and institutions of the United States where he was traveling at the time. Among the chief political contributors were Challemel-Lacour, Henri Brisson and Jules Ferry. Literature brought Saint Beuve into their ranks and theatrical criticism, Francisque Sarcey, the most popular writer of the Monday feuilletons. Again, in the world of letters, we will only name those who are no longer among us such as Renan who contributed his "Philosophical Dialogues," Jules Simon, Jules Lemaitre, Alfred Mézières, Jules Claretie, Henry Roujon and Anatole France.

Adrien Hebrard, who was numbered among the most eminent personalities in Paris, became the Editor of the "TEMPS" in 1867 and carried out his task in a brilliant manner up to his death in 1914. Control then passed into the hands of his sons, first Mr. Emile Hebrard and now Mr. Adrien Hebrard.

Because The "TEMPS" has continued to develop its foreign correspondent service it occupies today a unique and original position among the great French dailies.

It has its own private correspondents in most European towns with which it is connected by a telegraphic and telephonic system. In the French Colonies and various other countries it has its resident correspondents who are always well informed with regard to the events passing under their eyes. Further, as soon as an event of any importance takes place abroad, a competent journalist is at once despatched to make a special report on it.

Economic, financial and commercial problems which are so closely connected in our times with all foreign political questions, are the constant object of its attention. While devoting an ever-increasing part to the discussion of and information concerning national politics, the "TEMPS" continually increases its universally acknowledged sphere of influence throughout the world by the cooperation of specialists and the most personal, rapid and sure methods of investigation.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

From June 1, 1926

Paris .....Francs 72
Departments and Colonies 76

Foreign Countries:
Those allowing 50% reduction on mail tariffs 144

Other countries 200

Subscriptions from 1st or 16th of each month.

"LE TEMPS"

PARIS-5, rue des Italiens 9e

Téléphone (Cinq lignes):

Gutenberg 03.07-03.08-03.09-03.32-03.33

Chèque postal No. 60—Régistre du Commerce Paris 70722

ADRESSE TELEGRAPHIQUE—
TEMPS PARIS

ADVERTISING RATES

From June 1, 1926

Annonces Commerciales (Display Ads.)
15 francs per line
Réclames (Display, preferred position)
25 francs per line
Librairie (Book Advertising)
25 francs per line
Avis divers (Reading Notices)
30 francs per line
Information diverses (Same, pref. pos.)
50 francs per line
Petites Nouvelles (Same, pref. pos.)
50 francs per line
These rates do not apply to financial advertising was perfected for practical purposes, resulting naturally in the further expansion and development of news agencies. Upon the initiative of M. Havas an agreement was made for the exchange of news between the big news agencies that had come into being in all great European capitals by this time, and Havas was tied up definitely with Reuter in London, Wolf in Berlin, a correspondent at Vienna, the Stefani Agency in Rome and the Fabra Agency in Madrid.

The now enlarged and developed Agence Havas was incorporated into a French "Société Anonyme" with a capital of 8,500,000 francs, by M. Charles Havas, his son Auguste Havas, who had succeeded his father as manager of the agency, and by M. Edward Lebey, their associate. In 1897 M. Charles Lafitte was made President of the Board of Directors, a position he occupied until his death in 1924. M. Lebey, in the new incorporation, was made General Manager, and M. Henri Houssaye assisted him as Administrateur Délégué.

The agency acquired control from the State of special telegraph wires connecting the Paris office with the editorial departments of practically every newspaper of importance in France, and the installation of the American ticker service throughout Paris, was a development which followed immediately afterward. This service gave to newspapers, banks, clubs, hotels, cafes etc., stock exchange and commercial quotations, racing results and general news.

Agence Havas has increased steadily since that time until it is unrivalled on the Continent to-day. Through the efforts of M. Léon Rénier, the present head of the organization, its capitalization has been increased from 18,500,000 francs in 1921, to 50,000,000 in 1925.

Since the war, through a series of reorganizations, it has become unique in its field, with no other news agency of anything like the same size and diversity of activities. Its special wires in France have a total length of 3,500 kilometres, over which one million words of news flow daily. It is accepted, and always thought of by newspaper men as one of the really great news gathering and distributing organizations of the world.

This description, however, is preliminary to a description of the activities of Agence Havas as an advertising agency, a subject of considerably more importance to advertising men, and a story which will, I believe, cause every delegate to the convention, considerable surprise.

It will be seen that Agence Havas and the Société Generale des Annonces have had for nearly three quarters of a century, a very close relationship growing out of conditions as they existed in the early days of the development of advertising and the distribution of news. It was M. Auguste Havas and M. Edouard Lebey who, in 1879 first laid down and put into practice the principles of modern advertising in France. From that time to the present day the advertising activities of the organization have increased and expanded rapidly and the complete amalgamation of the Société Generale des Annonces into the Agence Havas by M. Léon Rénier in 1921, and the recapitalization of the agency, was directly due to the development of advertising.

The reason for the development of the advertising and news functions of the agency simultaneously will thus be apparent. There existed in the beginning a practical business to assist the necessary extension of the news service, especially throughout the provinces which was made feasible by the possibility of revenue from advertising, which the agency even then, was in a unique position to supply.

What was possible in 1850, when both the distribution of news and the development of advertising were in their infancy, cannot be done again to-day. Once conceived and developed, the idea of the Agence Havas is destined to remain the only one of its kind in the world. The system and method upon which it was founded is unique and undoubtedly will remain without imitation.

Agence Havas, functioning in its joint capacities, is thus equipped to handle advertising in Europe and throughout the world, outside of the United States and perhaps Canada, as is no other organization or group of organizations working together.

As will be easily apparent to American advertising men from the foregoing description of the growth of the organization, advertising service in France, must inevitably be almost wholly different from advertising service rendered in a market where merchandising and selling customs offer entirely different problems. The Frenchman, considered in the mass, is not ready to-day to respond to the appeal of American methods of advertising and it is a question if he ever will be.

Nevertheless, Agence Havas, which serves the field as no other organization can, has exactly the same object as any other advertising agency, namely, the development of advertising in its service both to the client and the publication.

Merchandising, for instance, has come to be an important part of Havas development during the last few years and inquiry into the organization throws considerable light on the kind, diversity and quality of the advertising services rendered.

In Paris the central office has a selling organization of numerous courtiers, or agency contact men, whose business is to obtain accounts. These extend from local accounts to national and international advertisers.

Back of this work are the copy and art departments and also a complete printing and engraving plant. The courtiers have also the advantages of a technical department for purposes of merchandising, selling and advertising, where advertising plans submitted to the clients are studied, co-ordinated and completed.

Back of this again is the enormous space buying department with its wide and varied connections and its complete information regarding every publication in France and practically every publication throughout Europe. The work of this department has now been extended to a world-wide study of media, including the United States.

Façade of the building at 62 Rue de Richelieu, Paris, which houses the activities of L'Agence Havas. The plant is one of the most complete of its kind in the world. It is located just around the corner from the Paris Bourse.

In addition to the Central Agency there exists in Paris numerous sub-agencies, a development found necessary because Havas has made a specialty of newspaper advertising. That is to say, it deals in particular with the daily publications edited in Paris or in the Provinces. Thus, in order efficiently to cover all branches of advertising, and with a view to facilitating its work, the organization has established these specialized agencies, in billboard, the stations of the underground railway system, outside poster advertising, etc.

Also a special agency has been established, to deal only with periodicals; another with annuals; another embraces technical publications. Special agreements have also been made with international advertising agencies and no branch of advertising is omitted, for Havas realizes that every one of these branches should be dealt with by a special organization. Acting along these lines this agency is fully equipped to handle all advertising matters when and how required.

Outside Paris, Havas has set up in the most important towns, thirty-five special sub-agencies, the business of which is to collect local accounts, to place in the local papers advertising from the central offices, and to handle through the Paris organization, publicity destined for the Paris publications. These agencies, though independent in the radius of their territories, are connected with and controlled by the Paris offices.

Outside France the agency has established twenty-three branch offices which deal in the same manner as the sub-agencies with all problems. Besides these organizations, which it controls exclusively, Havas maintains daily connections with unattached advertising agents or courtiers who place their accounts through the agency.

The situation then is this. Agence Havas operates as a vast technical agency with a small army of courtiers, many of whom render certain technical services of their own, and are even on the basis of advertising agents themselves without facilities or connections other than the prestige of Agence Havas in this complicated market where there are as many as sixty-five daily newspapers issued in Paris alone.

The same applies to foreign advertising agents and foreign firms which have understood that, in the French market, it is better for them to appeal to a French organization. Indeed there is no doubt that Havas, through its perfect knowledge of the market and its long experience, knows what best to emphasize with the French public which, as is the case with all other nations, has its own peculiarities.

Havas has the most important office sites wherever a branch of the agency is situated. The advertising branch in Paris occupies a large modern office building at 62 rue de Richelieu which was inaugurated on July 2, 1921. The building was erected by Havas and the installations of the various departments are most practical and comfortable.

It is thus obvious that no advertising agency in France or elsewhere enjoys a better material equipment or a more highly specialized personnel. Throughout its intricate organization there is the utmost cooperation and cohesion, and even a casual study reveals an advertising organization whose varied activities and far reaching effects are beyond the scope of any other.

During the last two years the money spent by the clients of Havas in the launching of their products, for propaganda in favor of their trade marks, and generally speaking, in the promotion of their businesses through advertising, has amounted to 400,000,000 francs for France alone.

It may be said without exaggeration that no other advertising agency in the world has had a longer, wider or more comprehensive experience in the field of European advertising, nor does any other enjoy so powerful an influence as Agence Havas.

FRANCE

Le Petit Parisien

LE PLUS FORT TIRAGE DES JOURNAUX DU MONDE ENTIER

1,700,000

DAILY

Le Petit Parisien has by far the largest circulation of any French newspapers. It is distributed all over the country and reaches the smallest villages as well as the most important cities.

Le Petit Parisien is noted for the accuracy of its informations and for its strictly neutral attitude where politics are concerned.

Discrimination in the selection of its advertisements is a strict rule with Le Petit Parisien. In the course of 1925, contracts to the amount of five million francs were refused for advertisements which were considered as undesirable by the Management.

From 3,000 to 4,000 answers to a single advertisement in Le Petit Parisien is not considered as an exceptional result.

No advertising campaign meant to reach the general public can dispense with the services of Le Petit Parisien. There is not an important advertiser in France who does not place the largest part of his appropriation with Le Petit Parisien.

For all information & advertising rates, apply: 29, Boulevard des Italiens, Paris, France.

CONQUERING FRENCH MARKET A DELICATE TASK

Buyers Shun Standardized Products, Resist Imperative Appeals, and Demand Elegance and Finish in Merchandise—Individual Taste Rules Selection of Purchases

By PROFESSOR CHARLES TOUZOT
General Secretary of the International Fair of Lyons

IN a recent book, M. Jules Cambon, the great French diplomat who for many years represented his country at Washington, tells what is necessary for an ambassador to know who is attentive to the psychology of peoples. The necessity for careful psychological research is as great for business men who pass frontiers to study market conditions and the course of exchanges.

PROF. CHARLES TOUZOT

In this connection, it is an honor for the Advertising Clubs of the World to have proclaimed and demonstrated that all commercial activity is of an intellectual order. We no longer accept today the old Platonic distinction which places intelligence in opposition to the appetites. The specific nature of the material needs of a people, the manner in which they are accustomed to respond to those needs are the traits of their collective character.

An examination of the commercial habits and practices of a nation leads to an understanding as instructive as the study of their literary production or their esthetic creations. In other countries, however, more than in France, the analysis of market conditions is not so closely associated with the consideration of the psychology of the mass.

It may be due to the fact that France, only through long centuries, has attained her republican form of government. The patient conquest of royalty has founded our territorial unity. The régime of centralized administration, the unification of customs, the adoption of the Napoleonic code, the triumph of the ideas fostered by the Revolution, the diffusion of education throughout the country, have tended to bring about our intellectual unity.

Our provinces, of course, conserve with pride their individual traditions, but the collective spirit overshadows regional variations. At the same time there has been a gradual disappearance of the barriers which in other countries rigorously mark off the different social classes.

There is an "esprit Francais," there exists a French flavor to which the man of the people is not a stranger. The recent transformation brought about by the displacement of wealth and the elevation of the social level of the working and peasant classes has had as a consequence the introduction of standard luxuries among the mass of the people. In France, also, the small farmer today possesses his automobile, and the same radio outfit is likely to be found in the home of the worker and in that of the engineer. Under such conditions, it is with temerity we seek to determine the rules which apply to the French consuming public as a whole.

Toward the middle of the last century there was a German who had a passionate interest in liberal ideas. As the climate of Prussia was not very propitious for the rearing of subversive doctrines, he came to Paris to seek light and air. This man, Louis Borne, has given, in a series of letters, his impressions of our capital, and one of the traits which struck him most is the ardent taste of the Parisian people for reading.

Borne shows us, in succession, the elegant strollers of the Palais Royal, the cab drivers, the butcher's boy or the pastry cook, even the vegetable sellers, with a book or paper in their hands. We have, there, a sign of the intellectual curiosity which is so vital in our race.

This taste for reading predisposes the French public to be influenced by written publicity, but of course, it is necessary that the publicity take account of their habitudes or their intellectual needs.

We desire not only to apprehend but to comprehend. The curiosity of the French is much more rational than imaginative or sentimental. We like to know the reason for things, we like to penetrate behind appearances to the deeper realities and we gladly allow ourselves to be drawn by technical research beyond the limits of immediate utility.

Our American friends, who are fond of classification, conclude from this that we are above all attracted by explanatory publicity (the "reason why" copy). And they are right. Whoever explains to us how things are made holds our attention and arouses our interest. Sometimes our curiosity goes as far as indiscretion.

A French merchant who happened to be in New York one day had occasion to look over a new model of a prominent make of American automobile. The salesman waxed eloquent over the qualities of the car, its speed, its suppleness, its strength, its comfort. The French buyer interrupted him continually with technical questions about the motor, the valves, the carburetor, the suspension, until at last the bothered salesman said to him, not without humor, "When you buy pills from a druggist, you don't demand that he make a chemical analysis of them before your eyes."

A French house wished to satisfy that technical curiosity. At each showing of its cars, it presented a machine with all its mechanism exposed, and the circle of interested spectators proved the publicity value of that demonstration.

But, even if we love to hear explanations, we are thankful to those furnishing them not to make them too long nor too involved. The advertising man who addresses the French buying public should not inflict upon it a complete analysis, but should rather indicate only the essential argument. It is necessary to leave something for individual research. During the classical epoch, which was the Reign of Reason, our sermons had three points and our tragedies five acts. Let us retain those traditional figures.

The habit of reasoning and of analysis of the French has developed a critical spirit among them. The old Cartesian maxim, "Do not admit anything to be true that one has never plainly recognized to be so," although it is used not only by philosophical constructors of systems, it directs, consciously or unconsciously, all the ways of our thoughts.

The French buying public will not immediately accept categorical affirmations. The command to the public so often employed by American advertisers, "Do this," or "Buy that," runs the danger of alienating the reader rather than convincing him. For the critical spirit is the base of our individualism.

Even the uneducated man among us despises the sheep spirit. The example of his neighbor rarely serves him as a principle of conduct; he wishes to follow his own devices, sometimes even at the sacrifice of good sense. The imitative suggestion is, with us, a very uncertain advertising method. Such references have value only if they emanate from a person known as a scientific authority or as a professional expert.

The citizen of a French city who learns that already 999 persons own a car of the X make, will not evince any desire to make the number an even 1,000. Quite the contrary, he is likely to show a violent inclination for the make Z and to wish to distinguish himself by buying a car of that make.

A furniture manufacturer would be very ill advised if, in order to induce the public to buy a particular set of living room furniture, he announced that the same set might be seen in a dozen of the most prominent living rooms of the city. The word "standard" is so little familiar to us that we have no French term which translates it. The sale of standardized articles will never have a large development in France. Our colleagues from abroad must not forget that the Frenchman dislikes cigarettes in packages, preferring to roll his own.

Our critical and individualistic spirit is the cause of the distrust which we have for any appearance of cajolement through sentiment. The advertising man should use with a great deal of moderation any appeal to the sentiment of the public. Any too violent effort overshoots the mark, and provokes an ironical reaction. Even the man of the people resists appeals to his emotions for fear of undergoing ridicule.

The task is therefore difficult; either the appeal risks remaining too thin and without effect, or it is likely to become too violent and lose all usefulness.

And there appears the essential quality of the French spirit; measure in all things, that heritage of a secular civilization, that attitude which sometimes crushes grand enthusiasm but which often wards off capital error.

There is nevertheless one form of feeling to which the French public is always receptive, esthetic emotion. We have a tendency to consider things under the aspect of beauty. It seems that the Greeks must have left us their dogma of the identity of the good and the beautiful. Even such a skeptic as Anatole France puts aside all his irony when he speaks of beauty and praises its eternal virtue.

The French buying public will be naturally tempted to draw conclusions from the charm of appearances as to the worth of interior qualities. If moralists recall that it is not wise to judge by appearances their words will not carry conviction. Between two products of the same usefulness and the same quality, the buyer will choose without hesitation the one which is presented to him under the most pleasing aspect. Our perfumers study the shape of their flask not less than the perfection of their essences.

The elegance of the product demands also the dignity of the setting in which it is presented. The International Exposition of the Decorative Arts held in Paris in 1925, showed how far esthetic detail may go in the architecture of shops and the technique of display. There also it is the choice idea which dominates. The display window of a French shop strives less to suggest the abundance of merchandise offered than to emphasize certain characteristic selections.

In the same way, we desire that an announcement or a poster shall be carefully composed, that is to say that it lead up through well chosen devices to a general idea. The disposition of the characters, the introduction of the subject, the choice of the color, the adaptation of the text should join to give an impression of unity, as the elements of a Greek temple harmonize in a perfect whole.

But the rules of esthetics apply not only to the plastic arts; they are capable of guiding every sort of human activity. They are mechanical elegances, and the French are extremely sensitive to them. They like to feel in a machine the judicious economy of material, the strict adaptation of all the parts, the simplicity of transmission, the geometric sobriety of the lines of the whole.

In a word, the French appreciate "well finished" articles. We have behind us a long tradition of skilled artisanship. The craftsman, before becoming a master, had to construct his masterpiece and the masterpiece was the fruit of reflection and of labor through long years.

This taste for "finish" has not disappeared before the advantages of mechanical production nor the appeal of the bargain.

Such are some of the characteristic traits of the commercial psychology of the average Frenchman.

The French buying public will not permit itself willingly to be conquered by pure force. It defies flashy and violent enterprises. On the other hand, it is open to persuasion. It listens gladly to technical explanations and precise information. It likes carefulness in measure, and appreciates signs of good taste. It responds to appeals to its sentiment on condition that they are discreetly presented. It makes its choice with an eye toward pleasant shapes and judicious proportions. It is a stickler for quality.

To conquer the French market is, then, a task which demands delicate adjustments and which carries many difficulties. But the merchant who perseveres in his efforts is assured of a lasting success.

The French buying public, if it shows itself reserved at the outset, afterward practices the virtue of fidelity.

ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL
of the
TECHNICAL PRESS SYNDICATE OF FRANCE

President
H. Mounier, Director of l'Industrie Chimique

Vice-Presidents
H. Didier, Director of l'Usine
G. Ravisse, Director of Mon Bureau

General Secretary
M. Grouard, Director of La France Forestiere et Industrielle

Treasurer
G. Marq, Director of Fers et Quincaillerie

Vice-Treasurer
U. J. Thuau, Director of Cuir

Vice-Secretary General
J. F. Dutheil, Director of La Revue de l'Ameublement

Former Presidents
M. Bernardot, Director of Automobilia
M. Blondel, Director of La Revue des Produits Chimique

Counsellors
P. Argence, Director of Ganterie and Parfumerie Moderne
P. Couturaud, Director of Chaleur et Industrie
P. Huguet, Director of La Metallurgie
L. Germain, Director of Phosphate et Engrais Chimiques
Ed. Langlois, Director of Les Imprimeurs

French Statistics

The Republic of France in Europe possesses an area of 212,659 square miles, with a population of 39,402,739 according to a recent census. On this basis the population per square mile is 184.4. Paris, the capital city has a population of 2,907,000, the fifth city in size in the world.

LE JOURNAL

100, RUE DE RICHELIEU, PARIS

Founded in 1892 by F. Xau, "Le Journal" is the best edited, the most attractive and the most complete of all the great French dailies.

The most brilliant contributors of France meet in its columns: political figures especially well qualified to treat of the questions of the day; special writers sent all over the world to cover big news events and to report picturesque happenings; short story writers and novelists who maintain the brilliant and vivid literary traditions; artists who follow the reality of life from day to day with a sure touch and a biting humor in their commentaries, which make them the court of last appeal in the realms of irony and common sense.

Through a special adaptation of machinery the rotary presses of "Le Journal" can turn out millions of copies a day at a high speed, with designs perfectly reproduced in several colors on each page.

The great business houses and other organizations which seek to influence public opinion, the great thinkers who wish to launch a new idea, know as do the advertisers who wish to launch a product or an enterprise, that the articles, the news and the advertising in "Le Journal" reach every class of society.

Advertising in "Le Journal" always brings the customer sought.

All information, all schedules and estimates, are freely furnished on request by: Société "JOURNAL-PUBLICITÉ," which controls all advertising in "Le Journal." The offices of this organization in Paris are at 102 rue de Richelieu.

The above photos represent: THE RESTAURANT, THE COMPOSING ROOM, and THE JOURNAL BUILDING, rue de Richelieu, close to the Grands Boulevards.

SERVING AMERICAN TOURISTS WITH DAY'S NEWS

How Paris Edition of New York Herald Tribune Caters to Travelers and the American Colony in Europe—Story of the Founding and Progress of Bennett's Foreign Venture

By ALBERT G. LANEY

STATISTICS show that half a million Americans come to Europe annually as tourists, for visits of from a few weeks to several months. In addition there are in Paris, England and on the Continent, at least 50,000 permanent American residents. From these two classes the reading group of the New York Herald, European edition of the New York Herald Tribune, is made up, and considering the sort of persons included, it represents probably the highest class of readers in any reading group in the world and the most highly concentrated buying power.

Considering these facts it is surprising to find that the New York Herald of Paris, founded by James Gordon Bennett in 1887, but operating as a metropolitan newspaper, serving a highly concentrated and unusual reading and advertising group, is less than six years old.

This seemingly paradoxical statement is easily explained by the fact that Laurence Hills, present Managing Director of the Herald, assumed his position in March of 1920 and during these six short years, has brought the paper from a small organ chronicling the social doings of prominent Americans in Europe in four pages, to its present commanding position in the European field, requiring an average of ten pages daily, and often twelve, fourteen and even sixteen pages, to carry its average of 2,000,000 agate lines of advertising each year, and spending upwards of 1,000,000 francs a year on cable tolls alone.

The story of the progress of the New York Herald of Paris from its inception in 1887 on a whim of the late James Gordon Bennett, to the opening of the tourist season of 1926, is one of the most interesting in the entire field of Journalism.

It is the story of the satisfying of a great man's hobby through many years in the face of tremendous losses, followed by a period of remarkable activity and remarkable achievement during the strenuous days of the World War, which was in turn followed by another period of depression, from a newspaper publishing standpoint, when the paper dropped back into the rut of small and unimportant chroniclings.

This period seemed likely to continue indefinitely in the life of the Herald when the American troops left French soil, and but for the happy circumstance that the right man was chosen for the job of conducting its affairs, it might even today be jogging along in the same rut.

The War history of the Herald under James Gordon Bennett is worth a volume alone. It is not generally known that the Herald was the only newspaper in English, and one of the very few in any language published in Paris during the trying days when the German Army battered at the doors and was finally stopped by Marshall Joffre at the first battle of the Marne.

That it was published, and did not miss an edition during all that time, was entirely due to the determination of Mr. Bennett not to give in before the overwhelming German threat when many publications had moved to Bordeaux. It established a reputation during those days, a reputation that will continue with it as long as it exists.

There is a story told around the Herald office—it has now become a tradition—of how Mr. Bennett came to the city room that memorable night when everyone believed beyond doubt that the German horde would march into Paris on the next day. He found his City Editor gone, out of Paris while it was still possible, only a semblance of a staff left and a mechanical force made up of a mere handful of men.

Mr. Bennett called this little group into the front office for a conference that has become historic. He could blame no one for quitting Paris along with the throngs crowding every exit, he said. It was dangerous to stay. But if enough men would stand by him the Herald would come out next morning and every day until the Prussians came. He would only cease publication, he said, when it could no longer be accomplished free of Prussian domination, and he sent his men back to work, having been assured that they would stick, with a lusty "To Hell with the Prussians."

LAURENCE HILLS

Managing Director European Edition New York Herald

In 1918 and the first half of 1919, when France swarmed with American soldiers, the Herald reached its peak of circulation, frequently selling as many as 400,000 copies in a single day. With the departure of the troops, however, it again began to fall back, and when the late Mr. Munsey acquired it along with the New York edition, it was considered, to say the least, a liability likely to eat up a large portion of the profits of the New York edition, and something perhaps to be carried along for the sake of the tradition and the reputation established during the War, but a liability to be operated with the smallest staff possible and at an absolute minimum of expense.

At about this time Mr. Munsey sent Laurence Hills to Europe as correspondent for the Sun in Paris and to cover the Peace Conference at Versailles and the later meeting of the League of Nations Council at Geneva. This done, Mr. Hills was literally shoved into the job of director of the Herald, with instructions to do his best to keep expenses down and the policy of the paper within its scope and possibilities as Mr. Munsey conceived them.

Mr. Munsey's conception, from the first, was at odds with that of Mr. Hills, and one need only glance through any edition of the Herald today to realize that Mr. Munsey, successful as he was as a newspaper publisher, was in the wrong.

He was thoroughly convinced that an American newspaper published in Europe could never be a success and that the mere expense of making it a real newspaper would run into millions of dollars yearly. His ideas on the subject are best illustrated in his clear, though as it afterward appeared, rather faulty analysis of the situation, given to Mr. Hills at the time the latter took charge of the paper in March, 1920.

"The first thing necessary to the wise handling of any undertaking," Mr. Munsey said, "is to see clearly the scope and purpose of that undertaking. Hence let me put you right with regard to the scope and purpose of the Paris edition of the New York Herald.

"First, its purpose is to mirror the whereabouts and doings of Americans in Paris primarily, and in a general way, Americans scattered throughout Europe.

"Eliminate that purpose from the paper and it would have no excuse for existing. In the very nature of the case it cannot be a great newspaper, printed in a foreign language in Paris. Its clientele is of necessity small, very very small, and this means in turn, a small, very, very small revenue, and without a big revenue, big expenditures cannot be made except at a loss to the owner of the newspaper.

"The Paris edition of the New York Herald has always been misunderstood by American travellers abroad. These Americans, without stopping to reason, expect that little paper to carry all the American news, and in a word be practically as complete as is a New York newspaper.

"Well, what would this mean? It would mean that cable tolls alone, reproducing a New York newspaper in Paris, would run into millions of dollars, many millions of dollars annually, and with merely a pittance of revenue with which to meet these tolls. Again, a paper large enough to carry all this American news, and to be the well balanced, complete newspaper that the American would have it, could not be less than twelve pages in size.

"This would mean a large staff of type setters, a large staff of editors, a large staff of reporters, a large staff fore and aft, including stereotypers and printers. Such a paper, with no more revenue than can be squeezed out of the Paris paper, would mean a loss that would run beyond five millions of dollars a year in Paris, and that would hardly look good to some of those Americans who criticize the Paris edition of the New York Herald for not being everything their American papers are.

"Still again, one of the conditions of Mr. Bennett's permit to bring out the Paris edition of the Herald was that his paper should not meddle with political matters in France, and should be altogether neutral in every way in containing no matter that would be disturbing or annoying to France. In the big sense of a fairly developed newspaper, the Paris edition of the New York Herald does not exist and never can exist. The revenue is not there to justify it, the circulation is not there to justify it. There is nothing there to justify it. Consequently it is a question of publishing a paper for the purpose for which it was established, holding strictly to that purpose, or to abandon the enterprise. And all this means, if the purpose is to continue, economy, simplicity, and freedom from pretense and splurge. The readers of the Paris edition of the New York Herald buy the paper primarily to see who's who, where he is and what he is doing. And they buy it in the main, for no other purpose."

When Mr. Munsey made these statements the Herald might be described as being at its lowest ebb. Within six months afterward he was presented with figures to show that his paper, for the existence of which there was in his mind, no justification, had made a profit, and he lived to see it become the most important American newspaper published outside of the continental limits of the United States, absolutely dominating the field within its circulating radius and catering to a more select and highly concentrated reading group probably than any other daily paper in the world.

He saw it, in fact, become the metropolitan daily that he had visualized as utterly impossible, put out by a highly trained staff and a highly efficient mechanical department, on the basis of a cable service which he conceived to be entirely beyond the realms of the possible. And he saw, moreover, a yearly turnover of more than 10,000,000 francs by a paper which, in his own words "does not exist and never can exist" as a fairly developed newspaper.

To Mr. Munsey's credit, however, it must be said that once it was demonstrated his conception was wrong, he lent ready and wholehearted co-operation to the progress of the Herald to its present position, until he relinquished control of both newspapers to Mr. Ogden Reid, in 1924. Otherwise it would have been as he said, utterly impossible.

Comparing the Herald of today with Mr. Munsey's conception of it in 1920 is perhaps the most forceful way of demonstrating its importance in the newspaper field.

Laying down as its primary purpose the mirroring of the whereabouts and doings of Americans in Europe, he said that if this purpose were eliminated the paper would have no excuse for existing. This purpose, naturally, has not been eliminated. Rather it has been enlarged and expanded until today the doings of Americans in every Capital and resort city of Europe are faithfully and interestingly recorded in its columns every day. During the winter, the Herald publishes a daily Riviera Edition and every day in the year a London Edition.

Its clientele, he said, is of necessity very, very small, but the number of readers of the Herald today is limited only

(Continued on page F16)

MARSEILLES, The Old Harbor, the Carrier Bridge, and the Church of Notre Dame de la Garde

MARSEILLES The first French harbor
The Colonial Gateway of France
Queen of the Mediterranean

MARSEILLES Second City of France
Unrivalled as a center of commerce, industry and maritime activities

LA PROVENCE Garden Spot of France
Richest, most beautiful, fastest developing region

Published in the largest French Provincial City and circulating through twenty of the most attractive Departments of France,

Le Petit Provencal

is the most important regional daily in the South of France. Printed at Marseilles its special leased wires connect it directly with its offices in Paris and Nice.

Because of its large circulation and great influence in its twenty Departments

Le Petit Provencal

Occupies a leading position among the dailies of the French Provinces
Advertising orders received at the Marseilles offices, 75 rue de la Darse; at the Paris offices, 3 rue de la Bourse; and through the Havas Agency.

SERVING U. S. TOURISTS WITH DAY'S NEWS

(Continued from page F14)

by the number of Americans in Europe and it is read daily by thousands of English speaking Europeans.

His ideas on the subject of revenue are strikingly answered by the 10,000,000 franc yearly turnover.

A paper large enough to carry the American news and to be well balanced and complete, Mr. Munsey believed, could not be less than twelve pages in size. Since the Fall of 1925, when the high tide of European travel had finished for the season, the Herald has frequently run over his twelve-page limit in order to carry its volume of advertising and news, both cable and European.

Cable tolls could not possibly be offset, he said, by the pitiful revenue possible to a paper in Paris. The Herald will spend close to 1,000,000 francs on cable tolls in 1926, in addition to its special leased wire, United Press service and its direct wire to London, over which thousands of words of news come each night. This expenditure on daily cable news, by far the largest of any English language paper published in Europe, is possible only because the revenue has mounted steadily since the paper was first put under an efficient business management and an intelligent editorial policy.

But more important still perhaps, and an item not even considered by Mr. Munsey, the Herald's daily cabled stock and bond quotations exceed by forty per cent all other cabled lists in Europe. For this reason it is taken by every large financial institution on the Continent and by foreign holders of American securities.

The growth and expansion of the Herald during these last six years, however, was not unattended by adversities, the most important of which bears recording because it marks an accomplishment in daily newspaper production that is probably unique.

On the morning of February 10, 1922, a little less than a year after Mr. Hills had taken over the Herald and at a time when it was beginning to establish itself upon a firm financial basis, the French Compositors' Union suddenly, and without warning, presented a twenty-four hour ultimatum to both the Herald and the London Daily Mail, demanding a big increase in pay over the differential union rate plus, which they had always been allowed for setting English matter.

The demand was immediately refused and when it became evident that the men would not show up for work that night, even though the ultimatum should have carried over until the following day, Mr. Hills called a meeting with the managing directors of the Mail and together with them worked out a scheme with which the Union was successfully fought and which brought the men back to work at the old scale at the end of six weeks of idleness.

Those first editions of the Herald and the Mail were put out as photographed typewritten manuscript from plates photo-engraved in the Daily Mail plant, and appeared on the streets of Paris next morning as four pages of typewritten matter, entirely without advertising.

This process continued for about a week until gradually the two papers working in conjunction, were able to have an increasing amount of matter set in widely scattered job printing plants throughout Paris, and to run again a few small advertisements. Little by little more printing began to appear, until at the end of the six weeks, when it became evident to Union leaders that their cause was hopeless, both papers were appearing on the streets with a minimum of photo-engraved matter and almost their full quota of display advertisements. The men came back without further arbitration and since that time there has been no dissension in the mechanical forces of either paper.

The growth of the Herald continues today and its possibilities for expansion can hardly be estimated. With the advent of the 1926 tourist army it enters upon the period of its greatest prosperity.

On May 1, 1926, the Herald printed for the first time, a new Mid-European edition, in addition to its regular Paris and London editions. This new venture, leaving Paris by airplane in the early morning of May 1, reached Berlin several hours later and throughout May Day was the only newspaper offered for sale on the streets of the German Capital, due to the annual May Day holiday customary throughout Europe. The Mid-European edition has now become a daily feature of the newspaper.

On Sunday, May 2, the Herald presented the first transatlantic radio-photograph ever printed in a Continental newspaper, a picture snapped at three fifty o'clock on the Friday afternoon before during the third race at the Jamaica, L. I. race track. This feat marked a new epoch in international journalism just as did the Herald's initiative in bringing the first typesetting machine to Europe many years ago.

The Herald followed this feat the next day, Monday, May 3, with the publication of an advertisement of the John Wanamaker stores, transmitted by the newly perfected radio-photographic method from New York.

The French Railway System

France has six great railway systems constructed under various concessions which expire at various dates from 1950 to 1960, when they revert to the State. They represent an installment cost of 25,000,000,000 francs. These with their mileage in 1922 were : Nord, 2,380; Est, 3,124; Paris-Orleans, 4,641; Paris-Lyon-Mediterranee, 6,078; Midi, 2,560; Ouest-Etat, 5,599; total mileage 24,382. The Alsace-Lorraine system of railway has a mileage of 1,384, making a grand total mileage of 25,766.

The Ouest-Etat and the Alsace-Lorraine lines are operated by the State, through the Ministry of Public Works.

Of the main lines, 1,030 miles were destroyed in the war.

All had been rebuilt by May 1, 1921.

GILLES DUROULET

AMONG the delegates who came from France to attend the A. A. C. W. convention in Philadelphia, is Gilles Duroulet, Chief of the Provincial Department of Agence Havas. Gilles Duroulet was born in 1896, acquired his education in the Secondary Schools of Paris and was a student at the University of Paris for the degree of Chemical Engineer when his studies were interrupted by the World War in 1914.

GILLES DUROULET

He entered the French Army as an enlisted man of Infantry in December of that year, although he was still under the military age, and left for the front as a candidate for commission, in May of the following year. He was successively promoted to the grades of Second and First Lieutenant and was later attached to the General Staff of an American Division, in which capacity he remained until the close of the War.

During the War he was cited in orders five times, awarded the Croix de Guerre, and after being wounded was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Demobilized in 1919, he entered the service of Agence Havas as Assistant to the General Secretary.

He held this position until February of 1925, when he became Assistant to the Manager of the Lyons Branch, then promoted to his present position.

In April, 1922, Mr. Duroulet was sent to the United States to make a study of advertising conditions and while there attended the Press Congress at the Waldorf-Astoria and later was a delegate to the Ninth Foreign Trade Convention at the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia.

Paris is not the whole of France.

Industrialists, business men and merchants who advertise in Paris may think that they have addressed the entire country.

This is a mistake.

For in France there are many different regions each with its peculiarities and individualities. This fact led to the establishment of the Regional Press of France, each newspaper peculiar to the section in which it is published..

One of the richest of these sections, with dense population and important industries, extending from the Alps on the East to the Rhone on the North and West and to Provence on the South, is the "Alpes Francaises," including seven Departments with 2,200,000 inhabitants.

Its capital unquestionably is Grenoble and its special newspaper is

LE PETIT DAUPHINOIS

LE PETIT DAUPHINOIS, DIRECTOR JOSEPH BESSON (1890-1919)

1st —First as to order of importance and the first to reach its readers throughout the "Alpes Francaises" Le Petit Dauphinois is a great daily which purveys the news impartially. It circulates in a region, far removed from Paris and reaches its readers twelve hours ahead of the Paris newspapers.

First on the street due to its special automobile delivery service.

Special leased wires from the editorial rooms to the great news agencies in Paris. Its great volume of local news makes it the favorite journal of planters, working men, merchants and manufacturers. First as to circulation and first as to returns from advertising.

During the summer season Le Petit Dauphinois has a large clientele of tourists, both French and Foreigners passing through the resort cities of Grenoble, Annecy, Chambery, Valence and Briancon, travelling along the "Routes des Alpes", climbing Mont Blanc and the Alpes, sojourning at the Lakes or at the famous resorts of Chamonix, Aix-les-Bains, Evian, Thonon, Uriage, etc., making for this section a social life corresponding to the life of the Riviera during the winter season.

Le Petit Dauphinois, which brings to them the news of the entire world each morning is the connecting link between them and their home countries.

ADVERTISING IN LE PETIT DAUPHINOIS IS FIRST CLASS ADVERTISING

L'ÉCHO DE PARIS

Henry Simond
Director, Editor-in-Chief

A Daily Morning Newspaper

Henry Simond
Director, Editor-in-Chief

Editorial Rooms and Business Offices, 6 Place de l'Opéra

Founded in 1883, this newspaper has acquired a position of the first rank in the Political, Economic and Literary life of France.

True to its line of conduct for the defense of the National interests, a line from which it has never departed, l'Echo de Paris for many years has seen its circulation constantly increasing. It is actually in the very first rank of the French Press.

Its principal contributors are among those authors and journalists of best reputation held in the highest appreciation by the public:

Général de Castelnau
Henry Bordeaux de l'Académie Française
Charles Benoist de l'Institut
Pertinax
Henri de Kerillis
Franc-Nohain
Marcel Hutin
and others

Paris Headquarters, 6 Place de l'Opéra

Publishes every week full or half pages on the following subjects:

Army and Navy
Colonial Life
Life in Foreign Countries
Religious and Social Life
Sporting Life
The World of Women
Scientific Treatises
Arts, Literature and Music
Children's Section

Advertising in l'ECHO DE PARIS, of a constantly increasing volume, brings particularly important results because of its de luxe clientele representing a vast buying power, because of the great number of newsdealers who handle it in all of the cities, towns and villages of France, and because of its moderate rates, judiciously studied.

HOUSE ORGAN IS POPULAR IN FRANCE

By PIERRE ARGENCE
Manager Agence Havas Branch at Lyons

A mode of publicity much used in the United States and which tends to become popular in France, is the employment of house organs, whose aspects, form and destination, may vary to infinity.

Their most simple shape is that of a periodical bulletin which merely relates the important facts in the industrial or commercial life of the house in question for the periodic information of its sales force, the staffs of its factories, and—in brief, all those who are directly attached to the firm.

Numerous examples of this sort exist in France and an effort has been made also to make through them an influence upon the tendencies and opinions of the workers.

In another direction some firms have edited publications of much less definite aspect, containing matter of less limited character and tending to imitate the review as much by diversity of their information as by a more attractive presentation. These firms, however, have clearly shown what are the purposes of these publications by giving them the name of their firm, such as Peugeot Revue, Benjamin Revue, etc. Other firms have created reviews of a more pretentious type along much more general lines and which, to judge at least by their appearance, do not seem to be connected as directly as others to such and such a house. For instance La Parfumerie Moderne which was formerly the organ of the Societe Francaise des Produits Aromatiques, but has now become an independent magazine; Art-Gout-Beaute, which defends the interests of the silk house of Albert Godde, Bedin & Cie; Le Chasseur Francais, whose object is to sell the products of the Manufacture Francaise d'Armes & Cycles de St. Etienne.

Many other examples could be named but it is no doubt sufficient to choose a few and explain their operation, though this would probably not teach anything new to our American friends who are already well informed in such matters.

La Parfumerie Moderne was created in 1908 by M. Gattefosse, and devoted, first, to propaganda in foreign lands for the sale of raw material for perfumery of French and foreign production. It is solely by means of this paper that a very modest firm has now become a rather powerful organization, exporting to all the markets of the world.

The magazine, which has an attractive appearance, still retains some of its original editorial staff but has now become an independent magazine, which, although it always contains the advertisements of the firm which created it, also receives all the advertising which is offered it, even that of firms competing with the Societe Francais des Produits Aromatiques.

One of the most attractive house organs is Art-Gout-Beaute, issued monthly and edited, as we mentioned before, by the firm of Albert Godde, Bedin & Cie., of Lyons. It is of an agreeable format, carefully edited and illustrated with drawings. This organ is issued in French, English and Spanish and is sent to all countries of the world.

The text is devoted exclusively to fashion, not only to frocks and costumes but also to hats and interior decorations for the home. It is said that the firm of Albert Godde, Bedin & Cie. during the first years, appropriated a million francs a year to establish this publication.

It owns its own printing shop, lithographing plant and bindery. The circulation of the magazine has been well handled as it is sent not only to selected addresses but is also for sale at the news stands of the Paris boulevards as well as in prominent French and foreign cities.

Le Chasseur Francais contains the type of advertising well known in the United States under the name of catalog houses, with a great variety of products.

La Manufacture Francaises des Armes & Cycles, produces merchandise in quantities. It sells everything relating to fishing, hunting, cycling and sports in general. It sells clothes, it sells boots, it sells also apparatus for agriculture. In brief, its activity extends to infinity, and it is therefore, I believe, one of the most American organizations that we have in France.

Le Chasseur Francais, whose subscription is priced very low, has a huge circulation amounting to 320,000 copies. This magazine has been incontestably the foundation of the success of the Manufacture des Armes & Cycles. The publication receives also, advertising for different products, on the condition, however, that they do not compete with the merchandise sold by the publisher.

Everybody interested in our business understands how rarely are united, under the direction of a thoroughly competent man, the editors, artists and technicians capable of preparing a perfect number each month, or twice a month.

If one adds to these difficulties of the general order, the difficulties peculiar to France, caused by the instability of the prices of labor and paper, it is apparent that the creation of house organs is a very difficult matter, especially if one considers that the daily and periodical French press offers as much circulation as one could wish for, and that at very reasonable rates.

HOUSE ORGAN EXPERT

Pierre Argence

TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN WOMEN

When the French Delegation to the A. A. C. W. arrived in New York last week they were received at City Hall by Mayor Walker.

Dr. Knecht, responding to an introduction by Louis Wiley, of the New York Times, made reference to American women, who, he said, would never be forgotten by France for their work in helping French orphans, hospitals and sick soldiers.

"I want to take this opportunity of paying tribute," he said "to the women of America who were the worthy companions of the great men who came to this country and built it up, despite the greatest of odds, into one of the greatest empires of the world, an empire of achievement and justice."

ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL SAMPLE FAIR OF LYONS

SPRING OF 1927 ~ March 7 to 20

In a Wonderful Building, unique as to its dimensions and conception, the Lyons International Fair presents

SAMPLES OF THE PRODUCTION OF THE ENTIRE WORLD

The last fair was visited by BUYERS FROM 47 NATIONS

THE LYONS FAIR is a permanent medium through which buyers and sellers of the entire world may come together at any time.

For all information apply to: HOTEL DE VILLE, LYONS
In the United States: M. EMILE GARDEN, 50 Church St., New York

He who merely skims a morning paper

20 centimes — LE PLUS FORT TIRAGE DES JOURNAUX DU SOIR — L'INTRANSIGEANT — Le Journal de Paris — Directeur: LEON BAILBY will thoroughly read his evening daily

BILLBOARDS BACK NEWSPAPER SPACE IN FRANCE

Average Budget Usually Includes Space on "Palisades" Which Abound in Larger Cities—Relied Upon to Create "Buyer Demand"—Use of Color in Posters Highly Developed

THE general advertising campaign for the exploitation of almost any product in France, from the presentation of the name and trade mark, through the educational and merchandising campaigns, to the business of keeping the name and advantages of the product constantly before the public once it has become known, includes that variety of publicity known as outdoor advertising perhaps to greater extent than in any other country. Posters, painted signs, electric signs and all manner of "affiches" are used extensively in an intensive intermediary campaign of follow-up and form one of the most effective methods of putting a product before the buying group known to the continent.

The procedure in most cases is this. The advertiser, through his agency, once his budget and general plan has been worked out. takes extensive display space in the daily, weekly. and monthly publications, the proportion allotted to each depending on the product itself and the group to which he wishes to appeal.

Through this space he attempts to introduce his product to the trade and to the consumer, explain its merits and to familiarize the general public with the new name and general appearance of the product. In a word, he argues for his product before the public and explains it at length.

Such a campaign of education, which is essential to the introduction of practically every product, may run for a considerable length of time, usually being limited only by the size of the budget and the extent of the follow-up campaigns contemplated. It is, however, invariably followed directly by the campaign of outdoor advertising, which in all cases is made as extensive and as thoroughgoing as possible. For it is upon this more than on anything else that the advertiser depends to create what in America is generally known as buyer interest. There are very few, one might say practically no products put over in a big way in France which have not taken advantage of the opportunity offered of reaching the consumer through this outside poster advertising.

In France one does not find the enormous number of billboards lining the enchanting highways, so much complained against in America, nor do the Grand Boulevards of Paris compare in brilliance with that marvellous stretch of illumination from the old Herald Square up beyond Columbus Circle, the famous Great White Way of New York, but all things considered and speaking comparatively, it probably is well within the truth to say that outdoor advertising is used more extensively in France than in America, is much more depended upon, taking all advertisers into consideration, and is, on the whole, a great deal more effective:

The foregoing is a statement that is, of course, open to question, but I doubt very much if it can be successfully refuted.

Looking up the Champs-Elysées to the Arc de Triomphe, showing on the left a typical "Palisade" for poster advertising, considered by French advertising men as the most effective kind of outdoor advertising. The temporary palisade takes the place of the American billboard.

The object of the outdoor poster campaign following what may be called the introduction and explanation of the product, is, reduced to its simplest terms, merely to recall by means of posters, sign boards, luminous signs, even if you please, the time-honored sandwich man, in fact, all manner of affiches, the product itself to the mind of the public, and to fix the trade-mark indelibly in the memory. In a word, an effective follow-up on the newspaper and magazine advertising.

After this object has been accomplished the advertiser and his agency settle on a permanent plan of advertising through the years, naturally subject to change and dependent on many things, principally the degree of success of the newspaper campaign and the outdoor follow-up to which it leads.

This procedure is followed in perhaps nine cases out of ten and advertising men generally have agreed that it is by all odds the most effective. Without the outdoor poster advertising they believe it would be next to impossible to be sure that absolutely every potential buyer in France has been reached. This belief is embodied in the common phrase among advertising men of France, "l'affichage est une publicité de compliment qui permet la saturation complète du marché."

The permanent advertising campaign to be carried on through the years naturally has its problems and must be worked out on a scientific basis, but that phase of the matter does not concern us in this discussion. It must be remembered however, that everything that goes before leads to the outdoor campaign and everything that comes afterward depends largely for its success upon the effectiveness of the poster advertising.

Let us then, examine a few of these examples of outdoor advertising in France.

Paris, and every other French city and village, is full of blank walls, upon many of which appears the warning "Defense d'Afficher," the good old American "Post No Bills," but there remain thousands where space is rented and these are always covered with the artistic and highly striking posters. These are known as "affiches sur murs" or wall posters, and are used extensively by all kinds of advertisers in their outdoor campaigns.

The various styles and sizes, run from the Colombier, of 80 by 60 centimetres, to the Quadruple Grand Aigle, of 220 by 140 centimetres, the prices depending upon the formats. These posters strike the eye in all parts of the French territory and they combine colors, one of the most important considerations in poster advertising, in an artistic manner that is appropriate, pleasing and distinctive.

The French advertising man has found that color has a direct influence on sales when used with the proper effect and so as to increase the individuality of the product advertised.

In addition to the regular wall space always available, there is also the more or less temporary space offered by the high board palisades, or fences, erected along the sidewalk lines of principal streets, to enclose new construction. There are no bill boards scattered about the cities as we find in almost any American city but these palisades serve the same purpose and are usually of much greater advertising value because of their choice locations.

Paris, though its roots sink back into the centuries, is yet constantly undergoing change and these palisades from time to time line the Boulevards. The extension of the Boulevard Haussmann to connect with the Grands Boulevards, for example, a project which has taken many months to accomplish and is even yet not entirely finished, has offered one of the finest emplacements for advertising posters ever known in France. Needless to say the advertisers and the agencies have taken advantage of this unusual opportunity and the pulling power of advertising placed thereon, has been most unusual.

Palisades of this kind constitute what the French advertising man calls "Hors-Serie" and are both far superior and much more expensive than the wall posters and the palisades situated in other sections of the big cities. This superiority comes first from the fact that they are visible to a greater number of persons and to a class that is ever ready to stop and read, and second, because of the latitude of treatment and the manner in which the advertising is prepared and presented.

The advertising panels may be either of paper pasted upon the board or metal background, or they may, if the palisade is to remain in place through a period of months, be painted directly upon the background itself, and their size, running from 30 metres to 100 metres, permits of the reproduction of advertisements on the grand scale with both perspective and artistic value. They are generally utilized for automobile, steamship or resort advertisements but are used to a certain extent by the larger department stores and commodity manufacturers.

Electric sign advertising, what the Frenchman calls "motifs lumineux," is of necessity reserved for the larger cities, and while it is not developed to the extent found in America, it still occupies an important place in the outdoor advertising campaign and will be found to be handled in a most effective manner, particularly in Paris.

There are, in point of fact, few animated signs along the Boulevards of Paris, but what there are are not only effective but based on a true understanding of the problem of reaching the consumer and holding his attention. The illuminated poster is gradually giving way to the animated sign however, because the latter may be had for about the same price as a sign constructed entirely of lights and the cost of operation is not prohibitive.

And so this form of outdoor advertising may be said to be in the first stage of its development but it gives promise within a few years of taking its place along with posters and palisades, from the point of view of importance.

A large proportion of the advertising coming under this general head consists in what is known as "Candélabre" advertising. That is to say, a square, box-

(Continued on page F22)

This gigantic electric sign, combining artistic treatment with effectiveness, was designed and set up in the Place de l'Opéra, in the heart of the French Capital, by:

L'AVENIR-PUBLICITÉ

ALL KINDS OF ADVERTISING

Société Anonyme au Capital de 3.000.000

25, BOULEVARD DES ITALIENS, PARIS - NEAR OPERA

The posters on the Billboards above were designed and posted by the same Agency:

"AVENIR-PUBLICITE," although a general Advertising Agency handling every class of publicity, makes a specialty of outdoor advertising and is the most important organization of its kind in France.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE FORGED PLOUGH FROM SWORD

Story of the Founding of the Famous Paris Edition—Now Successful Daily with Supplements Published at Berlin and on Riviera

By ARVID WESTLING of The Chicago Tribune

"L'EDITION Du Journal Americain Le Chicago Tribune."

This cry shouted through the boulevards of Paris on the morning of July 4, 1917, by the French newsboys greeted the American doughboys just arrived there, announcing the birth of a sheet printed in English and containing news of home.

With the image of countless farewells in his mind, Joseph Pierson, then assistant city editor of The Chicago Tribune, and now Cable Editor of that paper, had the happy idea of transporting a bit of the homeland across the seas to cheer our soldiers. He suggested to Col. Robert R. McCormick and Capt. Joseph M. Patterson, co-editors of The Tribune, a few days after America declared war, that a newspaper be founded in France for the American troops. After two weeks' consideration, they heartily approved of the idea, and placed upon Mr. Pierson the task of producing the sheet.

The project was submitted first to Secretary of War Baker, who welcomed the proposal provided the approval of General Pershing and of the French government was obtained. General Pershing unhesitatingly approved the plan and the French government granted permission following the favorable recommendations of Jules Jusserand, the French ambassador at Washington.

First, the problem of getting material into France was investigated. On the advice of Leo Loewenberg, foreman of The Tribune composing room, it was decided to take over mats, etc., and depend for the rest of equipment on the French shops.

The paper situation was the next problem tackled. The Tribune paper mills were unable to get a promise that paper would be delivered in France owing to the congestion of military freight. The paper question was the biggest chance of the whole undertaking. After consultation with the manager of The Tribune paper mills Mr. Pierson decided to depend on John Becker, a leading news print manufacturer of England, and one of the backers of Scott's expedition to the south pole in later years.

On Mr. Pierson's arrival in London after negotiating the German submarine blockade, however, Mr. Becker said it was impossible to send any paper over to France, as the supply was under rigid control in England. However, he suggested two or three possibilities in France, among them Darblay Bros. of Paris. Mr. Pierson arrived in Paris on June 26, 1917. After a careful consideration of the case Darblay Bros. arranged to rush a supply from the interior of France by motor trucks. The paper actually arrived in Paris on July 3.

Meanwhile, negotiations were being pursued for a print shop. This proved more difficult than had been expected, because every paper was short of men, and French women were doing most of the linotype work. Arrangements finally were concluded with Alexis Meunier, Paris magazine printer, for a job shop at 24 Rue Milton, in the Montmartre district. As the job shop had flat bed presses only, it was necessary for Darblays to cut the paper specially for the publication, and they continued to do so for about seven weeks.

There was not much American personnel available in Paris, but a hospitable French flying lieutenant who had been wounded, Pierre Barbou, took charge of all the details and saw that they were promptly executed. To this dapper and alert French gentleman, Mr. Pierson gives most credit for the speed with which the paper was produced.

It was determined to print the first paper on July 4, notwithstanding the shortness of time, as it was desired to take advantage of the fact that it was a great American holiday and also the first American soldiers were marching in Paris on that day. None of the linotype operators understood English, and composition the first night was disturbingly slow.

Considerable difficulty was experienced with the shortness of supply of some of the letters, as the French do not use many Y's or W's. This difficulty was ameliorated by changing words.

The makeup of the paper also developed several difficulties, as the French printers knew little of American newspaper methods. Leads and other paraphernalia failed to fit and numerous alterations had to be made. The proofs were very dirty and had to be read three times. The shop continued working all night, until about 10 o'clock the next morning, when it was decided to go to press.

Just then, however, the French censor called up and killed about two columns of type. It was imperative to go to press at once if the paper was to be sold along the parade, so most of the sheet was leaded with six point slugs and the presses began to whir and slash. The first day also was complicated by the failure of the news cable from Chicago to arrive. Consequently, the paper was filled up with the arrival of Americans in France and other items gleaned from various magnanimous American correspondents.

About 2,500 copies were printed the first day, half of which were sent to St. Nazaire, the first American army camp in France, where the soldiers had landed a few days before. The supply in Paris was sold out within an hour.

The paper experienced a hard struggle the first two weeks, without any staff, getting most of its material from Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent for The Tribune; Hal O'Flaherty, then war correspondent for the New York Sun, now Chicago Daily News chief in London, and the Associated Press and United Press correspondents. After a few days a staff was employed—Peggy Hull of El Paso, who had arrived as correspondent for the El Paso Morning Times. She now is Peggy Hull Kinley of Shanghai, China.

After about three weeks a second member of the staff was employed, Victor Frank, who had lived in Paris practically all his life. About August 1, Lloyd Ross Blynn, a Philadelphia newspaper man, was employed and from then on the office was a constant turnover of young newspaper men from the United States who just had arrived in France or had been there for some time. Most of them got employment on the paper to bridge over the period in which they sought to be transferred from the ambulance service or other armies to active service in the American army. Among these were George Seldes, correspondent for The Chicago Tribune, at present in Syria; Howard Williams, Bert Kiley, Howard Kahn, now of the St. Paul Daily News, and others.

About the middle of August the staff was honored with the addition of Ruth Hale, then the bride of only a few weeks of Heywood Broun, then war correspondent for the New York Tribune, now columnist on The World.

About this time it was decided to get a prominent place for the business and service offices of the paper. Owing to the congestion in Paris, this proved difficult until Gustave Cornuche, manager of Maxims, agreed to rent the second floor of that world famed restaurant and cafe in the Rue Royale.

About Sept. 1 the first serious effort was made to get advertising, and an advertising manager was engaged. The circulation at that time was running about 4,500.

Owing to the secrecy with which the American army was brought into France, nothing could be learned of the location of its units, except by actually touring the country, which was done. A unique scoop was accomplished also about this time when an airplane was engaged to drop large bundles of the paper right into the rifle pits in the front line trenches of the American forces near Verdun. These paper had front page stories about the fighting in this sector, and the troops engaged in a rough and tumble fight among themselves to secure copies.

About November, the Chicago office sent over two important persons, James Sullivan of the circulation department of The Tribune, and now circulation manager of the New York Daily News, and Charles Weidman, now in the newspaper business in California. Mr. Weidman was the bookkeeper. Up to the time of his arrival, the books had been kept by shoving deposit slips, cancelled checks, receipted bills, and expense statements in the large two bushel drawer of the French desk.

About the middle of November, the circulation had grown to such a point that changes were necessary. Le Petit Journal was engaged to print the paper on a rotary press and to circulate it through its local agents in France.

About this time two carloads of flat news print had wormed their way through the congested shipping to Bordeaux, and, through the courtesy of the American army commander these had been sent to Paris. It could not be used on the rotaries and had to be sold.

After the arrival of Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Weidman and with the increased number of Americans, especially newspaper men around Paris, the management of the sheet became easier. Newspaper correspondents were very free with their assistance, like Junius Wood of the Chicago Daily News, Maj. Frederick Palmer of the Army press section, those previously mentioned and others.

About November the American army installed a censorship bureau. The French censorship always had been considered "brutal and intolerant," but under the careful personal direction of Maj. Dennis Nolan, chief intelligence officer of the A. E. F., and now a major general, representing the United States at the disarmament conference at Geneva, the American censorship bureau set the pace, in the opinion of the Paris Edition night editor, for unreasoning cruelty to the product of hard working men.

About Jan. 1, 1918, when the big movement of Americans started into France, the circulation arose correspondingly, and about Feb. 1 about 15,000 papers were being printed daily. About March 1 the circulation reached about 23,000. It attained a circulation about armistice time of about 100,000. The profits of the paper during the war (about $20,000) were donated to the American Army regimental funds.

The paper now is firmly established, and is one of the most influential and widely quoted on the continent. The subscribers include several of the royal families of Europe. Its editorials are circulated by an English syndicate and printed in many English papers. The paper is still being turned out by Le Petit Journal under the contract made by Mr. Pierson in 1917. A supplement also is being published in Berlin, and also one on the Riviera for the benefit of the American colonies there. The managing editor at the present time is Bernhard Ragner. David Darrah, managing editor for several years, is now on the Tribune Foreign News Staff at London.

BILLBOARDS BACK PARIS PRESS

(Continued from page F20)

like sign with sides of glass which carry the advertisement, encloses a high voltage electric lamp, which when illuminated, makes a striking display. These "candélabres" line the Boulevards of Paris and other large cities and are used mainly by theatres and other places of amusement, although regular advertisers are coming to use them more and more as their effectiveness is demonstrated. They take the place to a large extent of the enormous illuminated signs we find in American cities, and give a distinctly picturesque and enchanting atmosphere to Paris by night.

These methods of selling through attraction for the eye take in most of the more important divisions of outdoor advertising in France. They are supplemented, however, by a dozen or more less important means, each of which is included under its own sub-head, but which can be touched upon only lightly here.

Along the main arteries of travel up and down and across France, the roads used by automobiles, and bordering the trunk line railroads, one will find advertising signs, it is true, but they are never blatant. They are usually announcements of resort hotels with occasionally an automobile advertisement, but they are usually quite small and seldom out of harmony with the landscape.

In the street cars and buses in Paris and the Provinces, a very effective variety of small advertisement is used to advantage, though these do not properly come under the head of posters. They are generally used to tell the merits of such products as shoe polish or breakfast foods, and are almost invariably for products of national distribution.

Theatre program advertising, an important medium in America, especially in New York, is undeveloped in France. Programs are not given away as in America and during the last few years they have been sold so high not more than half of the audience ever takes the trouble to purchase them. They are confined in the main to announcements of the fact that Mlle. So-and-So's gowns were furnished by such and such a house and that the furniture and fixings of the stage were supplied by another.

Cinema advertising, which is handled by a large organization called "Ciné-Publicité," is at about the stage in France today that it was in America a decade or more ago, but is steadily decreasing. Many firms and products, particularly medicines, are advertised on the screens of practically every moving picture house, except the de luxe palaces in Paris, just as serials are still run, but the French public is coming more and more to demand a straight program of pictures and attractions, and it is believed that the time is not far distant when cinema publicity will be a thing of the past.

The sandwich-man, seldom seen in the principal streets of the cities of the United States any more, often takes on a fantastic aspect in France. If we include all schemes which utilize a human being in the advertisement of a particular product or place of business in the general term Sandwich-Man, then it must be said that this picturesque fellow still flourishes and waxes apace in France.

Absolutely unique as to its widespread circulation, the celebrated French periodical

L'ILLUSTRATION

Carries its advertising every week throughout France and the following countries:

Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Annam, Argentine, Austria, Belgium, Belgian Congo, Bolivia, Brazil, Bulgaria, British Indies, Canada, Cambodia, Czecho Slovakia, Ceylon, Chili, China, Cochin China, Colombia, Comorres, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Dahomey, Danzig, Denmark, Dutch Indies, Djibouti, East Africa, Egypt, Egyptian Soudan, England, Eritrea, Esthonia, Ethiopia, Ecuador, Finland, French Congo, Gambia, Germany, Gold Coast, Greece, Guadalupe, Guinea, Guiana, Gibraltar, Haiti, Holland, Honduras, Hungary, India, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Jamaica, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxemburg, Madagascar, Martinique, Mauritius, Malacca, Malta, Mexico, Malay States, New Caledonia, New Hebrides, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oceania, Palestine, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Persia, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Porto Rico, Portuguese Colonies, Republic of Dominica, Reunion, Roumania, Russia, Salvador, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Siam, Spain, Spanish Morocco, Sweden, Switzerland, South Africa, Soudan, Syria, Saint-Pierre Miquelon, Tasmania, Tonkin, Trinity, Tunis, Turkey, United States of America, Upper Senegal, Uruguay, Venezuela, Jugo Slavia.

L'Illustration is classed as the first illustrated magazine of the world. It is preeminently the paper in which to find topical events given with perfect photographic documentation and it also is the most qualified representative of the highest French artistic and literary culture. To each of its numbers is added a free supplement.

Each supplement contains a play or part of a novel or a striking motion picture production. Thus L'Illustration publishes annually about thirty new plays by the best authors. These, one is able to read simultaneously with their production in Paris and although in some other country at the time, may in effect take part in the real Parisian life.

L'Illustration, as may be seen by the diagram has subscribers and readers in every part of the world. In consequence its advertising has a universal range. Also its effect is permanent, for L'Illustration, being a universal source of documentation, is collected and continually consulted and reread.

Advertising in L'Illustration, moreover, is persuasive because L'Illustration accepts only advertisements from first class firms. The great American firms have clearly perceived how effective it is and not a single number of L'Illustration appears without Ford, General Motors, Mobiloil, Palmolive and other pages from firms.

L'ILLUSTRATION

has 133,453 subscribers and this number is constantly increasing.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Till July 1st, 1926—One year $8.50; 6 months $4.35; 3 months $2.25 From July 1st, 1926—One year $12.00; 6 months $6.20; 3 months $3.15

ADVERTISING RATES TILL DECEMBER 31st, 1926

Per line (Column width 2½ inches; minimum space three lines):

One insertion.. Per line..	24 francs.	Being		$ 0.80
12 inserts or 250 lines	23 —	in		$ 0.76
24 inserts or 500 lines.....	22 —	dollars		$ 0.73
52 inserts or 1,000 lines.....	20 —	approximately		$ 0.66

Serial rates for 12, 24 and 52 inserts, only for advertisements of similar size, appearing in 12, 24 and 52 numbers.

Per page (Type area 10½ x 14, prorata for half or quarter page):

Total 1 page in a year .....9.500 francs.			$320.00
— of 2 pages in a year...9.000 —			$300.00
— of 5 pages in a year...8.500 —	Being in dollars approximately		$290.00
— of 10 pages in a year..8.000 —			$270.00
— of 20 pages in a year..7.750 —			$260.00
1 single half page.....4.850 —			$160.00
1 single quarter page .....2.500 —			$ 85.00

Three colour pages on glazed paper, pages in colour rotogravure, in rotogravure, in tinted halftone and advertising by illustration and reading notices mixed with and following the editorial matter are also at the disposal of advertisers. In special numbers of a greater strike off prices are increased by 1,000 to 3,000 francs per page and 2 to 5 francs per line.

Any information required, options and tariff are immediately sent on request addressed to Service de la Publicité de L'Illustration, 13, rue St. Georges, Paris (9°). Cable address: Illustration-Paris.

160,000 copies of ordinary numbers and 220,000 copies for special numbers; such is the weekly output of

L'ILLUSTRATION

Which is periodically certified by l'Office français de Justification des Tirages (French A. B. C.)

FRENCH ADVERTISE TO WOMEN BUYERS WHO RULE HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES

Fashion and Family Magazines Read Largely by Women—Feminine Psychology Must Pervade Ad Copy to Make Sales Mount

By MARCEL DANNAUD
General Manager, Société Nouvelle de Publicité

IT is only natural that all of the big French reviews and magazines are centered in Paris since it is the natural center from which starts all of the intellectual and artistic movement of France. It is also quite natural that they should draw into their ranks of contributors practically every man of importance in France, specialists in Science, Sociology, Politics, Literature, etc., and the subjects of which they treat are not only of intense local interest, but have the whole world for their province. This extensive, documented play of ideas is going on continually in the French magazines and it includes every field of thought.

It is a decidedly wrong idea, but one entertained by a great many foreigners and transient visitors to France, to believe that the French are particularists and only interested in themselves. On the contrary, there is no spirit more affable, more curious and inquiring and finally more universal than the French spirit. And this spirit is reflected directly in the French reviews and magazines of the higher class.

One of the oldest magazines in France, the Revue des Deux Mondes has kept up for nearly a century the purpose and program indicated by its title and it is read today extensively in America and throughout the world.

I might also mention, among the literary-scientific magazines, the Revue de Paris, the Revue Bleue, the Revue Rose, the Renaissance and many others, about which more anon, but I can only mention in passing such technical magazines as l'Usine, l'Outillage, La Science et Industrie, La Science et la Vie and others devoting themselves to special subjects, because they cannot actually be comprised in the field of this study.

Also, unfortunately because of their high merit, we cannot consider the beautiful magazines devoted to the Arts, such as l'Art et les Artistes, l'Amour de l'Art, Art and Decoration, and l'Art Vivant in which the prominent critics publish most interesting articles illustrated with excellent copies of modern artistic works.

We must look more particularly at the magazines and illustrated reviews which come into direct contact with the public and, therefore, are of great interest to advertisers. In each country the general character of the press, and especially the big periodicals, depend upon and reflect directly the state of mind, the customs and the manners of its inhabitants.

In France, it appears obvious to the close observer that these big magazines and illustrated reviews of wide general interest, are almost exclusively read by women in the homes, a fact which may prove startling to Americans who have not visited the country. This is significant for it must be considered as the primary indication of the choice the advertiser will have to make among the mass of French magazines and reviews.

Another fact too often overlooked by the foreigner passing through France is the existence of the French "home," and it is wrongly believed in most foreign countries that the English word home has no equivalent either in the French language or the French mind. In France we call it the "foyer which means literally, home. The "foyer" is very strongly established in France and the family bonds are drawn more closely probably than in any other country. The whole structure of French life rests upon the home and this peculiarity must be taken into consideration in any view of the French as a people.

Aside from the travellers who come to France only for short visits, even the foreigners residing in our country more or less permanently seem to have small conception of the real meaning of the "foyer" and I believe that few of them appreciate the charm and dignity of the French home life because the Frenchman, in spite of his hospitality and friendliness does not easily welcome new friends into his private life.

Another story too often spread about in foreign countries is that the French woman is essentially frivolous and is interested only in her dresses and things pertaining to fashion. As a matter of fact the French woman is a first class housewife who manages her home perfectly, attending to the work personally and very often helping out with the cooking or doing it entirely.

Nearly every French woman is an excellent cook and it is this individual housewife who, through the centuries, has created the great renown of French cooking.

Much more so than in other countries, the French woman not only goes to the market herself to purchase the supplies for the household but she herself buys her own clothes and her children's and in a great majority of cases her husband's also. This is an almost invariable rule among the middle and lower classes and it holds true generally throughout French life.

All advertising for food, clothing, hygiene, furniture and practically everything used in the home or by members of the family, must be addressed directly to women and with the feminine psychology ever in mind. The French woman is quite naturally very much interested in the fashion periodicals which give to the world the latest innovations of the French creators, since Paris in this respect, sets the pace for the rest of the world.

As a consequence, fashion magazines on the one hand, and what may be classed as family magazines on the other, have a very great influence upon the French public.

Before reviewing hurriedly the larger French magazines it must be pointed out that we have in France no publications comparable to the great American papers such as the Ladies' Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post. It is as impossible to compare our magazines with these as to draw a parallel between the immense skyscrapers of New York and the Parisian buildings. Where in France is there a magazine which can certify a circulation of more than 2,000,000 copies each week?

At the same time the make-up and manner of presentation in our better magazines differs widely from that of the great American magazines. With us advertising is constantly, and effectively mixed with text, images and figures reproduced in color and of a high degree of perfection to animate the pages, the most diversified subjects are presented with a pleasant and apparent disorder, short stories and novels, biographies of the most celebrated persons, reproductions in color of the greatest works of art, latest fashions of Paris and New York, news of the world of women, all of which is presented, as in the Saturday Evening Post, without forgetting the realities, sports, industries, finance and commerce.

In short, a program infinitely vast because it is addressed to a vast public which wants to find everything in its favorite magazine.

The French magazines then, a list of the more important of which follows with a brief description of each, are of much smaller circulation, and they are of a more varied and intimate character corresponding to the French mentality, particularly the feminine mentality, because it is, as I say, women above all, who read them. It is to be hoped, however, that the French magazine of the American type will develop as modern life progresses toward a closer relation between American and French manners and modes of living, but actually, such a condition does not yet exist.

It is doubtful indeed, if it will ever come, considering the excessive cost of good stock paper and a certain instinctive dislike for publicity that exists in France. Or perhaps it is simply the fact that the French public is not yet sufficiently educated in that respect. Nevertheless, with their particular tastes and habits the group of French magazines which I shall describe briefly, represents a great force in our life and practically the only means of reaching the élite of the French public.

These publications must be divided into two categories, Revues de Mode, or Fashion Magazines, and Revues Familiales or what we must call Family Magazines.

Apart from these two classes however, there is L'Illustration. This beautiful magazine is surely the most luxurious and the most artistic of all the French publications. It is addressed to the very highest class of readers and envisages practically the whole of contemporary life, the Arts, Literature, Politics, Science, etc. As its name indicates it is a magazine particularly rich in illustrations. The beauty of its paper and the excellence of its printing permits the use of beautiful photographs, reproductions in color to go with its text matter, and allows it to concentrate in each issue the widest number of activities, ceremonies, fêtes, expositions and art exhibitions throughout the world.

As the most important magazine of fashion and elegance we find Femina the beautiful woman's magazine read by the highest classes of society in many countries. Femina, because of its de luxe appearance and wide popularity is considered the best organ for the advertising of what we Frenchmen call "commerce de luxe." It carries the announcements of the greatest couturiers and space in its columns is considered essential to success.

This magazine is first of all artistic, and its originality of decoration is produced by first class artists in collaboration with some of our best known writers. It is, in a word the magazine best representative of fashion the world over.

It is perhaps unnecessary to describe Vogue, so well known in America, and I shall only say that it serves the same public as Femina and is in almost every respect, its equal.

After Femina one might mention as other fashion magazines which play important roles and are greatly appreciated by French women: Chiffons, l'Art et la Mode, Le Jardin des Modes, La Mode Pratique, La Femme Chic, etc., all of them beautifully illustrated and carrying a note distinctly Parisian.

As for Le Petit Echo de la Mode, a great deal less luxurious in its presentation and of a much more practical character, it merits, nevertheless, attention and interest because of its wide circulation among the classes which are not reached by the others.

Nos Loisirs, which might be translated "Our Leisure," is probably the best representative of the middle ground between the fashion magazine and the publications we call family magazines. It is widely read among the bourgeois class and is characterized by two qualities which clearly belong to the French woman, elegance and simplicity. Of a very agreeable presentation, Nos Loisirs attracts its readers by the quality of its articles on literature, education, and domestic economy, by the taste of its toilet department and by the thousands of bits of good advice for the mothers of families.

Less specially feminine, but addressed largely to the entire family we find only two magazines, Lectures Pour Tous and Les Annales which will appear favorably by comparison with the numerous magazines of this class published in America.

The appropriately named Lectures Pour Tous, which must be placed ahead of all other family magazines, is representative of modern life in France in all its aspects, a review of literature, art, the multiplicity of every day happenings, numerous interesting interviews and in all approaches very closely to the French mentality.

As for Annales it seems superfluous to add praise here for its reputation is thoroughly established. It is a family magazine, particularly a literary magazine, of wide circulation, which keeps abreast of contemporary intellectual movement.

I can only mention the beautiful encyclopedic magazines, in the fields of science, agriculture, sports, etc., such as Je Sais Tout, and La Vie a La Campagne, the latter of which approaches Town and Country and Country Life. These magazines appeal, not to a specialized group, but to a great public, especially people of wealth and taste.

One cannot conceive of an advertising campaign in France that does not include these magazines which we have sketched so hurriedly. All American advertising men must consider the mentality of the people making up the French market and must realize that the methods applied to selling their compatriots will not hold good on this side of the Atlantic.

A large part of the budget for advertising in France therefore, must be reserved for the periodicals which interest the French woman and her family.

PRESS INFLUENCE IN ART AND FASHION

Head of French Jewelry Syndicate Praises American Newspapers' News Service—Enjoy Favorable Relations

By G. FOUQUET-LAPAR
President of the Chambre Syndicale de la Bijouterie de la Joaillerie de l'Orfevrerie de Paris

There is no manifestation of applied art, in the most widely varying domain, which can escape the attention of the French press. If it is taken into consideration that, in the domain of the applied arts, the industry which has for its object the adornment of womanhood is an industry essentially Parisian, one will readily understand the close association which has never ceased to exist between the press of the capital and one of its most flourishing industries, that of jewelry.

In matters of art and fashion, the press of every variety plays before the public an educational role of the first importance. It is thanks to the Parisian press that the Exposition of 1925, for example, enjoyed so noteworthy a success with the public, already so well prepared for the new orientation in taste by all our publicists and art critics. There was shown at that time a collaboration between producers and the press which it is desirable to see develop more and more, in the interests of each of them: the press supplying its power of news diffusion, the Parisian producer, the excellence of his products, equally noteworthy for good taste and finished execution.

It is only fair to say that the journals representing the American press in France have adopted toward our national industries the same attitude as our French confreres. In America, even, we enjoy the most favorable relations, both with the great news dailies and with trade papers which deal with similar industries beyond the Atlantic. We have invariably been impressed by the carefulness of their news columns, as well as by the warranted homage which they have rendered to Parisian jewelry.

Paris stands forth as the capital of the jewels, and the world comes here to buy modern jewelry as it comes to choose the latest creations of our couturiers and of our modistes.

The enthusiasm with which all the press of America collect the ideas of our masters of the art of adornment would justify an even closer collaboration, but unfortunately the American customs duty rears an impenetrable barrier between the French jewel and the United States market. Perhaps the day will come when all these difficulties will be smoothed out. It will be possible then to determine what fruits may be gathered from the close and intelligent collaboration of the press and that art industry.

PREPARE THE GROUND

THE soil of France is extremely fertile and if the ground is properly prepared your project will surely prosper.

Preparing the ground is our special task. We are the most powerful advertising organization in France. Our thirty-nine branches are at your disposal for a study of your eventual outlets in every section of France.

Our technical services, including the best advertising specialists in Paris, will understand your ideas and accomplish your objects.

The three thousand trained members of our organization will see to the perfect execution of your propaganda.

ONE MAN

will devote his activities exclusively to the proper administration of each one of your accounts.

YOU WILL BE AT HOME WITH US

AGENCE HAVAS

62, RUE DE RICHELIEU PARIS

400 Millions d'Affaires en 1925 Capital 50 Millions de Francs

TRUTH IN ADVERTISING ?...
WELL, HERE IS THE TRUTH ABOUT ADVERTISING IN FRANCE
...AND ALSO ABOUT

Le Quotidien

WHICH IS PRINTED DAILY AT 25 AVENUE KLEBER IN PARIS

1° LE QUOTIDIEN is to-day the fourth most important daily newspaper printed in Paris or anywhere else in France ;

2° LE QUOTIDIEN, in less than five years, has built a daily circulation of 360.000.

3° LE QUOTIDIEN is still gaining so rapidly that, besides the 10 rotary presses we already operate, we are putting in 4 new ones of the most improved and speedy type known.

4° LE QUOTIDIEN does not belong and will not belong to any trust, combine, or ring of newspapers ;

5° LE QUOTIDIEN will not enter into any arrangement for clubbing advertising rates... and so befog the advertiser as to what he is paying for ;

6° LE QUOTIDIEN has not farmed out and will not farm out its advertising columns to any agent or agency. It stands apart in France — sturdily independent, but ready to do business cordially and fairly with all men.

Le Quotidien

THE FOURTH PAPER IN FRANCE !.. 360.000 CIRCULATION !..
IF YOU WANT TO DO BUSINESS THERE, CAN YOU DO WITHOUT ?..

Two members of our staff : Georges Boris and Henri Dumay Jr, are attending the 1926 advertising convention. They may be addressed : The Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia. Both speak English. They are at your command to discuss advertising conditions and business prospects in France, should you so desire.

ASK FOR THE BOOKLET :
" THE HISTORY OF " LE QUOTIDIEN " IS A WONDERFUL STORY "

ART AND PUBLICITY SCIENCE OF THE FRENCH PLACARD

By LUCIEN SERRE,

President de l'Union de l'Affiche Francaise; President of the Master Printers Association of the Syndicate of Paris Lithographers.

THE Twentieth Century may with reason be called the century of publicity. This designation is not a mere figure of speech since publicity is one of the efficient means by which the great nations are enabled to comprehend better, to appreciate each other more thoroughly, to know what part inventions and labor are playing in their respective territories, and to exchange the accomplishments and the benefits of their progress and of their civilization.

LUCIEN SERRE

Today there is no national or international manifestation to which advertising men are not invited, where publicity is not praised, and where its utility is not recognized and proclaimed. The great expositions, as well as the great fairs, reserve for that medium in the exchange of information and wealth, the high place which is its due.

Among all the methods of publicity with which the modern universe is enriched the placard is one of the most harmonious and at the same time one of the most efficient.

Through its qualities which have continuously improved during the last twenty years, it has shown what important service it is capable of rendering to the civilization of a country. It assists in every domain; that of art, that of science, that of business, etc.

The placard has the merit of being clear and straightforward, of making apparent in a few lines of text with harmonious color and contrast the matter with which it deals, even to those who knew nothing about it up to that moment. It attracts, convinces, holds the attention, creates habit, recreates interest, stirs up the imagination of those who look at it without demanding from them either effort or fatigue. It has the art of suggestion, it causes reflection, it changes its color and form according to the manner, and following the novelty of the brand or the discovery which it proclaims.

It contributes magnificently to the embellishment of street decoration, for it is an instructor, a guide, a counsellor, whose task, increasing day by day, is nobly accomplished.

Publicity, in each country, is controlled by the character of the inhabitants. In France it is then exceptionally apt in assimilating all the resources of the intelligence and art of the country. Delicate processes, charming fancies, an easy abundance of ideas without vulgarity, the charm of nuances—all these are some of the elements which we find united among us to give the placard the particular quality which is genuinely worthy of being called a style.

The French placard is founded in the tradition of our art. The early lithographers who brought their great talents to the service of publicity were of the race of Daumier, of Gavarni, and of that illustrious pleiad of artists, happy to bring to the glory of their country a new and unextinguishable eclat.

In adapting these marvellous gifts of their genius to the placard these artists found, simultaneously, for themselves, new forms of expression. They were able to express, thanks to publicity, the forms of their personality which would have remained unknown without it, and it is no exaggeration to say that if the Cheret, the Willettes, the Forains, had not made placards, they would certainly have offered us fewer masterpieces. Such painters of placards as Watteay and Boucher were formerly painters of signboards, and they revealed to the gaze of the most humble passers-by the sumptuosity of their artistic genius.

To these great names we must add many others, far more than I am able to cite in the course of this article. We must recall the time when Hugo d'Alesi, Pal, Toulouse and Lautrec, were composing placards as if they were pictures, making vibrant upon all walls, the delightful range of their compositions and of our landscapes. It was at this time that the touristic placard appeared, when people began to develop the taste for travelling to appreciate our monuments and sights, formerly somewhat ignored.

Afterward came such artists as Leandre, Grun, Sem, Maurice Neumont, Poulbot and Roubille, who saw and set forth, grace and gaiety wherever their pencils touched; who were able to body forth in bursts of color the charming spirit which animated them.

Contemporaneous with these princes of humor a partner who seemed to have absorbed all the nuances of the Eighteenth Century in Italy and in France, Cappiello, gave to the placard a powerful impulse and contributed to its marvellous efflorescense.

Every artist who is charged with the execution of a design may be allowed to follow his own inspiration, and, without permitting his imagination to draw him aside from the publicity aim which is fixed for him, he may nevertheless, dress up his idea by putting in proper values a thousand colors, a thousand unexpected forms, in order to render the subject after his fancy. In a word, he may become an artistic creator.

The art of the placard is essentially alive and it is possible, for that reason, for it to reflect so well an epoch and a country, for it to translate so exactly all the youthful elements, all the activity and all the formative and dynamic traits.

The task of the creator of placards is a most noble one. To make comprehensible, to clarify, to instruct, to reveal to each one in what manner he may bring to his life modifications which will render it more easy and more agreeable, to put him in contact with new products, with all the forward steps accomplished by humanity and all that is worthy to be known, to be seen and to be used.

Among the other forms of publicity, as among the other forms of art, the placard has conquered a veritable place of its own. In the midst of publicity, itself a unit, the placard is an individual unit, and by its entirely original message as by the results which it obtains, not only for national propaganda but for advertising as well, it is gifted with an incomparable power and exactness of expression.

Its educational value crosses frontiers and, as with books, the placard leaps the seas and goes forth to carry to distant lands the attitude of its country, the atmosphere, the manners. Its picture gallery of information is a most valuable recourse for all those who have not yet become acquainted with France but wish nevertheless to understand how people live there, how work is arranged, how the human spirit is developing there for the happiness of the world at large, and what rural France looks like.

The placard is not content with merely presenting its object. It furnishes the setting also and it appears as a striking manifestation of the trend and qualities of the country. It contributes to bring one nation nearer to all others, to permit them to evaluate it and to make them love it.

PARIS

HOTEL CONTINENTAL

OVERLOOKING THE TUILERIES GARDENS

The center of Paris social, elegant and historical Telegraphic - Adress

CONTENTAL-PARIS

Same Management:

Hotel Du Lion D'Or, Rheims;
Hotel Continental, Cannes

LONDON CONVENTION PUT CONTINENT IN STEP WITH THE A. A. C. W.

Chairman Damour Writes of Inspiration from "Those Wonderful Sessions"—Advertising Club Organization Problems —Confidence Expressed in Ultimate Triumph

By ETIENNE DAMOUR
President of District Seventeen

IN asking me to accept the Chairmanship of District 17, comprising the whole of the European Continent, the Central Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World have bestowed upon me an honor of which I feel really proud. I think, however, that in selecting a French advertising man for this honor, my friends had in mind first of all to honor the country to which belongs the first Continental club to seek admission, as far back as 1913, namely, the Corporation des Techniciens de la Publicité.

To be perfectly frank, however, the fact that the club made this very cordial step had only a purely symbolical significance during the first few years of its affiliation. The differences existing between the commercial habits and the advertising process in the States and those prevailing in France and throughout the Continent, were found to be too deep rooted for a mere handful of men over here to play a really important part merely through affiliation.

They believed absolutely in the new advertising gospel as preached by their American colleagues and they tried their best to make those golden rules prevail but their call remained practically without response among the general indifference and the declared hostility of a few men who had everything to lose should the new, honest and scientific advertising principles gain a foothold in the field where their questionable methods had had free play.

Great Britain came into a really close touch with the A. A. C. W. much earlier. The similarity of language was highly favorable to an extensive circulation of the American specialized literature and this probably is the reason why the Big Idea was quickly and quite generally accepted by our British friends and why a great many advertising clubs were founded and conformed to the general rules as fixed by the A. A. C. W.

Then came the 1924 Convention in London, however, and that, beyond question, has brought about the first real progress made by the Associated Advertising Clubs on the Continent.

The proximity of the Convention town, the Wembly Exhibition with its mighty power of attraction, were reasons enough to decide many advertising men from the old countries to go and get in contact with their American and English friends. What they saw and heard at that convention left in them a deep and lasting impression.

As concerns France—I prefer to discuss a subject with which I am thoroughly familiar—the dozens of advertising men who were fortunate enough to attend all those wonderful sessions, to listen to all those interesting speeches, came back to their work with the high ambition to start things going. That ambition was renewed when the American delegates came over to pay their happy visit to Paris.

In the meantime, the continental clubs remained a part of district 14, with headquarters at London. We have never had cause to complain at that for our English colleagues have been most courteous and our association with them has always been delightful. But as the Continent is considered to-day a big enough boy to take care of himself and form a new district, we gladly accepted the task, and personally I feel both happy and proud to have been selected to fill such an important position as that delegated to me.

M. Etienne Damour, head of the Damour Advertising Agency and Chairman of District Seventeen of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Let me try to explain exactly how far along we really are to-day as concerns the work of advertising clubs on the Continent. I think I am correct in saying that the following countries have established at least the embryo of a real organization as that word is understood in the United States: Belgium, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland. I know of clubs existing in these countries and I know also of their intention to hold to the principles of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Of all of these countries the most advanced perhaps, is Germany, where the V. D. R. (Verein deutscher Reklamefachleute) remains a very powerful body with a great many clubs in nearly every important city affiliated.

I am bound to confess that things are not in such a favorable state in any other

(Continued on page F48)

ADVERTISERS

have found that the way to

EXTENSIVE SALES IN EASTERN FRANCE

lies through space in:

L'EST RÉPUBLICAIN

NANCY
Faubourg St Jean

PARIS
36bis Boul. Haussmann

the largest circulation of any daily Newspaper in this great Industrial Region carrying the greatest number of lines of Advertising.

SEVEN EDITIONS DAILY

Right on this side of the Atlantic is Wrong on the other

CERTAIN of our American compatriots attempted to reach the French buyer by applying American principles and advertising methods to French conditions. Naturally they failed.

They forgot the very important fact that between the two peoples there is a spiritual ocean comparable to that which separates the two countries geographically.

To reach the French territory one needs a pilot who knows its channels.

To reach the French clientele one needs a pilot who knows its mentality.

This is thoroughly understood by such firms as MacNeil and Libby, Northam Warren (Cutex Cuticle Company), Tidewater Oil Company, Omega Oil Company, Vivaudou and Company, who, following the universal theory of common sense, in order to adapt their advertising for the reception of the old world, did so through La Société Européenne de Publicité.

The S. E. P. is the mutual friend of the American producer and the French consumer, who best knows how to introduce the one to the other, without a false move and without friction.

LA SOCIÉTÉ EUROPÉENNE DE PUBLICITÉ has functioned for half a century. It has branches and correspondents in all of the principal French and foreign cities.

S. E. P. thus knows all of the markets of the old world and especially the French market.

All details concerning the possibilities of exploiting American products in these markets will be gladly furnished on request. To insure the proper diffusion of such products S. E. P. will study all selling problems, let you know the best outlets, inform you of tariffs, duties, transportation fees, Governmental formalities, eventual competition and opportunity. It will find agents, jobbers, etc. In a word, it will be for you an indispensable and well informed collaborator.

S. E. P. is the most economical intermediary between advertisers and the French and European Press, more economical even than no intermediary of all, because its clients benefit from its important contracts with the newspapers.

S. E. P. puts at the disposition of advertisers a perfectly organized technical service, including a planning department, a copy department, a printing department, an art department, and a department of outdoor advertising

PARIS 10. RUE DE LA VICTOIRE

SOCIÉTÉ EUROPÉENNE DE PUBLICITÉ

ANCIENNES MAISONS JOHN & F. JONES - M & P. MERY - C D. COMMUNAY - JULES FORTIN & Cie - DIRECT PUBLICITY

FRANCO-AMERICAN UNDERSTANDING IS NEED OF THE HOUR

By DAL PIAZ,

President of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, President of the Comité Central des Armateurs de France.

FRENCH maritime industries, even those which are connected with our commerce of export and import, are but poorly known in the United States. I may say that an identical situation exists in France with regard to the same American industries. Numerous advertisements of these industries, of course, appear in the French and American dailies in an effort to "raise the wind," as we say, but it seems to me that the role of the press ought to extend a good deal further than mere advertising operations. The press is the great means of propaganda; its role should consist more and more in bringing together the peoples which the Great War, in place of uniting, seems often to have separated.

JOHN DAL PIAZ

There is a great need to-day that France be better known to the United States, that the United States be better known in France. This is, naturally, the outstanding role which the press ought to play, the great world-mission which is placed upon its shoulders.

Among the industries which it is important to make widely known, that of maritime transport comes first, for the liner, primarily, and after that the freighter, are the most important means of international union. I may say that they play a vital part in the relations between maritime countries, and more especially in the relations between France and the United States, since there is no other possible means of transportation.

The Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, which was formerly, for a long time, the sole maritime company joining France with the United States, finds itself nowadays in a different situation. The development of passenger and freight traffic has led to the putting into service of numerous liners and freighters which each country wishes to keep under its own flag. This is, of course, perfectly legitimate and, since the coasts of France happen to border the routes of the ships of all European lines connecting with the United States, the ships of other countries have numerous ports of call in France.

It is to be hoped that the press may make better known the organization of navigation lines, already so complete and so important, whose activity is certain to increase from year to year.

The commerce of export and import is also little known to the mass of the public, which is unacquainted with the categories of merchandise suitable for exchange, and the activity of the press along this line would give valuable results.

It is generally believed in America that France, which is so poorly understood in all that concerns its facilities of production, has little merchandise to export. If a little further study is given to this matter, if the facts are made known concerning the powerful industrial organization which we have in certain parts of the country, it can be shown that our selling prices, already very low by comparison with the prices of other countries, may be still further lowered through large orders from America, permitting the intensification of standardized production.

France is quite as badly informed concerning the resources which it may find in America, in spite of the French official representatives who, indeed, make highly detailed reports, but these are not carried by the press at large.

For the rest, it may be said in general that the American and French manufacturers have few points of contact. It is important to create these contacts, and the press of the two countries might help by requesting, from time to time, interviews from certain persons whose words would have an authority and precision much needed at this moment in commercial and industrial documentation.

But the thing needed above all at the present time is for the press to organize, through the most effective means at its disposal, reciprocal journeys of the outstanding personalities in industry and commerce of each country.

It is important, if these voyages of discovery are to be effective, that they be made not by under-officials, but by the heads of organizations themselves, and, if certain dailies are willing to take the initiative in such projects, they will render, once more, a great service, not only to their own country, but also to the world in general, since we ought all to work toward a rapprochement of the nations, beginning, logically, with those which have the closest ties, which are allies and friends, and which a common past draws together. I refer to the United States and France.

The mercantile marine of France comprises 1,529 steam and motor ships with a total gross tonnage of 3,919,645 tons and 192,339 sailing vessels of 3,511,984 gross tonnage.

Read EDITOR & PUBLISHER, $4 per year.

ADRIEN L. MULLER

AMONG the interesting figures in the French delegation to the A. A. C. W. convention is Adrien L. Muller, who is head of the Foreign Service of Agence Havas. He was born at Toulon on January 7, 1891, of an Alsatian family. He entered the Special Military School at St. Cyr (the French West Point) at the age of 19 years, with the intention of pursuing a military career. At the beginning of hostilities in 1914 he was a Lieutenant in the Fifth French Cavalry Division.

ADRIEN L. MULLER

Wounded four times during the course of the War, and having been awarded the French Croix de Guerre with seven citations, the Belgian Croix de Guerre with palms, made Chevalier and Commandant of the Legion of Honor, Mr. Muller was made chief adviser to the Seventy-sixth Division of the American Army in 1918.

After being transferred to the Eighty-third Division for the operations in the Ukraine, Commandant Muller made a voyage of study through the whole of Europe and when he had been mustered out of the Army accepted his present position with the Agence Havas at Paris.

He understands perfectly the commercial relations between nations and more especially the relations between France and the United States. Head of all the Foreign Service of the great advertising agency of Havas, he is particularly anxious to make the acquaintance of advertising men at the Philadelphia Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

LA LIBERTÉ

One of the largest evening circulations in Paris, read by the highest class of readers including:

Members of the Stock Exchange,
Commercial Leaders,
Captains of Industry,
The Aristocracy and the Clergy.

The most sought after daily because of the reliability of its financial information

THREE AND FOUR EDITIONS OF SIX PAGES DAILY
SPECIAL FEATURES PUBLISHED WEEKLY

Domestic Science
Fashions
Real Estate
Thursday Medical Review
Tourist Page
"La Liberté Commerciale"

A daily Department of Sports

Editorial and Business Offices:
111, rue Réaumur, PARIS

Advertising Office:
PARIS, 78, rue de Richelieu

HERE IS THE MEDIUM

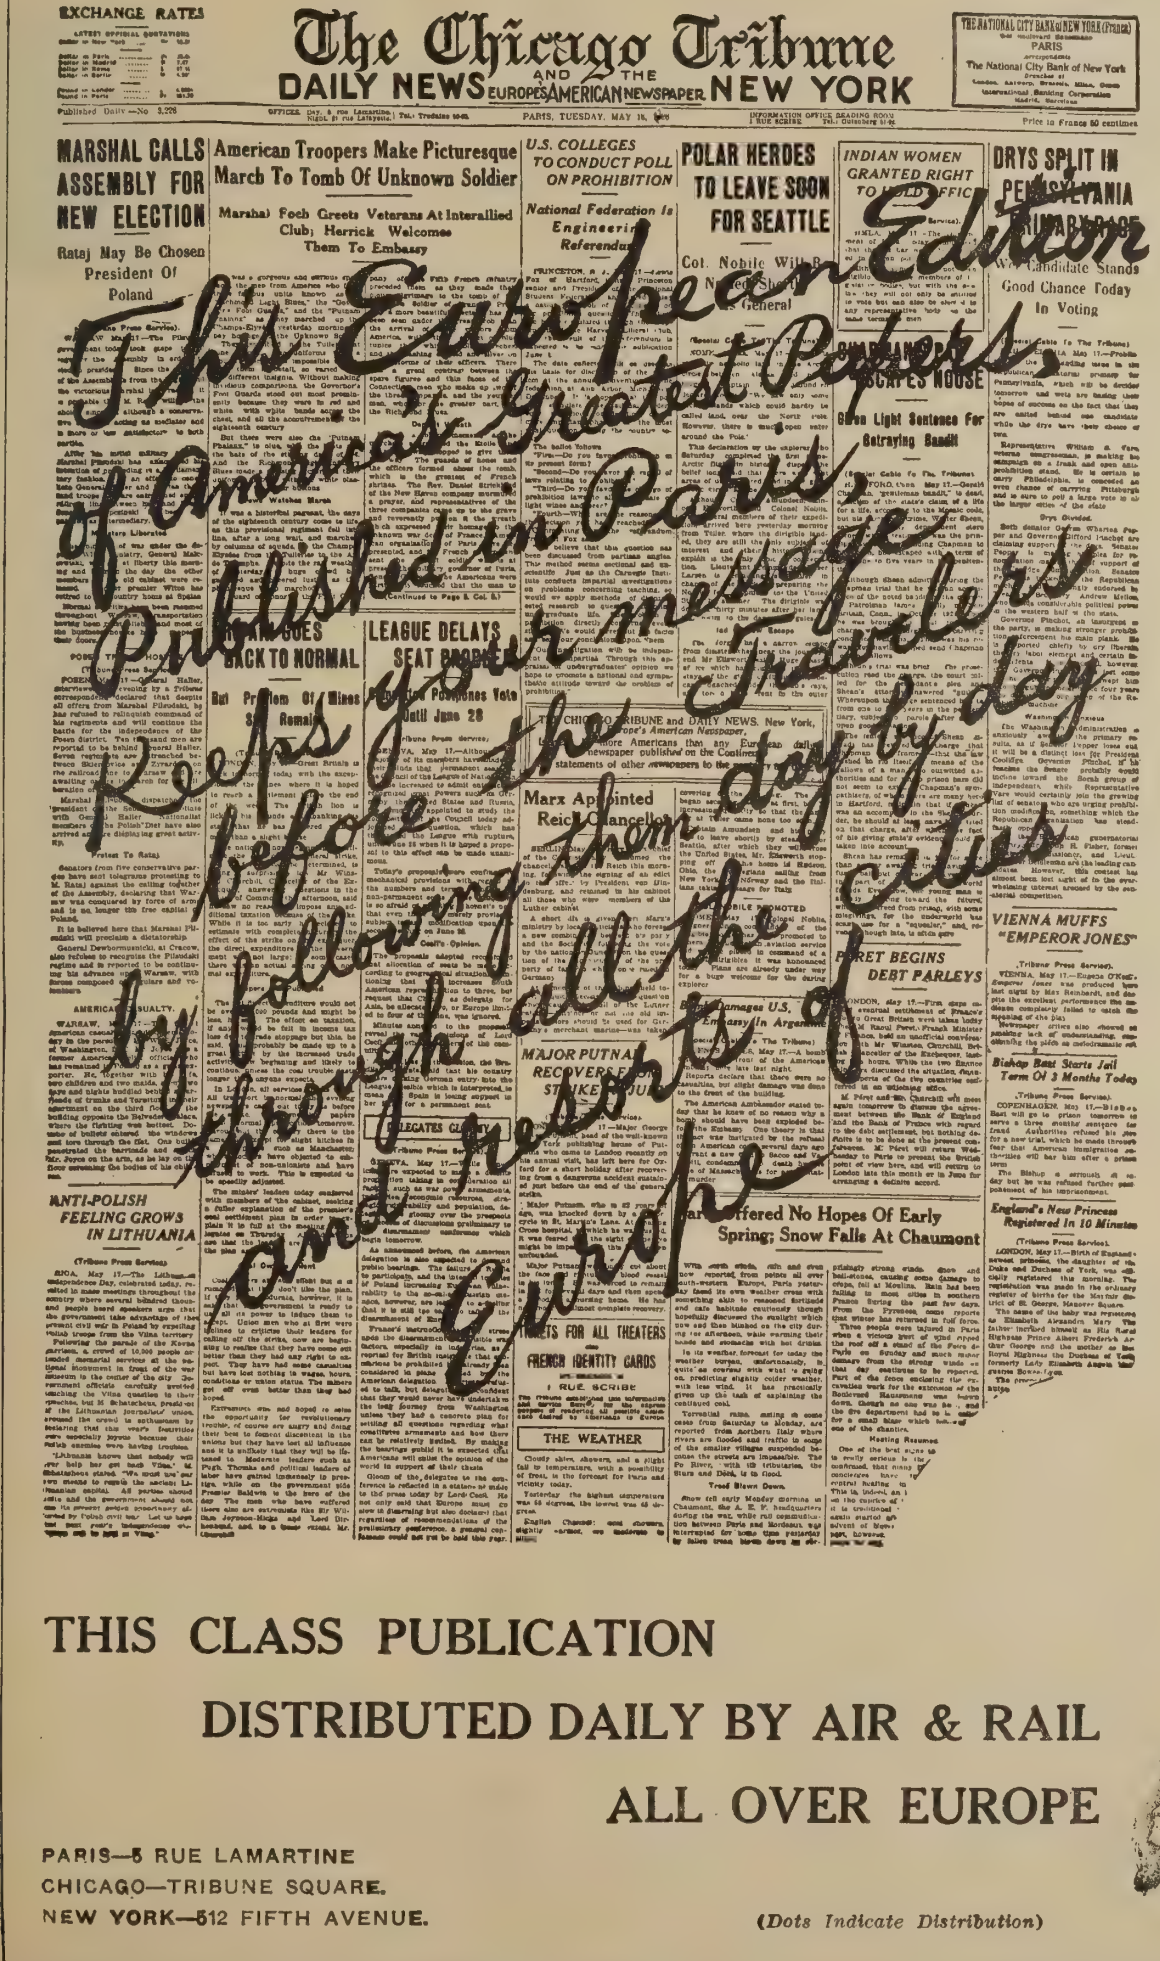
THAT KEEPS YOU

IN TOUCH

WITH THE

HUNDREDS

OF THOUSANDS



OF

AMERICAN TOURISTS

WHO VISIT

EUROPE

YEARLY

EXCHANGE RATES

The Chicago Tribune

DAILY NEWS AND THE EUROPEAN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER NEW YORK

THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK (France)

PARIS

The National City Bank of New York

Price in France 50 centimes

MARSHAL CALLS ASSEMBLY FOR NEW ELECTION

Rataj May Be Chosen President Of Poland

American Troopers Make Picturesque March To Tomb Of Unknown Soldier

Marshal Foch Greets Veterans At Interallied Club; Herrick Welcomes Them To Embassy

U.S. COLLEGES TO CONDUCT POLL ON PROHIBITION

National Federation Is Engineering Referendum

POLAR HEROES TO LEAVE SOON FOR SEATTLE

INDIAN WOMEN GRANTED RIGHT TO HOLD OFFICE

DRYS SPLIT IN PENNSYLVANIA PRIMARY RACE

Wet Candidate Stands Good Chance Today In Voting

GUARDIANSHIP SCHEME SCARES MOOSE

Given Light Sentence For Betraying Bandit

LEAGUE DELAYS SEAT BOOM

Powrones Vote Until June 28

Marx Appointed Reich Chancellor

MAJOR PUTNAM RECOVERS FROM STROKE

VIENNA MUFFS "EMPEROR JONES"

Bishop Bast Starts Jail Term Of 3 Months Today

England's New Princess Registered In 10 Minutes

ANTI-POLISH FEELING GROWS IN LITHUANIA

TICKETS FOR ALL THEATERS ON FRENCH IDENTITY CARDS

THE WEATHER

Cloudy skies, showers, and a slight fall in temperature, with a possibility of frost, is the forecast for Paris and vicinity today.

Yesterday the highest temperature was 58 degrees, the lowest was 46 degrees.

English Channel: cool showers, slightly rather, we endeavor to

Marshal Foch Greets Veterans At Interallied Club; Herrick Welcomes Them To Embassy

Good Chance Today In Voting

Bishop Bast Starts Jail Term Of 3 Months Today

England's New Princess Registered In 10 Minutes

Weather Offered No Hopes Of Early Spring; Snow Falls At Chaumont

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and DAILY NEWS, New York, Europe's American Newspaper, more Americans than any European daily newspaper published on the Continent statements of other newspapers to the Coolidge Opinion.

Mission Watches March

Tribune Press Service.

Tribune Press Service.

Tribune Press Service.

RISE TO POWER OF FRENCH TRADE PRESS A POST-WAR DEVELOPMENT

More Than 150 Technical Journals Now Being Published Under 39 Classifications—Achievement Credited to Novel Organization—Some Gain Wide Circulation

BEFORE the World War the technical press, that is to say, trade journals, did not exist in France except for a few reviews, modest in appearance and of little or no influence.

Today there are more than 150 journals coming under thirty-nine classifications, every one of great influence within its trade and some of wide general circulation. This remarkable development has been due to a number of things but principally to organization, a feature in which the French trade papers differ radically from corresponding publications in America where technical journals are numbered by the thousands rather than by the hundreds.

The French organization, which includes practically every one of the important trade papers published, is known as the Syndicate de la Presse Technique, Industrielle, Cormerciale et Agricole de France. An understanding of this organization, its inception, growth and influence, is essential to an understanding of the part trade papers play in the advertising and journalistic fields in France.

It was created, actually as it stands today, in 1917 by the fusion of the Association Syndicale de la Presse Technique with the Syndicat de la Presse Industrielle, and at the end of the War counted fewer than fifty members. The former organization had been founded in 1908 under the name Association Generale de la Presse Technique, which was changed in 1912 to an association syndicale to take advantage of the privileges offered by the law to such an organization.

At the beginning of the War these organizations participated in the creation of the National Paper Office, a bureau which functioned in the interest of all publications, allotting paper to each, assuring that each should receive a quantity in keeping with its circulation and making sure that no one was able to profiteer at the expense of another.

The Industrial Press Syndicate, born of the War, was established at the beginnig of 1917. A certain number of industrial and technical publications continued to appear in spite of the heavy difficulties brought on by the War but their efforts were, in effect, feeble and highly unprofitable. The editors and owners of these could see no way out of the difficulty other than by banding together for mutual protection in order that they might not be forced to abandon publication and could carry through until the end of the War.

The first meeting of these owners and editors brought together only ten magazines but the syndicate developed rapidly as its benefits were demonstrated and at the end of hostilities fifty journals had affiliated. The question of paper during this time was the principal problem with which they were faced but the effectiveness of organization had been clearly shown and the syndicate from then on became more and more powerful.

At this time however, there were still two syndicates functioning in the same field and the more forward looking men in each group got together to talk matters over. Out of this meeting was formed the Syndicat de la Presse Technique, Industrial, Commerciale et Agricole de France, the organization as it functions today.

Since then the syndicate has occupied itself with many questions involving the interests of its members as individuals and as parts of the organization, and out of their efforts has grown up among the trade papers of France, a code of ethics, definite and well defined, and for the most part strictly adhered to.

By the high standard maintained for mutual good and the good of commerce and industry in general, by the high degree of co-operation possible through organization, the trade press of France has thus come to be a compact body of great importance and wide influence in the industrial and commercial life of the country, participating in many Government enterprises and lending its assistance to an innumerable number of movements for the good of trade in general.

For example, the technical press of France, including in the term all trade papers which are members of the association, whatever their nature, played a most important part in the reorganization of the French industries following the War. The efforts of the industrial groups themselves were co-ordinated, and the periodicals offered an excellent means of spreading propaganda for the carrying out of the broad general plan of reorganization put into effect immediately reconstruction and reorganization began, following the laying down of arms.

Aside from this feature of spreading propaganda throughout the various fields and trades served by the papers forming the association, according to a definite plan mapped out by the Council of Administration in conjunction with the Governmental leaders for the good of industry in general and the association in particular, the trade papers of France function a good deal in the manner of such publications in America, speaking in the broad sense. That is to say, individually they have much the same problems to meet and serve, and largely the same end for the members of the trade for which they are published .

Practically every industry and trade in France is now represented by one or more journals, the majority of which will compare favorably with trade papers published in America and a few of which are superior in some respects.

In this connection one could cite by way of example, the excellent journal Chimie and Industrie in the Scientific group, with its very fine articles prepared especially by the most important authorities in their various lines in France. Other technical papers of high order are L'Usine which serves especially the metallurgic trade, where its importance is manifold, the Genie Civil and Parfumerie Moderne, formerly a house organ but now transformed into an independent paper of great power and authority in its field.

These journals, however, and many others of the same type, serve a clientele which is not confined to their limited fields, but includes the general public as well, although their articles, editorials and advertising are addressed for the most part to a particular and limited group of readers.

This fact, and the effective organization into which French trade papers are banded, marks a striking point of departure from the trade paper field as it is constituted in America.

One must keep in mind however, the fact that the technical press of France is actually in the beginning of a period of great development both as to individual publications and as to the organization into which they are welded, a development only limited at the present moment, by the "crise du papier," a peculiar situation in which it is very difficult for publications of any sort, and particularly trade papers, to get news print of the high quality essential to attractive appearance, at a price which will make their publication profitable.

A glance through any one of hundreds of current trade publications would give a good idea of the great difficulties under which their editors are laboring and the ingenuity and ability with which they are met. The stock upon which most of these magazines are forced to print their advertisements and editorial matter, is of necessity inferior to that available for American trade papers and it is comparatively more expensive, but any one of half a hundred journals now coming out weekly in France will compare very favorably from every standpoint with the very best to be found in the States.

Furthermore, trade papers in France, even when they serve the same trade, have individuality and character exactly as magazines and newspapers have character.

By comparing the journal Ganterie serving the glove trade, with La Chaussure Francaise serving the shoe trade, this characteristic of French journals is immediately apparent. Each has its own definite personality as to ensemble, the presentation of advertisements, text and designs, and is essentially different from all other trade papers in whatever field.

Indeed, the high plane upon which these French trade papers rest, the artistic effort which goes into their make-up and editing, permitted the entire lot of them, almost without exception, to blend agreeably with the other exhibits at the Decorative Arts Exposition at Paris during 1925, and the trade papers Ganterie and Soierie de Lyon, received a gold medal award in competition with thousands of other publications.

In discussing trade publications in France one comes inevitably back to the organization under which they have grown and developed. The latest notable accomplishment of this body was the formation in 1925, in connection with the Decorative Arts Exposition, of the first International Technical Press Congress ever held.

Realizing that the trade press must be considered as an indispensable auxiliary to industry and commerce, the syndicate has allied itself closely with these two, remembering always, that its development and the prosperity of its individual members depends upon the prosperity of the nation.

ANARI KAMINKER

Delegates to the Philadelphia A. A. C. W. convention will meet among the French delegates Anari Kaminker, one of the most interesting figures in active journalism in France. M. Kaminker was born in 1888. He has been in the advertising business since 1922, when he entered the service of the Damour Agency, following many years of journalistic training and several years in the military service of his country.

ANARI KAMINKER

He is at the present time assistant editor of Vendre, the French commercial magazine which the Damour Agency launched in 1923 and which has become during the last few years one of the leading publications in that field on the European Continent.

Mr. Kaminker represents at the Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World the "Corporation de Technicians de la Publicité, the first Continental Club ever to be affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. He is also the special delegate of M. Etienne Damour, President of District Seventeen of the Advertising Clubs.

The French Academy, founded in 1630 and incorporated in 1637, was abolished by the Revolution, but was revived in 1795 as one of the sections of the Institute of France which includes: The Academy of Inscriptions and Belles-Lettres; the Academy of Sciences; the Academy of Fine Arts; and the Academy of Moral and Political Science.

L'ECLAIREUR DE L'EST

"Reconstruction for Northeast France"

Founded 1887

THE BEST AND QUICKEST DAILY NEWS SERVICE

Largest Circulation in Northeast France

RHEIMS
87, 89, 91 Place Drouet d'Erlon

PARIS
28 rue du Quatre Septembre

BRANCH OFFICES:

AISNE
CHATEAU-THIERRY
LAON
ST-QUENTIN
SOISSONS

MARNE
CHALONS S. MARNE
EPERNAY
STE-MENEHOULD
VITRY-LE-FRANCOIS

ARDENNES
MEZIERES-CHARLEVILLE
RETHEL
SEDAN
VOUZIERS

MEUSE
VERDUN

Hte-MARNE
ST-DIZIER

All inquiries concerning advertising, rates, etc., or the field served by this great daily, will be gladly answered at either of the main offices or any branch.

Information may also be obtained at leading advertising agencies in France and foreign countries.

L'Ouest-Eclair

THE GREAT REPUBLICAN NEWS DAILY

THE LEADING NEWSPAPER OF BRITANNY AND NORMANDY and the most powerful news dispensing organization of Western France

L'Ouest-Eclair

has a net paid daily circulation of 300,000

copies throughout twelve Departments of France.

L'Ouest-Eclair

is read during the summer season by the tourists frequenting the fashionable Channel and Atlantic resorts and it is always the first paper to go on sale.

A large circulation and wide distribution insures success

Main Office: 38, rue du Pré-Botté, Rennes

Offices in Paris, News and Advertising: 20 BOULEVARD, MONTMARTRE

AMERICAN ADVERTISING IN THE FRENCH MARKET

People Buying As Never Before Since War Aroused Peasants to New View of Life—List of American Manufactures Successful in French Trade

By LE ROUBILLOIS

IT is difficult for a Frenchman, even though a specialist in the field, to write of methods of advertising in an American magazine. We may perhaps ignore geography, but we realize that the theories of advertising have been studied and formulated very clearly in the United States in the last half of the preceding century.

The magnificent development of industry which has resulted from these new methods of advertising proves without danger of contradiction the value of these theories and modern methods.

If I dare to write on this subject for the readers of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, it is not by any means to give them advice as to advertising methods, but simply to describe to them, in the simplest way, what has already been accomplished in my country by a number of their compatriots.

As a part of my profession and—I want to say without false modesty—personally interested with some of these enterprises because of my knowledge of the French market and habits of the people, I shall tell you in the simplest fashion of what has been accomplished by those who have crossed the Atlantic, the methods which they have used and the results attained by these Americans who have come to France.

The first objection which presents itself to the usefulness of such a review will be voiced in words like this, "Because others are before me, I would be too late in the field. There is no reason to waste the time to read this article, which I might find some better way to use."

To those who feel so, it is necessary to say, look at the list of American firms who have introduced their products in France, which you will find in the article. If your product is not represented, there is a strong possibility in favor of your chances of success.

I may speak too presumptuously, for there are certain articles of merchandise which are warmly received in America which might not evoke the same enthusiasm in France. For example, you have a number of drinks which have become popular in America and which are not under the ban of the Volstead law. This question of taste, then, is one side of the problem which demands an intimate knowledge of the needs of the market.

On the other side, it is always necessary to say in France, as in other countries, that no market has ever been found which one may properly call saturated, and that many times those articles with which foreign publicity has flooded the market are in reality the easiest to make a place for. A man with the courage to open up a new market is always permitted, if he can, to supply the demand and so corner the market. But, very often, the need which the pioneers have created is so great that it takes many manufacturers to satisfy it.

Another objection, which is sometimes accepted, but which is erroneous, is that the present financial situation in France presents an obstacle and a decided restriction to the capacity to absorb foreign products. Permit me, as so many representative American and French men of importance have already done, to insist that this is an error. The crisis of the state has had no reaction on the economic situation of individuals. This crisis, which it has seemed convenient to call the "vie chere" (expensive living) is a phenomenon which is truly universal in all countries. But this appearance is really fallacious in France, as in other countries. If the prices of provisions and merchandise is higher, it is only to the same extent that wages are higher and the average citizen is able to buy as much with his increased earnings as formerly.

The actual fact is that people are really spending a larger percentage of their money in France than they ever have before. This increase in sales is explained by the fact that the working man of France is undergoing a tremendous change.

Before the War the habit of economy of the French peasant, who represents the great majority of the French nation, was proverbial. Isolated in his fields, far from the temptations of the city, he was untouched by the progress of civilization and ignored the comforts of life, having no other ambition than to be able to leave his descendants a little more land and a "woolen sock" full of money, saved sou by sou. But on the battlefields, where peasants, workingmen, the rich and the aristocratic fought shoulder to shoulder, he began to lose his traditions and to realize the privations to which he had submitted himself. In association with the Anglo-Saxon soldiers first, and later with Pershing's troops, he became initiated into new ideas of comfort and of well being.

It sounds like a paradox in the experience of the human to speak of learning a lesson in comfort in the trenches. But it was there that the tendency to make the best possible of a life incessantly menaced was born. And there it was that they acquired the taste for a multitude of commodities which had already been for a long time indispensable to the most humble inhabitant of Texas.

Then, by a coincidence favorable to our thesis, at the same time that the French peasant found that he enjoyed many things which he had never before bought, he found that he had more money than he had ever had to spend. The price of provisions which he had to market began increasing at a remarkable rate, and at the very moment when he was met with the temptation to spend more money the products of his fields supplied him with the funds to satisfy his new desires. He earned and spent more, but due to his old habit of saving he spent less than he made and remains one of the most solvent of prospective customers.

It is necessary, then, to consider the rural population of France as a great unexplored field for exploitation, which only awaits the energy of the prospector to find rich, untouched veins to produce a yield as yet undreamed of.

The other classes of the French population are more or less familiar with the comforts and luxuries offered by the civilization of to-day. It may be apropos to say here that France never is haunted by the fear of lack of work; that the immense army of office-holders, due to the fortune of the many chances of employment, are always able to improve their fortunes and so add to their ability to buy. France, like every other country, has its "new rich" growing in number every day and who here as elsewhere spend large amounts. And, to cite one of our confreres from across the Atlantic—

"Each year of increased prosperity develops a huge army of new spenders for the market—people who have just arrived at a financial state where they can now afford to buy the things which yesterday they desired but could not afford. They are more susceptible to advertising appeal than any other part of the advertisers' potential market."

What then are the principal American firms which have succeeded in entering the French market? After looking over the list of firms, we will study quickly the means by which they have attained their success.

Soaps and Beauty Products
- Lever Brothers
- Palmolive
- Cadum
- Cutex
- Odorono
- Tokalon Cream
- Packers' Tar Soap

Composing Machines
- Linotype
- Intertype
- Monotype

Automobiles
- Ford
- Buick
- Chevrolet
- Graham Motors
- Studebaker

Tires
- Goodyear
- Goodrich

Typewriters and Adding Machines
- Remington
- Underwood
- Burrough's

Lubricants
- Tide Water Oil
- Mobiloil
- Boyce-Ite

Linoleum
- Congoleum

Films
- Paramount
- Metro-Goldwyn

Food Products
- Libby, McNeill & Libby
- Gloria
- Wrigley

Razors
- Auto-Strop
- Gillette

Fountain Pens and Pencils
- Waterman
- Wahl
- Eversharp

Patent Medicines
- Pink Pills
- Mother Sill's Sea Sick Remedy
- Omega Oil

Photographic Apparatus
- Eastman Kodak

Gas Heaters
- Lawson Radiator
- National Radiator Co.

We will not talk of the large importations of raw materials, but give all of our attention to the special brands, which really are our subject.

But, incomplete as it is, the list above gives an idea of the diversity of the types of American products which are actually soliciting French trade and the multiplicity of those which might easily enter the market.

We must note in passing that all of these organizations are continuing their advertising and do not find themselves handicapped by the present situation in exchange. We do not believe that this can be considered a deterrent to entering the French market. Indeed the largest part of French manufacturers are obliged to buy their raw materials in the countries which have a high rate of exchange, an obligation that results in almost the same situation as does direct importation.

There are a number of other American firms which are not mentioned in the list as compiled because their advertising campaigns have not been under

(Continued on page F44)

LE COURRIER du CENTRE

Limoges (Hte-Vienne)

A great Provincial daily founded in 1851

First on the street with the latest news of the World

The City of Limoges with its 100,000 inhabitants and the five contiguous Departments of Haute-Vienne, Creuse, Indre, Corrèze and Dordogne, are covered exclusively by the various editions of "LE COURRIER DU CENTRE." In addition the paper has a wide circulation in Vienne, Charente, Allier and Lot.

For 75 years this daily has been favored by a majority of the 2,000,000 people of its section, especially proprietors, merchants and all business men.

Sold on 1,800 news stands and goes regularly to 17,500 subscribers each morning, carrying news received direct from Paris up to one A. M., and ten hours ahead of the Paris and other large city newspapers.

Advertisements received through "L'AGENCE HAVAS" or at either office:

LIMOGES
18, rue Turgot

PARIS
35, rue des Petits Champs

La Petite Gironde

The Largest Circulation of all Provincial Newspapers

PARIS
8 Boulevard des Capucines

BORDEAUX
8 rue de Cheverus

Twenty-Two Editions Daily

Through its circulation, the high quality of its printing and make-up, the diversity of its permanent and transient reading groups

La Petite Gironde

gives the best returns from advertising in all that prosperous region of South West France, where its wide distribution and the constantly increasing favor which it has enjoyed for more than fifty years, guarantees its value as a medium.

La Petite Gironde

which dominates a territory of thirty Departments of France, was the only French Newspaper to publish a special American Edition during the World War, a feature which met with great success among American troops.

Advertise in La Petite Gironde throughout all the South West of France.

FRENCH ADVERTISING SYSTEM CONTROL BY WIDE ACTIVITIES OF "C. S. P."

Comprehensive Review of National Organization Comprising Eight Sections—Development of Circulation Audit Plan—Looking to Philadelphia for Further Inspiration

By Charles Maillard,

President of the Advertising Syndicate.
Judge of the Tribunal of Commerce of Paris

IT was only toward the end of the last century that advertising and publicity men of France began to give some thought to the organization that had been sorely wanting up until that time. There had never been such an organization, and life being ruled by custom at that time, rules of ancient usage were more or less arbitrarily applied.

But with the great development of advertising in our country shortly after the dawn of the Twentieth Century the need of "putting the house in order" began to be felt in the great advertising centers such as Paris.

It might be said that the Universal Exhibition held in Paris in 1900 gave definite direction to this movement and prepared the ground for the formation, shortly afterward of the Syndicate of Professional Advertising Men, at the head of which was named one of the veterans of the corporation founded by Emile Paz, who died less than two years ago. In this instance, however, the grouping together of advertising men was only for the protection of mutual interests and had little in common with the advertising men's organization as it stands today.

The new idea, the idea which has carried through until today, was conceived in 1906 and the organization then took the very comprehensive title of Chambre Syndicate de la Publicité (to be referred to hereinafter as the C. S. P.), which aimed at the representation of all advertising interests in all their forms.

The program mapped out by the organization, for the realization of which every member has worked continually, was predominated by the directive idea that all advertising has for its end the bringing together of the applicant and the buyer he is seeking through the medium of advertising.

For publicity, as for other branches of human activity, specialists who thoroughly understand their medium, must be employed to provide the clientele with a service that will be of benefit both to the client and to the customer he wishes to reach.

The founders of the C. S. P. foresaw the value of thorough-going organization and from its very beginning the association brought under one administration, the following groupings:

1. Such organs as Le Petit Journal, Le Journal, Echo de Paris, Liberté, l'Illustration, Monde Illustré, Petite Gironde, France du Sud-Ouest of Bordeaux, Dépêche of Toulouse, Lyon Républicain, Réviel du Nord, Petit Provencal, Populaire de Nantes, etc.

2. Mediaries such as agents, brokers, contributors and publicity agents.

3. The agencies and professionals of poster advertising.

4. An artistic committee which brought together such masters of poster design as Cheret, Willette, Grun, Grasset, etc.

Thus the C. S. P. entered upon its field of activity.

Toward the close of 1906, at the request of the lamented L. Vergne, of the Dépêche of Toulouse, General Secretary of the organization, M. Gaston Doumergue, President of the French Republic, but then Minister of Commerce, accepted the post of President of Honor, and in this capacity presided at the banquet tendered to two notable advertising men elected Knights of the Legion of Honor at that time, Messrs. Léon Renier, now President of Agence Havas, and M. J. F. Jones, Co-Director of the Société Europeanne de Publicité, who died recently after a long and most honorable career in advertising work.

It was at that banquet that was first expressed the idea of teaching advertising in commercial schools, a productive idea that was at once retained by M. Doumergue, and which has since been pursued in all its infinite developments.

M. Doumergue had continued to give his unqualified support to the C. S. P. since that memorable night and on the day following his election to the Presidency of the French Republic, he took particular pains to inform the association that he would continue as Honorary President of the C. S. P. in spite of his new and arduous official duties.

The success of this enterprise, and it has been highly successful through these 20 years, is due I believe, to the fact that all of the advertising interests of the country, and especially those most likely to come into discord one with the other, have been grouped together into a harmonious and smooth working whole, without jealousies and without friction.

The men and organization which saw fit to come into the fold were quickly assimilated into the whole and a strict regulation of the professional advertising men making up the body, has ever been one of the cardinal principles of the C. S. P. The organization itself, so great is its confidence in its methods, undertakes to guarantee the integrity and methods of each of its members. The fact that he is a member is sufficient evidence that an advertising man is right.

Considerable development was necessary however, before this point was reached but as the C. S. P. stands today it takes cognizance of every advertising or publicity man of any importance in the country, whether he is a member of the organization or not.

One of the important works of the C. S. P. during the last few years has been the co-ordination and unification of the customs and current practices of advertising and the relations between client, advertising man and the various organs and qualified intermediaries.

This work came under the jurisdiction of the "Code des usages de la publicité" a department of the C. S. P. founded in 1914 but which was unable to achieve its end, owing to the intervention of the World War, until 1921. At a banquet which took place on the 27th of June of that year which brought together notable men of the journalistic world, Mr. Lucien Dior, Minister of Commerce, took upon himself the duty of Godfather for the new Code of Ethics for advertising men.

Mr. Léon Rénier, who was present at the meeting, expressed himself as follows when the new code was accepted. "Not only on my own behalf but in the name of the Havas Agency, I congratulate you with all my heart for your work, before which we have to bow our heads. As for the Havas Agency, I pledge you its cooperation in this work of purification. I have asked the big newspapers of Paris, which I represent here, to authorize me to declare, as I am doing, that they accept it entirely and will apply it most heartily."

Following this testimonial to the right principles of the organization the code of ethics came into actual being and practically all points of difference over its operation were smoothed out. Today advertisers consult it, agents observe, and the tribunal of the organization refers to it in all its decisions. And this brings us naturally to a very important function of the C. S. P.

It concerns the arbitration of any litigation in which the members of the organization or their clients may become involved. These matters are almost invariably submitted to the organization and the parties to the dispute generally agree to rely upon the awards of the C. S. P. In this manner long delays are avoided and the heavy expense of court procedure is obviated.

On the other hand the C. S. P. takes the initiative regarding matters pertaining to advertising in the general sense. Thus we took an important part in December 1922, two years before the London Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in the first "Advertising Week" which brought together under the chairmanship of the writer, all of the corporative publicity groups of France.

During the course of this week was born the "Office de la Justification du Tirage," the Audit Bureau of Circulations of France. The formation of this organization was for the purpose of putting into practice the principles already in practice in England and the United States and summed up in the motto "The Truth in Advertising" inscribed on the pediment of the London Convention, to which the C. S. P. was a party through its affiliation with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

The operation of the O. J. T. beneficial as we know its results would be, was presently felt in an advantageous manner unforeseen by its promoters and since the formation of this body the exaggerated declarations of immense circulation has, in fact, practically been discontinued.

In the course of that same "Publicity Week" we studied many technical questions including the standard width of columns and the typographical point for the measure of advertising.

At the present time the C. S. P. comprises eight sections:

An Agencies section, uniting eighty-seven members.

A Section of Publicity Representatives.

A Section of Paris Newspapers.

A Section of Provincial Newspapers.

A Section of Periodicals.

A Section of Advertising Technical Men.

A Section of the Industries Connected with Advertising.

A Société of Reserve Funds and Retiring Pensions.

Within the organization we now have the satisfaction of knowing that we are in perfect accord regarding the rules that constitute the advertising man's confession of faith, such as those voted at the London Convention of the Advertising Clubs in July, 1924.

It is therefore, with the most lively interest that we are watching the work of the Philadelphia Convention, confident that our advertising education is sure to benefit from these sessions.

We do not differ in principle and we are desirous of persevering. We have great confidence in the dignity of our profession and we are convinced that the success that has met our efforts so far is based upon our moderation, our independence and the high sentiments we hold.

COST OF WAR RECONSTRUCTION

The Banque Nationale de Francaise du Commerce Exterieur in its monthly review for August, 1925, declared that though progress had been less rapid in 1924 than in previous years, economic activity had been almost completely reestablished, and what remains to be done may be spread over several years to fill the financial situation. It estimates the material damage done by the war at about 101,000 million francs, divided as follows:

	Million Francs
Indemnities due to war sufferers....	85,000
Interest on above.....	3,000
Direct enterprises of the State.....	5,500
Rebuilding of Railways.....	2,650
Reorganization of Public Services....	2,700
Different Forms of Aid.....	1,400
Administrative Expenses	1,200

NICE

is the Most Beautiful City of Europe

LE PETIT NICOIS

is the Best Newspaper of Nice

Its advertising, under the control of the Havas Agency, gives the best results on the Cote d'Azur.

It is read by all of the winter visitors to the Riviera from all sections of the world, and particularly by Americans.

Its representatives, its numerous daily editions and the personality of its directing head, M. Pierre Bermond, makes of Le Petit Niçois, a newspaper of high repute among all classes, especially among business men.

LE PETIT NICOIS

17 Avenue de la Victoire
NICE, FRANCE

39th year of

Europe's Complete American Newspaper

THE NEW YORK HERALD

European edition of The New York Herald Tribune

¶ Published daily in Paris and read all over Europe by more Americans than any other newspaper published outside of the United States, the great English dailies not excepted.

¶ In 1925 THE NEW YORK HERALD carried 1,859,280 lines of advertising—419,362 lines more than in 1924. A gain of 29.13%.

¶ No other English-language newspaper published on the European continent approached the above total.

¶ It exceeded by more than 75% the advertising carried by the nearest other American newspaper published abroad.

THE NEW YORK HERALD

is the FRIEND and GUIDE of Americans in Europe

8 to 14 PAGES DAILY

more NEWS — more ADVERTISING — more READERS

HUGE TRAFFIC BETWEEN AMERICA AND FRANCE

Even Restrictive Immigration Laws Have Not Diminished Human Flow Across Atlantic—Story of French Line's Development

THE steamship lines connecting France with the United States are by virtue of the large number of passengers they transport the most important in the world. More than 1,700,000 passengers were carried to destinations in the United States in 1913 and since then even the restrictive measures have not diminished the activity of the current of immigration outstanding between Europe and America.

The recent laws, which reduce the number of immigrants authorized to go to the United States, have notably modified the character of the traffic, in spite of which it remains the most important of that variety, and the movement of travelers has now a new orientation. Other traffic has increased since the War, with the result that the United States now shows a very considerable increase in cabin passengers and at the same time there is noticeable a new traffic in the third class coming from America (tourist passengers).

Whatever may be the class of these passengers, all or nearly all, are specially interesting to France, for they include a great number of tourists, and these have generally the desire to visit our fair country in the course of their itinerary in Europe.

The French Line is among the large companies of navigation interested in this traffic, and stands as one of the most important because of its length of service, through the importance of its connections and it remains one of the most solid connections existing between the two great Republics.

It was begun in 1861 in order to handle the postal service of the French Government between Havre and New York, and it was in 1864 that the Washington, the first liner of an important fleet especially constructed for this traffic, was put into service. During many years the French Line was the sole navigation company to maintain regular service between the United States and France and the development of commercial relations between the old and the new worlds entailed the development of this company. After that there has been a large increase in the field of its operations with regard to the United States.

It has naturally retained the postal service between Havre and New York, the itinerary of which includes nowadays a stop at Plymouth. This service includes the largest and most rapid French liners, the Paris and the France, to which will be added during the forthcoming year, L'Ile de France.

But this line has been paralleled by another service begun in 1908, which is carried on by an unique class of liners, the success of which has been very rapid and of great importance. To the French Line belongs the honor of having created an idea realized for the first time in the liner Chicago. The De Grasse, which was later added, represents an outstanding type of one class liner.

The excellent results obtained in practice by new construction have, on the other hand, induced the French Line to transform its steamer Rochambeau to harmonize with the same ideas which inspired the construction of the De Grasse.

To these two services for passengers and freight the French Line has added two others, the one between Bordeaux and New York, carried on by mixed liners, and the other leaving from Havre for Galveston and Houston, Texas, by way of the Spanish ports, the Canary Islands and Havana.

This service to Texas, which is carried on by steamers of considerable size (15,000 tons), having large space for the reception of merchandise, leads us to consider in what measure the French Line has been induced to create and to maintain a freight service between the United States and France.

France imports from the United States considerable quantities of cotton, of preserves, of grains and also of manufactured products. These are products which may not be advantageously transported in the hold of a liner, and which are forwarded usually by one of three regular freight steamer services which the French Line has established for that purpose.

The first line serves the ports of Boston, New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia, the second those of the Gulf of Mexico, San Francisco, and San Pedro. These lines follow fixed itineraries and have regular sailings. Their other terminals are Antwerp, Havre and Bordeaux.

Coincidentally with the perfection of its passenger service to New York, in which its finest liners are employed, the French Line has put into service modern freight steamers of large tonnage, upon the subsidiary lines. The Jacques Cartier, for example, is a ship of 150 metres length and 19,000 tons displacement, is the largest freight ship of the French Line fleet, and nearly all of the other cargo ships of the line displace from 12,000 to 15,000 tons each.

This does not include certain steamers which the French Line has found it necessary to charter in order to take care of the increasing demand for tonnage. Forty-five ships of the fleet, totaling 355,000 tons, are devoted exclusively to the traffic with the United States.

The French Line is continually modernizing its fleet, either in transforming or improving the steamers in service in order to have them always up to date, or in adding new units. The fourteenth of last March this line launched at St. Nazaire a new liner of the highest standard, L'Ile de France, which will be a much improved Paris. This ship will take its place as the largest of the French merchant marine and one of the few really great liners of the world. It will have a displacement of 41,000 tons, its length will be 241 metres, and its turbines will develop 52,000 horsepower.

As with the Paris and the De Grasse, this new unit of the French merchant marine will be decorated throughout in a modern fashion. Here again the French Line has broken with a long-established tradition which decreed that a liner should be decorated in the great classic styles of the past. The success of the Exposition of Decorative Arts in Paris and the favorable reception which the public gave to the company's newest steamer confirmed it in this intention.

The French Line possesses one of the most complete fleets of commercial ships in the world; one hundred units totaling more than 560,000 tons net, displacing more than 900,000 tons, and whose activity extends not only to the United States, but also to Canada, Cuba, Mexico, the Antilles, Central America, the Islands of the Pacific, the Baltic Sea and in England and North Africa.

The commercial activity of this fleet is considerable. In 1925 it transported more than 400,000 passengers and in the holds of its various freight ships more than 2,500,000 tons of merchandise. It is the most important of the French navigation companies, the French group being at the same time the most important in the matter of the number of companies in which they are interested.

THE "ILÉ DE FRANCE"—NEW FRENCH LINER

Launched at St. Nazaire, France, on March 14, will be the world's sixth largest steamer, entering service in May, 1927.

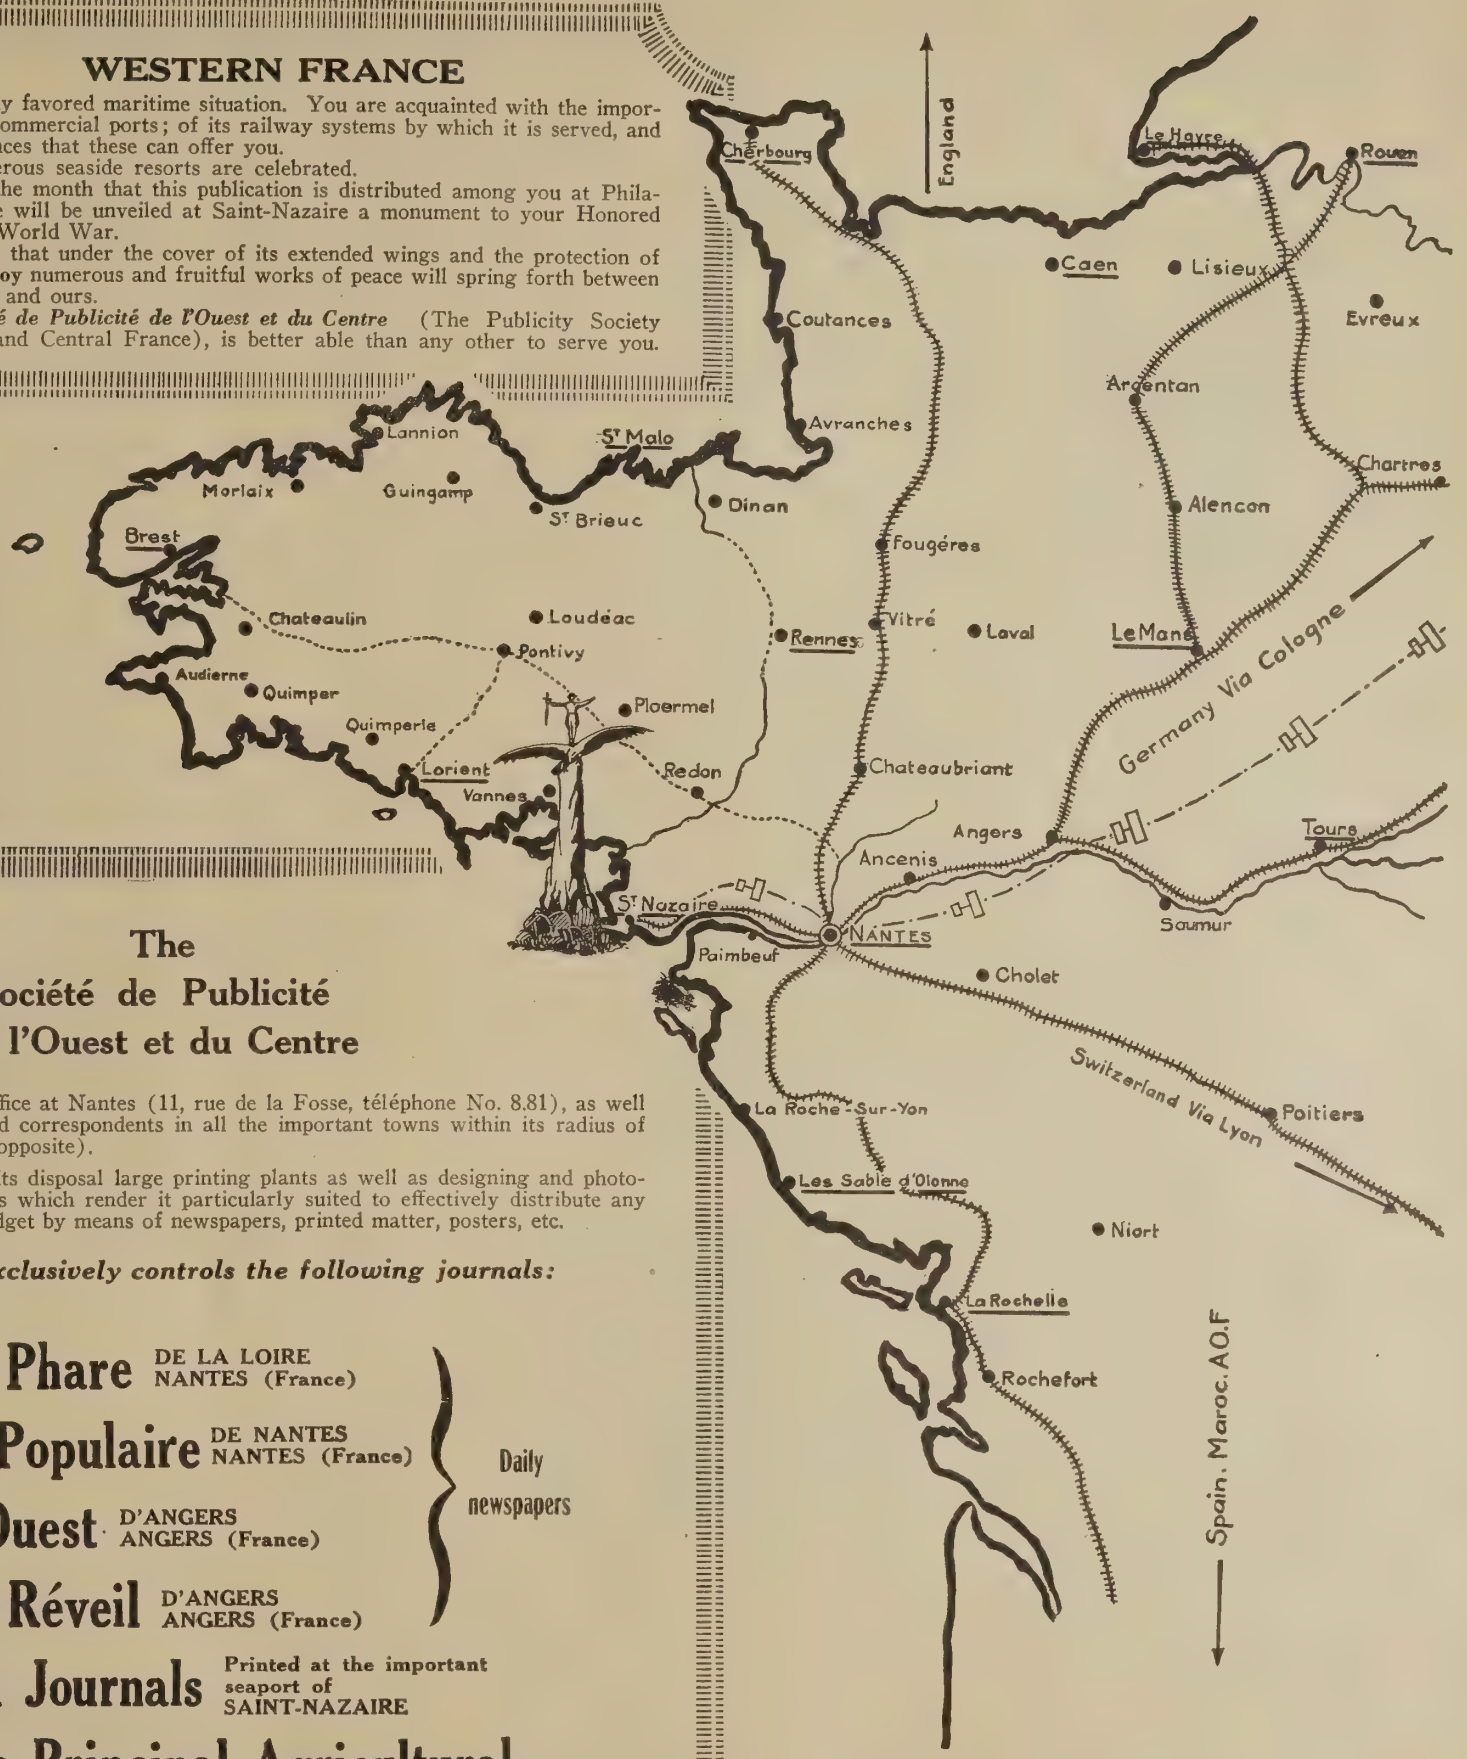
Le Journal de Lyon

LE PROGRÈS

LYON, 85, rue de la République

21, rue de la Sourdière, PARIS

WESTERN FRANCE



has a specially favored maritime situation. You are acquainted with the importance of its commercial ports; of its railway systems by which it is served, and the conveniences that these can offer you.

Its numerous seaside resorts are celebrated.

During the month that this publication is distributed among you at Philadelphia, there will be unveiled at Saint-Nazaire a monument to your Honored Dead of the World War.

We hope that under the cover of its extended wings and the protection of your Doughboy numerous and fruitful works of peace will spring forth between your country and ours.

The Société de Publicité de l'Ouest et du Centre (The Publicity Society of Western and Central France), is better able than any other to serve you.

The Société de Publicité de l'Ouest et du Centre has its head office at Nantes (11, rue de la Fosse, téléphone No. 8.81), as well as agencies and correspondents in all the important towns within its radius of action (chart opposite).

It has at its disposal large printing plants as well as designing and photogravure studios which render it particularly suited to effectively distribute any advertising budget by means of newspapers, printed matter, posters, etc.

It exclusively controls the following journals:

Le Phare DE LA LOIRE NANTES (France)
Le Populaire DE NANTES NANTES (France)
L'Ouest D'ANGERS ANGERS (France)
Le Réveil D'ANGERS ANGERS (France)
} Daily newspapers

All Journals Printed at the important seaport of SAINT-NAZAIRE

The Principal Agricultural Journals of Western and Central France and particularly

La Semaine The important weekly agricultural journal

Its Paris offices which have been during the past 32 years under the direction of Mr. X. Muller, Chevalier of the Légion of Honor, and Secretary-General of the Publicité Française are centrally situated at 2, rue des Colonnes (téléphone Gutenberg 03.13) near the Bourse des Valeurs (Stock Exchange).

It is in this same location and under the same direction that are found the publicity offices of the Journal de Rouen

which is by far the most important daily organ of information in Normandy.

EXPLANATION

Railroads

Air Lines

Canals

HOW DAILY AND PERIODIC PRESS FUNCTIONS TO AID RAILROADS

By M. RIBAUD

IN exactly the measure in which a business such as the railways of a country affects the collective life of a people, renews the habits and manners and creates new exchanges, the facts are noted in the daily and periodic press, but as its task does not consist merely in recording day by day the story of society, it cannot limit itself to the passive character of a witness. It has assumed for itself the further duty of influencing public opinion, of redressing certain errors and of drawing the necessary conclusions from facts as presented.

M. RIBAUD

One would, in fact, get small idea of the bond existing between railroads and newspapers if he were to regard the daily journals only as means of publicity for the carriers. Without denying the great service of the newspapers in diffusing information concerning the railroad companies, acquainting the public with innovations to increase speed, comfort or pleasure, it must be pointed out that the newspaper in this case is but the substitute of the poster, and its office, while useful, is not very different from the one it assumes toward any merchantable product.

But there are many other opportunities for the press to give very useful and legitimate aid to the railroad companies. Everyone has been struck by the new length to which tourism has attained during the last decade and by the effort of numerous agencies to draw public attention to the artistic treasures and natural beauties only appreciated by the inhabitants of the country in which they are found.

The admiration of the whole world for the soldier who fought for its liberty has caused an increase in travel, we may say has even been the cause of numerous pilgrimages, to those regions which were the scenes of the great conflict.

The French Railway Company from the first moment in which this new desire to travel and see became evident, has bent its efforts toward making travel in France both more cheap and more comfortable. In this effort it has been ably assisted not only by the French press, but the press which addresses itself to the great American public.

Their joint efforts have led to the creation of touristic literature which is ever increasing both in scope and in merit.

Probably many people will insist that this collaboration is merely for the benefit of those who profit from the increased traffic and trade which it brings forth, but it is precisely because its life is intimately connected with the general prosperity that the railway companies of France have taken part in this collaboration of the great newspapers in influencing the public mind.

To take a concrete example, if the circumstances and economical conditions reveal the necessity of adapting the rates applied by a railway system to a modified situation, it is the duty of the press to place before the public this complex situation, to point out its essential elements and to establish its principles.

It is in this way that the touch between the great press and the railroads may be most useful and productive. Therefore I can but wish the development of still more intimate relations between our industries and the press of your country and of mine.

TOURISM IN FRANCE PROTECTED INDUSTRY

Organization to Aid Travel, Offer Comforts and Sustain Nation's Reputation for Hospitality

By FERNAND DAVID

Senator and Former Minister; President of the Board of the National Office of Tourism.

"Tourism" is a new word in the French language. The latest dictionaries define it as "the inclination for traveling," but to-day it signifies something quite different.

We wish to show the amplitude of this new form of national activity, its importance and the French character of its organization, which is both well appointed and simple.

While there was not yet any tourism there were already tourists. People have always travelled for instruction, for pleasure, and for health. Illustrious precursors may be cited. We will name but one, and as a mark of respect to the woman called "La Divine," the Marquise de Sevigne, whose third centenary is being celebrated this year. She wrote: "I have had to put on the ship the body of my large carriage . . . we have let down the windows . . . the front opening makes a marvelous picture; the doors and the side windows give us all the points of view that one can possibly imagine . . . we eat upon a board in the carriage as would the king and queen. Notice, I pray you, how very refined everything is upon our Loire." This was tourism, even if of the river sort and of the most refined kind.

Tourism existed then in effect but it was individual. Its collective manifestations did not go beyond family or guild excursions and the Anglo-Saxon "tours."

In 1874, nevertheless, the Club-Alpin gave Alpinism a great impulse in placing within the reach of everybody a sport reserved hitherto only for the first initiates. In 1890 the Touring Club, in 1895 the Automobile Club, in 1909 the Aero it as "the inclination for traveling," but Club, were founded.

These are the stages of an advance of which other numerous but less important associations mark the progress.

Today, more than 500,000 adherents, grouped in national societies form one of the great bodies of the army of French tourism.

Influenced by this brilliant proof of the benefits of association, these societies have formed an association among themselves and the National Union of the Association of Tourism has become the highest expression of this new national force.

The Union is devoted to purely national problems; to incite large projects and to support them; to assist all progress; finally to protect against vandalism or speculation the patrimony of art and beauty of beautiful and charming France.

Henceforth all the energies of active tourism revivified at the natural sources and grouped in bodies removed from politics and from commercial aims have not ceased to stimulate the nations by exchanges of ideas and information.

They have suppressed the misunderstandings and smoothed out divergences of opinion. They are, furthermore, a source of prosperity through the transactions which they occasion, exchanges between the French and money spent in our country by foreign tourists.

As the mistress of a house arranges and adorns her dwelling to receive honored guests, it was important for

(Continued on page F46)

Head Office: TOULOUSE

LA DÉPÊCHE

Paris Office: 4 Faubourg Montmartre

Daily circulation, certified by O. J. T. (French Audit Bureau of Circulations)

217,742 copies

The largest certified circulation of any daily newspaper published in the French Provinces.

Space in "La Dépêche" is indispensable to every advertiser who wishes to introduce his product into a territory representing one third of France and one of the richest sections of Europe. The extensive and high class circulation of "La Dépêche" assures results.

In the district indicated on the accompanying map, comprising 28 Departments in the Center, South-West and South of France, and combining Agricultural, Commercial and Industrial interests, "La Dépêche" is the sole big medium through which manufacturers and consumers of the entire District can be reached.

Rosita Forbes~

the world's greatest woman traveler prefers the FRENCH LINE

ROSITA FORBES—Author of "The Secret of Sahara", "From Red Sea to Blue Nile", "If the Gods Laugh", "A Fool's Hell"; and recipient of the French Geographical Society's gold medal for her exploration of the secret Senussi country in the middle of the hitherto uncharted Libyan Desert.

I have travelled all over the world, comfortably and uncomfortably, but I never travelled perfectly till I boarded the "Paris". Now there is only one line for me — the French Line — and I'm going to spend as much of my life on it as I can.

Rosita Forbes

LET Mrs. Forbes tell you of the vivid color and mystery of Morocco. Tunisia and Algeria . . . and of the luxuries of the North African Motor Tours. Write for her fascinating booklet. "Across North Africa."

THE longest gangplank in the world" is given preference by Rosita Forbes because its service, cuisine and decorations are as delightfully French as Paris itself! The de Luxe Liners Paris and France sail to Plymouth, England, first; arriving at Havre a few hours later. The One-Class Cabin Liners go direct to Havre, the port of Paris . . . where there is no transferring to tenders. Just down the gangplank . . . a special train waiting . . . and Paris in three hours!

French Line

Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 19 State St., New York

Offices in principal cities of Europe, Canada and United States, or ask any travel or tourist agent

TRANSPORT — HOTELS — PUBLICITY TOUR TRAFFIC TRINITY

By M. GEORGES BARRIER,

President of the International Alliance of Hotel Men, President of the French Syndicate of Hotel Men.

THE whole of tourism is included in this trinity: means of transport, hotels and publicity. Let one of these three elements disappear and there is no more tourism. It may be added that the relations between the hotel industry and the press are necessarily most close and indispensable.

GEORGES BARRIER

It is not surprising, therefore, that they have always been most cordial, and one does not have to be a major prophet to foresee that, as the means of transport become more and more numerous and more and more comfortable, the hotels will develop in an analogous manner, publicity will become more and more intense and, as a direct consequence, the relations of the hotel industry to the press will become more and more active.

Tourism has shown, in these last years, an astonishing advance, and its progress is not likely to become slower. Our terrestial globe becomes, from day to day, more and more easy to traverse. New regions and centers are opened up on all sides frequented by an ever increasing number of visitors. This world wide movement will be aided and regulated by adequate publicity, which will require an increasing expansion of the press of the world.

We trust that the relations so happily established between the hotel men of Europe and of America in the course of three international congresses held by the "Alliance International de l'Hotellerie," at Monaco in 1920, at New York in 1923 and at Paris in 1926 will have most important results in the development of economic and social relations between the countries of Europe and America, that the effects of these manifestations will be not only durable but continuous, and that we may expect identical results from the visit made to Paris, in 1924, by the Advertising Clubs, as well as from the return visit which will be made by authorized representatives of the French press, on the occasion of the Philadelphia convention.

We have here the two parallel activities of the hotel business and the press, which furnish a new demonstration of the intimate relations now existing, and which cannot but exist between the development of the hotel industry and the development of tourist publicity. This relationship will result in the development of tourism as a whole, of tourism as a producer and spreader of wealth among the nations.

PLEA FOR LOW DUTY ON PERFUMERY

Head of French Syndicate Says American Tariff Too High—Praises Science of French Mixers of Delicate Odor Compounds

By ROBERT BIENAIME

President of the French Perfumery Syndicate

Perfumery even more than any other industry "de luxe" which adds to the beauty of life, is a very complex and refined art which borrows from nature itself its principles and its growth.

The efficient mixing of oils and balsams is not sufficient to the making of a good perfume. To compose a perfume with such imponderable elements as Science has not yet been able to determine—odors, for instance—is similar to the creation of a masterpiece like painting with appropriate shades, or to the composition of a musical work where the author must find the right harmony.

Odors, in point of fact, are much like notes for the musician or colors for the painter. With them one can either give birth to a splendid work of art, if they are used according to the principles of harmony, or obtain a terrible discord, if one is ignorant of their secret.

The perfumer's art is most complex and delicate, not only in the creation of the perfume itself, but even more so in showing up the elegance and good taste of the perfume's get up, in selecting the shape of the bottle and the attractiveness of the box which will hold it.

French perfumery has taken the first place in the world by reason of our artistic past, and the right judgment and accuracy of our notions, which are guided by the artistic experience of our ancestors.

In the elegance and the manner in which it is presented, French perfumery follows the tradition of workmanship of the Eighteenth Century by making the noble artisans work together with the great artists who, through centuries, have brought up to the front rank, the name of our country.

Our masters in the art of perfumery have always kept that bright clear French spirit of a happy country blessed by nature, the fertile soil of which produces under a splendid climate, corn, grapes and flowers; the only country in the world which supplies with lavishness the precious essences of jasmin, of tuberous plants, of orange blossoms, of violets and of many other sweet-smelling flowers, indispensable substances for the preparation of good perfumes.

Following the heavy strain under which France was compelled to labor from 1914 to 1918, our country impoverished by the enormous expenses needed for her defense, we have seen our economic situation upset and our industry depreciated. It was necessary in the face of this to keep up by strenuous work her rank position as a great nation.

All industries in France, and especially French perfumery as an export industry, took an active part in this effort. Figures show better than words the magnificent progress made: In 1913 our export trade of finished perfumery reached 25,000,000 of francs; in 1921, 136,000,000; in 1923, 256,000,000; in 1924, 383,000,000; and in 1925 it exceeded 500,000,000. These figures, in spite of the depreciation of the franc, show a considerable increase in our production.

Among the foreign markets that appealed to us, that of the United States is perhaps the most interesting owing to the favor shown by the great Republic to all products in which the French taste appears. Unfortunately, transactions between nations are under strict control of laws and regulations which, as a rule, never take into consideration the good feelings a country may have for another.

Nothing is less sentimental than a customs tariff and we regret to say that, so far as perfumery is concerned, the United States tariff is very protectionist. If it were altered in a favorable way, it would become very profitable for both sister republics.

The true economic law of today is to draw nearer together the different parts of the world, making easier and multiplying the transactions, thus developing the interchanges which are a source of riches. The activity of each country sees its power of creation multiplied by the full growth of the various industries, and these ties, every day more numerous and stronger, bring up little by little, an economic fellowship between nations, the prosperity of one depending upon the prosperity of all.

These are the general reasons why a lowering of customs duties on French perfumery is wished for as soon as possible. We are the more entitled to ask for it since perfumery from foreign countries enters France practically duty free.

It is therefore only just that we should ask our foreign friends for reciprocity. We put with confidence this matter before American public opinion, before the American people to whose sense of justice one never appeals in vain.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER is read by the journalists of the world. Appropriate news articles on newspaper making and advertising technique are solicited on approval basis at space rates.

PROTECTING ARTISTS AND ARTISANS

By Louis Dangel

THE Association for the protection of Plastic and Applied Arts has rapidly grouped together the largest French firms engaged in the de luxe industries and the best French textile artists, couturiers, embroiderers, decorators, bootmakers, jewelers, gold and silversmiths and leather workers.

LOUIS DANGEL

This group, which has for its object only the protection of the interests of the artists and artisans themselves and of their creations has recently attained great importance in France and receives the respect and cooperation of all who are interested in the artistic and utilitarian movements in the country.

Our friends in the United States will well understand that our desire for protection is legitimate and that our war cry "to copy is to steal" is a truth that should be recognized everywhere.

The great American press has ever been favorably disposed toward such movements and the Association for the Protection of the Plastic and Applied Arts is honored to count so many friends on the other side of the Atlantic. We well know that they will always follow our efforts with sympathy and that they will never hesitate to lend their support.

We have the legitimate desire to live and to profit from our work and we have the will to defend our interests. Our American friends will find that our principle of guarding our artistic heritage is just and will aid us in our work.

Part of the work of the Association is that of the reform of French legislation and the promotion of agreements between nations that will be of benefit to the artisans of both countries. The powerful press of the United States can aid materially in this latter end and we hope will give serious attention to a study of the question.

Already the association has before the French Parliament a proposal for a modification of existing laws and the last International Congress of the owners of artistic and literary copyrights, created a special section for the consideration of problems pertaining to the plastic and applied arts. This section has clearly outlined these problems and it only remains now to work toward practical and equitable solutions.

The good offices of our American friends added to our own study and efforts will surely bring about a fraternal co-operation that shall always stoutly defend the right.

Published at Lyons

LE NOUVELLISTE

A DAILY NEWSPAPER

in twenty-five French Departments of the South East, reaches, in large towns and small villages, a select clientele made up of the best families, industrialists, merchants and wealthy agriculturalists.

ADVERTISING OF CLASS WHICH BRINGS RESULTS

A French agency for the French market

Thorough studies of market conditions - Organization of sales campaigns - Surveys of the entire field - Conception and operation based on understanding - Printing - Distribution of printed matter - Space in the daily newspapers - Placarding.

To understand the French psychology and American methods and to adapt effectively the latter to the former

This is the problem American advertisers must meet in entering the French field and that is the kind of service we offer you. What would you think of a French advertiser who tried to enter the American field through a French Agency? You would think him absurd and you would be right.

Our methods naturally, are of great value to the French advertiser in the French market. We have studied hundreds of problems, both in launching a product and in carrying it through and the value of our service is demonstrated by the success we have attained. A firm which already enjoys the confidence of surely deserves your confidence also.

MICHELIN

